Grant's "Unconditional Surrender" Note.

"No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately apon your works." That laconic dispatch is famous in American history. Written to Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, the Confederate commander at Fort Donelson, Tenn., by Gen. U. S. Grant on February 16, 1862, it gave to the Union commander the nickname of "Unconditional Surrender" Grant.

At the opening of the Civil war the Confederates built Fort Donelson or the Cumberland river and Fort Henry on the Tennessee to protect Nashville the very heart of the Confederacy from an invasion from the north. Erected on a hill 120 feet above the river, surrounded by two and a half miles of rifle pits and protected on the river side by three great batteries, Fort Donelson with its garrison of 18,-000 men was one of the most important posts in the Mississippi valley.

On February 6 Fort Henry fell beflotilla of gunboats, but when that ommander moved to attack Fort Donwhile General Grant had moved against Donelson and for three days a flerce battle raged during which each army lost more than 2,000 men. On February 15 the garrison tried to cut its way through Grant's lines but was driven back into its stronghold.

The next day Buckner sent a message under a white flag asking Grant what terms he would give if the Confederates gave up the fort. Grant's historic reply was the result. When Fort Donelson surrendered the first great Union victory of the war was won and 14,500 grayJackets marched out and laid down their arms, the largest number of men ever captured American continent. The victors also took possession of 57 pieces of artilfery, although one great prize in the persons of Generals Floyd, Pillow and Nathan Bedford Forrest, the dashing cavalry leader, slipped through their hands when these officers escaped across the river.

The surrender of Nashville and Columbus soon followed. Kentucky and Tennessee were now in the hands of the Union forces and Ulysses S. Grant had started on the military career that ended triumphantly at Appomat-

$5,250 FOUND ON PREMISES OF SLAIN FARMER

The sum of $5,250, mostly in $100 bills, has been discovered by authorities investigating the premises of Ed Lassiter, aged and wealthy Jones County farmer, whose murdered body was recently discovered near his home by school children, with the head battered in by a club.

The money was found in a sack under a pile of cotton seed in a locked outhouse near the home. The search is being continued by authorities, who believe other large sums of money are secreted about the premises. Lassiter had a fear of banks and always carried on his business transactions with and for cash.

In the meantime a relentless search s being continued for the slayers of Lassiter. One of the three Mexican farm hands on the place, under suspicion, has been arrested but will make no statement and the mystery of Lassiter's death continues unsolv-across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the real cause—iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when many of these same women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living cells and tissue. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you do not get the strength out of it.

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron—at once. But be sure it's organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic NUXA TED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, wornout women in two weeks' time.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" onevery package and the lettern N.J. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain, perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists. Sheriff Mitchell County, Texas.

Although he has written nany stories, there s no sameness His plots are ex-tremely ingenious and his characters always refreshing.

Born in England,
he was educated at

Harrow and at Ox-ford university. He has lived in several of the British colonies and is espe-cially familiar with the Canadian Norththe Canadian Northwest and with South Africa. In the latter country and while still a very young man he fought with the English volunteers in the Boer war.

Coming to the United States about twenty years ago, he engaged in newspaper work and kept at it about three years, when he was offered and accepted the position of assistant managing editor of Harper's Weekly. While in that position, some of his novels and short stories made their first appearance, and after a very satisfactory service he resigned to devote his entire attention to fiction writing.

his entire attention to fiction writing. His output both in novels and short stories has been unusually large and was only interrupted during the World war, in which he rendered useful service both to Canada and the United States.

During recent years his literary During recent years his literary affections have been centered principally in the country to the north and much of his time has been spent there. He has lived among the French Canadians of the Northeast and among the trappers, miners and others of the Northwest and has written splendid stories of both sections. The romantic and thrilling life of the Canadian mounted police appeals to him particularly and he has presented some fine pictures of the force which preserves order between the northern boundary of the United States and the land of the midnight sun. The chief character the midnight sun. The chief character in "The Free Traders" is one of these policemen, a fine type of the silent, fearless, self-reliant men who compose the force. His rather | what's going on at Siston lake. lined, deeply sunburned face and throat contrasted markedly with the take a covering warrant from the stiedging of white flesh at the V-top of pendiary to use in any way you see his open shirt. Lee, in his prospector's clothing, appeared to be typically one of those reserved, quiet, self-contained men whom the north breeds.

His rather heavy horse, a combination of pack and saddle, was well laden behind the rolled blankets that. formed a parapet across its shoulders.

