A DOUBLE TRAGEDY

W. T. McAfee Sends Bullet Through Temple of His Wife Then Shoots Himself in the Head.

The most deplorable tragedy that ever shocked this community was that of last Thursday night, week, when W. T. McAfee, without the least warning or intimation of his purpose, in the presence of her mother, shot his wife through the temple and instantly turning the weapon upon himself, sent a bullet into his own brain. The death of Mrs. McAfee was instantaneous, while he lingered until 3 o'clock Friday morning before expiring, but without regaining consciousness.

The facts in the case are few and tragic. McAfee and his wife had become estranged, having lived apart since last summer; suits for divorce had been instituted by both parties, but just prior to the double tragedy, efforts had been made to have the suits withdrawn and a settlement made outside the court. The relation between McAfee and his wife were of the most friendly nature, he frequently visiting her and taking out the children to whom he was passionately attached. Mr. McAfee had made arrangements to go to the plains on the next day, Friday, and on Thursday afternoon visited his wife and children. Returning to town he went to a mercantile house and borrowed several envelopes and went to supper at the Colorado Hotel. After eating, he wrote four notes, sealing them in envelopes and giving them to Mr. J. W. Nunn, with the request to mail them next morning if he did not show up.

Soon after doing this he again went to the home of Mrs. McAfee and sat around the stove talking with his wife and Mrs. Pickens, his mother-in-law, in the most friendly manner. Three times he pretended to hear something making a noise in the yard and as many times went out to see what it was. On returning the third time, he brought in with him a piece of paper, which he explained was the cause of the noise, in flapping against the house. He folded the paper and stooped as if to put it in the stove, and as he straightened up, flashed the pistol and shot his wife in the head above the ear. Instantly he turned the gun upon himself and put a bullet in his right temple. So small was the noise made by the report of the pistol, which was a .25 calibre, that Mrs. Pickens said she thought it was a firecracker until she looked around and saw her daughter falling from the chair and McAfee in the act of shooting himself.

Mrs. Pickens, the mother of Mrs. McAfee, was the only relative of either party in this country, and until relatives of both could be communicated with for instructions, both bodies were embalmed. Upon the arrival of relatives, it was decided to inter both here, and at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, all that was mortal of both was interred in the generous bosom of mother earth, where it will rest in peace until the great day of the resurrection, when it shall be raised, clothed in immortality and re-habited by the souls which though estranged on earth, shall see the Truth as it was. There, may they rest in peace, while the mantle of Christian charity covers all that the world did not know or understand.

Plainview Paragraphs.

We are having some pretty weather now and the farmers are gathering cotton right along.

Well Mr. Jack Frost came at last and bit us pretty bad.

Mr. John Pusey and wife of Big Springs visited Mr. Jim Pusey and family last week.

Mr. Hood's wife and daughter were shopping in Colorado Monday.

Rev. A. D. Leach intends to visit the great Baptist convention at Fort Worth.

Mr. S. D. Loveless and wife visited Mr. J. G. Davis and family last Saturday and Sunday.

Two of our neighbor boys, Mr. Ollie and Bennie Copeland have returned from Cottle county where they have been to pick cotton.

We suppose every farmer was visited by the sand-storm Sunday. Nothing damaged but badly dirtied.

F. S. KEIPER.

Freight rates are now quoted into Fort Stockton, the railroad having reached that thriving trans-Pecos city last week.

Texas fared particularly well in the recent distribution of Carnegie hero medals and money awards.

Someone has said: "There are only two classes of men, the efficient and the inefficient. All humanity belongs to the one class or the other, for there are no intermediate stations." This is a pertinent statement—that is, it should be, and every one of us should ask ourselves honestly and sincerely as to which class we belong and why. There is no royal road to success. If we will but study closely the life story of any successful man we will find his one secret was in "Making Good"—being truly efficient in every task he undertook and in really being larger than his job.—Exchange.

TEXAS IRRIGATION.

Becoming More Practical Each Year and Irrigation Area Is Increasing.

From all parts of the state comes the report that irrigation projects are being worked up and the latest information from Ballinger is to the effect that there is soon to be organized a million dollar irrigation plant. The following dispatch from Ballinger under date of September 6th says:

"A million-dollar irrigation plant is being promoted here by some of the Ballinger citizens. The project has been on foot for several years, but not until now has it resolved itself down to where organization was probable.

"The plan is to build a large dam on the Colorado river eighteen miles from this place and distribute water to the farmers on both sides of the river for several miles. The place where the contrivance will be built, if the present scheme is realized, is in the old R. K. Wiley pasture.

"The project is being headed by several of Ballinger's most wealthy men."

Book Farming Pays.

The principal methods advocated by the Demonstration Agents are wide planting and careful selection of seed, and in every case where these rules have been followed the production has increased practically 35 per cent. For instance, in Fayette County the farmers, following scientific methods of planting under Government supervision, harvested this season over 600,000 pounds of cow peas which were planted between the corn rows. This vegetable was raised with very little trouble and brought the growers 34 cents per pound. In Lavaca County, under adverse conditions, but following Government instructions, the production of cotton was increased from 590 pounds to 1,110 pounds per acre.

Similar results have been obtained in every county in Texas where scientific methods of farming, as advocated by the demonstration agents, have been employed, and it is assured that the appropriation to continue this important work will be substantially increased next year.

Washington.—A technicality may deprive Mrs. Grover Cleveland, widow of the ex-president, of her franking privilege after coming marriage to Professor Thomas J. Preston. The law which granted the same right to Mrs. Harrison, widow of ex-President Harrison, provides that the "autograph signature of Frances F. Cleveland or of Anna S. Harrison," must appear on all franked matter.

ELECTION RETURNS.

plete Massachusetts vote gives Gov. Wilson more than 22,000 majority over President Taft.

New Work Plurality for Wilson 200,000

New York, Nov. 5.—Woodrow Wilson was the choice of the State of New York for President by a plurality estimated at midnight at about 200,000 from returns received from nearly every election district in the greater City of New York and from all but 500 of the 3,093 districts outside of New York.

Democrats Sweep Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 5.—Indiana apparently went overwhelmingly Democratic.

Gov. Wilson, on the basis of the returns from 517 precincts out of the 2,172 in the State, had almost as many votes as Taft and Roosevelt combined. Wilson was leading Taft by more than 2 to 1.

Roosevelt Gets Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 5.—Returns from 145 out of 1,225 State precincts show Taft 12,347, Roosevelt 20,330, Wilson 16,066.

States Claimed for Wilson.

New York, Nov. 5.—Shortly after 11 o'clock tonight Democratic National headquarters claimed the following States as certain for Wilson:

Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Wisconsin, New York, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Missouri, West Virginia and New Jersey, with a total of 291 electoral votes.

Wilson Carries Maryland.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.—Woodrow Wilson carried Maryland by from 20,000 to 25,000 plurality.

California Wilson State.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 5.—J. O. Davis, chairman of the Democratic State central committee, telegraphed the Democratic National Committee at 9 o'clock that Wilson had carried California by a majority of 20,000 over Roosevelt.

Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5.—Incomplete returns from the State up to 8 o'clock show Wilson far in the lead, probably by 35,000.

Wilson Leads in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 5.—It seemed at 11:30 p. m. as if Wilson had won in Minnesota. Returns from 105 precincts out of 3,963 gave Taft 6,330, Wilson 9,178, Roosevelt 8,188.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Roosevelt carried Oyster Bay by a plurality of 292.

Virginia in Wilson Column.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5.—Wilson's indicated majority in Virginia is 40,000 to 45,000.

Claims Sulzer's Election.

New York, Nov. 5.—The New York Times, in an early evening edition, claims the election of Sulzer democrat, for Governor of New York.

Results in Mitchell County.

The results in this county of the election last Tuesday were of course, determined in the July primary election when the nominations were made. The vote over the county was very light, amounting to not more than half the vote in the primary. There were only 350 votes cast at this box against 644 in the primary. The same ratio held good at all the other boxes in the county. The socialist vote also fell off from the number cast last regular election; all of which, in both instances, was due to the lack of interest on the part of the voters. The Progressives turned out fairly well, but in some instances casting a mixed ticket; many voted for the "Bull Moose" for president but supported all the democratic nominees for the county offices.

All Four Amendments Carried.

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 6.—All four of the Texas constitutional amendments carried.

The Prohibition Party vote in the state was small, many precincts reporting no Prohibitionist vote.

Latest bulletin just before going to press are to the effect that Wilson has been conceded 410 electoral votes with Oregon to hear from which may give him more. Roosevelt gets more than 100, while Taft takes the leavings.

What Helen Keller Has Done.

It has remained for a woman born deaf, mute and blind to teach us patience to urge us to make higher uses of great gifts, to escape from the deadening imprisonment of our own selfish senses, to permit no environment to dismay us, no conditions to blind us, no obstacles to baffle.

Helen Keller, deaf, mute, and blind, has nevertheless found means by which her soul communicates with the world about her, receiving and giving instruction and inspiration.

In spite of her seemingly insuperable disadvantages, she has become highly educated in the best sense of the word. She has stored her mind with best that science and literature affords. And that learning and the broadened love and sympathies born of it strive to find expression, as the shoot creeps from its seed germ to the light. And nothing can restrain it.

Born mute, she has slowly and painfully acquired the power of speech. Every word gained is to her more than a nugget of gold. She does not use them idly.

And now she has astonished the savants of the world by singing in perfect pitch and making a speech in English, French and German, every word rich in appeal to the world for help for the unfortunate.

And we who have every advantage of our lack of advantages; we, born to perfect conditions, complain of want of chances to make good!

Helen Keller, the blind, has seen more clearly than have most persons who have physical eyes; she, the deaf, has heard more clearly the pleadings of the afflicted than have we who have ears; she, the mute, has spoken more eloquently for them than have we who have words to waste unaccounted.

The soul that is strong can not be restrained. It knows no condition and no limits. Though blind it can see, if it will; though deaf it can hear if it will; though securely bound to silence by congenital muteness, it can burst forth into song.

Let us who are more favored take heart.

There is little that is impossible.—Shreveport Times.

The Record regrets that it has no red crowing roosters in its stock of cuts. We would like to use a full page border of them doing their dingiest best.

COLORADO BURNS & BELL COLORADO

BUFORD BREEZES.

Jack Frost bit everything green Friday night.

Dr. Trigg from Duane made a hurried call in our village Monday.

The musical at Tom Free's Saturday night was an occasion of pleasure to all present. The local musicians were assisted ably by Prof. John Jacks from Seven Wells. Bufordites are always glad to welcome such to their homes.

Misses Stella Hooker, and Leo Knight, accompanied by Messrs. Len Bodine and Prof. John Jacks were visitors at the musical Saturday night.

The Rev. A. D. Leach held services at the Buford Church Saturday and Sunday, at 11 and 8 o'clock each day. We feel that an apology is proper for the clash between times for the party and the church services. Our young people did not know of the appointment for preaching when the party was announced. We are sure that such a clash will not happen again. Rev. Leach will in the future hold services at Buford the first Saturday and Sunday in each month, the nights included. The regular time was changed from the Third Sundays to meet other work by the pastor.

The members and friends of the Baptist Church at Buford are invited to meet at the Buford Church on the 14th of November to repair the house. Those who assist in the work on the house are to be entertained at noon by a lunch prepared and spread by the ladies of the church. All are invited to come and assist.

What did I tell you! The signs did not fall me, but the wedding bells were ringing again Sunday near Buford. This time it was Mr. Elmer Rodgers and Miss Floye Jenkins. The ceremony was said by S. A. Ribble at the Jenkins home at 11 o'clock Sunday. We assisted in the relief of the table, which was loaded with good things to eat.

To our certain knowledge two young men have rented places in our community. They will most surely get married before they have been here many moons. One good sister was heard to say at the Musical that she most wished she was a widow, so she could catch the "Chief Musician" of the evening. If he persists in coming to Buford he will soon be a Benedict, but beware, ladies, beware, he does not come alone.

PENCIL PUSHER.

CUTHBERT CULLINGS.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bellamy and children have gone back east to visit relatives.

The stork visited Cuthbert Saturday and left a 9 pound boy with Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Womack.

