CHRISTMAS TOYS.

England has decided that the children of America may have their regular quota of Christmas toys from Germany and has released two great ship loads to be imported for the tots of America. Uncle John is very kind and doubtless the children will be pleased to learn that old Santa is to get his regular supply of toys from Germany.—Abilene Reporter.

HOTEL BUILDING IS ASSURED

Stock Practically All Subscribed—Lots Purchased—Plans Accepted and Bids Awaited.

Hip, hip, 'Rah! Eureka! California! Three rousing cheers and a tiger for the Colorado Chamber of Commerce! It has fetched home the bacon; filled a long felt want, made everything lovely, while the goose honks high.

The meaning of all which is that Colorado will soon have a modern hotel building, amply sufficient to care for the traveling public, and catering to the best class of patrons.

Much credit is due the indefatigable efforts of our Chamber of Commerce and public spirited citizens for bringing this most desirable thing to pass. The town has long needed a building that was adaptable to the twentieth century needs and standards of entertainment. Even with the best building the town has had in the past, devoted to public service, there were lacking many of the comforts, conveniences and accessories that are today indispensable to a hostelry catering to the traveling public for support. And as no one feature of a town so widely advertised it as the hotel service it provides, Colorado for many years stood far down the list of desirable places whereat to stop. Every line of business represented in the community felt and realized the need of an up-to-date hotel building, in which the competent hotel people already here, could give a service commensurate with their ability.

Waiting vainly for this need to be supplied by individual capital, and despairing of the owners of the old St. James property ever rebuilding a hotel, the Chamber of Commerce finally took the matter in hand with energy and materializing effect. The Hammer lots on the northeast corner of Second and Elm streets have been purchased and plans for an attractive and substantial building, equipped with every modern convenience and accessory for the comfort of guests and expedition of every detail of the service have been accepted, and bids will soon be asked for the construction of the same.

The capital to erect this building has been provided by a joint stock company of local capitalists. Of the 300 shares into which the entire stock was divided, 235 shares have already been taken, while several parties who have expressed intention of subscription have not yet been seen. The committee of the Chamber of Commerce which has this business in charge urgently requests all who purpose to subscribe to this worthy enterprise, to see the chairman at once, that the matter may be closed up at the earliest day.

The Record in common with all who have investigated the matter, regards stock in this enterprise as one of the safest and surest of dividends, yet promoted in this community, and it is up to the civic pride of every citizen of the town who can do so, to stand behind the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce to give Colorado one of the most urgently needed institutions that goes to make a progressive and attractive town.

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—Mrs. John J. Pershing, wife of Brigadier General Pershing, with three or her four children, was burned to death at her quarters in Presido here early today. A lamp explosion is believed to have caused the tragedy. She was the daughter of Senator Warren, of Wyoming. Her husband is at El Paso commanding troops along the border.

ITINERARY OF FARM DEMONSTRATOR W. A. DULIN.

I have visited the following farms the past week and beg to report existing conditions as I saw them:

On Monday I visited the farm of N. C. Browne, on route 3. I found a fine crop, a nice bunch of cattle and more than enough hogs for his own killing. He has installed a cane mill for his sons and I found them making excellent syrup for their own use and for the market.

J. D. Browne has one of the best crops I have seen in this county. John believes in deep breaking and intensive cultivation.

On Tuesday I visited R. F. Hargrove, J. J. Northcutt, B. O. Joyce and Jas. Plaster, all on route 3, and found the crops of all of them in first class condition and shape.

Wednesday I inspected the farm of Geo. E. Goodwin in the Cuthbert community. Mr. Goodwin has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the best and most successful farmers of Mitchell county. He has a nice home, blooded cattle and is owner of one of the purest bred herd of Poland-China hogs in West Texas. It is always a great pleasure to visit this family and enjoy its open hospitality. Mr. Goodwin has installed a cane mill and made this season more than 200 gallons of the finest sorghum syrup. The Williams boys on this farm have a fine crop and well worked. These boys deserve much credit for the work they have done, and I predict they will make very successful farmers and good citizens. The Hicks boys also on this farm, have a fine crop. Mr. Buckalew, likewise on this same farm, has a fine crop, particularly his June corn alternated with peanuts, is to be admired. It is the finest crop of the kind I have ever seen grow anywhere.

On Thursday I again visited the farm of W. C. Berry, which is in fine shape and condition. J. M. Strain and his sons have another fine crop, much of the credit of which is due the boys, who are good workers and thoroughly in love with farm life, which is one of the greatest incentives to successful agriculture. On the Badgett farm everything was found in ship shape and promising an abundant yield. Mr. Badgett has one of the most comfortable and attractive country homes in Mitchell county. Besides his farming operations, Mr. Badgett owns and runs a very successful gin.

Friday morning I visited the J. M. Helton farm, where I found everything in the most promising and prosperous condition, evincing good and efficient farm management. F. M. Taylor, of this community, has a good crop.

The McGuire boys share the universally promising prospects of this thrifty community, and taken all in all, the Fairview community is in better shape than it has been for some years.

MOB WREAKS VENGEANCE ON TWO NEGROES.

Blacks Are Burned in Park at Sulphur Springs After Killing and Wounding of Deputy and Sheriff.

Sulphur Springs, Aug. 29.—In a fight with an armed posse near here this afternoon, Joe Richmond was shot and killed and his brother, King Richmond, both negroes, was seriously wounded and later the body of the dead negro was burned at the stake with his wounded brother in Buford park in Sulphur Springs.

The negroes early today had shot and killed Deputy Sheriff Nathan A. Flippen and probably fatally wounded Sheriff J. B. Butler.

Sheriff Butler and Deputy Flippen had started to arrest King Richmond at a negro settlement nine miles south of here on a minor charge when sud-

DALLAS LAWYER LIKELY TO RECOVER.

A wire was received here Tuesday by a member of the family announcing the shooting at Dallas, of Mr. Hugh Swain, a lawyer of that city, by his wife, the night before. Although seriously wounded, he is reported as likely to recover.

Mrs. Swain was released on bond Wednesday, when she declared that the shooting was done in self-defense. The preliminary trial was set for Wednesday, and much interest is manifested in the case.

Mrs. Swain was reared in Colorado as Miss Pearl Bailey, and has many friends here who deeply sympathize with her in her misfortune.

Both weather prophets, Hicks and Foster, predict a variety of distressful weather for the month of September. Storms, frosts and seismic disturbances will prevail throughout the southwest. Better not venture from home without raincoat, storm house and accident policy.

Each day it was set at $61.26 cents below normal. There was no indication at the close of business today that the end of the slump was in sight. In its downward plunge sterling carried with it all continental exchange except Russian rubles, in which dealings were said to be extremely light. This money showed an improvement over Saturday, rising from 34.25 to 34.50. France went to 6.02, within three points of their previous low record or depreciation, and three dropped to 6.52.

With the markets thoroughly demoralized no one in high banking circles cared to venture an explanation or a forecast. Representatives of half a dozen big banking houses said they were not interested in the latest figures. This was taken to mean that they had virtually ceased to deal in foreign exchange for the time being.

GERMANS FEAR MONEY PANIC AT END OF WAR.

Asserted That Total National Income Will be Needed to Pay Interest Alone on Imperial Debt.

Amsterdam, Aug. 28.—The Berlin Vorwarts, in discussing the new German war loan, directs attention to what is characterized as the alarming financial situation which Germany must face at the conclusion of the war. "After the war," says the paper, "the imperial debt and pensions alone will demand an additional expenditure of at least $625,000,000, or a little less than the united ordinary and extraordinary imperial expenditure for 1912. In other words, the income of the empire hitherto will only suffice to pay the interest on the national debt. For all other expenses new sources of taxation must be created. Whoever remembers the taxation controversy of 1908 and 1909 can easily imagine into what internal political difficulties the war is bringing us."

Washington, Aug. 31.—Growth of the new Alaskan railroad construction terminals at Anchorage, Alaska, from a wilderness, six months ago to a city of 5,000 population today, is told in telegraphic reports to the interior department. The message says that, in addition to a recent sale of 600 lots of government domain at Anchorage at a total price of $146,000, one hundred and eighty more lots were sold Saturday at a total of $23,000. The site is one of the termini of the new government railroad from Seward to Fairbanks, for which congress has already appropriated $1,000,000 out of a prospective outlay of $35,000,000.

HOW PROHIBITION KILLED INDUSTRIES OF KANSAS.

The grape juice industry is not the only thing ruined by prohibition in Kansas. In fact, prohibition has killed about every industry in Kansas, except the raising of wheat, corn, alfalfa, fruit, livestock, peas, potatoes, cabbage, garden gass, chickens, ducks and geese, horses and mules and fine blooded cattle. It busted up all of our flourishing saloons and beer gardens and paralyzed many of our most prominent gamblers. It has absolutely killed the bartenders' union. Where once the thriving saloons sent the clamorous odor of its prosperity out upon the sidewalk and clear across the street, we find nothing but shoe stores, dry goods stores, meat markets, grocery stores, clothing stores, and other sordid activities of an unhappy people. Where once you saw long strings of men on Saturday night going joyfully into the rooms where the doors closed securely, where there was sawdust on the floor and a merry crowd at the mahogany bar, treating all around, and a man could get his check cashed and spend it all right there on his boon companions and go enthusiastically home and break up the furniture and give his wife a black eye; instead of all these manifestations of a thrifty and prosperous citizenship, as in our saloon days, we see men going quietly into the butcher shops and grocery stores and then go lugging home great bundles of supplies for their wives and children—beefsteak for supper, Sunday dinner, etc. Ah, what a sad result of the banishment of the saloons. Prohibition has left little of Kansas, except her fields and factories, schools and stores, and pens of fat cattle and her sober and happy and prosperous people!—Wichita Beacon.