Lee inhaled with delight the warm, steamy exhalations of the earth, rich with the added debris of the year. He turned and looked forward, beyoud the settlement of Little Falls, lying at the foot of the slope in front of him, the last of the settlements on his side of Stony range.

It was an unkempt, untidy little place, created by the advent of the lumber companies a few years before, and straggling among the knee-high stumps of what had been virgin forest within the decade.

After his belated return from France, only to find the old Northwest mounted, of which he had been a member, merged in the new Dominion body. Lee himself had been stationed at Manistree. He had been in the police eight years before the war. It was the only life that appealed to him. His service had expired during his term at the front, but his first act on returning had been to rejoin.

Inspector Crawley had sent for him a few days later.

"Anderson," he said, "I want you to be ready to start for Stony range in the morning to pick up a man named Pelly. He's on the list of 'wanted'-headed it for some time, in fact. I guess you don't know anything about the case, though,"

"No, sir. It must have happened while I was in France." "Oh, it happened a deuce of a time before you went to France, Anderson. Twenty-five years ago, more or less. Might have left the poor devil alone, especially as he's been a fugitive so long. But it's murder, Sergeant, and -well, the new police have got to show themselves just as efficient blood bounds as the old force. The papers in the case have just come through Ottawa.

"This man Pelly appears to have ties for insulting his wife. Those de rumors of a gold find in Stony range talls are not given. It appears a that summer, but the nearer Lee got to the range the less explicit the news became.

He passed a number of men on their way south, morose and sullen, but ready enough to pour out their grievance that a summer's prospecting had failed to show even a trace of color anywhere.

Lee had listened to their stories and then gone on, leaving the impression that he was a prospector on a belated journey to the range.

And now at last the range lay in front of him, uplifting its wild peaks into the glory of the autumn sunset. Lee felt his heart uplifted too. This was life at its most zestful-the world spaces, and the hunting of the king of all created beings-Man.

So, leading his horse, Lee passed down the long slope toward the settlement of Little Falls. Soon he was abreast of the first shacks, set in the clearings among the stumps. Then came rows of uniformly ugly wooden cottages, a small mission church with a tin roof, a bank, and a small hotel announcing itself by a dilapidated shingle.

Lee fastened his borse to the hitching post in front and entered. On right of the interior passage was the the dining-room, on the left the parlor. with the furniture piled up in corners and the floor strewn with duffle-"Probably it won't be possible to bags and blankets.

While he listened Lee noticed that the two men opposite him were likewise taking in every word. The big breed was obviously under the influence of liquor, and his little companion was not only watching the company but also watching him. At times he would turn and whisper in his companion's ear. And once, in his close scrutiny of the company, he turned his gaze on Lee.

CHAPTER II

A Girl Rides Into the Range

She was perhaps two or three and twenty, slender, of medium height, with clear, grey, fearless eyes, and hair of pale brown with gold flecks in it, coiled up loosely about her head.

Her open mackinaw revealed an almost boyish figure, slender and long-waisted. She wore corduroy breeches and riding galters; and there was about her that hardly definable, but unmistakable air of breeding that crops out in such unexpected places along the Anglo-Saxon frontier.

From a respectful distance the men were staring at her, each asking Lee's

Lee, refleved to see, without turnnine voice, and found himself staring ing his head, that the girl had taken in surprise at a girl who had just the opportunity, to slip away, returned Pierre's glare calmly. The breed was poising himself ready to strike, but For this was not in the least the something in Lee's aspect, some uncertainty, the inability to size him up, checked him. Perhaps he sensed how quickly Lee's right arm, hanging negligently before him, would rise to the defensive; perhaps he did not like the look of Lee's left.

He took, refuge in Irony. "Well, whadya t'fnk of him, boys?" he demanded again, of the men, who had formed a close circle around the pair. 'He don' fight an' he got de nerve to say 'dat 'll be all' to Pierre Cauchon. No, by gar, I guess you know better dan to fight," he continued, adding a foul epithet; and, grinning, he lurched insolently past toward the bar, shouldering Lee as he passed.

He looked back for an instant to see whether the other would accept the provocation, and, seeing that he showed no signs of doing so, he went on his way with Shorty. The crowd gave Lee the once-over contemptuously. It had no love for the bully, but an individual without the fighting instinct is not supposed to pose as a lady's champion and then back down.

