THE STORY OF A STEAK.

Lazarus is not a name savants associate with the highest achievement of the culinary art. The original historic possessor of that name was hardly a gourmet. But times have changed and the traveller in the middle west of today finds the most delicious cut of beef served in the most horribly high hotels under the title "Lazarus steak." The Baltimore Hotel at Kansas City serves Lazarus steak best, but it can be had at the Planters at St. Louis and the Gayoso at Memphis and other popular hostelries up and down the Mississippi know it. No resturant of New York, or of Baltimore or of New Orleans offers anything quite so palatable notwithstanding the boast of the chefs of those cities that they have forgotten more about good cooking than the gastronomic specialist of the more provincial cities of the country will ever know.

The Lazarus steak belongs to Texas. It is a creation of the generous days of the great cattlemen and now that the ably upholstered in genuine grain price of meat has soared to heights that stagger the only moderately pecunious householder, only the opulent can afford it. "It is a porterhouse broiled forty or forty-five minutes between thin cuts from the flank, and then browned over a quick fire. The browning is done to satisfy the eye. It does not add to the palatability of the dish. A more wasteful manner of cooking a steak could hardly be devised for the flank cuts are burned to a crisp in the process of broiling and must be thrown away. The only connection with the Lazarus steak New York can claim is that its inventor was a New Yorker by birth. Samuel Lazarus is the name of this modern Lucullus. Largest Box Factory in State Used For Exporting Oil

One cargo which left Port Arthur for China the other day loaded with Texaco products, used enough lumber for the cases to make a tree 16 miles high and large enough round to cut 12x12. It took 9,400,000 nails to fasten these cases together. Thirty-four miles of wire were used in making handles for the cans, and the cans themselves were made from 309 miles of tin sheets.

All this means Texas labor and Texas manufacturing industries to the extent of employing thousands of men in Texas, built up because The Texas Company's export business requires enormous quantities of other manufactures. The Texas Company, besides making quality oil products, makes a stronger export box, a better export can than any other concern in the oil business. The qualities of these packages are known wherever Texaco products are sent, and they are a part of the quality service which has been the policy of The Texas Company from its inception.

The native trader in the interior of China knows that the packages which bear the Star and T of The Texas Company reach him after their long travel in good condition, unbroken, without leaks or damage.

From dock to steamer hold, from steamer hold to lighter, from lighter to godown, thence to junk, river boat and bearer these cases must travel, without injury or breakage. They are recognized as the package of quality and long service.

My home life is lost. In my mad rush after business success, the ideals of my youth have vanished. I don't know when I have laughed out from my heart." I shall write a story some day about "The Man Who Lost His Laugh," And in that story I shall show that no man can lose his laugh

> There can be no success in business when there is failure in one's personal life. And it is certain that the man who lost the power to live leisurely is an abject failure as a man, no matter how many dollars (net) he earns each month. When his children crawl under the bed, the cat hikes for the back fence, the dog growls, and the neighbors call their children into the house when they see him comingthere's something wrong, even when the man thinks he is making sweet music by rattling the loose change, in the shape of five-dollar gold pieces, in his pocket. I think that a little gold in one's heart and in one's laughter is worth more than a whole lot of gold in a bank or a pocket.

Taking one consideration with another-number of farms, population, etc., Mitchell county is the peer of any of its neighbors as a purely all round agricultural proposition. Its abundance of wood for domestic purposes; its excellent gyp-free and easily accessible water supply; its large bodies of the most fertile land; its social, school and church facilities-all combine to make Mitchell county a most desirable place for a home or profitable investment. If a garden or truck | and all trespassers will be prosecutpatch can be made anywhere in West Texas without irrigation, Mitchell county is that place, and the prevalent lack of these adjuncts to good living on the farms, is due to the indisposition of the landlord or tenant to embrace a golden opportunity, more than to any natural disadvantage. IS HOLDING COTTON A PROFIT OR LOSS?