Vanceboro, Maine, Aug. 28.—The second large shipment this month of gold and securities from London to New York passed through here today on a special train. It was said here that it consisted of bonds to the value of $25,000,000 and $19,000,000 in gold.

Boston, Aug. 26.—Former Governor Cole Bleese of South Carolina in an address delivered here today before the Governor's Conference on "The Duty and Responsibility of Chief Executives in Dealing With Prisoners," declared that the lynching of men in the South for certain crimes is a protection to civilization. He condemned the "third degree" in dealing with prisoners and expressed the opinion that it was worse in some respects than lynching.

NEW YORK POLITICAL LETTER.

New York, Aug. 28, 1915. It was thought a good joke when it was proposed that all women should stick to their homes for one day to answer the argument against equal suffrage that "a woman's place is her home." Now that such a "strike" has been decided upon, the joke threatens to become a near-calamity. For in this city alone there are 600,000 women who work outside their own homes, and in the whole country there are 8,000,000 women wage earners. There is hardly an industry that would not be crippled by such a demonstration if it should be carried out. Not only would the phone system and retail trade be tied up, but farms and factories would be forced to mark time and the schools and theatres might as well be closed. This woman's strike is to be called about October 1st and it may be national wide.

The solidarity of the American forces that have been arrayed in this city on behalf of the Allies has been broken by the action of Great Britain and France in putting cotton on the list of contraband of war. Voices here that have been raised on all possible occasions in unswerving opposition to all things Teutonic are now heard in this city in insistent demand for the firm assertion of America's objections to the illegal extension of the list of contraband.

It is pointed out in organs hitherto strongly pro-Allies that the most recent British orders in council violate the district pledge of Sir Edward Grey, given last September, and contradict the position that Great Britain took on October 9, 1904, in protesting against Russia's intention to make cotton contraband during her war with Japan. England then held that such action was wholly unprecedented and Prof. Holland, of Oxford, England's most famous expert on international and prize law, held that "the treatment of cotton during the American Civil War will be found on examination to have no bearing on the question."

Of course it must be admitted that Secretary McAdoo's plan to loan $30,000,000 on cotton tends to take the edge off England's act and so to make it easier for England to get away with this interference with America's trade. Certainly the morrow after England's act in making cotton contraband was a peculiar time to announce the loan plan. But, after all, what is a loan of $30,000,000 as compared with the loss of $234,257,329 in this country's cotton export business in the past year?

The financial puzzle of the day is afforded by the International Mercantile Marine, popularly known as the Shipping Trust, which is in the hands of a receiver in the face of earnings at the rate of $20,000,000 a year on $51,000,000 of preferred stock.

The world's largest mail handling plant has been opened by Uncle Sam, in a three-story building that straddles the New York Central tracks. A day's business consists in handling 800,000 pounds of mail matter that is carried on 227 trains.

It is said that there is a school for everything in this city. Yes, even a school for janitors, and fifty of them the other day received diplomas.

"Friday the thirteenth!" There are not a few people who shiver when the calendar produces this combination. But what will they do if the Rev. Herbert P. Hames persuades the world to adopt the calendar that he has devised? He would have thirteen months in each year, each month beginning on a Sunday, and so you can see for your self how it would figure out.

While the Government has been very carefully waiting for exact information as to the sinking of the Arabic, the New York public has been treated to the most remarkable demands for war on the part of a number of metropolitan newspapers, but the public generally has not shown the least disposition to initiate the editors' facility for losing their heads.

Certainly the tall headlines, ringing the changes on the idea that diplomatic relations with Germany were about to be severed, look very cheap today in view of Germany's frank disavowal of intention to commit an unfriendly act and her request for time to ascertain what really happened.

There are several phases of the issue over submarine warfare that have been brought out in current discussions. Thus while it is admitted that it is an inviolate principle that Americans are to be free to go where they please on the high seas, as a practical matter it is a deliberately unfriendly act for an American to jeopardize the peace of his own country by sailing on a belligerent ship, as it is put by Charles Meigs Ripley, an American whose ancestors for five generations were born in this country.

Then again if it should develop, as intimated, that England is hiring American passengers to protect her ammunition ships, it might well be held that this would be a deliberately unfriendly act, and the Administration would probably be forced to adopt the policy suggested by former Secretary of State Bryan and warn Americans to keep off British ammunition ships, as Great Britain warned her subjects during the Russo-Japanese war.

In the Metropolitan district dwellings and flats are now being erected sufficient to house a quarter of a million people. That is the measure of the prospective growth of the metropolis and its suburbs in this year in which overtop prosperity is next door neighbor to starved stagnation.

It is proposed that the City of New York set a minimum wage for its employees. Its Bureau of Standards had determined that "below $340 an unskilled laborer's family of five cannot maintain a standard of living consistent with American ideas." So the pay of laborers in the Street Cleaning Department is to be jumped from a maximum of $792 a year to a minimum of $840.

While the railroads and the financial interests are bewailing the recent rate decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, protesting that they cannot make both ends meet without increased earnings, the Pennsylvania Railroad has gone at the problem from the other end by cutting expenses $7,954,594 in the first half of the present year.

While New York State is readily conceded to lead all the other states in wealth, manufactures, foreign commerce and domestic trade, it is not generally realized that there are twenty-eight states that are larger in area than New York, but that New York leads all the rest in ten lines of agricultural production, namely in hay, dairy products, dairy cows, small vegetables, potatoes, apples, flowers and plants, buckwheat, small fruits and maple sugar. The aggregate value of these products in a year exceeds $325,000,000.

Commercial interests here are awaiting with concern America's answer to Great Britain's long delayed defense of her orders in council which have been so heavily against American industry and trade, and it is pointed out now that the new British attack on cotton will necessitate the redrafting of the note.

But, as a high official remarks, "as the note has not yet been drafted, it cannot very well be redrafted."

Business interests are manifesting impatience. They cannot understand why diplomatic discussions with Great Britain proceed so slowly, while no time is lost on either side in interchanges between America and Germany.

In this connection Prof. George W. Kirchwey, dean of the Law School of Columbia University, one of the foremost authorities on international law, has come out with a notable statement. He says:

"Germany will not give up her irregular submarine warfare until England relinquishes her irregular blockade. England and Germany are deadlocked on this question, and we are caught in the deadlock."

"The only way out of a situation which is constantly growing worse is a league of neutral nations. Within two weeks such a union could establish lines beyond which belligerents must not go."

There has been a surprising outbreak of hysteria on the part of some of the metropolitan newspapers over the report of the Commission on Industrial Relations. The rage of some of the editors has almost made them incoherent in their denunciation of the strictures of Chairman Walsh on the swollen fortunes that are America's greatest menace today.

But the fact remains that a government commission has seriously proposed that the excess of wealth: over $1,000,000 be turned back to the benefit of the people out of whom it was wrung. We may not be quite ready to carry this out, but certainly the world is moving.

The fact sticks up conspicuously that while less than ten per cent of the people earn as much as a thousand dollars a year, there are 44 families whose combined income exceeds $50,000,000 a year.

That is some melon that the Du Ponts are cutting. The distribution of $58,854,200 to the stockholders throws a spot light upon the munitions business. It certainly pays to sell powder to the Allies—that is it pays the Du Ponts. Does it pay the country in the long run?

Samuel Gompers seems too willing to undertake big jobs. Recently he tried to stop the eight-hour movement in the munition plants. Now he is trying to drive the Socialists out of the American Federation of Labor. It will be a sorry day for the Federation when its president can dictate the politics of its members.

There is some thrift in the Empire State, even if its Government is spendthrift. There are 3,202,659 accounts in the savings banks of the state and the amount due these depositors is $1,791,524,501. In spite of disturbed conditions the increase in number of depositors was 21,411 and their aggregate deposits are $18,311,200 larger than a year ago.

There were only two ripples on the political pool this week. The reunionists of the Republican and Progressive parties were sorely discomfited by Justice Hughes' refusal to be a candidate for the Presidency, but are finding what comfort they can in the fact that the canny jurist did not say that he would decline if nominated. The other ripple was made by Senator Root seeking to find a middle ground between the Progressive principle of the recall of public officials and the stupid old scheme of impeachment. But Mr. Root will have to bid higher.

Washington, Aug. 27.—German Ambassador Bernstorff, acting on instructions from Berlin, notified Secretary of State Lansing this morning that "full satisfaction" would be given the United States for the sinking of the Arabic. He said Germany would make more than a mere disavowal if it was found that the Arabic was sunk without warning.

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL! HORRIBLE!

