Peanut Acreage In-County Sale Allotments Seen

Leasing or sale of peanut acreage allotments within a county was approved by the House Agriculture Committee in Congressional action Monday.

This represented a modification of earlier sub-committee action which would have permitted transfers across county lines if approval was given by a two-thirds vote in a referendum.

The committee also decided that the total peanut allotment transferred could not exceed 50 acres. The bill would operate for the 1968 and 1969 crop years.

A downward adjustment would be made in the acreage involved if the normal yield for the farm to which an allotment is shifted exceeds that from which it was transferred by more than 10 per cent.

Sale or lease of acreage allotments for cotton now is permitted with certain limitations.

Two farm organizations, the Farmers Union and the Farm Bureau, had expressed opposition to "out-of-county" transfer, but apparently the "within" county measure will be greeted with acceptance with most growers in this county.

If you are a collector of antique glassware — you are probably aware that cleaning and stain removal are often major problems. It is suggested that the following solutions be used.

Minerals in water often result in such cleaning problems as lime deposits and surface discolorations. To remove the lime deposits from the bottoms of pitchers, bottles, or decanters, put tea leaves on the stained surface and fill the container with a vinegar solution. For surface discoloration on decanters, rub the glass with half a lemon, or wash it with vinegar, or partially fill with uncooked rice and vinegar and shake vigorously.

A well-known research laboratory offers this method of removing hard water deposits which have dried in designs and etchings. Soak glassware in a solution of one part muriatic acid and four parts water. This acid, available at drug or hardware stores, should be handled with rubber gloves. After soaking in the solution, rinse the glass thoroughly and dry.

To Find Out About Hay

There's one sure way to settle the "my hay is better than yours" argument. Have it tested.

Farmers have a great tendency to over-estimate the quality of their hay, says Al Novosad, Extension pasture specialist at Texas A&M University.

There are imposing differences in quality and feed value of forages, according to figures from the A&M Forage Testing Service.

For instance, the high sample of coastal bermudagrass tested last year had over 19 percent crude protein. The lowest sample tested only 3.7 percent crude protein. Average was 8.7.

Forage sorghum cut for hay ranged from a high of over 12 percent to a low of 1.9 percent and an average of 5.2 percent crude protein.

Crude fiber, digestible protein and TDN (total digestible nutrients) showed the same wide variation, says Novosad.

A relatively new figure is being included in the A&M forage analyses—net energy. Novosad says net energy is a more accurate indication of the worth of a forage to an animal than crude protein or TDN.

It is figured by subtracting the various energies lost in the digestion process from the gross energy in a feedstuff.

Novosad says there are several items influencing hay quality. Among the more important are the amount of fertilizer the hay got and the stage of maturity at which it was cut.

Lower fertilizer rates usually mean lower quality, he says. And, as a general rule, the longer the forage is allowed to grow, the lower in quality it becomes.

If you think there ought to be a better way...

we do, too.

Of course, there is a better way. A new no-frost refrigerator-freezer never needs defrosting. So it's not really just a better way, it's doing away entirely with a messy, irritating job. True, no frost models cost a little more to operate. But think about it next time you're defrosting... well worth it, you'll say.