S. W. Green and son from Vincent came to Cuthbert Friday.

Dr. C. L. Root of Westbrook, was in Cuthbert last week.

Bro. Leach preached at Cuthbert again Sunday. A large crowd was present.

Dr. Smith passed through Cuthbert last week in his automobile.

A team of horses got scared at something at the gin Saturday and started running but were stopped before any damage was done.

The gin here has ginned about 550 bales of cotton.

Did you vote for the right man election day?

"J. E. Soward, the Red River County farmer who drew first prize for the best bale of long staple cotton exhibited at the late Fair, sold the cotton at 25c a pound. Six years ago, State Press happens to know Mr. Soward was a young farmer who hadn't a foot of land of his own. He was a renter but he had the necessary essentials for success—intelligence and industry—and today he owns free of incumbrance a farm of 160 acres, worth $10,000, and in addition he has cash in bank and a cheerful outlook upon the world. How many city men have started without capital and in six years achieved so distinct a success? There never was a time when good farming offered such prompt and liberal rewards as now, yet the drift to the towns shows no abatement."

Two Year Old Steer Bring $45.

George McIntire of Sterling county last week sold 150 two year old steers to A. C. Persons at $45 per head. This is probably the highest price ever paid for West Texas steers of this age. These steers were run on the range during the spring, summer and fall, and during the hard part of last winter, when the range was short, they were fed milo maize and kaffir corn, and kept growing all the time and were in prime condition when sold.—Big Springs Herald.

57 QUIT CHURCH.

Wholesale Withdrawals Due to Record of Long Standing. Pastor Asked to Resign.

Ft. Worth, Tex., Oct. 31.—Following the setting of the arson trial of Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church, for November 25, fifty-seven members of his congregation resigned Wednesday night.

Resolutions were also presented but withdrawn asking Rev. Mr. Norris to resign. The withdrawal of the members and the resolutions asking the pastor's resignation did not come as a result of the setting of the arson case, however. It is said that the withdrawal of the members and the request for the pastor's resignation were due to discord in the church that dates back to the acquittal of Dr. Norris on a perjury charge last April and to the failure of Dr. Norris to carry out his repeated promise to resign.

The first to ask for his letter was Dr. B. H. Carroll, president of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Chances for Idle Town Boys.

Young men of the cities and towns, who, like the late lamented Mr. William Macawber, are "waiting for something to turn up," and apply for "jobs" with the appeal, when asked what they can do, "I can do 'most anything—give me a trial," are urged to read the following from State Press, of the Dallas News of October 30th—and ponder it—because it is true, and offers them a sure road to success, independence and usefulness:

SHOT BY SAM BASS.

Dr. A. B. Reeves, who recently moved to Andice from Llano county, was in Georgetown Monday and a casual visitor at the Sun office. In conversation it developed that he was for several years a State Ranger and was engaged in the fight with the Sam Bass gang of robbers at Round Rock in July 21, 1879, which resulted in the killing of Barnes, the mortal wounding of Bass. Dr. Reeves, who knew Bass personally, had been detailed to go into the postoffice and to signal by firing off his pistol if the outlaw came into the building. Sure enough, Bass did go in shortly afterwards and asked for mail, getting several letters. As he turned to leave Reeves fired into the floor. Bass ran out and the fight began. Both sides firing rapidly. When Reeves had only one load left, Bass espied him and with an oath turned on him and they fired at the same time, Reeves missing, but the ball from Bass' pistol struck him on the side of his nose, passed through his mouth and downward and came out under the arm, knocking him down. Bass then sprang on his horse and was making good his retreat when Sergeant Dick Ware, resting his gun on Reeves' horse fired at long range and saw the dust fly up from the back of the coat of the fleeing outlaw, who rode on three miles farther, keeping his seat by holding with both hands to the horn of his saddle. Finally, unable to stay in the saddle, he dismounted and lay under the shade of a tree, where he was found and taken to a nearby house, where he expired after several hours of suffering which he bore with the stoicism of an Indian.

Dr. Reeves says Bass was a very brave man and would have made an ideal Ranger and a good citizen if his energies had been properly directed. He says he knew Bass well, having often seen him in Dallas county, where he was employed as a teamster, and he had talked with him many times. When Bass saw Reeves fighting his gang at Round Rock he became enraged and said to him: "So you know me, do you. Well, I'll get you, anyway." Reeves, badly wounded as he was and weak from loss of blood, was detailed to guard Bass in his last hours, a pallet being made for him on the floor in front of the door of the room where the outlaw chief was dying, and where he lay with his gun by his side watching to see that Bass did not escape even then. He says Bass talked and joked to the very end, seemingly having no fear of death. He was buried in the cemetery at Round Rock and a stone, the gift of a loving sister, marks his last resting place—Williamson County Sun.

Captain Dick Ware, with his company of rangers, was stationed over the present headquarters of the H S ranch when Mitchell county was organized and he became its first sheriff, which office he held for several terms. It was his rifle shot that ended the career of Sam Bass at Round Rock, and when the outlaw was overhauled he gave his pistol to Mr. Ware, who was at that time a sergeant of the ranger force. Mrs. M. Carter of this place, who is a sister of Capt. Ware, has in her possession today the pistol of the noted Sam Bass.

GIVE YOUR LIVER A FAIR CHANCE
Stop Drugging It With Calomel; Dodson's Liver Tonic, a Vegetable Liquid Medicine, Works Without Harm.

If your liver stops working it is a mistake to try to whip it into action with doses of calomel. It's so much simpler and safer to cure your liver troubles with the pleasant tasting liquid, Dodson's Liver Tonic. You can get a large bottle at Floyd Beall's drug store for fifty cents and every member of the family can use it. Dodson's Liver Tonic is an all vegetable liver medicine that starts the liver to act within a few hours and no bad after-effects. No restriction of your habits or diet necessary.

Floyd Beall guarantees it to be a perfect substitute for calomel and will give you your money back if you are not pleased with the medicine. Get a bottle instead of calomel next time.

Sentiment Growing for State Division.

That there is a gradual growth of public sentiment especially in West Texas in favor of the dismemberment of the state of Texas into two or more states, is a fact that is clearly apparent to all those who are paying any attention to the drift of public sentiment. In commenting on some division expressions which recently appeared in the Times, the San Antonio Republic says:

In another column, the Republic reprints an editorial from the El Paso Times, in which that able exponent of the prevailing sentiment of West and Southwest comments upon an article printed in the Pecos Record upon the division of Texas.

The position of the Republic upon the proposition is not unknown to its readers. It has urged, and shall continue to urge, that division from every point of view is advisable and essential, as well as inevitable. The interests of the different sections are so wholly different—not to say absolutely hostile—that continued homogeneity is alike impracticable and impossible.

Under the terms of annexation Texas reserved the sovereign right to form four additional states out of its empire of territory, without the sanction of congressional and presidential approval. Nor, according to high legal authority, is it essential that a majority vote of the people of the entire state should approve of the measure to carry into effect division. The qualified electors of any given area—the parties most directly and vitally affected—can adopt a defined plan of procedure, embracing certain established lines or limits, and if upon submission to the people a majority should declare in favor of the measure, it would have all the binding force and effect that could attach to any act that requires the approval of a majority of the qualified electors of a state to endow it with life and vitality.

There is only one method by which the growing sentiment in favor of state division can be checked in West Texas, and that is through the prompt recognition on the part of the people of all Texas that West Texas is just as much a portion of Texas as any other section of the state and entitled to just as many rights and privileges. With this recognition on the part of the people of all Texas, must come similar recognition on the part of the state law-makers when they convene in the city of Austin. West Texas must be permitted to solve the problems that confront her in the manner that will insure the best results to this immediate section, and not according to the theories of a lot of mistaken solons whose opinions of West Texas are predicated upon what they learned from the geographies they studied thirty years ago.

West Texas is the greatest and best portion of all Texas, and if given the recognition it is justly entitled to would soon outstrip the remainder of the state in progress and development. We have the brainiest, most liberal and progressive population of all Texas and knowing our rights fully, we have only bided our time until our population was sufficient to enable us to back up our demands for justice in the proper manner. That time is very nearly at hand, and if the remainder of the state is wise as to just what there is involved in the situation it will hasten to do full and ample justice to West Texas in order to ward off the possibility of proceedings that are certain one of these days to result in the division of Texas in order that West Texas may enjoy the progress and development it is justly entitled to under the constitution and laws of the state.—El Paso Times.

There is not a farmer in Texas who can find out the price of cotton unless he asks a cotton buyer, or somebody who has also to ask a cotton buyer. In Dallas, Waco, Houston, Galveston, Austin, and all cotton centers there are private wires or "cotton exchanges" where quotations are obtained, but no farmer can go inside of them unless it suits the cotton buyer to carry him in. The expense of such information is taxed against cotton of course. The farmer is paying for the show—is furnishing the show, but is denied admission to it. Suppose we had the wire houses all over Texas as formerly (not the bucket shops) why any man who could read, and write could go into them and inform himself as to the markets.—Cotton & Oil News.

New Stamps for Parcels Post.

Regular postage will not be accepted for parcels post law goes into effect on New Year's day 1913. A special series of stamps is now being made for this purpose that will be distinct in color and design so as to prevent any possible confusion with the stamps now in use. The parcels post stamps will be larger than our present stamps. The new stamps will be made in three series of designs. The first will bear illustrations of modern methods of transporting mails, the second of postal employees at work in different departments, and the third will show the principal source of products that probably will be most extensively carried by parcels post. There will be 12 different designs of stamps all told. They will be ready for distribution December 1 in order that the 60,000 post offices may be supplied in good time before the law goes into effect.

Mrs. Jackson Entertains.

Thursday afternoon from four until eight o'clock Mrs. M. K. Jackson most pleasantly entertained the public school teachers with a Halloween party. On entering the house they were invited into the mysteries of the Halloween by being invited to take a bite of an apple suspended between the folding doors, only two of the seven young ladies succeeding in biting out a piece of the elusive apple. After they were seated in the chrysanthemum decked parlor their hostess told them they were to undertake a contest of American Authors, not spooky within themselves, but with a spooky reward attached. Miss Shropshire was the most successful in this contest guessing fifteen out of the twenty-six names. Her reward for good work was a string of little black spools tied up in red paper with yellow ribbons. The guests were now ushered into the dining room. The table was beautiful with its adornment of autumn leaves. It was lighted with red candles, places being laid for eight. The place cards were witches upon gray card board. The bottom of the card was turned up to form an envelope and fastened with a black cat seal. An elegant five course dinner was beautifully served and much enjoyed, as good appetites attend school teaching. At the conclusion of the dinner the hostess told her guests to break the seals upon their place cards and get instructions for seeking their fortunes. They were told on the slips to look beneath the rugs in vases, hats, and other places where the witches had left these fortunes true. All were good the witch being in a kindly mood, some were promised husbands, some wealth, some high positions in schools and some the joys of splinterhood.

It was a merry party, Mrs. Jackson is a famous hostess and all who enjoy her hospitality desire more, so of course our teachers hope for another happy gathering with her ere the school year closes, for it is quite as true with them as with the pupils that all work and no play makes Jill a dull girl.

Will Not Declare Lands Forfeited.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 26.—Following a personal investigation of conditions in the western portion of the state, land commissioner J. T. Robison says he has decided not to declare the forfeiture of state lands of owners that are indebted to the state for interest on such land for 1911 until February 1, 1913. As to the interest due on Nov. 1, 1912, the commissioner will grant extension into the summer of 1913. He found on this tour that many of the land owners have paid to the state good prices for this land and it would work a hardship upon them to declare the land forfeited without giving such purchasers a chance.

Bedbugs Spread Pallagra.

"The Supreme Citizen."

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 3.—Cardinal Gibbons, in the cathedral here today, delivered an election eve sermon designed to awaken "the supreme citizen who never takes an interest in the political welfare of his country." He declared that if the future historian is called upon to record the decline and fall of the American Republic he will ascribe as the cause "the indifference, lethargy and political apostasy of her own sons."

Plainview Points.