Calomel is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on the Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

THE AWFUL TOLL.

Staggering in their enormity and without precedent throughout all the history of the world are the latest figures of the European war's casualty list. The human destruction wrought in this modern and bloodiest of all conflicts is without comparison.

The French Relief Society in London has found that the approximate casualties in the aggregate are now more than ten million. And the strife has lasted but a few weeks more than one year.

Pause and strive to comprehend what these awful figures mean. The dead and wounded amount to one-tenth the population of the United States and are about one hundred times greater than the standing army of this country.

It is estimated that the casualty list of 10,000,000 that 3,000,000 represent the killed. Russia has lost more than 1,000,000, Germany more than 750,000, France more than 500,000.

And they say that the struggle has just started; that it must go on and on until one side or the other is completely victorious.

And then—Austin American.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Patron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

T. & P. TIME TABLE.

Table with train schedules: East Bound (Morning train No. 4, Evening train No. 6), West Bound (Morning train No. 5, Evening train No. 3).

Indeed, Texas is a wonderfully versatile country. Wheat in the northern section; cotton throughout most of its area; feed stuff all over the state; fruit and garden truck in any old part, and hell from El Paso to Port Isabel all along the border.

It was really selfish of former U. S. Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey to come all the way from Salt Lake City to Dallas, Texas, for the mere matter of victuals, and refuse to show himself to the hankering public. This is the strongest evidence against his nebulous ambition to warm his old seat.

The vine crop of West Texas this year of grace, greatly exceeds anything it has done before—e. g.: When the Record notes the fact that there are many patches of pumpkins, ker-shaws, etc., in which the fruit of the vines absolutely cover the ground, and in a few instances are piled upon each other, we not only come safely within the existing conditions, but reserve a good margin of safety. Water melons, cantaloupes, squash, and the gourd family, from the cymling to the good old drinking gourd, has simply spread itself over all the space not pre-empted by something more edible. As we have possibly intimated before—"Great is Mitchell county and The Record sure, 'tis its Prophet."

Governor J. E. Ferguson and Congressman W. R. Smith will be the verbal "whales" at the Sweetwater water carnival. And faith, why not? Be'n't they big; don't they spout? Aye, but only the one of them takes water, while the other qualifies his'n with a hooker.

While pure wood alcohol killed two Missouri penitentiary convicts deader than the proverbial nail, the veteran booze fighters out in dry Arizona, declare they hardly can detect the difference between that brand of sudden death and the regulation stuff formerly sold over the counters. If they can't get the wood "alchy" they have sulphuric acid as a sort of "pick-me-up" between drinks.

If there is an editor in the State of Texas with brains enough to break into the penitentiary in cold blood, there's a job awaiting him on the "Prison Mirror" at Stillwater, Minnesota. The staff is suffering from a derth of competent material.

What's the matter with Colorado getting up a county fair next year if conditions are propitious? As the Records understands it, the old fair organization is still extant, the grounds laid out, with little to be done but put them in ship shape and work up interest in the occasion. Several of our neighboring towns are putting on county fairs this fall, and for Mitchell county, the agricultural peer of them all, to sit idly by and see its neighbors shake down the plums, is not a very complimentary commentary upon our ability to recognize an opportunity.

It's a pity Representative R. L. Henry, who calls himself running for the United States senate, can't get anybody to 'bate with him. He seems impatient for the massacre.

The drop in temperature last Saturday night put an unseasonable taste in the water melons and made a sun bath easier to take than the tub furnished. But it cleared away the impending clouds and brought the hot dry weather that the cotton needs just at this juncture.

Washington lost more battles than he won. But his aim for independence was achieved. People marvel at the election to the Presidency of Woodrow Wilson—a schoolmaster. But those who know the man, know that he has been preparing for this exalted office for a quarter of a century—not aiming at the office merely—but the ability to fill it. His aim was to merit the task—not the honor alone.—Exchange.

The entire press of the state was saddened last week by the death of Col. F. B. Baillio, which occurred at his home in Cleburne, August 25th. He was probably the best known newspaper man in the state. He was a charter member of the Texas Press Association, at one time its president and a life honorary member. He had also served as president of the National Editorial Association in 1902, and had but recently compiled a history of the State Press Association, which he gave to that body. Peace to his ashes. "We knew him well, Horatio; a man of infinite jest and most excellent fancy."

Avick, Bro. Hardy of the Snyder Signal; the Record knows that it was merely a lapsus calami when you referred to the recent "East India storm" that declaimed the gulf coast, but won't say one word about it.

The Smart Alexander who talks back to the clown in a circus is legion. He is to be found in every town and community. To keep his smartness from spoiling between times, he may be found at the station on arrival of trains taking a chance fall out of some passenger with headpiece light as his own, or butting in to street fakirs of all sorts and conditions. There is no use to rebuke him—as well try to bandy odors with a pole cat.

If there be any sign in the times, comfortable dwelling houses will be a scarce commodity this fall and winter in Colorado. Even now a desirable vacant house is not to be found. There is little doubt but that many people will come to Colorado within the next few months seeking locations for homes and business. Will those of our citizens who own lots without houses allow this influx to leave Colorado and settle in other and possibly rival towns? Will those who own business houses refuse to repair or remodel them in order to secure a long term and reliable tenant? Several business men have come to Colorado recently to investigate the opening here for their various line of business. The policy that tries to shut out active and honorable competition in any line, is a poor one for the community. It is like damming back the water of a stream, which in a short while rises above the dam and sweeps away all impediments and obstructions. Competition may be throttled for a while but the rising tide of newer methods and more aggressive policies will eventually destroy the antiquated bulwarks of opposition. An open field and a fair fight, with survival of the fittest, is the law of nature and will ever persist.

UNIVERSAL PROHIBITION BECAUSE OF TEMPERANCE.

There can be no question that prohibition, or rather, strict temperance, is an assured fact and will become universal within a few years. There is no possible way to prevent it because the movement does not depend for its success upon any changing sentiment, irresponsible fad, or influence other than common sense and a business and economic demand.

Business men demand from their employees the best that is in them. They require bright, active minds, unclouded with drugs or beverages, with strong physical bodies free from the influences and ravages of weakening debauches and dissipation, and men who enjoy the fullest respect of the entire community in which they live. It is purely a business and economic demand and is entirely free from any maudlin sentiment or passing fancy. In due course of time this improved way of living and conserving of physical force and mental activity will be reflected in prolonging life and changing the tables of mortality and longevity.—Household Guest.

The El Paso Times celebrated its 35th birthday last Sunday by issuing a mammoth edition exploiting the city of El Paso and its tributary territory, which is an empire within itself. One of the bright lights illuminating the pages of that excellent paper is our old townsman, Hector McEachern, who formerly conducted a newspaper in Colorado, when the town was wide open, and many interesting stories can be recounted of the town's human flotsam and jetsam.

There is at least an explanation if not an excuse, for people using tobacco, whiskey and narcotic drugs. They produce a sensation which develops into habit that enslaves. But the woman or man who expends vital force twelve hours a day washing the dirt and adulterations from gum by chewing, has no more scientific explanation for the animal-like habit than pure imitation. If the wasted muscular energy and vital force of the collective gum chewers in any community could be attached to a dynamo, it would turn every wheel of industry, hoe all the weeds, wash all the clothes, churn all the cream and rock all the cradles in that vicinity, then leave enough power to run a well drilling outfit. We have suspected that there were gum or "rosium" chewers in the days of the Judges of Israel, and that Samson took their collective jaws as he did the tails of foxes wherewith he wrought so mightily among the Philistines. As between "brown mule" and gum, we had rather hibernate with the former.

Monday will be Labor Day, and will be observed in all industrial centers with much ceremony and hot air.

The raucous whistle of the cotton gin and heavy sighing exhaust of the compress put a feeling of fall in one's blood, as well as quicken every business impulse. These sounds of industry intermingled with the rasp of saw and impact of hammer, is fitting music for the grand torchlight procession of prosperity that will traverse West Texas this fall and winter. Will you individually, be in it?

There is quite a deal of dicker going forward in this community on realty trades and purchases. Several parties with capital stand on the bank of hesitancy shivering and reluctant to plunge into the stream of investment, though their better judgment tells them they are in need of a profitable bath. Go on in, fellows; the water's hot and the time is ripe.

OROZCO KILLED AS HORSE THIEF

Van Horn, Texas, Sept. 1.—Identification is complete in the case of Gen. Pascual Orozco, killed by a posse of Americans in Eagle mountains Monday afternoon. The partial identification established Tuesday by papers found on the person of Orozco, was completed on the arrival here last night of undertaker J. J. Kaster, John Russell and Amador Hermosillo, the latter a nephew of Orozco.

The bodies of his four companions, killed at the same time, have been identified as those of Jose F. Delgado, Cristoforo Caballero, Andreas Sandoval and Jesus Miguel Terranzas.

SINCERITY AND SUFFERING

John A. Sleicher, editor of Leslie's Weekly, is fearless and always rings the bell. In a recent number of Leslie's he says sincerity covers a multitude of sins. A man may sincerely believe in a very bad cause. Fanatics may be sincere when they burn, torture and slay. The frenzied zealot is always sincere. The inquisitors who burned the martyrs with blazing fagots in the dark ages were sincere.

