As is alays the case, we still have some accounts of the "big rain." One farmer telling another that he really believed that he had fully nine inches of rain. Another spoke up and said: '.Pshaw! man, you had no rain at all. I had fully nine feet" Yet another said it was so muddy in his field that it would "bog down the shadow of a buzzard." But to cap the climax, Mr. Jim Bodine and Mr. Tims are responsible for this one: A bin of corn had been flooded and the receding waters left a puddle near the bin and the bin drained to it.