The minds of the prospectors were too obtuse to see that Lee had simply been satisfied with gaining his point and enabling the girl to get away unmolested. Lee paced the stoop for a while, finished a pipe, and went early to his blankets.

He interested himself in speculating who the girl was. She was almost certainty going to the mission; there could be no other destination. Perhaps he would see her again. He thought of the possibility quite without emotion. He ceased to think of her, and, tired after the day's ride, began to

He was awakened when the men began to stagger into the parlor. Nearly all, of them were drunk, some were rolling drunk, and, after sporadic, noisy altercations, they were soon sprawled out like logs all over the floor, and snoring loudly. Several times Lee was obliged to remove heads, arms, and feet from various portions of his anatomy.

He was just falling asleep again when the sound of a name, whispered almost in his ear, startled him into instant wakefulness. Lee recognized the voice as that of the breed, Pierre Cauchon. For a moment or two he could not imagine from where the man was speaking. Then he discovered that the voice came from the other side of the large, empty stove which stood at his head, a little out from the wall. His face and Plerre's were separated, therefore, by no more than the circumference of the metal container, though Pierre, of course, did not guess ters who are to be found in every gold might be the Moravian mission on the any particular interest in what he was stove indicated that the pair had succumbed to sleep. But all desire for sleep was banished from Lee's brain.

There was the alternative of two courses of action; he could warn the girl in the morning, placing himself at her disposition; or he could keep her more or less in sight during his journey the following day, with a view to protecting her from the pair of rufflans whenever they made their appearance.

But he could not afford to take any action which would give the ciue to his status and activities; and apart from that, he wanted to keep in touch with the two men, in case they could furnish any clue to Pelly's whereabouts-if he were alive.

Some time early in the morning he fell into a restless slumber, from which he was partly aroused by the sound of a horse's hoofs clattering in the yard. He wondered sleepily whether this was an early departure or some belated arrival, and then, turning over, managed to lose consciousness for an hour or two longer.

At last, when further sleep had become impossible, he sat up, struck a match, and looking at his watch, discovered that it was nearly six o'clock. He threw his blankets over his arm, stepped over the sprawling limbs of the sleepers, and went out to the stable where he watered his horse, afterward kicking his heels about the place until, in the first glimpse of the dawn, the squaw came shuffling into the kitchen.

Lee went in. "Get me a cup of coffee and a piece of bread," he said, putting a fifty-cent piece into her hand. "That'll be enough for me. I've got to be moving."

The woman filled the kettle from a pail of water on the kitchen table. Lee asked:

"You know that girl who came last night?"

"Me not know um," the squaw grunted, as she set the kettle on the o'clock," grunted the squaw. Lee whistled softly. That was ber herse that he had heard, then. She was losing no time, whatever her business and destination might be. Lee fidgeted while the coffee came to the boll, and had just guiped down a cupful and taken a few bites at the bread and butter which the woman gave him when the landlord came sleepily in, and Lee took the opportunity of settling his bill.

"Well, you're shore off early," grumbled the fat proprietor. "Say, she beat you to it, though!" "Who is she?" Lee inquired.

"Blamed of I know. Nobody hereabouts seems to know her. But hucks, Little Falls ain't more'n or four year old! Guess she's the gal of one of the old-timers back from school or college. Or she'll be goin' up to the Moravian mission, like as not, Yes, sir, that shore must be it. She wouldn't be goin' to any of thems hooch-runners up to Siston lake."

"That's Rathway's joint, isn't it?" "So they say." A cunning look came into his eyes. "I guess we ain't botherin' our heads none about that Free Trader outfit since they're there to stay. No, sir, it don't do to know toe much about Captain Carcajou, now that the police is in with him."

Lee almost betrayed himself as he struggled not to display his indignation. "You mean the R. C. M. P.'s been bought by that scum in Montreal?" he demanded.

"That's what they're sayin' in these here parts. See here, stranger, of that ain't so, why don't they git after that Captain Carcajou as they calls him? You heerd what he did to that camp of Indians last summer? Shore! Well, I ain't sayin' nothin' and I ain't speakin' for meself, you understand. I'm only sayin' what other solks say. Why. there's two of Rathway's gang in this here hotel."

"You mean the big breed and the red-headed man?" "Shore I do." The landlord winked at him. "Hooch-runners from Sistom lake." "What're they doing here?" asked

"I guess they ain't here fer no good. That's why I was wishin' you'd had the sand to stand up to 'em last night, boy!"