The Hindu widow of the highest caste who formerly immolated herself on the funeral pyre of her husband was sincere in the belief in the horrible custom. The Chinese mother who bound the tender feet of her little babe, inflicting untold torture and crippling the child for life, was sincere.

Abraham, in all sincerity, would have offered up Isaac on the sacrificial altar if his hand had not been stayed, and the rabble who released a murderer and crucified the Just One, believed that they were doing a good service.

He could have gone further and said that the cloak of hypocrisy covers a multitude of liars and slanderers; that there are men who invoke the presence of the Deity and appeal to the Nazarene who died on the cross of Calvary to cover their foul doings and fouler sayings.

Mr. Sleicher is right when he says that too many American people permit someone else to do their thinking. They mistake noise for argument; vile sensationalism for fact; putridness of heart and soul and mind for godliness; cant for knowledge; shallowness for learning and scare headlines for correct information.

Mr. Sleicher is right again when he says that the emotional, the ignorant and those who neither read and think fall an easy prey to the glib tongue of the demagogue and the shameless charlatan and the slimy muckraker, because the public has neither the diligence nor patience to study questions of the hour or investigate the lives of men who are in the public eye.

Again he sounds the gong when he says that in all ages preachers of false doctrines have had their vogue. It would be surprising perhaps if we escaped them now. But in this enlightened day, when education puts the truth within the reach of all, when reason is enthroned, when peace is preached on every side and the britherood of man exalted, it is passing strange that the Royal Law is so often and completely forgotten. That law was laid down centuries ago. It is as good now as ever. It reads: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Fort Worth Record.

DRUGS AND DYNAMITE

There should be a law similar to the Harris drugs act to regulate the sale of dangerous explosives. Many people feel that such legal interference is only another step in the process, which is gradually but surely going on, of transferring all moral responsibility from the individual to a fool-proof government. There is no question that the invasion of personal freedom by the State is something that will bear jealous watching. But if the federal government has the right—and is has already assumed it—to interfere with personal liberty to the extent of protecting the individual against the habitual weakness of his own nature, it certainly has the right to protect him against the madness of his neighbor.

The drug habit affects directly only the one addicted to it, but the dynamite habit directly affects other people. Whatever theories one may hold about the wisdom of protecting by legislation a person against himself, it certainly falls within the province of government to protect the life and property of the citizens. It is not enough to have criminal statutes which will punish the criminal after he has committed his misdeed, for it is difficult to repair the damage wrought by bomb by starting criminal proceedings against some crank. The time for government protection is while there is something to protect. The effectiveness of the recent national drugs act is an object lesson in what the central government may do to rid society of certain recognized nuisances. There are now federal tags against the inter-state shipment of explosives except under certain conditions, but these laws are not drastic enough. If the next congress pass an act regulating the sale of explosives the law will get more unanimous support than the Harris act, except from the few who resent any interference with their sacred personal right of being blown up.—New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser.

A BIT OF PHILOSOPHY
FROM
WET WEATHER TALK
BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

It hain't no use to grumble and complane;
It's jest as cheap and easy to rejoice.—
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,
W'y, rain's my choice.

Men ginerly, to all intents—
Although they're apt to grumble some—
Puts most theyr trust in Providence,
And take things as they come.

In this existunce, dry and wet
Will overtake the best of men—
Some little skift o' clouds'll shet
The sun off now and then.—

And mayby, whilse you're wundern who You've fool-like lent your umbrall' to,
And want it—out'll pop the sun,
And you'll be glad you hain't got none!

After a good time with games ice cream and cake were served. Many gifts were left by the little lassies.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Honoring the eighth birthday of her little granddaughter, Little Miss Eulalia Charters, Mrs. W. R. Lindley, entertained twenty-four little girls last Saturday afternoon. Many games played and a contest of planning lettuce in the rabbit's mouth caused much fun. Lois Price won the prize for feeding bunny best. The birthday cake with its eight candles was admired and cut and eaten with peach cream.

Her Sunday school teacher, Miss Minnie Lawless, the auntie and mama and Miss Bonnie Biles assisted Mrs. Lindley in caring for the little folks. Many dainty and pretty gifts were felt the honoree as souvenirs of the happy occasion.

Good Dinners at Jake's Restaurant

SUPPER ON THE BLUFFS.

On Wednesday a bevy of young ladies took a lunch and went out to the bluffs for supper in honor of Miss Lucile Pearson, of Shreveport, La., who has been a guest of Miss Exie Campbell for the past week. Almost every imaginable good thing to eat was spread and, needless to say, enjoyed. Miss Pearson is loud in her praises of West Texas people and their hospitality. The personnel was: Misses Exie and Ruby Campbell, Lela and Irene Whipkey, Ethel and Olive Greenwood, Olie, Ethel and Pauline Pritchett, Myrtle Maddin, Mildred Coleman, Mabel and Frances Smith, Mabel and Jeanette Earnest, Abble Thomas, Vera Gary, Madeline Shepherd, Lucile Henthorne, Fannie Farmer, Mary Arbuthnot, Eula Campbell, Minnie Lawless and Lucile Pearson.

NARROW ESCAPE.

A few mornings ago as the little eighteen months old boy of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Soper was playing in the back yard the cow broke out of the lot and run after him and seemed to try with all her might to tear him to pieces, but his mother and a cousin who were nearby came to his rescue and by almost a miracle the child was saved with only a few flesh wounds, and is now all right.

CHORAL CLUB NOTICE.

Colorado Choral Club will resume work on Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the usual place. All who are interested, will please to attend. Thos. Dawes, Director.

UP-GRADE MOVEMENTS.

The clean-up and brush-up impulse has proven contagious in the community. Numerous residences show the reviving effects of new paint; concrete sidewalks give evidence of increasing civic pride; new hedges put out and old fences torn away attest the city's ambition to metropolitan airs; considerable improvements and additions at the oil mill evidence the prospect of greater business than in years past; enlargements for output capacity at the cotton gins presage the gaining of the biggest cotton crop in the history of the county; the City National Bank is enlarging its quarters; J. M. Thomas is erecting a garage; F. M. Bourn is preparing to build two residences; C. W. Simpson has been putting his Oak street property in more attractive shape. In fact, on every hand are to be seen and heard noises like general improvement and preparation for the band wagon of prosperity. Better get in the push while the getting is easy.

THE UNNOTED HEROES.

There are heroes who have never heard the fearful din of battle, Heroes who, unknown forever, Labor where no sabres rattle; There are heroes who are giving Joy to others day by day, Who are making life worth living Just by earning honest pay.

There are heroes who are wearing No bright medals for their merit, Heroes who may not be sharing Splendors that the proud inherit; There are heroes who prefer the Tasks of righting wrongful things And thus make ourselves more worthy Than the pampered sons of kings.

There are heroes, uncomplaining, Who are striving daily, yearly, So the goals we would be gaining May each morning shine more clearly;

There are heroes, unrewarded, Who, by toiling late and long In surroundings that are sordid, Help the luckless to be strong.

There are heroes with wan faces, Who uplift their fallen brothers, Heroes who, in lowly places, Labor for the love of others. Why not pause sometimes to cheer them

For the courage they reveal? Why not willingly reverse them For their patience and their zeal? —S. E. Kiser.

GRANT COLORADO MAY ESCAPE.

In order to show the anti-suffragets that woman has other fields of activity than the home, and just how vital a factor she is in business, Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, noted suffragist, is planning a "Women's One Day Strike" all over the country to take place late in September or early in October.

On the day of the strike the business men of the country will be shown just how dependent they are on the women.

A TRAGEDY.

It was just at sunset. The quiet of a country door-yard was suddenly broken by the piercing cries of two robins which flew about a young maple tree in the wildest excitement. A hurried visit to the tree told the story. Down the tree came a cat, one young fledgling in its mouth, while the others had been pushed out of the nest, some fallen to the ground only able to hop a few feet, one clinging to a branch, and all half frightened out of their lives. They were gathered up and put back into the nest while the parent birds flew screaming around the tree almost brushing with their wings the hands that were trying to restore the nestlings to the empty nest. It was useless. Twice, three times they fluttered to the ground and were replaced in the nest, but the great disaster had so overturned all they knew of life that they would not stay in the old familiar home.

The cat was caught with the dead bird in its mouth, punished, and shut up for the night, in the hope the deed would not be repeated (for many of them can be taught not to molest birds), and the fledglings finally persuaded to sit upon a branch well up in the tree. There they were left in the darkness, the father and mother still manifesting every sign of distress. In the morning all were gone. What became of them? Did they flutter again to the ground and did some other foe find them? What of the parents?

"The days of mating, the building of the nest, the patient brooding of the eggs, the innumerable journeys to and fro through the weeks when food had to be provided for all the hungry mouths—all to end in such a sad disaster. How like the story of many a human home! What is to be said in the fact of these overwhelming calamities that so often fall upon the lives of men and animals? Who can answer the question?—Our Dumb Animals.

TELL SOMEBODY.

Let me tell you something, comrade, That I've learned along the way. If the blessings that life brings you With each swiftly passing day Seem as hardly worth the counting, Since so small are they—so few— You can double them by sharing With the comrade next to you.