Rev. W. M. Leach of Snyder visited his uncle and family recently. Ollie and Bennie Coupland have returned from Stamford where they have been picking cotton. A number of the young folks went to a fruit supper at Union recently. The Halloween party at Mr. Coupland's Thursday night was a success and every one who attended seemed to enjoy themselves. The people of this community met at the school house Friday night to practice for a Thanksgiving service. A killing frost visited us last Friday night and turned the cotton leaves black. All the cotton will be open in a few days and picking will soon be over. Mr. Shank's Costin spent Saturday night with Mr. Cull Hart. H. L.

THERE'S NO EXCUSE FOR OLD MAIDS NOW

Columbia, Mo.—In the Philippine Islands there are 5,000 young men making each about $2,000 a year who want wives. One of them has written to Dr. W. P. Cutler, state food and dairy commissioner, of Missouri, asking him if he can be of any assistance in acquainting Missouri girls with the matrimonial opportunities. The letter says:

"There are at least 5,000 young men over here employed by the government in the customs, internal revenue and other services, and each of us is getting not less than $2,000 a year. Now, the trouble is that most of the American women here are married. I do not want my name published, but you may give it to any of the young women who desire to correspond with a view of matrimony."

"I inclose you a few views of the country. You may send them to whom you choose and they can see for themselves what kind of a place it is."

GOVERNOR WILL ASK FOR IRRIGATION LAWS

Austin, Texas.—It has become known that Governor Colquitt will urge on the Thirty-third legislature the necessity for regulation of water and irrigation companies in this state. He believes that same regulation is necessary as an adjunct to the development of the state through the irrigation enterprises. There has been some complaint that charges have been exorbitant, etc. These matters he thinks should have attention. In the Thirty-second legislature bills looking to this end were introduced but never finally passed.

The views of the governor along this line were put on paper by him recently in an article which he wrote on Texas prosperity for an eastern periodical.

A Sick Man

Writes Dr. Hartman About Kidney Disease.

A gentleman writes me: "I was greatly interested in your article describing the Knuffman case of serious disease of the kidneys. The description of his case exactly outlines my condition. I am sure if Peruna cured him as you said it would cure me also. I am losing flesh rapidly and the doctors say I have every symptom of Bright's disease of the kidneys. If you think I would be benefited by Peruna I will certainly try some as the doctors have practically given me up, the same as they did him."

In reply I wish to say, first, that I never make any promises as to what Peruna will cure. No physician can make positive statements of that sort. I can say this much, however, if I were in your place I should certainly give Peruna a trial. I know of no other remedy that would be so likely to be of use to you in your present condition as Peruna. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Continue this for two or three weeks and then if there is anything you wish to ask me further write me and I will give you a letter prompt attention.

If I find that the Peruna is not helping you I will be perfectly frank and tell you so, for I would not have you take Peruna unless it was really helping you. But it has rescued so many cases of kidney disease that I am quite confident you will find it exactly suited to your case. Kidney disease begins with catarrh of the kidneys. Peruna is a cathartic remedy. Unless the destruction of the kidneys is already too great Peruna relieves the catarrh and the cause of the kidney disease is removed. I shall anxiously await a report of your case. Remember, all letters are sacredly confidential. I never use any one's name or address without his written consent. My correspondence is absolutely private. PERUNA IS FOR SALE AT ALL DRUG STORES. SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAI-NO, manufactured by KA-TAI-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Man Who Didn't Care.

It was the first of February when Ackermann's caravan drew into the ancient city of Damascus. That part of the caravan deserted by Mahomed put out for Cairo immediately they struck the regular camel-way. Fortune, George and Ryenne were in a pitiable condition, heart and body weary, in rage and tatters. George, now that the haven was assured, dropped his forced buoyancy, his prattle, his jests. He had done all a mortal man could to keep up the spirits of his co-fortunates; and he saw that, most of the time, he had wasted his talents. Ryenne, sullen and morose, often told him to "shut up," which wasn't exhilarating. And Fortune viewed his attempts without sensing them and frequently looked at him without seeing him. Now, all this was not particularly comforting to the man who loved her and was doing what he could to lighten the dreariness of the journey. He made allowances, however; besides suffering unusual privations, Fortune had had a frightful mental shock. A girl of her depth of character could not be expected to rise immediately to the old level. Sometimes while gathered about the evening fire, he would look up to find her sad eyes staring at him, and it mattered not if he stared in return; a kind of clairvoyance blurred visibilities, for she was generally looking into her garden at Mentone and wondering when this horrible dream would pass. Subjects for conversation were exhausted in no time. Dig as he might, George could find nothing new; and often he recounted the same tale twice of an evening. Sardonic laughter from Ryenne.

Ackermann had given them up as hopeless. He was a strong, vain, domineering man, kindly at heart, however, but impatient. When he told a story, he demanded the attention of all; so, when Ryenne yawned before his eyes, and George drew pictures in the sand, and the girl fell asleep with her head upon her knees, he drew off abruptly and left them to their own devices. He had crossed and recrossed the silences so often that he was no longer capable of judging accurately another man's mental processes. That they had had a strange and numbing experience he readily understood; but now that they were out of duress and headed for the coast, he saw no reason why they should not act like human beings.

They still put up the small tent for Fortune, but the rest of them slept upon the sand, under the stars. Once, George awoke as the dawn was gliding the east. Silhouetted against the sky he saw Fortune. She was standing straight, her hands pressed at her sides, her head tilted back—a tense attitude. He did not know it, but she was asking God why these things should be. He threw off his blanket and ran to her.

"Fortune, you mustn't do that. You will catch cold."
"I cannot sleep," she said simply.
He took her by the hand and led her to the tent. "Try," he said. Then he did something he had never done before to any woman save his mother. He kissed her hand, turned quickly, and went over to his blanket. She remained motionless before the tent. The hand fascinated her. From the hand her gaze traveled to the man settling himself comfortably under his blanket. . . . Pity, pity! that was ever to be her portion; pity!

In Damascus the trio presented themselves at the one decent hotel, and but for Ackermann's charges upon the manager, it is doubtful if he would have accepted them as guests; for a more suspicious-looking trio he had never set eyes upon. (A hotel man weighs a person by the quality of his clothes.) Moreover, they carried no luggage. Ackermann went sponsor; and knowing something of the integrity of the rug-hunter, the manager surrendered. And when George presented his letter of credit at the Imperial Ottoman Bank, again it was Ackermann who vouched for him. It had been agreed to say nothing of the character of their adventure. None of them wanted to be followed by curious eyes.

With a handful of British gold in his pocket, George faced the future hopefully. He took his companions in and about town, hunting the shops for clothing, which after various difficulties they succeeded in finding. It was ill-fitting and cheap, but it would serve till they reached Alexandria or Naples.
"How are you fixed?" asked Ryenne, gloomily surveying George's shabby cotton-wool suit.
"Cash in hand?"
"Yes."
"About four hundred pounds. At Naples I can cable. Do you want any?"
"Would you mind advancing me

"Ryenne, do you really mean to stick to that proposition?"
"It's on my mind just now."
"Well, we'll go back to the bank and I'll draw a hundred pounds for you. You can pay your own expenses as we go. But what are we going to do in regard to Fortune?"
"See that she gets safely back to Mentone."
"Suppose she will not go there?"
"It's up to you, Percival; it's all up to you. You're the gay Lochinvar from the west. I'm not sure—one never is regarding a woman—but I think she'll listen to you. She wouldn't give an ear to a scallawag like me. This caravan business has put me outside the pale. I've lost caste."

"Ryenne, Do You Really Mean to Stick to That Proposition?"

"You're only desperate and discouraged; you can pull up straight."
"Much obliged!"
"You haven't looked at life normally; that's what the matter is."
"Solon, you're right. There's that poor devil back in Bagdad. I've killed a man, Percival. It doesn't mix well in my dreams."
"You said that it was in self-defense."
"And God knows it was. But if I hadn't gone after that damned rug, he'd have been alive today. Oh, damn it all; let's go back to the hotel and order that club-steak, or the best imitation they have. I'm going to have a pint of wine. I'm as dull as a ditch in a paddy-field."

"A bottle or two will not hurt any of us. We'll ask Ackermann. For God knows where we'd have been today but for him. And let him do all the yarning. It will please him."
"And while he gabs, we'll get the best of the steak and wine!" For the first time in days Ryenne's laughter had a bit of the erstwhile rollicking tone.

The dinner was an event. No delicacy (mostly canned) was overlooked. The manager, as he heard the guinea-jingle in George's pocket, was filled with shame; not over his original doubts, but relative to his lack of perception. The tourists who sat at the other tables were scandalized at the popping of champagne-corks. Sanctimonious faces glared reproach. A jovial spirit in the Holy Land was an anachronism, not to be tolerated. And wine! Horrible! Doubtless, when they retired to their native back-porches, they retold with never-ending horror of having witnessed such a scene and having heard such laughter upon the sacred soil.

Even Fortune laughed, though Ryenne's ear, keenest then, detected the vague note of hysteria. If the meat was tough, the potatoes greasy, the vegetables flavorless, the wine flat, none of them appeared to be aware of it. If Ackermann could talk he could also eat; and the clatter of forks and knives was the theme rather than the variation to the symphony.
George felt himself drawn deeper and deeper into those tragic waters from which, as in death, there is no return. She was so lonely, so sad and forlorn, that there was as much brother as lover in his sympathy. How patient she had been during all those inconceivable hardships! How brave and steady; and never a murmur! The single glass of wine had brought the color back to her cheek and the sparkle into her eye; yet he was sure that behind this apparent liveliness lay the pitiful desperation of the helpless. He had not spoken again about old Mortimer. He would wait till after he had sent a long cable. Then he would speak and show her the answer, of which he had not a particle of doubt. As matters now stood, he could not tell her that he loved her; his quixotic sense of chivalry was too strong to permit this step, urge as his heart might upon it. She might misinterpret his love as born of pity, and that would be the end of everything. He was confident now that Ryenne meant nothing to her. Her lack of enthusiasm, whenever Ryenne spoke to her in these days; the peculiar horizontality of her lips and brows, whenever Ryenne offered a trifling courtesy—all pointed to distrust. George felt a guilty gladness. After all, why shouldn't she distrust Ryenne?

George concluded that he must acquire patience. She was far too loyal to run away without first giving him warning. In the event of her refusing Mortimer's roof and protection, he knew what his plans would be. Some one else could do the buying for Mortimer & Jones; his business would be to revolve round this lonely girl, to watch and guard her without her being aware of it. Of what use were riches if he could not put them to whatever use he chose? So he would wait near her, to see that she came and went unmolested, till against that time when she would recognize how futile her efforts were and how wide and high the wall of the world was.

That mother of hers! To his mind it was positively unreal that one so charming and lovely should be at heart strong as the wind and merciless as the sea. His mother had been everything; hers, worse than none, an eternal question. What a drama she had moved about in, without understanding!

George did not possess that easy and adjustable sophistry which made Ryenne look upon smuggling as a clever game between two cheats. His point of view coincided with Fortune's; it was thievery, more or less condoned, but the ethics covering it were soundly established. He had come very near being culpable himself. True, he would not have been guilty of smuggling for profit; but none the less he would have tried to cheat the government. His sin had found him out; he had now neither the rug nor his thousand pounds.

All these cogitations passed through his mind, disjunctly, as the dinner progressed toward its end. They bade Ackermann good-by and Godspeed, as he was to leave early for Beirut, upon his way to Spyrna. Fortune went to bed; Ryenne sought the billiard-room and knocked about the balls; while George asked the manager if he could send a cable from the hotel. Certainly he could. It took some time to compose the cable to Mortimer; and it required some gold besides. Mortimer must have a fair view of the case; and George presented it, requesting a reply to be sent to Cook's in Naples, where they expected to be within ten days.

"How much will this be?"
The porter got out his telegraph-book and studied the rates carefully. "Twelve pounds six, sir."
The porter greeted each sovereign with a genuflection, the lowest being the twelfth. George pocketed the receipt and went in search of Ryenne. But that gentleman was no longer in the billiard-room. Indeed, he had gone quietly to the other hotel and written a cable himself, the code of which was not to be found in any book. For a long time he seemed to be in doubt, for he folded and refolded his message half a dozen times before his actions became decisive. He tore it up and threw the scraps upon the floor and hastened into the street, as if away from temptation. He walked fast and indirectly, smoking innumerable cigarettes. He was fighting hard, the evil in him against the good, the chances of the future against the irremediable past. At the end of an hour he returned to the strange hotel. His lips were puffed and bleeding. He had smoked so many cigarettes and had pulled them so impatiently from his mouth, that the dry paper had cracked the delicate skin.

