Hunters are being reminded of Daylight Savings Time as they make plans to take to the fields on Sept. 1, opening day of dove season, according to Game Warden Maurice Dry.

One p. m., Friday, Sept. 1, is the legal opening time, he says, closing Oct. 30, with sunset still the daily legal time.

REV. McNAIR NEW PASTOR OF BAPTIST CHURCH AT CARBON

Rev. Bruce McNair of Swenson filled the pulpit at the Baptist Church Sunday morning and evening and at the close of the evening service, the church went into conference and voted to call him as pastor.

Rev. McNair accepted the call but stated it would be possibly three weeks before he could move on the field since he wanted to give his present church sufficient time to start seeking a pastor. He has a wife and a five-year old son and both he and his wife are graduates of Hardin-Simmons University. She is an accomplished musician as a soloist and pianist, having rendered a vocal solo Sunday night.

We welcome the family here and hope their stay in Carbon will be a happy one!

CARBON 1967-68 TERM NOW IN PROGRESS

Faculty and student body beheld a bright new look when classes resumed at Carbon Public School Monday, Aug. 28.

Thanks to the hard work and dedicated effort of local supervisors and youngsters, a lot of floors, walls and ceilings have been scraped clean and re-painted, making for an over-all generally spruced-up appearance.

Under the general supervision of Supt. Jimmy Hughes, the fix-up project has been accomplished through the County School Superintendent's Office and the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

Among the projects were the re-decorating of the home-making cottage, refinishing and painting in the gymnasium, and painting in the cafeteria. A new football dressing room has been constructed. The school building, ag shop and bus barn has been provided with additional storage space.

Classes will begin Monday at 8:45 a. m. with a six-period school day until Oct. 31.

Custodian I. D. Hogan has been instrumental in overseeing the program. He and Supt. Hughes were busy this week helping the ten youngsters in the program get things back in place in time for the school opening.

Tuesday also saw work being done on the system's water well pumping equipment.

Participating in the program have been Betty McDaniel, Faye Regan, Debra Garrett, Lois Hastings, Marcia Webb, Rocky O'Neill, Jim Rice, Martha Swan, Herbert Casey and Jamie Stanley.

Another project included the development of a faculty work room, where cabinet work was built by the students, providing a modern efficient work area for the teachers.

The Carbon School was completely remodeled and expanded in 1942 and has seen periodic renovation since, but this summer's work is believed to have been the first of this magnitude in quite some time.

Adult Basic Education To Be Offered By Ranger Jr. College

Adults will have an opportunity to brush up on basic reading and writing skills this fall under a new program sponsored by the Ranger Ministerial Alliance and Ranger Junior College.

The program is designed to be of special benefit to those for whom the English language poses problems either as a result of limited formal education or because English is a second language.

Under the program, classes will meet two nights weekly on the RJC campus. Classes will begin in September and run through April. Emphasis will be placed on reading skills, math, natural sciences and the social sciences.

Ranger Junior College will supervise the program and provide classroom facilities. The program is offered under the Division of Adult Basic Education of the Texas Education Agency.

Ranger area residents who are interested in the program or who know of persons who might be interested in the program are urged to contact the Ranger Chamber of Commerce and leave their names with Mrs. Beth Collins. They will be contacted later and dates and times for the classes will be worked out to the satisfaction of those enrolled. Classes will be offered free of charge and enrollment is limited to adults 21 or over.

Peanut Growers To Convene In Stephenville September 1

D. B. Warren, President, Southwestern Peanut Growers Association has announced that the Annual Meeting of the big peanut growers organization will be held at Stephenville, on the campus of Tarleton State College beginning at 9:30 a. m. on Sept. 1. The meeting will be held in the Student Center. Warren explained that this year's meeting will again feature production research findings of scientists at Texas A&M University and Oklahoma State University as these findings relate to practical everyday application of the peanut grower on the farm. This, he said, has proved to be the most popular type program with peanut growers in previous years. For example, the topic of "Disease Prevention" will be discussed by Dr. Wendell Horne, Plant Pathologist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, one of the noted authorities in this field. Peanut growers are known to have lost from 23 to 30 percent of their production in the field the past two years because of plant diseases. Therefore, this topic should be of prime interest to all peanut growers because to some degree all growers in peanut producing areas in the Southwest experience serious difficulties due to diseases. Another common problem, that of "Insects in Peanuts", will be explored by Mr. Philip J. Hamman, Assistant Entomologist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service. In the area of peanut quality the most critical period probably exists from the time that peanuts are dug until the time that they are actually processed by shellers. This phase of maintaining quality through the best known practices will be discussed