Have you heard a kind word spoken To another in his need? Tell your neighbor all about it. And the little simple deed Will make warm your heart in telling, And the hearts of those who hear Will be gladdened by the knowledge, And their lives will share the cheer.

Oh, the little wayside blessings That we squander every day! If we shared them with each other, They would glorify the way. They would grow, as 'neath the sunshine

Flowers in summer days unfold, Till each one of them has blossomed Into blessings, manifold.

—Elen E. Rexford.

STATE MACHINERY TOO COMPLICATED.

Wants Elimination of Useless State Boards and Commissions, and Vesting More Power in Executive Department.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 25.—Simplification of state governmental machinery was advocated by Gov. Moses Alexander, of Idaho, in his address before the Governors' Conference here today. He favored the "short ballot," elimination of useless state boards and commissions, and vesting more power in the executive departments of the states.

"There must be absolute responsibility fixed somewhere," Gov. Alexander said. "While it may seem good to the elector to have a long ballot and to vote for a candidate for every office, the result is that the responsibility is shifted from the practical heads of institutions and government to the minor and subordinate officials, which are merely cogs in the wheel of government and not the directing power.

"It is essential that the executive department of the state government should be clothed with more power and responsibility and held directly amenable to the people. Whatever power is vested in the executive department a check could be laid upon the executive through what is commonly known as the recall, so that where a bad government is selected by electors it can be corrected by them.

"Boards and commissions are often so constituted that they thwart the will of the executive and of the people. They are frequently created for the purpose of aiding some particular interest and not to serve the general welfare. They give some special organization an opportunity to participate in the administration of public affairs.

"With the short ballot and with the people made fully cognizant that they were voting for a business manager as well as for an executive head, even if it were necessary to vote for two or three other executive department officers a workable government would result, but executive power must be centered somewhere to bring efficiency and economy. The short ballot will bring this about.

"The placing of a larger appointive authority in the hands of a responsible official who can be made easily answerable to the people increases, rather than decreases the power of the electorate to express its will. How often has it happened that the people through the election of an official whose office was such as to command their attention and whose duties and powers were supposed by them to be such as to enable him to accomplish for them the things they desired accomplished, only to find themselves blocked by some other official elected by themselves at the very same time whose position was believed to be so insignificant as not to merit their attention and therefore, did not receive it.

"I believe in the right of the people to express their will and I believe that that will, having been expressed, should be carried into effect. I therefore, believe in enlarged powers for those officials whose positions demand and receive public attention and a lessened power for those officials whose positions do not receive due attention from the voters, and hence, I favor the removal from the ballot of all names whose presence can accomplish nothing but to confuse."

TOWNSEND - OLDHAM & CO.
SNYDER, TEXAS

AN OPPORTUNITY AND RESULT

(By Captain K. W. Brown, in the Chicago Standard.)

I am a business man and not a preacher; a commercial traveler who "works" six states. I travel many thousand miles each year and have spoken two and three or more times on the Sabbath in scores and scores of towns in each of the states where I work and sell goods.

I have been doing this work for more than forty years and it brings me in touch with Christian men of all denominations, ministers and laymen, business and professional men, as well as all classes of men who are not professedly Christian men at all.

The Lord Can't Get It.

I am satisfied that the greatest obstacle to the spread of the gospel, the greatest hindrance to religious growth, is this: The Baptists (I am now speaking as a Baptist) have got the Lord's money and the Lord can't get it. The Bible and our pastors tell us all the gold and silver belongs to Him.

Ananias Had Nothing on Them

They are keeping back "part of the price"—and the biggest part. Ananias was a small liar by the side of some of these rich Baptists who ride in motor cars worth $2,000 or more and don't believe in foreign missions and never give a dollar for home missions when there is any possible way of escape. Do these Baptist "pillars" with fifty or a hundred thousand or more dollars of the Lord's money lay awake at nights trying to devise some plan where they can use some of God's money to save men or to lift men into a higher plane of living? Not on your life. They toss and roll the night over to think how they can escape the clutches of these men who are always calling for money, money. They don't know—though they have been told a score and more times—that is God's money that is wanted—to use for God's work—and they have it, and refuse to "dig up" and are "keeping back the price."

Now my ministerial brother—pastor probably—how many such men have you got in your congregation? Or in your church membership? How many of this class have you talked with heart to heart, face to face on this subject in your own way, kindly, but plainly?

How many men in your church past middle life have made a will? How many of this class have remembered their stewardship relation to God and made in their will some little donation (?) to the work of the gospel?

I have talked with scores, mostly land and real estate owners, all members of some Protestant church. Seldom have I met a man who made a will. Very rarely has one who has made his will given (paid) a dollar to God or even thought of doing so.

I never met a man whose pastor or brother in the church has personally urged him to make a provision in his will for some of this money to be used for the spread of the gospel. The class of men I am dealing with in this little article, as a rule, do not tithe—they do not know enough! They seldom take the Baptist paper and very seldom read them if they do take them, and it is a herculean task for their pastor to pound into their heads when with it goes the consciousness that it will take good hard cash to comply with this sort of thing.

I can name to you Baptists in "good standing," men and women worth from fifty to two hundred thousand or more, who would not part with fifty or one hundred dollars all at once in good United States money to save a soul from hell, if it was hewn to them that it was possible to do it—two or four or six of this class in a church, sometimes more.

This is nothing new to a large number of pastor and others in the denomination. Is there anything to do to relieve the situation? Will we keep right on doing the same fool thing over and over—taking a "tightwad" into the church that gives no evidence of conversion simply because he is rich and a good fellow? The denomination is in debt. The missionary societies are in debt. The poor and those moderate circumstances paying the bills and keeping the Northern Baptist convention and our state convention and allied organizations running and doing business, and the rich, as a rule, with a few bright and hopeful exceptions, taking a back seat and doing nothing, praying nothing and paying nothing, except when it is choked out of them by oratory and eloquence that costs all one gets to pay expenses.

Is this article a little extravagant? Well, I may give you another later on to see if my experience is a corroboration of my expressions.

PROHIBIT TRAFFIC IN WHISKEY

Today 56 per cent of all the people of the United States live under prohibition laws enacted by their own majority votes. Seventy-six per cent of all the area of continental United States is dry territory. A majority of the people of the United States is today in favor of prohibition. Entrenched power of a highly profitable business and an inherent belief in the right of the individual to do as he pleases are the two big factors that make the fight to root out the traffic in alcohol appeal to the feeling of the individual that he has an inherent right to do as he pleases. He too often responds to this appeal by opposing laws prohibiting a traffic that he knows works so greatly to the injury of society as a whole.

As a matter of fact prohibition does not attempt to prevent the individual's drinking. It merely strikes at traffic in a substance whose deadly effects on the drinker are well known and whose cost to the members of his family and of the community are well known. The right, the duty of government to regulate or prevent such a traffic is not and never has been open to question. Towns, counties, cities, states, to the extent mentioned above, have prohibited such a traffic, as far as lies in their power as units connected with all other units of our government.

Congress itself can not delegate to the states the right to protect themselves in interstate commerce. A state has a right to be dry if it so desires, because in being dry it does not menace the rights of any other state. But no state has an inherent right to be wet, for by being wet it becomes a menace to states that are dry, and their rights can not be protected. The liquor traffic is therefore, an interstate nuisance against which the states have no recourse. Hence we fail to see why there should not be power lodged in congress or the states to make it impossible when a majority, and our government is by majority, sees fit, the traffic in intoxicating liquors for beverage.—Southland Farmer.

FAIR EXCHANGE.

A New Back For an Old One. How It Can Be Done in Colorado.

The back aches at times with a dull indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Colorado residents would do well to profit by the following example:

A. A. Princess, Sweetwater, Texas, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results. I had weak kidneys which caused my back to ache and I had other pains, common to kidney sufferers. A friend told me of the wonderful good Doan's Kidney Pills did him, so I got a box and used them as directed. In a short time I was cured and I haven't had any need of a kidney medicine since." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Princess had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

LAPSED BROTHERHOOD OF MAN

To add to the disheartening aspects of the European war comes the prospect of piling up race prejudices and hatreds. It is born in quarters where it never existed, points out the New York Evening Post, and it is becoming reawakened in others where it had been gradually yielding to the process of time and still slower spread of the teaching of the brotherhood of man. "To masses of the allied nations, the Germans they praised yesterday for many admirable and very human qualities have become as devils incarnate. And the Germans in multitudes are just now asking themselves how it is that they were unaware of the abominable character of the British, of whom they have been happy to harbor so many thousands these last four decades." The status of the Japanese and negro in Germany has radically changed through the calling of Japanese and African, to say nothing of Indian troops into the allied ranks. The racial element involved in the German charge that this was a concerted slavish movement against the civilization of Europe is now in prospect of still wider expansion by the entrance of the Turk. The Evening Post editorial proceeds: "As everyone knows the friction which led Serbia and Austria to fire the deadly train is at bottom racial—the Slavs and Croations against the Austrian Germans; and this historical racial strife has now flamed up as never before. Into it all now is to be injected the Mohammedan problem; at least the entrance of Turkey into the hostilities on the side of Germany makes possible a tremendous religious explosion throughout the East. If the Turk ally should make it awkward for Germany to assert that she is defending European culture, that ally also renders it easy for Germany's opponent's to declare that she has called to her aid the historic enemy of Western culture and of Christianity."