He rewrote his cable and paid for the sending of it. Then he poked about the unfamiliar corridors till he found the dingy bar. He sat down before a peg of whisky, which was followed by many more, each a bit stiffer than its predecessor. At last, when he had had enough to put a normal man's head upon the table or to cover his face with the mask of inanity, Ryenne fell into the old habit of talking aloud.

"Horace, old top, what's the use We'd just like to be good if we could, eh? But they won't let us. We'd grow raving mad in a monastery. We were honest at the time, but we couldn't stand the monotony of watching green olives turn purple upon the silvery bough. Nay, nay!"
He pushed the glass away from him and studied the air-bubbles as they formed, rose to the surface, and were dissipated.
"No matter what the game has been, somehow or other, they've bashed us, and we've lost out."
He emptied the glass and ordered another. He and the bartender were alone.
"After all, love is like money. It's better to live frugally upon the interest than to squander the capital and go bankrupt. And who cares, anyhow?"
He drank once more, dropped a half-sovereign upon the table, and pushed back his chair. His eyes were blood-shot now, and the brown of his skin had become a slaty tint; but he walked steadily enough into the reading-room, where he wrote a short letter. It was not without a perverted sense of humor, for a smile twisted his lips till he had sealed the letter and addressed the envelope to George Percival Algeon Jones. He stuffed it into a pocket and went out whistling "The Heavy Dragons" from the opera of "Patience."

Before the lighted window of a shop he paused. He swayed a little. From a pocket of his new coat he pulled out a glove. It was gray and small and much wrinkled. From time to time he drew it through his fingers, staring the while at the tawdry trinkets in the shop-window. Finally he looked down at the token. He became very still. A moment passed; then he flung the glove into the gutter, and proceeded to his own hotel. He left the letter with the porter, paid his bill, and went out again into the dark, chill night.

He was now what he had been two months ago, the man who didn't care.

George and Fortune were seated at breakfast. It was early morning. At ten they were to depart for Jaffa, to take the tubby French packet there to Alexandria. They could just about make it, and any delay meant a week or ten days longer upon this ragged and inhospitable coast.

"Ryenne has probably overslept. After breakfast I'll go and roust him out. The one thing that really tickles me," George continued, as he pared the tough rind from the skinny bacon, "is, we shan't have any luggage. Think of the blessing of traveling without a trunk or a valise or a steamer-roller!"
"Without even a comb or a hair-brush!"
"It's great fun," George broke his toast.

CHAPTER XIX.

Fortune Decides.

George came in under the time-limit of his adventure. He had been upon the most difficult errand imaginable, at least from a bachelor's point of view. He carried two hand-bags. One of these he deposited in Fortune's lap. "Shall I open it?"
"If you wish."
She noted his embarrassment, and her immediate curiosity was not to be denied. She slipped the catch and looked inside. There were combs and brushes, soap and tooth-powder and talc, a manicure-set, a pair of soft woolen slippers, and . . . She glanced up quickly. The faintest rose stole under her cheeks. It was dull; it was pathetically funny. She would have given worlds to have seen him making the purchases.

"You are not offended?" he stammered.
"Why should I be? I am human; I have slept and lived for days in a dress, and worn my hair down my back for lack of hairpins and combs. I am sure that it is a very nice night-gown."
Laughter overcame her. He laughed, too; not because the situation appealed to him as laughable, but because there was something, an indefinable something, in that laughter of hers that made him wonderfully happy.

"Mr. Jones . . ."
"George," he interrupted determinedly.

"Brother George, it was very kind and thoughtful of you. Not one man in a thousand would have thought of—of . . . hair-pins!" More laughter.
"I didn't think of them; it was the clerk."
"He . . ."
"She."
"Well, then, she will achieve great things," lightly, though her heart was full.
Tactfully he reached over and swept up the money.
"Shall I ever be able to repay you?" she said.

"Yes, by letting me be your brother; by not deciding the future till we land in Naples; by letting me keep in touch with you, whatever your ultimate decision may be. That isn't much. Will you promise that?"
"Yes."
They spoke no more of Ryenne. It was as though he had dropped out of their lives completely. To a certain extent he had. They were to meet him again, however, in the last act of this whimsical drama, which had drawn them both out of the commonplace and dropped them for a full spin upon the whirligig of life.

In due time they arrived at Alexandria. There they found the great transatlantic liner, homeward bound. Ryenne would beat them into New York by ten days. He had picked up a boat of the P. & O. line at Port Said, sailing without stop to Marseilles. From there to Cherbourg was a trifling journey.

George knew the captain, and the captain not only knew George, but had known George's father before him. The young man went to the heart of the matter at once; and when he had finished his remarkable tale, the captain lowered his cigar. It had gone out.

"And all this happened in the year 1809-1810! If any one but you, Mr. Jones, had told me this, I'd have sent him ashore as a lunatic. You have reported it!"
"What good would it do? We are out of it, and that's enough. More, we do not want any one to know what we've been through. If the newspapers got hold of it, there would be no living."
"You leave it to me," said the big-hearted German. "From here to Naples she shall be as mine own daughter. You have not told me all?"
"No; only what I had of necessity to tell."
"Well, you know best. I shall do my share to make her feel at home. She is as pretty as a flower."
To this George agreed, but not verbally.

The steamer weighed anchor at six o'clock that evening, with only a handful of passengers for the trip to Naples. George had wired from Damascus to Cairo to have his luggage sent on, and he saw it put aboard himself. Without letting Fortune know, he had also telegraphed the hotel to forward whatever she had left; but the return wire informed him that Mrs. Chesdove had taken everything.
"By Jove! quarter to nine. I've got an errand or two to do, and there's no need of your running your feet off on my account. I'll be back quarter after." He dug into his pocket and counted out fifty pounds in paper and gold. "You keep this till I get back."
She pushed it aside, half rising from her chair.

"Fortune, listen. Hereafter I am George, your brother George; and I do not want you ever to question any action of mine. I am leaving this money in case some accident befall me. You never can tell." He took her hand and firmly pressed it down upon the money. "In half an hour, sister, I'll be back. You did not think that I was going to run away?"
"No."
"Do you understand now?"
"Yes."
While he was gone she remained seated at the table. She made little pyramids of the gold, divided the even dates from the odd, arranged Maltese crosses and circles and stars. . . . Pity, pity! Well, why should she rebel against it? Was it not more than she had had hitherto? What should she do? She closed her eyes. She would trouble her tired brain no more about the future till they reached Naples. She would let this one week drift her how it would.

George came in under the time-limit of his adventure. He had been upon the most difficult errand imaginable, at least from a bachelor's point of view. He carried two hand-bags. One of these he deposited in Fortune's lap. "Shall I open it?"
"If you wish."
She noted his embarrassment, and her immediate curiosity was not to be denied. She slipped the catch and looked inside. There were combs and brushes, soap and tooth-powder and talc, a manicure-set, a pair of soft woolen slippers, and . . . She glanced up quickly. The faintest rose stole under her cheeks. It was dull; it was pathetically funny. She would have given worlds to have seen him making the purchases.

"You are not offended?" he stammered.
"Why should I be? I am human; I have slept and lived for days in a dress, and worn my hair down my back for lack of hairpins and combs. I am sure that it is a very nice night-gown."
Laughter overcame her. He laughed, too; not because the situation appealed to him as laughable, but because there was something, an indefinable something, in that laughter of hers that made him wonderfully happy.

"Mr. Jones . . ."
"George," he interrupted determinedly.
"Brother George, it was very kind and thoughtful of you. Not one man in a thousand would have thought of—of . . . hair-pins!" More laughter.
"I didn't think of them; it was the clerk."
"He . . ."
"She."
"Well, then, she will achieve great things," lightly, though her heart was full.
Tactfully he reached over and swept up the money.
"Shall I ever be able to repay you?" she said.

"Yes, by letting me be your brother; by not deciding the future till we land in Naples; by letting me keep in touch with you, whatever your ultimate decision may be. That isn't much. Will you promise that?"
"Yes."
They spoke no more of Ryenne. It was as though he had dropped out of their lives completely. To a certain extent he had. They were to meet him again, however, in the last act of this whimsical drama, which had drawn them both out of the commonplace and dropped them for a full spin upon the whirligig of life.

In due time they arrived at Alexandria. There they found the great transatlantic liner, homeward bound. Ryenne would beat them into New York by ten days. He had picked up a boat of the P. & O. line at Port Said, sailing without stop to Marseilles. From there to Cherbourg was a trifling journey.

Well, why should she rebel against it? Was it not more than she had had hitherto? What should she do? She closed her eyes. She would trouble her tired brain no more about the future till they reached Naples. She would let this one week drift her how it would.

"It doesn't seem quite human."
"Don't you understand? It is simple. My mother believes that Horace and I ran away together. If not that, I ran away myself, as I that day threatened to do. In either case, she saw nothing could be done in trying to find out where I had gone. Perhaps she knows exactly what did happen. Doubtless she has sent on my things to Mentone, which, of course, I shall never see again. No, no! I can not go back there. I have known the misery of suspense long enough." She lowered her head to the rail.

He came quite near to her. His arms went out toward her, only to drop down. He must wait. It was very hard. But nothing prevented his putting forth a hand to press hers reassuringly, and saying: "Don't do that, Fortune. It makes my heart ache to see a woman cry."
"I am not crying," came in muffled tones. "I am only sad, and tired, tired."

"Everything will come out all right in the end," he encouraged. "Of course you are tired. What woman wouldn't be, having gone through what you have? Here; let's sit in the steamer-chairs till the bugle blows for dinner. I'm a bit fagged out myself."
They lay back in the chairs, and no longer cared to talk. The lights twinkled, but fainter and fainter, till at last only the pale line between the sky and the sea remained. She turned her head and looked sharply at him. He was sound asleep. "Poor boy!" she murmured softly. "How care-worn!" There was something grotesque in the mask of desert tan and shaven skin. How patient he had been through it all, and how kind and gentle to her! She remembered now of seeing him that night in Cairo, and of remarking how young and fresh he seemed in comparison to the men she knew and had met. And she must leave him, to go into the world and fight her own battles. If God had but given to her a brother like this! But brother he never could be, no, not even in the pleasant sense of adoption. She did not want pity. . . . To think of his getting those things for her in Damascus! . . . Pity suggested that she was weak and helpless, whereas she knew that she was both patient and strong. . . . What did she want? She glanced up and down the deck. It was totally deserted save for them. Then, "clad in the beauty of a thousand stars," she leaned over and down and brushed his hand with her lips.

And George slept on. Only the glare of the bugle brought him back to mundane affairs. He was hungry, and he announced the fact with gusto. They would dine well that night. The captain placed Fortune at his right and George at his left, and broached a bottle of fine old Johannisberger. And the three of them had coffee in the smoking-room. If the other passengers had any curiosity, they did not manifest it openly.

Upon finding that they had no real need of staying over in Naples, the captain urged that they take the return voyage with him. He saw more than either of the young people, with those blue Teutonic eyes of his. George promised to let him know within a dozen hours of the sailing. Certainly Fortune would decide one way or the other within that time.
Both had seen the Vesuvian bay many times, with never-fading love and interest. They sailed across the bay in the bright clearness of the morning.

Bread for All.

From Leslie's.
Bread! The State of Kansas alone will this year produce wheat to feed more than one-sixth of the population of the United States for one year. The soldiers of our army are allowed one loaf of bread a day, and the immense Kansas wheat crop would provide this average ration for 17,537,000 soldiers for one year. The magnitudes of the crop is illustrated again in the statement that it could be made to fiddle the earth at the equator thirty-two times with beautiful, one-pound loaves. For their bumper crop, the farmers of Kansas will receive the handsome total of $85,000,000, and were the wheat all made into bread and sold at five cents per loaf, the bake shops would get for it $320,000,000. The building of the Panama Canal has been looked upon as a stupendous undertaking for any nation, yet here is a single crop in a single State which by the time it is reached the ultimate consumer will be sold for considerably more than half the cost of digging the big ditch.