We claim it is a loss in several ways. In the first place you raise it to sell and so long as you hold it, for bookish (and all other) men.

ft is just as if you had raised no crop. What use have you at any time other than to supply your wants and wishes as the opportunity presents itself. The condition of the world and the finance issue of the same demands of each and every one of us all the relief possible, the farmer being the axle of the world. When they cease raising and placing on the market their products, the conditions immediately change. When your cotton is gathered and sold early, as a rule it places you in a position to either have money in your bank or in your pocket and it gives you financial standing to have a checking account at the bank. It places you in a position where no one knows your balance but your banker. You are then and there prepared to share or divide your earnings as a return to all of those who accommodated you in any way in helping you make and gather the crop. Your conscience is clearer and you express the proper feeling for your fellowmen and your Maker when you pay your debts early and return the favor to the ones that extended to you business accommodations. In our opinion in a sense the farmer that holds his cotton and neglects to pay his bills in a reasonable and due time unfits his banker, his merchant, his doctor, his blacksmith, his minister and his other creditors, to serve him in a satisfactory manner at any time in the future, or at least so long as he remains a debtor. It is a fact, we believe, that crop failures and farmers holding their cotton will sooner or later place practically everything on a cash basis. If you fail to pay your debts, fail to pay your blacksmith, your physician and every party of any occupation that you may owe, then and there it unfits them all to meet their obligations and requirements as they would like to do. The merchant strives to accommodate you by trusting you and letting you have all that he has and all that his credit will admit, solely to accommodate you and for what little profit he hopes to get out of same. So when the farmer ceases to make and pay, it is an assured fact that the merchant is in a far worse condition than the farmer. For you have and have used all of the carnings of his past life, and all the credit that he has worked for and built up. It is all taken from him because he has failed to receive his due collections. How can you expect any further accommodations when you have the cotton, seed and feed to pay your debts and will not do so, but continually plead that you can't afford to sell your cotton and products at the present prices, but seemingly want all your creditors to extend you accommodations regardless of any obligations that they have promised to meet or must meet. The merchant has as much right to say, "No, I will not sell you a sack of flour today, at the present price, for I fully believe that in a few days or next week same will be worth more money to me." What would you think of your merchant putting you off like this when likely your family would need the flour? What would you think of your banker if you asked accommodation and he would tell you "No," because he expected the present rate of interest to be higher in a few days. You can apply this to every necessity of life. Your banker, your merchant, your doctor and your blacksmith may accommodate you through the entire year, placing all trust in you to pay them. With the majority of men no sooner is this debt paid or partly, the order of confidence is reversed. Then and there they ask for an itemized account or a receipt in full. How can you expect people to help you or place confidence in you if you have none in your fellow being? In our opinion, the present outlook is that every individual who is holding cotton and not paying his due or past due accounts is driving and forcing every merchant in the land on a cash basis. What are you going to do? Sell your cotton and apply it on your debts or are you going to continue to sell a bale or two at a time to get a little money to pay your picking and ginning and let the rest go lacking until a more suitable time for you? Our intentions are to exert ourselves in the future to try to help those that help us and at the same time the favor is asked for. We consider that credit will not be as cheap in the future as it has been in the past especially to those who have failed to show justice between man and man. Consider well the above and resolve to redeem yourself and "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Our stock of merchandise, low priced, is still complete. Two cars of flour now in, that we are offering to you for 75c to $1.00 per hundred less than mill quotations. Cream of Wheat and Dublin Pride a high patent flour for $3.25. The Upper Ten and the New Century, a fancy patent flour or as good as any mill puts out for $3.50 per 100 pounds. Canned goods, Irish potatoes, dried fruits and all other groceries remain unchanged from our last ad. This is an opportunity for you all. We hope to see you in our place of business for your share of this merchandise in the next few days.

The Telephone Saved a Life

When one of our men was badly injured by the threshing machine we telephoned the doctor, who told us how to patch the man up. The doctor then started for our place in a hurry. When he arrived the man was pretty weak, and without the doctor's advice the results might have proved serious. Thanks to the telephone, the man pulled through.