"If the long-promised holy war should come in Egypt and elsewhere, it will easily take on a racial form, for it will not be merely Mohammedan against Christian, but the Anglo-Saxon and the Slav against the Turk, the Egyptian, and the natives of India and black Africans as well—a hideous prospect, indeed, for the Twentieth Century of Christianity. There is but one race which bids fair to gain a little from it all—the Jewish. If the czar, so often faithless, keeps his word this time there may be a great change for the unhappy Jews among his subjects. Having been permitted to die for the Little Father only as private soldiers, they are now to furnish officers for the slaughter, and there are intimations of other distinctions and privileges. In Germany, too, some bars of race seem to have been let down in the war; and the czar and held out hopes of a Polish renationalization as well.

"Here are perhaps some brands to be snatched from the burning—but what trifles, if we survey the whole world! We were just beginning, by greater knowledge of one another, through our race congresses, through the awakening of the East, through the strengthening of international bonds by trade, by the travel of thousands, by the interdependence of business everywhere, to get to know and respect one another. Now we see, by reason of the accursed system of European alliances and armaments, the whole work checked if not undone. Dying antipathies are warmed back to life with new and deepened intensity; the whole world is thrust back to the Middle Age state, when every people feared everybody else, like a thief in the night; when to be a stranger of different customs and habits was to be a barbarian, to kill whom was justified. Everywhere that men are different it will be easy now to arouse hatred and scorn and enmity. The brotherhood of man, the fundamental teaching that one should love one's neighbor as oneself—these are for the hour mere subjects for mocking and flouting by those who believe that man's mission is only to kill and burn. But this can be only for the hour. The doctrines of brotherly love and Christian peace have survived as great cataclysms have gone steadily on to wider conquests by the nobility of their ideals. They are certain in the end to overthrow all enemies and to unite in one friendliness the Slav and the Teuton, the black, the yellow and the white alike.—Literary Digest.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be married to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his inheritance and on a hunting trip in New York, Tommy follows Celestia, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets a dozen of the business barons who are converted to her new gospel.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER VIII.

That so great and conservative a man as Barclay should lend the promise of his backing to the doctrines and tenets of Celestia aroused extraordinary interest all over the country, and even in England and on the continent.

Celestia was showered with invitations, most of which she declined. But she did not decline them all. It was her duty, she felt, to convert to her cause, all sorts and conditions of men and women, the man who had been born with a golden spoon in his mouth and the man who had been raised with a revolver in his hip-pocket.

She was asked to speak in the ballroom of a great house overlooking Central Park. The invitation to do so was instigated by Mary Blackstone, but Celestia did not know this, and the name signed to the note of invitation was one which tempted her to accept. It was a name which above all others stood, in the opinion of the man in the street, for all that is richest and most foolish.

To this function, Tommy was among those invited (all part of Mary Blackstone's plan), but, though he yearned to be wherever Celestia was, in spite of their latest quarrel, he was too busy tramping the streets of New York in search of a job to accept. Mary had hoped that among those to the manner born, Celestia, in spite of her genuine good looks and magnetic voice would appear insignificant if not impossible. She was doomed to disappointment.

Celestia, abandoning for the occasion her work-girl dress, and assuming once more that graceful flowing white garment in which she was first seen (outside of heaven) not only set a new standard of beauty, but started a new fashion in dresses, and a kettleful of jealousy among the women.

At one end of the long ballroom—a great space of mirrors, and silk, brocaded with garlands, flowers overflowing baskets and cups—was a platform for musicians. Upon this, to a great assemblage of fashionable men and women all talking at once, Celestia appeared suddenly—and there was silence.

The lovely low-browed face crowned with the strong dark hair, the steady, kind, unfathomable eyes were like a command that had to be obeyed.

Celestia never began at the beginning of a speech. She never started by expressing surprise at being asked to speak, or astonishment at perceiving so many upturned faces. Nor did she start by saying what she was going to talk about when she really did get started. At the point where Celestia began, another would have been half through. She plunged right into the heart of things with a compelling sweetness and seriousness that were irresistible.

She finished speaking, her hands dropped to her sides, and her eyes, well, though they had been open all along, they seemed to open, and she looked almost frightened and puzzled. A roar of applause rose, and in the back of the room, Professor Stilliter, who had been under a great strain, wiped the sweat from his brow.

Celestia came down from the platform, very shyly and the men began to crowd about her, and to shake her hand. They crowded about to tell her that they believed her, that her cause was theirs, that when the time came she could count upon them for money and for service.

"But it won't be easy," she smiled. "It's a greater house than this that we have to clean. A hundred years of mistaken laws and customs are not to be swept aside in a day. So, indeed, I shall need your service, and your backing, and your votes."

Celestia's hostess took possession of her and women forced their way among the men, in order to look closer at that simple Greek dress which, worn as Celestia wore it, so put to shame their own bare arms and shoulders and lizard costumes.

Among the poor, when she said that she came from heaven, among the unfortunate and the downtrodden, Celestia was taken literally by so many that it staggers belief. We have only to remember that less gifted prophets have succeeded in imposing their divinity on multitudes. About Celestia there was nothing that rang false. She was goodness and sincerity personified.

Among the more sophisticated, the statement of her origin was taken as a figure of speech; not by all, of course, but by a vast majority.

CHAPTER IX.

To pave the way for their ultimate coup d'etat it was part of the triumvirate's plan to allay some of that bitterness which so many of the poor entertain for so many of the rich. So Professor Stilliter, making use of those means which we have so often explained, put it into Celestia's head to go about a good deal among fashionable people.

To the simple-minded newspaper-read Douglas family it was all but inconceivable that there should be any such qualities as kindness, simplicity and virtue (except, perhaps, among the servants) in a Fifth avenue mansion. And they were among Celestia's first converts to a contrary opinion.

"And where are you going tonight, my dear?" asked Mrs. Douglas. "And where did you get such a wonderful cloak? And you've done your hair differently."

Mrs. Douglas and her husband, sitting side by side (they had been holding hands) gazed at Celestia in astonishment. Nellie, who had entered the room just behind Celestia, was flushed with excitement and mystery.

"My dears," said Celestia, "it's a very long story. But first of all you must know that I am going to a ball. And Freddie is going with me."

"Just wait till you see Freddie," exclaimed the Ferret's sister.

"This cloak," said Celestia "isn't it lovely?" isn't mine. It was loaned to me by a very beautiful lady. And so was everything else I've got on."

With heightened color, she threw the cloak back from her shoulders, and showed above an exquisitely simple gown of mauve tulle, her dazzling arms and neck.

Just then Freddie came in, resplendent in full evening dress. He had slicked his hair straight back and flat to his head, and he had borrowed a gold (at least it was yellow and shining) watch chain to go across his waistcoat.

Perceiving the state of wonderment into which his respectable parents were thrown by the wonder of his attire, Freddie hummed the opening bars of a delightful maxixe and gave an imitatively grave and graceful exhibition of the steps that went with them. A born dancer was the Ferret, and like many another unbalanced person, he had an exquisite ear for music.

"Celestia," he said, "says she's just going to look on. But I'm going to dance. These up-to-date dances were danced on the Bowery more'n a hundred years ago. And there's nobody can do 'em better than me."

If Celestia really thought that she wouldn't be recognized, she made a great mistake. It would have taken more than a conventional ball gown to disguise the compelling glory of her eyes; and although she did not dance, she was from the moment of her entry the center about which everything revolved; or better she was the center about which all the men revolved. Freddie the Ferret was a little center unto himself.

It was whispered about that Celestia had brought with her a genuine Bowery tough, a reformed gunman, and society, always keen for new sensations, proceeded to satisfy its curiosity. But not altogether at the Ferret's expense. A dance hall had always caused his mind to work consecutively and with more coherence than any other surroundings. Presented to his hostess, Freddie was neither perturbed by her importance nor her diamonds.

"Just Wait Till You See Freddie."

During the search for work Tommy Barclay returned once to the house where he had lived for so long in such luxury to get together a few of his personal belongings. But no more than could be carried in a couple of suitcases. From this visit he brought away clothes he required, a picture of his mother, and one, much faded, of the little Amesbury girl. His evening clothes, his black pearl stud, his tennis and polo cups, everything indeed of real value that belonged to him he left behind. It was his intention to enter the ranks of labor, on an equality with the other laborers, and by dint of sheer determination to work his way up until he should be in a position to support the girl of his choice.

Still, when he had refused the old butler's offer of the savings of half a lifetime, and heard the doors of the solid old mansion close behind him for perhaps the last time, a lump rose in Tommy's throat, and he went down the steps slowly on feet which already seemed to have lost their buoyancy.

A suitcase in each hand, he was turning toward the East side when he was accosted familiarly though respectfully enough by a youngish man in a brand new and very ill-fitting suit of blue serge.