Hog killing time will soon be with us. Hog-killing TIME, mind you, we said.

Did you have a part in the "glorious victory" last Tuesday, or did you refuse to exercise the highest privilege of an American citizen?

Cass Tarver, the Anson "white hope" has made a match with Carl Morris of Oklahoma, for ten rounds, to be fought in the city of Shreveport.

The general public did not know until the automobile accident this week, that Capt. Bill McDonald—our very own Captain Billiam—had been the immediate body guard of Governor Woodrow Wilson during the past campaign.

The recent cool spell evidently must have stirred up the fighting blood of the community. It doesn't pay to fight, gentlemen—that is, it doesn't pay any body but those who don't do the fighting. Just think of that "cote oss," which guilty or innocent, must come.

Thomas Jefferson was right when he said, "A government should be frugal and simple, applying all possible saving of the public revenue to the discharge of the national debt and not to the multiplication of offices and salaries."

We never believed that President Madero intended to have General Felix Diaz shot, despite the finding of the mock court martial. Medero's seat is too insecure to risk such a step. If he can worry along for one term under present conditions he will be willing to step from under and let some other try his hand at pacifying Mexico.

The indomitable Roosevelt has been around the world, up above the earth, under the waters of the sea, through the fever-laden jungles of Equatorial Africa, made a target for an assassin's bullet, and he still lives. So far he has been invincible; but on last Tuesday he went down to his Waterloo, a victim to his o'er weaning ambition. On that day the American people spoke in rebuke and sounded the death knell of Colonel Roosevelt, who had received all the honors his countrymen could bestow but who yet hankered for more—more—more.

It is almost dangerous to traverse the public roads since the first of this month. From every direction comes the whizz and whirr of shot and bullet of rifle in the hands of the quasi hunter. To our mind, raised where game was more than plentiful, hunting in West Texas, has always been associated with "Simple Simon, who went a-fishing, for to catch a whale, and all the water that he had was in his mother's pail." It is but little less ludicrous to see a grown man, with dog and gun, in the name of sport, tramping ten to twenty miles a day and wasting powder and shot on a few little birds that do infinitely more good to the crops than harm. A man can buy more to eat with the sum he wasts on his ammunition than he usually bags on a West Texas hunt, and the only other excuse he can have for killing, is the innate desire to slay the weaker.

Jack Frost made his presence seen and felt here last week.

There are some crimes for which the law fixes no adequate punishment. Some states have solved the problem by the institution of public whipping posts. One dose usually cures the culprit as long as he remains in that particular state.

One of the great dangers of the present time is the carrying of deadly concealed weapons by the irresponsible, worthless class. A good, law-abiding citizen seldom weighs himself down with such an encumbrance and is therefore totally at the mercy of the criminal class who go armed constantly and who do not hesitate to use their weapons whenever opportunity affords. The law provides ample punishment for this class of violators, but a statute against pistol toting is of no avail unless enforced. Occasionally some negro doped up on cocaine or some worthless white man with a hide full of blind tiger whisky will exhibit his "gun," in such a public manner that his arrest becomes a positive necessity, but how often have we seen any of our "gentlemen pistol toters" serving jail sentences or even paying fines for the privilege of ornamenting their person with a "man killer?"—Abilene Reporter.

Religious Items In Scientific Settings.

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. 6:9. There is no religious cant about this statement. Paul states a law of being, one that works everywhere in nature about us. If a man sows a crop of wheat, he knows it is foolishness to sow oats. If he wants potatoes, he knows that planting corn will not produce them. Man has tried to evade or change this law, but without success. Burbank is known the world over as the great nature wizard, yet, while he has succeeded in changing the habits, color or shape of some vegetables, he has never learned how to raise potatoes from any other seed. Chrysanthemum seed cannot be made to produce a flower of the same form and color as the one from which the seed was taken, but the product is always a chrysanthemum, never any other kind of flower. No man has yet succeeded in coaxing a chrysanthemum to bloom at any other time of the year than its natural time, the autumn. A fortune awaits the man who can evade this law of nature and furnish the market with chrysanthemum flowers in winter or spring. The nearest approach to an evasion of the law is the mule, but all the breeder's skill has never taken another step—the mule is a hybrid. All the acts of a life are parts of a harvest—thoughts and desires are the seed. The same unchangeable laws govern here as in nature. The "wild oats" the young man sows will never produce anything but wild oats. The habits of life make the character and character makes destiny. Habits are what the seed sown produce by following the inviolable laws of our being.

No one would have imagined from the lack of enthusiasm and apparent apathy manifested last Tuesday by the great majority of our citizenship, that one of the most important incidents of government was being enacted—the election of the nation's chief magistrate. But the result in Texas, was of course, a foregone conclusion. In the large centers where politics are always made a business, things were seething hot.

Are You a Town Charge?

Are you a town charge? Now, wait a minute. There's no use to get mad about it. And don't be so sure of yourself.

Of course everybody knows you pay your dry goods and grocery bills, your taxes, etc. Your commercial rating is A1 and your credit good. You work for what you receive. Your name is among the "prominent citizens" present at all social functions published in the papers, and all that kind of thing. The public generally is familiar with these things.

But, what about the benefits you are receiving as a result of the efforts of your really progressive neighbors to make Temple a better place in which to live. You couldn't escape these benefits if you wanted to. Now then, answer this. Are you really doing your part of the word and contributing your part of the expense. If not, you are a town charge, and no one knows it better than yourself.

When the property enhances in value in Temple your interests are affected the same as all others. This condition is brought about by men who are better citizens than yourself. This is an age of progress and advancement. You can't afford to be a part of the load the boys have to carry. Get off the wagon, and either pull or push.

Temple is growing, all right, but it should grow faster, and it will if you get in line with the boys. Attend the board meetings and give them some ideas to work on. Work out some plan, the execution of which will make Temple bigger and show them how easy it is to pull off a stunt. Bring your next door neighbor with you to the meeting, and maybe he will become enthused and make a suggestion of real value to the city. Now come on and help start something.

Temple needs you. It needs your imagination, enthusiasm and encouragement. Look forward and see Temple as it is going to be in ten years hence, and how much more your property is going to be worth. It should be quite a satisfaction to contemplate the part you had in making it great.

More cities have stood and slept past their opportunities and retrograded on account of the indifference of the "good citizens" than from any other cause. Many have stagnated and been whiped off the map for no other reason that that so many men of means have been willing to remain "town charges." Trade has been taken away from them, their property values have decreased, and have become cemeteries for the quick. All because those who thought they were living in them waited for some one else to take upon his shoulders the duties that belonged to all. Think this over.

The material is here for the building of a city. All that is necessary to build it is workmen.

It's up to you.—Temple Telegram.
The same applies with equal force to Colorado.

In our humble opinion, "Pastor Russell" is the greatest factor of infidelity in this country today. The fact that his heresy is promulgated inside the church in the guise of orthodoxy, makes it the more harmful and insidious. To do away with literal hell fire, is to do away with it symbolically; which means the repudiation of all future punishment. The increasing thousands of suicides of today is directly traceable to a disbelief in the certainty of future and eternal punishment. Men will commit crime with the idea of suicide if they are detected. They hold self-destruction as a sure escape from all violations of the laws of God and man.

PAPER FOR COLORED FOLKS.

The Daily Spokesman Will Be Edited, Managed and Printed by Negroes.

New Orleans soon is to become the home of a negro daily newspaper. The Daily Spokesman is to be the name of the new sheet, the first issue of which will be placed before the public within the next month. The newspaper is to be edited, managed and printed entirely by negroes, its offices and plant are to be in a negro office building, one of the few or perhaps the only one of its kind in the United States, and its capital has been furnished entirely by negroes of New Orleans.

The Spokesman is to be published every afternoon of week days and on Sunday morning. It will contain eight pages during the week and twelve pages on Sunday. The journal is to be launched with guaranteed circulation of 5,000, and its managers expect to increase this figure to 20,000.

It is to have a personal column, news from the churches, and will have a high-class negro cartoonist. All current news will be written up from the negro's viewpoint.

FAITH!

John A. Sletcher in Leslie's. Faith is the foundation of human success. It helps us to live, to love and to win. It smooths the rough places of life. It encourages us to believe that the best is yet to come. It penetrates the clouds of despair and it lifts the veil of death's unsearchable mystery.

A world without faith is doomed. A world with faith is fearless and unconquerable. By faith we may remove mountains. The Good Book tells us so. Why should unbelievers scoff? Every day engineering skill is removing mountains that obstruct the pathways of commerce. Tunnels pierce the snowy Alps of Italy and the granite heights of our own Rockies. Faith is finishing the stupendous Panama Canal, connecting for the first time in the world's history, the two great oceans. Faith is cleaving the mountains of rock and clay built by Nature and thought by man to be immovable and eternal.

Faith in a living God is the finest attribute of human nature. To it the world owes its highest civilization. Without it injustice was enthroned, human rights trampled upon with unspeakable ferocity and cruelty. When barbarism prevailed, faith was unknown. When a living faith appeared, barbarism perished. Faith made human liberty possible; so Faith, before Liberty, enlightened the world.

Faith is indicated on all sides and by every disturber and self-seeker who aims to attract public notice and who, without this notoriety, would disappear into the oblivion whence he came. Plausible in their sophistries, smooth-tongued, with winsome oratory, these disturbers proclaim their purpose to make men free. And thoughtless people listen, with cheers and applause. It is the same old cry, heard in every century since the dawn of civilization and from disturbers of the same breed. They proclaim freedom, but they put men in the bondage of selfishness. If there is faith in God, there should be faith in man.

The South.

Woodrow Wilson. No one who knows the South can look forward to her future without the most confident expectation of an extraordinary development. The character of her people, of her resources, and of her climate assure a development which will be one of the most notable features of the growth of America in the 20th century. The past 30 years will be but an imperfect indication of what the next 30 will bring forth.—Exchange.

Two negro men came up to the outskirts of a crowd where Senator Bailey was making a campaign speech. After listening to the speech for about ten minutes, one of them turned to his companion and asked, "Who am dat man, Sambo?" "Ah don't know what his name am," Sambo replied; "but he certainly do recommen' hisself mos' highly."

A $200,000 Monkey.

Only $200,000 is asked of the Northern Pacific railroad in the way of damages for the death in transit of an educated monkey, or rather chimpanzee. The chimpanzee is described in the court complaint as being able to dress itself, smoke cigarets, and eat off a plate at table with knife and fork.

The highest price allowed by the courts of New York to be paid by the New York Central railroad after the tunnel accident, for a few dead railroad and corporation presidents and lawyers and scientists of international reputation, was $100,000, and many a widow of a man of well earned fame had to be content with $10,000. But then, these men were not educated monkeys, consequently perhaps the great American public did not so keenly appreciate their talents.

Never, in the history of recent politics in this country have people of all classes responded with such spontaneity to the nomination of any candidate for the presidency, as has marked the election of Governor Wilson. The business interests believed in his sanity and the soundness of his judgment. A profound student of the science of government, he needs no preparation or experience to fulfill the duties of the office; he comes to the presidential chair full panoplied like Minerva from the head of Jove.

As a result of the premium set of scissors the Record is giving subscribers who pay up to date and one year ahead, nearly fifty new subscriptions and renewals have come in since the first of November. We have a few sets left; if you want them, come a-runnin'.

The new chair cars and smoking cars ordered by the Texas & Pacific railway from the Pullman company some time ago have been received and are now being operated on the El Paso division. The chair cars are of steel frame and are equipped with a smoking room. They are of the latest design and have a seating capacity of eighty-five persons.

The smoking cars are steel framed and are equipped with cane sanitary chairs. The total order of the cars amounted to fifty—twenty-five of each kind. They are now being operated on all divisions. The T. & P. recently received a large shipment of passenger and freight engines from the Baldwin Locomotive works. The locomotives are all of the latest high power type and most of them are being operated on the heavy hauls around Fort Worth.