Important bills have already been introduced, and others are to come, one that is of special importance to West Texas, and that one embidies resolution passed at the annual meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce held in Brownwood, is by Representative Teer of Williamson county. This bill seeks to give the State Tax Board statewide authority in the equalization of taxes as between counties, and giving further authority to this State board to remove county Commissioners' Courts who refuse to comply with its orders in equalization of taxes. This is regarded as a long step in the direction of equality and uniformity of taxes in Texas, a policy that has been fostered by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for years.

Tells How to End Night Coughing

To quickly stop hacking, irraing coughing at night, a very simple treatment may be had from often enables you to sleep the whom night through undisturbed almost

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring, and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and relieves irritation and soreness, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. So no matter whether your cough is dry and tight, or loose with much mucus, the coughing soon stops, you can usually sleep your accustomed time without a break, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription contains absolutely no narcotics or other harmful drugs. Instead of merely benumbing the nerves, it actually helps the system to throw off the trouble in a perfectly natural way. Furthermore, it is very economical, the dose being only one teaspoonful. It is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, tickling, hoarseness and bronchitts, and is wonderful. for children's coughs and spasmodic croup. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for

NEW CALOMEL BREAKS A COLD OVERNIGHT

When the purest kind of English Calomel was combined with pepsin by a smart young chemist, the world was given an ideal mild med-icated laxative for breaking colds. One night is long enough for this new, mild and non-sickening pepsin-treated calomel, called "Pepsinated Calomel" to break the most stub-born cold. Before breakfast time it vanishes and leaves you feeling fresh and fine. "Pepsinated Calomel" does not sicken, gripe, salivate or upset you, but it does clean you out thoroughly, tone up the appetite, purify the blood, stop dull headaches, relieve stomach and bowel disorders and make you feel like a new person. Never take the old drastic calomel -insist on "Pepsinated Calomel," for it is better. Prepared by the Pepsinated Calomel Co., Atlanta Ga. Sold by Colorado Drug Co.

Grandmother's Cough Remedy-PineTar and Honey-Still Best

A well-known specialist said recently hat although many wonderful medical discoveries have been made in recent discoveries have been made in recent years, nobody has found a better and quicker healing agent for coughs, chest colds, apsended croup, hoarseness, throat tickling and other throat and bronchial troubles than good old pine-tar and honey. Our grandmothers would never be without pine tar syrup in the house, and they raised large families. It still remains one of the few medicines that can be given to young and old alike, as it contains no harmful drugs.

The pine-tar quickly soothes and heals soreness and irritation, and by loosening the phlegm removes the actual cause of the coughing. The honey is not only pleasant to the taste but also very soothing to the throat.

The kind that has been used with never-failing success in thousands of families for years is that known as Dr. Bell's Fine-Tar Honey. This is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick, acting, heiling ingredients which the last doctors have found to aid in quick relief, it you want the best, be sure to get Dr. Bell's Yne-Tar Honey. It costs only 30c at any good druggists.

HERE'S PROOF

CRITICS EVERYWHERE

AGREE ON "BAGDAD" Douglass Fairbank's glorious fantasty from out of the pages of the Arabian Nights, "The Thief heard of enconiums of the press. Here follows a few samples of what has been written of this picture:

New York Times;

"A feat of motion picture art which has never been equaled." Philadelphia North Americant

"You have to see it to believe it. Not merely ahead of its field; creates a field of its own." Boston Glober

"One can scarcely find enough adjectives to describe the hauntingly beautiful, thrilling, magnificent, "Thief of Bagdad."

New York Telegram: "It is the greatest picture we have ever seen or ever expect to

New York Herald-Tribune: "The greatest film ever made."

Boston Post: "Even foolish to compare this marvelous faantasty with any other photoplay production.'

"The fartherest and most sudden advance that the movie has ever made.'

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "With this production Fairbanks assumes the rank of the screen's greatest artist." Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Many surprises surpass anything hitherto seen on the screen New York World:

"So far superior to anything ever done before, comparison is rendered impossible."

New York Journal of Commerce: "It took New York by storm. Its collossal magnificence beggars description."

Boston Transcript: "It made a thoroughly sophisticated audience catch its breath.'

What Will You Say? Do you believe these great papers and magazines lied, or were not capable of judging? If their opinions are anywhere near right, then you have the greatest treat ever afforded you, for Colorado is seeing this stupendous film spectaele before any other city in this part of Texas. If you appreciate such privileges, the Management is indeed proud of accomplishing this unusual booking.