"Want to whirl?" he suggested with an engaging smile, and—as Mrs. MacAdam afterward told a friend: "I was so flabbergasted by his cheek, that I smiled a kind of sickly smile and went as I supposed to the slaughter. He made me dance better than I ever danced before. At first I kept wondering if my diamonds were safe (of course I keep the originals in safe deposits; haven't seen them for eight years) and if he had a gun in his hip pocket. Then I began to wonder why it was that I had never before really understood what it means to keep time. Why it's thrilling! But of course you know. You always keep such beautiful time. And he made me dance all sorts of new steps. And, my dear, he flattered me so, and— Here Mrs. MacAdam blushed and laughed at the same time. "Once I bungled something frightfully and nearly went down, and what do you think he said? 'You're all right, kid! Cling to popper!' Kid! What do you think of that, at my time of life? I couldn't get angry. I tried a little, but it was no use. I liked it. And when we'd finished, I was struggling to think of something to say, and what do you think I did say?" Here Mrs. MacAdam once more blushed and laughed. "I said, 'The night's young. I hope you'll ask me to spell again.' He said, 'You're on.' And sure enough he hunted me out for the very next fox-trot. But by that time all the real kids wanted to dance with him, and we old fogies had to stand aside. Can't you see the modern debutante? For years she had been dressing and painting herself more and more like a dear little street walker, and at least she gets a chance to dance with a real gunman. No, he's never really shot anybody or worn stripes. I wish you could have been there! Some of the men got him in the smoking room and since then everybody talks his language. Mrs. Seiden admits that she tried to make him fall in love with her; but she failed. He's head over ears in love with this wonderful Celestia person, and small blame to him. She is too lovely. I've never seen a girl stay so long at a dance herself, not dance, and not look a-kward. Of course she was surrounded by men. But she wouldn't talk shop. And do you know she isn't so dreadfully serious. She can make people laugh if she wants to. She wore conventional clothes, and proved once and for all that she can wear anything that she likes, and get away with it."

The account which Celestia gave of the ball had less to do with dancing. "The dancing isn't wicked at all," she told the Douglasses. "It's innocent, and graceful and good-natured. And the people? They aren't wicked either. They are just like other people, only they've got more money. It's a great blessing. Some day everybody will have money. And all the people I talked to were kind people, who want to do good, and make other people happy, and don't quite know how to set about it. But we are going to show them, aren't we? Freddie was so good! They said he was the best dancer there. He dances a little differently, but better. They all said that. And if only you could have seen the flowers! See, Mrs. MacAdam gave me these roses to bring to you. The house didn't have walls and wall-paper. It was all mirrors and flowers, and palm trees!"

Celestia sighed and then laughed at herself for sighing.

"Where's Freddie?" she asked. "Is he still sleeping? I'm going to talk to the typesetters' union, and then I am to meet and talk with some of the Independent Workers of the World. And then I am to have lunch with the Bishop of New York. And then, my dears, I am going to leave you for a while. I'm to go out to Pennsylvania where there's a terrible strike, and nobody will listen to anybody. But I'll be back before you know it."

She kissed Mrs. Douglas and hurried out. Celestia was almost always in a hurry now.

Nellie was waiting for her in the hall.

"Are you really going to Bitumen, Celestia?"

"Yes, really."

"I thought you might like to know that Mr. Barclay is already there."

"Are you Mr. Barclay?" asked this one, and, at Tommy's assurance that he was, he jerked his thumb toward a companion and said, "I'm Carson. This is Cracowitz." Tommy bowed as politely as to the president of the United States and the secretary of the navy, and said:

"What can I do for you, gentlemen?"

"Gordon Barclay won't see us," began Carson, but Tommy interrupted a little astutely:

"Mr. Barclay won't see you?" he said. "Are you the Carson and Cracowitz who have been figuring lately in western Pennsylvania?"

"We are," said Carson, and Cracowitz nodded vehemently. "Mr. Barclay," Carson went on, "ought to see us and you can get him to."

"Why ought he to see you?"

"For his own good and ours. We can't do anything with old Stan Kehr. He's for a fight to the finish. It doesn't matter about us men, but how about the women and children? How about them, Mr. Barclay?"

"Oh, I am on their side always," said Tommy.

"Then you'll fix it so that we can see Mr. Barclay?"

"Mr. Carson," said Tommy, "were you ever stone broke?"

The question shocked Mr. Carson into admitting he never had been.

"Well," said Tommy, for the first time smiling, "I am. Mr. Barclay has turned me off without a cent and has disinherited me besides. That shows how much influence I have with him. But I can tell you this about him. If he has said that he won't see you, he won't."

"We'd about come to that conclusion ourselves," said Carson. "You looked like a last chance."

He was turning away petulantly when he thought better of it.

"What are you going to do about it, Mr. Barclay, if it's manners to ask?"

"I was going to ask your advice," said Tommy. "My wish is to start life as a day laborer."

"Sure? Then you'd better come out to Pennsylvania with us."

"But I want to earn a living. I ought not to begin my career as a laborer by striking for higher wages, ought I?"

"We can find something better than stone breaking for a man of your education," said Carson. "If you're on our side."

"I am on your side," said Tommy; "that is one of the reasons why I have been disinherited."

As he spoke Mary Blackstone drove up in an open car and called to him. Tommy sprang forward with courteous alacrity. And Carson murmured, "The hell he's been disinherited!"

Mary leaned from the car and spoke in a low, thrilling voice, only audible to Tommy:

"Tommy, dear," she said, "I'm so wretched. We've made such a mess of things! Can't we begin all over again?"

Tommy answered with great gentleness: "We can't begin all over again," he said; "things can never be as they were. But we can be friends, Mary."

She shook her head and the corners of her mouth turned bitterly down.

"You and I, Tommy," she said, "might be almost anything in the world to each other—but friends? Never. You may drive on, Rugby."

Tommy held out his hand, but she turned from it, as if in scorn, and the motor slipped quietly forward.

"Hi!" murmured Carson; "he has been disinherited. And he's just told her. And she's given him the mitten."

Well, many a leader of capital would have come no nearer the truth. For to the casual eye Tommy instead of Mary had been the pleader and the rejecter.

CHAPTER XI.

In the mining town of Bitumen in western Pennsylvania there was for the moment an armed truce between the strike breakers and the strikers. The latter, under the leadership of Gunsdorf, held the village; the former, under the personal supervision of Kehr, had built a strong palisade which commanded the railroad station and the approaches to the town by rail. Both belligerents maintained a system of sentries, and a genuine state of war existed. More than one striker had been given a public funeral; more than one strike breaker had departed from Bitumen in a narrow box.

So much was clear. Less clear were the causes which had led to actual violence. It is enough that they led to a demand for larger wages and shorter hours, which Kehr, representing the owners, and intrenching himself behind the statement that too many such demands had been acceded to in the past, had preemptorily, and in a manner not tended to conciliate, refused. A general strike had been called, strike breakers and special deputies had been called in, and there had been dynamiting and sudden death.

The leaders were somewhat alike. Each had a supreme contempt and even hatred for the class which the other represented. Each was a strong-willed, stubborn man, having much power over other men. Neither was altruistic. At the back of Gunsdorf's head lurked the idea that one day he, too, might be a capitalist who should employ labor. Kehr had every intention of one day employing more labor himself. Neither truly represented the cause for which he stood. Both were prepared to sacrifice any number of other people's lives for the betterment of their own. There was, however, this difference between them: men obeyed Gunsdorf because they believed him to be a strong man of the people with the interests of the people at heart.

So Tommy felt about Gunsdorf when he heard the thick-set, trembling, passionate assailant of privilege hold forth in the town hall, when he saw tears gush out of the man's eyes as he told of women and children who were going under because there was no longer any bread in the house, and when he pretended that he could hear their cries and clapped his hands to his ears.

Tommy had been introduced to the "brother" as a safe man, but when Gunsdorf began to advocate a midnight rush upon the stockade and massacre of all who might be found within, many eyes were turned upon the silk-stockings to see how he would take the suggestion.

"We will put them," thundered Gunsdorf, "where they shall never again no more hear the voices of women and children lifted in joy—or in sorrow. We will show the world what it is to tread upon the poor and the unfortunate, so that little children die of hunger. What do we claim? Only a fair share of what belongs to us. What do we get? Crumbs and offal chucked to us from the rich man's kitchen door."

There was a howl of rage, that must have been heard in the stockade and caused some of its defenders to tremble. When this had rumbled away and died to nothing like a peal of thunder, Gunsdorf rolled his little eyes upon Tommy.

"Let us hear from the new brother," he said, smacking his lips. "Come up on the platform, Brother Barclay, and let the brothers and sisters see you."

One of the sisters eyed Tommy very closely as he slowly ascended the platform. She was Mrs. Gunsdorf, a young, dark, heavy woman with smoldering eyes and a scarlet mouth. When he turned and she had a good look at his handsome, brown, clean-cut face, her deep bosom began to rise and fall rapidly.

Tommy was in an awkward position. In full sympathy with his audience, he was not at all in sympathy with dynamiting and murder. His education told him that though an attack upon the stockade might prove successful its ultimate effect upon the attackers would be retribution in an extreme degree.