My Doctor Said

"Try Cardui," writes Mrs. Z. V. Spell, of Hayne, N. C. "I was in a very low state of health, and was not able to be up and tend to my duties. I did try Cardui, and soon began to feel better. I got able to be up and help do my housework. I continued to take the medicine, and now I am able to do my housework and to care for my children, and I feel as though I could never praise Cardui enough for the benefits I have received."

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

Cardui is successful, because it is made especially for women, and acts specifically on the womanly constitution. Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That explains the great success which it has had, during the past 50 years, in helping thousands of weak and ailing women back to health and happiness.

If you are a woman, feel tired, dull, and are nervous, cross and irritable, it's because you need a tonic. Why not try Cardui? Cardui builds, strengthens, restores, and acts in every way as a special, tonic remedy for women. Test it for yourself. Your druggist sells Cardui. Ask him.

NATION ENDORSES WILSON AND DEMOCRACY!

WILSON AND MARSHALL SWEEP THE COUNTRY RECEIVING AT LEAST 387 ELECTORAL VOTES

LATE RETURNS SHOW THAT ROOSEVELT IS SECOND MAN, HAVING 99 ELECTORAL VOTES TO TAFT'S 12

Roosevelt Is Running Ahead of Taft--Latter May Lose His Home State to Wilson, and Returns Show Numerous Other Reversals From Previous Elections

New York, Nov. 5.—With the election of Woodrow Wilson to the presidency and Thomas R. Marshall to the Vice Presidency assured by the earlier returns tonight. The reports up to midnight gave indications that the electoral vote of the Democratic candidates would pass the 300 mark.

The size of the popular majority gives the Democratic national ticket, or the states outside Illinois that might give electoral votes to either Taft or Roosevelt, were matters of conjecture at midnight.

In Pennsylvania the race was so close as to bring all three candidates within range of success.

Early returns gave Gov. Wilson and Gov. Marshall the "Solid South" and the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, West Virginia, Indiana and Missouri.

As the night advanced and returns from the West began to come in these earlier estimates were confirmed and Montana, New Jersey and New Mexico were added to those that seemed certain for the Democratic candidates, while scattering returns from San Francisco and Los Angeles made it probable that California might join the Wilson-Marshall column.

The states where results were reasonably certain at 10 o'clock gave the following electoral votes: Wilson 267, Roosevelt 29, Taft 8.

Chicago reported later returns which included many from Democratic counties in the southern part of the State of Illinois, took away the Roosevelt plurality shown in early returns and gave Wilson a slight lead, his total on 692 precincts heard from being 14 votes more than Roosevelt.

Rhode Island also became a doubtful State on the returns near midnight, and, based on the later votes reported, it seemed not wholly improbable that its five electoral votes would go to Wilson.

The early returns gave an apparent victory to Taft in New Hampshire and Vermont, but the Taft pluralities dwindled as midnight approached to a very few hundred votes in each State and seemed likely to be wiped out entirely.

The vote in Utah up to midnight indicated the State might be carried for Taft.

The vote in Pennsylvania was amazingly close, the returns from over 1,000 precincts, embracing over 185,000 voters, giving each of the three leading Presidential candidates more than 60,000 votes.

The New York State Assembly seemed to be overwhelming Democratic. In Illinois indications were that Judge Dunne, the Democratic candidate for Governor, had won, notwithstanding the heavy Roosevelt victory. Former Speaker Cannon seemed to have been defeated for re-election to Congress in Illinois.

The returns from California were meager, but left the State in doubt between Wilson and Roosevelt.

Iowa, Michigan and Kansas appear to have been carried by Roosevelt.

The uncertainty regarding Vermont was settled by the announcement of the complete vote, which gave Mr. Taft a majority of 924 votes.

At 12:45 the Providence, R. I., Journal conceded that State to Wilson, and with the vote close in New Hampshire, it seemed probable that New England, with the exception of Vermont, had gone over to the Democratic column.

But little definite news from States of the Pacific West was received except from California, where a Wilson victory was indicated. The tabulation of votes in other Western States was so slow as to make predictions impossible.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 5.—President Taft at 11 o'clock tonight conceded the election of Gov. Wilson. He issued the following statement from his brother's home here:

"The returns insure the election of Gov. Wilson to the Presidency. This means an early change in the policy of the Government in reference to the tariff. If this change can be made without halting prosperity, I sincerely hope it may be."

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Shortly before midnight Col. Theodore Roosevelt tonight made the following statement:

"The American people by a great plurality have decided in favor of Mr. Wilson and the Democratic party. Like all good citizens, I accept the result with entire good humor and contentment."

About the same time he issued his statement, Col. Roosevelt set the following telegram to Gov. Wilson:

"The American people by a great plurality have conferred upon you the highest honor in their gift. I congratulate you thereon."

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Estimated Totals of Electoral Vote.
For Taft: Idaho, 4; Vermont, 4; Utah, 4; total 12.
For Roosevelt: Illinois, 29; Kansas, 10; Michigan, 15; Pennsylvania, 38; Washington 7; total 99.
For Wilson: Alabama, 12; Arizona, 3; Arkansas, 9; California, 13; Colorado, 6; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 3; Florida, 6; Georgia, 14; Indiana, 15; Iowa Doubtful; Kentucky, 10; Louisiana, 10; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Massachusetts, 18; Minnesota, doubtful; Mississippi, 10; Missouri, 18; Montana, 4; Nebraska, 8; Nevada, 3; New Hampshire, 4; New Jersey, 14; New Mexico, 3; New York, 45; North Carolina, 12; North Dakota, 5; Ohio, 24; Oklahoma, 10; Oregon, 5; Rhode Island, 5; South Carolina, 9; South Dakota, doubtful; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 20; Virginia, 12; West Virginia, 8; Wisconsin, 13; Wyoming, doubtful; total 387. 3:18 P. M.

Returns Indicate Democratic House.
Return on the election of members of the House of Representatives were slow and there was little on which to base a conclusion as to the proportionate political complexion of the Sixty-Third Congress. Indications were that the Democrats probably would maintain their present majority in the House with possible gains, as forecast in early reports to political headquarters.

In New York the Democrats lost the Twenty-Sixth District, but this offset by their victory in the Fortieth. The "Solid South" returned its regular delegation of Democratic Congressmen.

Wilson Leading in Massachusetts Vote
Boston, Mass., Nov. 5.—Indications with half of the State tabulated are that Massachusetts has favored a Democratic candidate for President, for the first time in its history. Gov. Foss apparently was re-elected by an increased plurality and incomplete returns from sixteen Congressional districts showed the Democrats to have made slight gains.

Wilson 2544 Over Taft.
Providence, R. I., Nov. 6.—Practically complete returns from Rhode Island give Wilson 2544 votes over Taft.

Roosevelt's Lead Reduced in Kansas.
Topeka, Kansas, Nov. 6.—Roosevelt's lead in Kansas last night has greatly decreased today.

Wilson Leads Taft in Ohio.
Cincinnati, O., Nov. 6.—With half the state heard from, Gov. Wilson is leading President Taft by 63,000.

Taft 10,000 Behind T. R. in Indiana.
Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 6.—Reports at noon today gave Wilson 80,000 lead over Roosevelt, with Taft 10,000 behind Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Carries South Dakota.
Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 6.—Roosevelt is leading in this state.

CENTRAL STATION POWER FOR IRRIGATION

L. O. Shropshire Writes of Farming by Irrigation and Best Methods to Follow.

Irrigation has at last become recognized throughout this Western country as the only solution of the problem of "How to Become a Successful Farmer."

Dry farming has been given a test and has failed to withstand the drought. Although we do not doubt that dry farming is all right in some countries, it is not certain. During the last three years the average farmer of this country has barely made a living. Anyone not knowing the conditions would say that we had a poor class of farmers in our country, but, on the contrary, we have a fine class of farmers. It isn't the farmer's fault. Give him a good year and see what he does.

With irrigated farms, all years are good ones. Irrigation is the key which unlocks the fertility of the soil. Rain may or may not come when needed most, and it may pour down destructively, but under a well-managed irrigation system water is turned on when and where required. The soil must be arranged to drain the water off as rapidly as it is applied.

It has been found that the application of irrigation methods are beneficial, no matter what may be the natural conditions of rainfall. M. B. Williams, irrigation engineer of the United States Department of Agriculture, states in a report that the most humid district of the agricultural East is subject to the greatest irregularity of rainfall. This refers to the states bordering the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean, which includes Texas.

The Department of Agriculture is encouraging supplemental irrigation as the vital factor of crop insurance in this district just mentioned.

Next comes the cost of operating an irrigated farm. This one thing has held irrigation in our country in check more than any other; in fact, it is the only thing that has checked the progress of this insured method of farming. Operating costs should be the first thing considered when the farmer has become ready to install a pumping plant.

I find that various owners of wells set various values on the cost of irrigating an acre of land, which ranges from about $1.00 to $3.00 per acre each time the land is watered. These plants are all gas engine plants.

Mr. Ensign says there is an immense amount of land in irrigation by electric power, and we find in the Government report for 1910 that 75,000,000 acres of land are irrigated with motor-driven pumps. Throughout California, Oregon, Washington, parts of Colorado, Utah, Idaho, and Arizona, electrical power is used for pumping, and is displacing the gasoline-engine-driven pumps very rapidly.

There are several reasons why this displacement takes place. With a motor-driven pump one man can handle more machines, for the reason that the motor takes care of itself. Another reason is cheaper rate of power. Another and very important thing to consider is the number of wearing surfaces; on a motor there are only two, while on an engine there are a dozen or more.

Some one will say, "Well, there is your power factor that you must pay for." True enough; but 25 per cent of the rated horse power has been deducted from the motor when the owner pays for his power.

The efficiency of a motor runs from about 84 per cent to 94 per cent, which includes the power factor, etc. After all, the motor on this rate is cheaper than the engine. I will discuss the rate more in detail.

The owner is to keep up his apparatus and is supplied with electrical energy at the rate of $50.00 per horsepower of his motor (in nearly all districts the company charges for only 75 per cent of rated horsepower of motor) per year. This means power for 385 days of 24 hours each, or 8,760 actual horsepower hours for $37.50 and figures out about $0.043 per horsepower hour. This is slightly high compared to another concern which sells its power for 3c per kilowatt hour (2-3 horsepower, approximately), and another for 2½c per kilowatt hour.

Mr. Wilton, manager of the San Joaquin plant at Fresno, California, gives about the same data as I have given in the above figures, except his figures show cost of irrigating per acre. He gives an illustration: A 20-horsepower motor drives a pump which delivers 1,500 gallons of water per minute. The cost of irrigating from this plant is about $1.25 per acre per year. There is nothing in the form of a gas engine that can compare with these figures when the engine is a small one.

Mr. Ensign names a number of plants, in which he includes the one at Portales, New Mexico. Some are unsatisfactory for various reasons, one of which is inefficiency of machinery; another, inefficient management, etc., etc. There are, in fact, a number of ways that some plants can be improved upon, and when an unsatisfactory plant is found it can almost invariably be said to be lacking somewhere, and the cause is easily remedied—for are there not numbers of plants that are satisfactory to each one that is unsatisfactory?

Mr. Moses says that with 24-hour service and a 6c rate a plant pays 50 per cent on the investment, after depreciation, taxes and interest have been figured. The writer himself has helped to conduct tests on machinery in which the cost per kilowatt hour, on the switchboard, was slightly less than 3½ mills; this is the total cost to the producer of electrical energy. Is this not cheaper than gas engine production of power?

If any one wishes more information on the subject, in which I have tried to give a fair and impartial comparison of individual power vs. central station power, the writer would be glad to furnish such, provided it is in his power to do so.

L. O. SHROPSHIRE.

And the Shortage Came.

"I told you so" declared J. W. Lovelady, of Lubbock, Texas.

Then the big ranchman of the plains went on to discuss the cattle situation, and the short supply of cattle in the presence of a group of farmers and stockmen from different parts of the country. As Mr. Lovelady talked it over he seemed to express his pleasure at the shortage, reminding his listeners that several years ago ranchman had predicted this shortage and at the same time they had been joked about it.

"Now what we predicted 10 years ago has actually come to pass, which proves beyond a doubt that what we said then was based on facts, and not guess work," Mr. Lovelady added. "I was joked and roasted pretty hard about it at the time by those who were not in a position to know the exact situation out in the range country. These jokers pointed to the increase in cattle receipts while we were cleaning up the ranges, preparatory to turning them over to settlers. Of course there were heavy runs of cattle for a few years, as we rushed in cows and calves by the trainloads. But the end came, and then steer buyers who went to the Panhandle country found it out. Prices began to soar and they have been soaring ever since. Trainload shipments of cattle from Texas are rare. A few years ago they occurred right along."

"In 1906 I marketed 14,340 head of calves myself. Others were bringing them in just the same way. Cows were shipped right along in trainload consignments. In that year I bought from one man 5,000 calves. In my calf shipment that year I think I broke all records in one shipment, when I brought to Kansas City 1,000 calves. They weighed 298 pounds, and sold in one string at $5. Such a string of calves today would bring $25 each instead of $15 as they did then."

"Settlers crowded out the ranchmen. It was predicted that in a few more years they would be raising more cattle than we did formerly, when the country was open. That prediction has not been fulfilled, as was the prediction made by the ranchmen with reference to the cattle shortage a few years before. To be sure, we are raising better cattle now, and they are receiving better care. It costs much more now to raise a steer on the plains of Texas till he is four years old, than it did 10 years or more ago. Fences have to be built and feed has to be raised now, and that adds to the expense of cattle raising."—Kansas City Drovers Telegram.

Extravagance of Politics From Leslie's.

Cash! Corruption in politics has been notorious. Each of the parties has blamed the others for it but all have been equally guilty. It is said that President Lincoln's campaign cost $100,000. Cleveland's $500,000. Harrison's $1,000,000 and McKinley's, in 1896, over $3,000,000. Statements just made officially show that the Democratic campaign fund this year was nearly $700,000, the Republican nearly $600,000 and the Progressive over $300,000. The laws compelling publicity in these matters are having their effect. We hope that the plea of Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, in favor of restricting campaign funds to legitimate uses, will be followed out. The wasteful use of huge sums of money for such senseless things as campaign badges, street banners and torchlight parades has gone to the very limit of extravagance, while expenses of national conventions have been out of all reason. In the interests of good government and the suppression of corruption at the polls, the use of money for election purposes should be placed under the strictest limitations.

LOCO WEED ON WESTERN RANGES

Federal Government Making Investigations That May Afford Some Relief.

Washington.—On some of the sheep ranges of Montana and Wyoming, where herders have not been careful to keep their charges off the loco weed, whole herds have been killed. Stockmen in the entire range country, including Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and California, have suffered millions of dollars in losses every year. It is estimated that the loss in cattle from loco in Colorado alone amounts to $2,000,000 a year, and this amount will be largely increased in years of drought. It is common for a stockman to lose 50 per cent of his horses or cattle in one season and to find the other 50 per cent badly affected.

The death loss is not the only factor, as there is a heavy deterioration of stock. Cattlemen who find the loco weed growing on their ranges in many cases rush their stock to market, and realize only a small per cent of the actual value of their output. The number of cattle and sheep on the range has been greatly reduced, and the meat supply is kept always "short" owing to this cause, which few people understand in its proper relation to the feed supply.

While the recent investigations of the Department of Agriculture have been beneficial in demonstrating the poisonous qualities of the supposedly harmless "rattle weed," and in proving that locoed stock can be cured if removed from the infected localities and put at once on strong feed, the mystery of the loco weed remains practically as great as ever. Apparently the only real solution of the problem will come when all the stock in the west is fed within enclosures instead of being allowed to "rustle." That time will not come within several generations, as much of the western range country still remains to be settled. In the meantime the individual who can find some effective antidote for the loco weed, or a means of eradicating it from the western slope, will be hailed as a public benefactor, for the reason that he will simplify the meat problem, which is a great and growing vexation to everybody in the land.

RAISING TICK-PROOF CATTLE

A Texas dealer is developing cross-bred cattle that are absolutely immune to the Texas fever tick—the insect responsible for an annual loss in the South alone of from $40,000,000 to $100,000,000. This new breed is the result of six years of experimenting and is being watched by experts with the keenest interest.

What these tick-proof cattle are, how they are made immune and who the discoverer is, are all explained by H. D. Smith, of the Kansas Agricultural College, in the article,

COMING TO SWEETWATER THE UNITED DOCTORS

An Association of Prominent American Specialists Giving Free Medical Services to the Sick.

At Hotel Grogan Friday, November 15 and Saturday November 16, two days only.

Startling disclosures relative to the most remarkable treatments known. The United Doctors are visiting the principal cities throughout the United States. Licensed by the states for the treatment of diseases, deformities, ailments and maladies of various forms without surgical operation.

By this developed system no more operations for appendicitis, gall stones, kidney stones, tubercular glands, tumor, goitre, piles, or cancer. They were among the first in America to do away with the knife, blood and pain in the treatment and cure of these serious and dangerous diseases.

Rheumatism, diabetes, bed-wetting, leg-ulcers, sore eyes, and diseases of the stomach, liver, heart, kidneys, bowels, bladder, all treated by their successful methods, developed after years of special practice and experience.

Patients with cancer, tumor or tubercular glands not larger than one to two inches can be cured with their hypodermic injection method, used in hundreds of cases with entire success.

These Doctors and nerve specialists treat successfully neuralgia, constant headaches, epilepsy, sciatica, nervous debility and other diseases related to the nervous system.

Because of their vast experience in the treatment and cure of chronic blood diseases, scrofula, diseases of the skin, falling of the hair, hydrocele, varicocele, swelling of the limbs, enlarged veins, paralysis, and all diseases of men, women and children they are eminently fitted for the high position they have attained in the extensive practice of their profession.

If your case is incurable, the doctor will give you valuable advice that will relieve you and stay the disease. They are curing the diseases they undertake and you may some day regret it if you don't give them a chance.

The United Doctors will give free treatment (except a small charge for medicines) on this particular visit, and this only to those who are interested and really sick.

In as much as these doctors are giving their valuable services free to the sick they will expect of those treated to tell the results to their friends.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble bring a two-ounce bottle of your urine for analysis.

Married ladies must come with their husbands and children with their parents.

"SILENT BILL" McDONALD AS WILSON'S BODY GUARD

Ex-Ranger of Texas to Stay by Democratic Nominee Until Election Is Over—Appoints Himself.

(New York Letter, Oct. 25.)

"Better than a company of militia or two droves of reserve policemen is Capt. W. L. McDonald, better known as 'Silent Bill,' a veteran Texas ranger, who came to town yesterday and announced that he was the self-appointed bodyguard of Governor Woodrow Wilson for the remainder of this campaign. Mr. Wilson smiled when he was introduced to 'Silent Bill,' and started to walk away to shake the hands of others waiting to greet him. But he couldn't shake the sturdy Texan. Not that Mr. Wilson gave the matter serious thought, but 'Silent Bill' had. He never was more in earnest in his life than when he agreed to watch over the presidential nominee. And from all reports, this means some earnestness, for 'Silent Bill' has participated in some stirring events.

Down Texas way 'Silent Bill' is known as a 'rip snorter and afraid of nothing that walks, crawls, creeps or flies.' He is the sort of a fellow that would atackle a wild cat single handed and remove his gloves, if he had any on, to give the wildcat an even break. His exploits on the plains and in the towns of his native state made history there. Not large of stature, but every inch a fighting man describes 'Silent Bill.' He is hardly over five feet nine inches in height, but he is as strong as a team of young oxen and as agile as a cat. His face is as red as an autumn sunset and his eyes snappy and black.

For a bodyguard he was given a thorough try-out last night. At the conclusion of the Wilson meeting in Carnegie hall more than 1,000 persons leaped upon the stage to shake the hand of Governor Wilson. The governor was buffeted around and there was danger of him being injured. While some one hurried for the reserve police, 'Silent Bill' took the center of the stage. With a swing of his right arm he sent a dozen men sprawling backward, and the same motion with his left hand was equally as effective. And all the time he 'jos, lifted,' and kept chewing gum as if his very life depended upon it. Soon there was a circle of free space around Mr. Wilson and his party large enough for a rattling good-prize fight. When the police arrived the Texan had cleared a place for them, and they did not have any difficulty in forming a circle to escort him from the place. 'Silent Bill' is true to his name. He refused to discuss himself, further than these few words: 'I ain't saying a word, boys. Not a word. But I know my business and nobody had better start anything while I'm around. If any one does then maybe I will have something to tell you.'

He said he would not leave the side of Governor Wilson until he was elected president. Every move that any one makes 'Silent Bill' watches like a hawk, and he appears as if he was ready to 'swing to his hip' in an instant. He is probably sixty years old, but rugged as a mountain in his own Lone-Star state.

Friends of 'Silent Bill' said he was prompted to come to New York as a protector of Mr. Wilson immediately after he heard of the shooting of Mr. Roosevelt. He came with his fighting togs on, white sombrero and all, but he ain't saying anything.

WRITE IDEAS FOR MOVING PICTURE PLAYS

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25.00 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary experience necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALES DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN, SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMIT, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication"

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25, a low figure,

You Will Earn $100.00 Monthly For Spare Time Work
FREE Send your name and address at once for free copy of our illustrated book, "MOVING PICTURE PLAYWRITING."

Don't hesitate. Don't argue. Write NOW and learn just what this new profession may mean for you and your future.

NATIONAL AUTHORS' INSTITUTE 1543 Broadway New York City

Dallas, Texas, Nov.—Tom Flinty, Jr., staff correspondent of the Dallas News and one of the most competent citizens in Texas, has rendered a report to the Texas Welfare Commission on Compensation to Employees for Casualties Occurring in Course of Employment, in which he directs attention to the waste resulting from our present system of settling personal injury cases. Mr. Flinty quotes from a statement by the committee of the Wisconsin Legislature, which investigated the subject and drafted the workmen's compensation law of that state. It says that "under the old system (similar to the one now in use in Texas) in order for an employer to pay about $18 to an injured employee for or on account of injury, it required $82 to carry the $18 to him." The damage suit lawyer, who suffers no injury whatever, usually gets half the award, and court costs and other items make up the remainder of the expense.

Mr. Flinty recommends the establishment of an industrial court of competent jurisdiction, similar to that now employed by the state of Wisconsin, to settle personal injury claims and eliminate as far as possible the waste resulting from our present system and give all injured workmen reasonable and prompt compensation.

MORE JOLTS FOR JOHNSON.

Champion Heavyweight Fought Had Planned Trip to Europe for Fights, but District Attorney Says "Can't Go."

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 2.—Two more jolts came for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, today: one from the City Hall, directing the police to close his saloon in West Thirty-First Street. The other through the Federal Building. Johnson is under a heavy bond on the almost forgotten charge of smuggling.

"The Government does not allow men awaiting trial on criminal charges to leave the country," said District Attorney Wilkerson. "If we learn of any intent of Johnson to leave, we will have him taken into custody."

Johnson had planned to go to Europe, where he has agreed to several prize fights.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

LAST RITES SAID FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Simple But Impressive Services at Sherman Funeral.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 2.—With simple but impressive services the body of Vice President James S. Sherman was laid away this afternoon in a crypt within a beautiful mausoleum in Forest Hill Cemetery.

Under a canvas covering that served as a shield against a chill November wind were gathered the Sherman family, President Taft, members of his Cabinet, Justices of the United States Supreme Court, Senators and members of the House of Representatives and a few intimate friends and business associates of the Vice President, while without a throng which had assembled to pay a final tribute stood reverently until the strains of "Asleep in Jesus," by the Haydn Male Chorus, which marked the conclusion of the services, had died away.

Taft At Ceremony.
President Taft listened with bowed head and tear-dimmed eyes as Dr. W. M. Stryker, president of Hamilton College read the brief committal service and Rev. Louis H. Holden, pastor of Christ Church, of which Sherman was a member, offered prayer.

A mixed quartette sang "Good Night," and when the selection by the male chorus had been concluded the President gazed a moment at the flower-covered casket of his friend and slowly made his way to a waiting automobile, accompanied by former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks, Attorney General Wickersham and Major Rhoades, his military aide.