"It seems to me," he began quietly, "that what we want is justice—not vengeance. Have we—"

A loud chorus of mockery drowned his voice.

But Carson shouted at the top of his lungs, "Give him air," and when he had secured a sort of silence he went on: "Brother Barclay is all right," he shouted; "he thinks the same as we do, only he don't think it the same way! Give him air!"

Carson got a laugh, and Tommy was given air. And seeing that he was being given air, he smiled a very winning smile (it happened to light first upon Mrs. Gunsdorf) and began to speak once more—this time with confidence, because by good luck he had happened upon something to say, that seemed to him worth saying.

"Brothers," he said, "your backs are all turned to the door of the hall, Mine isn't."

He had succeeded in exciting their curiosity. Many turned and had a look at the door, and then looked back at the speaker. One or two smiled and nodded as if they knew what was coming, which they didn't. Tommy continued:

"While you were so loudly applauding my opening remarks (laughter and nudgings) that door opened and that door closed."

Once more heads turned toward the door.

"And," said Tommy, raising his voice for the first time, "a man went out."

"He went out in a hurry. He went out for two reasons. First, because his business here was finished, and second, because he knew that I recognized him in spite of his false mustache. Well, you could have caught him if you hadn't been so busy making noises at me. He was a Pinkerton man."

Tommy checked an outburst of rage with a commanding gesture.

"His business was to find out if we are going to attack the stockade or not. He thinks we are. But we are not!"

"The hell we're not! Why aren't we? Who told you?" etc., etc.

"It's for you to decide," cried Tommy, "but I wish you'd let me tell you what I saw on the platform at the freight station."

Again by exciting curiosity he had secured attention.

"I saw," said Tommy, "a large wooden box. On the box was printed 'Rotary Air Pump.' But on the box under these words had once been printed the name Goss & Goss. That conveys no meaning to you? Goss & Goss is a firm which does business on Broadway. It deals in uniforms, rifles, ammunition and cannon. Brothers, the 'Rotary Air Pump' which I saw on the platform at the freight station is a machine gun."

There was a long and ominous silence.

"Have you ever," continued Tommy cheerfully, "watched a man watering his front lawn with a hose? It's easy for the man with the hose to hit every blade of grass on his front lawn. It's just as easy as it is for the man with the machine gun to hit every man in a crowd."

"Attack that stockade? That's just what old man Kehr wants you to do. He will mow you down like grass, and the public will say it's your own fault."

Not only did the large crate contain a machine gun, but smaller cases which Tommy had not observed, marked "Pleks and Shovels," containing high-power rifles and ammunition. But for that night, at least, old man Kehr's deadly preparations for giving the strikers what he considered a well-deserved and salutary lesson were in vain.

Dawn broke.

"They're not coming," said the Pinkerton man. "They must have listened to Mr. Barclay, after all. But it looked so help me, as if they were going to tear him to pieces first, and try to rush us afterward."

"Any man with brains," said Kehr, "is a menace when he's on the wrong side of a question. We must get rid of Mr. Thomas Barclay. Give me that code book and a telegraph blank."

After some labor and a grim smile at the finished product, old man Kehr dispatched the following cipher to Gordon Barclay:

"Sucker won't bite. Your muttering carburetor Tommy has tickled Aphrodite. Please pound his whiskers quick."

"Now, then," he said to Mr. Pinkerton Man, "rush that!"

There will be a general reunion of all the old West Texas cowmen at the Sweetwater carnival on the 7th and 8th instants. Old time cowmen are expected from all sections of western Texas and for their special refreshment an old time cow camp will be established about two miles south of the town, with two regulation cow camp cooks, chuck wagon and all the incidentals and accidentals in any way pertaining to the traditional supply thereof. If now only some "Truthful James" could transfer to paper and print the reminiscences and bovine tales that will be evoked by this gathering, his place in literature would be fixed high up.

BLAZE AT SHADOWLAND THEATER

An alarm of fire Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock promptly brought out the hose team and fire fighters in double quick time. The blaze was located in the operator's loft of Shadowland Theater, which had been opened to the public just the preceding night, and while arranging for the coming night's exhibition; in fact, the painters and decorators were still on the job when the fire occurred.

The promptness with which the fire boys responded and the incipency of the blaze, rendered the extinguishing of the fire a matter of quickly efficient work. The house suffered no great damage, the loss being confined to the films, the operator's room and disfigurement of the walls by water—the amount being not ascertained. The origin of the fire was either in the machine or some electric connection outside it.

The entire community greatly regrets the accident and consequent interruption of the show at Shadowland, and hopes Mrs. Payne will be able to resume business within a very few days.

ANOTHER FINE RAIN FOR MITCHELL COUNTY.

Not only Mitchell county, but all central West Texas, was visited last Friday morning by a most glorious rain. True, the cotton crop was not in need of any further rain, yet it was an invigorant and tonic to the late feed crop and pastures.

Experienced farmers are of the opinion that it is now too late for the worms to do much damage, even if they should develop in quantities. Up to this time there has been but little evidence of their presence and work in the valley farms. By and large the farmers of this county have the finest prospect for the best crop of all things planted than ever in the agricultural history of the section. Fearing we may not have asseverated the fact before, we utilize this paragraph to acclaim the greatness of Mitchell county and the office of the Record as its Prophet!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FROM THE STORM AND FLOOD DISTRICT.

Dr. J. M. Robertson, father of Joe M. Robertson of the Nickel Store, arrived in the city Wednesday night, just out of the Baptist Sanitarium at Dallas. Dr. Robertson lived at San Leon, a peninsula projecting six miles into the Galveston Bay and three to four miles wide, twelve miles above Galveston. He was in the egg producing business and of 168 fine hens lost all but three, as well as everything else he had. He and ten women and children took refuge in a large barn stored with baled hay. With the women and children crowded into a fort built of bales of hay, and himself in a tunnel of hay, all escaped unhurt when the barn collapsed, their refuge being completely covered with falling timbers. He lay in the tide water that came up four inches deep for more than two hours.

Four prominent people were drowned in that community, every home but one damaged, more than a dozen houses were completely wrecked, and the people lost everything they had. A score of other homes were wrecked beyond repair. Hundreds of cattle, mules, horses and hogs were drowned. A large boat used by the railroad to transfer trains across the bay from Bolivar's Point to Galveston was driven fifteen miles and now sits on the dry prairie about the middle of San Leon Peninsula. A Miss Smith, whose mother was drowned, saved herself by wading and swimming until she found herself near a house two miles from where her home had been. The suffering there is great, almost beyond description.

"SNOBS."

Mr. Victor Moore, who is one of the most distinguished comedy stars in America and whose name is most intimately associated with the most important George M. Cohan productions, makes his photodramatic debut in this offering, which also has the distinction of having been offered at the Strand Theatre in New York for the first anniversary week of that world-renowned institution. The play on which the photodrama is founded is commonly regarded as the most laughable satire ever produced on Broadway, where it ran for an entire season, and did much to make the fame of its author, Mr. George Bronson-Howard.

In "Snobs" Mr. Victor Moore has the convulsingly laughable role of a milkman of the most ordinary variety who suddenly inherits the title and vast wealth of an English Duke. This milkman, though his instincts are perfectly good, has something of a natural taste for the "high spots" of life and immediately upon getting an advance installment of his inheritance proceeds to purchase most extreme garments, the longest cigars and all the other equipment necessary in his eyes for a noble multi-millionaire. Before long, however, the Duke discovers that the very people who pretend to be most impressed by him are really ridiculing him behind his back, and endeavors to renounce both title and money. However, a genuine, whole-hearted girl, who has not been spoiled by society, comes to his rescue. This brings the romantic element into the story as the solution of all the Duke's difficulties.

Washington, Aug. 27.—For the first time in its history the United States leads the world as an exporter. LINCOLN HIGHWAY AND STUDEBAKER SIX.

San Francisco, Calif. Aug. 26. Mr. G. L. Willman.

Adv. Mgr. Studebaker Cor. Detroit. Met at Stockton by Rockwell in Studebaker. Met by Studebaker on road with Oakland Tribune photographer and reporter. Eight hundred cars at Oakland city limits, many Studebakers, rousing lunch at Oakland, Commercial Club, Mayor Rolph party in Studebaker head procession from ferry to exposition. Hearst-Selig and Pathe pictures of cars on grounds. Car put in Transportation Building. Distance, five thousand three hundred seventy-three miles, average thirteen and five-tenths miles per gallon, including three mountain ranges. Car looks and runs as well as day it left New York.

R. C. Sackett. Above is a copy of telegram received today from R. C. Sackett in charge of Studebaker car on Lincoln Highway trip. This completes one of the biggest publicity stunts Studebaker has ever pulled off, incidentally, one of the most successful. Not a hitch or slip up from the time the expedition left New York, May 12th, until it reached San Francisco, August 26th. The 1915 Studebaker Six made the trip without the replacement of a single part. The motor was not taken down or overhauled during the entire journey.

It shows what Studebaker cars will do if properly handled. In the mountains and on the rough roads the Studebaker was easily as good a road performer as the two very high priced cars which accompanied the expedition. In gasoline consumption, tire mileage, low maintenance cost and freedom from trouble it very easily put up the best showing.