Earlier in the afternoon there had been private services at the Sherman home and public obsequies at the First Presbyterian Church, both of which were attended by the President. The special train bearing the Nation's Chief Executive and party arrived in Utica at 1:30 o'clock and the President at once went to the late Vice President's home to offer his sympathy in person to Mrs. Sherman and others of the bereaved family. He remained for the services there, which were conducted by Dr. Holden, and then went to the church where the funeral services were held.

ASKS THE POWERS TO INTERVENE

SULTAN'S MAIN ARMY RETREATS TO CAPITAL'S FORTIFICATIONS.

London, Nov. 3.—The Turkish army is in full retreat on Constantinople and the Turkish Government has asked the Powers to intervene.

An official bulletin was issued by the Government at Constantinople tonight admitting defeat at the hands of the Bulgarians in the great battle on the Thracian plains.

Application was made to the Embassies in Constantinople tonight for mediation by the Powers to end the hostilities and arrange a peace agreement.

The Ambassadors, prior to this, had asked the Porte to grant permission to each of the great Powers to send one warship through the Dardanelles and this request had been complied with. The only guarantee of safety for the native Christians and perhaps foreigners in Constantinople is to be found in the presence of the warships of the great Powers in the harbors of the Turkish capital.

Belief As to Bulgaria's Position.

It is the general belief that Bulgaria will refuse to listen to anything in the way of intervention until the Bulgarian army is at the gates of Constantinople and will insist that Turkey make an appeal direct to the allies without interference from the Powers.

The Powers have not been able to agree upon the French Premier's formula of "territorial disinterestedness," which is not acceptable to either Austria or Germany. They are taking steps, however, for the protection of Christians and their own political interests in Turkey.

One warship, in addition to the vessels already dispatched to the Turkish ports, will be sent through the Dardanelles by each of the Powers.

Beyond the statement that the Turkish army is retreating to the last line of fortifications outside Constantinople, there was little news received from the seat of war tonight. Fighting was reported along the line from Chorio to Serai, which was the outcome, doubtless, of the effort of the defeated Turks to retire within the Chatsija lines, which the Bulgarians are doing their utmost to prevent.

The besieging forces are tightening their grip around Adrianople and the bombardment is becoming more vigorous.

In other directions the allies are consolidating their occupation of Turkish territory. The Greeks have taken Nicopolis and Prevesa and have landed a division of men at Stavros, which is marching to attack Saloniki. An uncensored dispatch from the latter town intimates the likelihood of its surrender without resistance.

A Warning Issued by Austria.

In connection with the Serbian occupation of Prishrend, a warning from Austria appears in the official Vienna Fremdenblatt, which, in the supposition that the Servians have now attained the object of their operations toward the west, says:

"There are neither military nor National motives for the Serbian army to penetrate the districts beyond Prishrend, which are exclusively inhabited by Albanians, that is, therefore, into the undeniable territory of another Balkan people."

Chas. May of Cleburne closed a deal this week through Z. R. Stephens by which he exchanged the O. G. Jones ranch, twelve miles south of here, for land in New Mexico. Consideration $32,000. W. P. Posey has contracted to trade Howard county land for a building at Artesia, N. M., and land near that place.—Big Springs Enterprise.

A Pretty Hallowe'en Party.

The boy and girl friends of Misses Lula Mae and Elnora Dulaney received pretty invitations last week which said:

"On Hallowe'en an hour before eight The spooks will gather at Dulaney's gate.

Come out in sheet and pillow case gown.

And be the cutest ghost in town."

About sixty were invited and a big crowd gathered a little before the appointed time and were chaperoned by Mrs. J. W. Person and Mrs. Merritt, all walking over. On reaching the house Mrs. Dulaney, Miss Lela Whipkey and Miss Jessie Person greeted the guests, while several spooks were also present. In the hall pumpkin jack 'o lanterns in which burned candles, furnished a weird light. In all the doors were hung apples by strings, but as no ghost could catch these in their teeth they had to wait until all were unmasked. The parlor was filled with black cats. They adorned the piano and grinned in all attitudes on the window curtains and walls. While Miss Whipkey played the ghosts marched into the parlor and as fast as they were recognized they unmasked. One that had green looking claws patted all over her drapery was never known, until some one wondered why Ethel Dyan had not come, then they knew it was Ethel. Mrs. Dulaney announced that in a back room was a fortune teller and of course all wanted their fortunes told. She was most accommodating and promised wealthy husbands and wives and happiness to all. She was stationed in a white draped corner with an immense black cat upon the sheet which formed a door. Games were played and some one kept up a lively tune on the piano. After awhile big cat tails were passed and everybody told to go in and pin their cat's tail upon the cat in the fortune teller's corner. Mrs. Crockett, who had arrived by this time blindfolded the boys and girls while they made their efforts. Winnie Vaughan pinned the tail she had closest to where a cat's tail should be and was given a cute little cat tied with pink ribbons for her ability.

A tub of water upon which floated apples was placed in the hall and everybody bobbed for apples, causing much merriment. After more games black cats that were numbered were passed and the boys and girls having corresponding numbers were partners for supper. The dining room was very pretty. A big pumpkin in the center of the table held a fern, on either side of this were candelabra filled with candles while on the buffet and sewing table were pack 'o lanterns and big fat pumpkins which were used as candlesticks. A delightful refreshment course of apple and nut salad in apple shells, bread and butter sandwiches and hot chocolate with more whipped cream than town folks are used to were served by Misses Whipkey and Person. Misses Lula Mae and Elnora proved themselves delightful hostesses, and they also proved that Dr. and Mrs. Dulaney had not forgotten their youth nor how to make folks have a good time.

Missionary Society.

The Methodist missionary society met Monday in the church, with the president in the chair and Mrs. M. K. Jackson acting secretary. Mr. J. T. Davis president of the board of stewards came before the ladies and asked for $50 on the pastor's salary. After much discussion the ladies voted $25, this being all the cash they had on hand, and they having some other important debts to meet.

The Thanksgiving dinner and sprongazaar was discussed, and Mrs. Crockett made chairman of the committee to find a place in which to hold this. Mrs. Doss chairman of the soliciting committee, Mrs. Merritt of the arrangement and Mrs. Jackson of the apron sale. So much business was discussed that it was impossible to have the program which was upon the Foreigner in the United States and was most instructive. The society adjourned to meet in called session at the convenience of the Thanksgiving dinner and bazaar committees.

Mrs. Vaughan is Hostess for G. F. C.

Thursday Mrs. Myrtle Vaughan entertained the G. F. C's. There was a good attendance of the members and several visitors present. Everybody sewed and discussed Christmas gifts, new methods of embroidery and all the dainty fancies dear to the feminine heart. At a late hour the sewing was folded and laid aside and the hostess assisted by her mother Mrs. Majors and Mrs. Vaughan served the very loveliest kind of a salad course, with all the extras that make it so palatable. Miss Ruth Buchanan is ess this week.

Tea for Mrs. Shaw.

Mrs. Simeon Shaw spent Thursday here visiting her friends. In the afternoon Mrs. Crockett entertained informally for her. A number of her friends came in during the evening and had a little chat with her over a cup of tea and a wafer. Mrs. Shaw returned home on the evening train. It is with genuine regret that her friends give her up to another charge. Her home will be assigned at the conference which is now in session at Abilene.

A gay crowd gathered at Mrs. Herrington's Hallowe'en evening. These dignified upper class men gave themselves up entirely to pleasure and as ghosts and spooks enjoyed life quite as much as less important mortals. The house was prettily decorated with greens and yellow and red bunting. The greens were used around the pictures and to wreath the pumpkins with which the piano was decorated. The draperies were arranged overhead to form a canopy. A big motto upon the wall which said "Welcome all ye ghosts" was framed in autumn leaves. And all of them were there, about fifty in number.

Messrs. Griffin and Gardner gave some splendid musical selections upon the violin, guitar and madolin. There were a number of games all spooky in character. A number of the young people walked up stairs backwards with a lighted candle and mirror trying to see the faces of their future husbands and wives. Apples were suspended from the ceiling by strings and everyone tried to catch them in their teeth. In the dining room a delicious punch with apples was served.

The arrangement of the two punch tables was exceedingly pretty. They were upon opposite sides of the room in corners and the yellow cheese cloth was used as a drapery, being brought from the ceiling to the front side of the table making a canopy overhead. The tables were decorated with greens which with the yellow and autumn leaves formed an appropriate decoration for the occasion. Everyone had a most delightful time and each ghost enjoyed this occasion which was his special holiday. At twelve all were safely home leaving for other ghostly inhabitants of the night the rest of the time until daylight. And now for another year these dignified juniors and sophomores will remember their exalted positions and deport themselves as should the students of our high school.

500 Club Meeting.

Miss Lillie Allen was hostess for the Tuesday 500 club. There were four tables of players and a delightful afternoon was spent—at the ever enjoyable game. The prize, a dainty work bag, was won by Mrs. Floyd Beall. The hostess had asked each member to bring a handkerchief with her card in it. This was done and all the handkerchiefs placed in a pretty box and presented by Miss Allen to Miss Eloise Shropshire the bride for next week. This useful shower came as a total surprise to the recipient who was only a guest of the club, not one of its members. The hostess served a lovely salad course with after dinner coffee as a second course. Mrs. Beall is hostess next week.

The management in placing this latest comedy creation, "A Thoroughbred Tramp" before the public, has given it a cast of characters true to nature and surrounded the piece with science effects befitting the locality the scenes transpire in, and those seeking wholesome, instructive amusement will be afforded that pleasure on Thursday night, Nov. 14, at Opera House. Reserved seats are now on sale at Majors.

The Bay View club met last week with Mrs. Person, and today Mrs. C. T. Harness is hostess.

A telegram from Mrs. O'Keefe at Mayo Sanitarium states that Mr. O'Keefe has again been operated on and is in a critical condition. This last operation is the most serious one he has yet undergone.

The Alabama Minstrels.

(Greenville Morning Herald, Greenville, Texas, April 14, 1912.) Those who failed to see the Alabama Minstrels last night missed a very rare treat in the minstrel line, and one that will not be forgotten by those who were so fortunate as to witness the performance. Manager Erickson is giving the people a show that is not only amusing, but was thoroughly clean in every respect. In fact, there was not one present who could find anything that would offend the most fastidious tastes of the city.

The show is full of fun, good jokes and late songs, all well gotten up and well rendered. The fire eating act is exceptionally good. The company, consisting of forty people, travel in their own private cars. Should Mr. Erickson ever return to our city he is assured a full house as he has made many friends for his show by honest dealing and giving the people their money's worth in first class entertainment.

Will be in Colorado Wednesday, Nov. 13th one day only.

It was more in the nature of a landslide than a mere overwhelming majority.

LOST OR STOLEN—From a buggy in Colorado a lady's coat, a parasol, and three hair switches. Finder will be rewarded if they are returned to this office.

"A Thoroughbred Tramp" which will be the attraction at the Opera House on Thursday night, Nov. 14, is a powerful comedy drama telling a beautiful story combining humor, pathos, heart interest, and thrilling realism. There is a strong vein of comedy a laughable nature that more than pleases.

Whist Club.

Mrs. Looney was hostess for the Whist Club Wednesday. There were four tables of players and a very delightful meeting enjoyed. At the close of the game, the hostess served delicious refreshments in two courses.

Special Services and Music.

Rev. C. P. Craig who has been called to the pastorate of the First Christian Church of Colorado will begin his labors with this church on next Sunday morning. Mr. Craig has just finished a great work at Terrell, going from there to the general Missionary Conventions of the Christian church at Louisville, Kentucky, from which place he comes to Colorado with many good ideas for the advancement and betterment of the cause of Christ in this city.

On next Sunday night at 7:45 the choir will render a musical program in connection with the regular service consisting of solos, a duet, a quartet and antiems. Every one is cordially invited to attend these services.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedial. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Not Fit For Ladies.

Public sentiment should be against it, and we believe it is, there can be no reason why ladies should have to suffer with headaches and neuralgia, especially when Hunt's Lightning Oil gives such prompt relief. It is simply a question of getting the ladies to try it. All druggists sell Hunt's Lightning Oil in 25c and 50c bottles.
