We invite you to be with us next Lord's day. It will encourage, help and strengthen our work.

Everyone says—'Buick is Reliable'

Buick reliability is one reason why the majority of new Buicks every year are purchased by old Buick owners. Buick is the car with the Sealed Chassis, which encases every operating part inside an iron or steel housing, to keep out dirt. Buick is the car with the high-speed starting motor, for reliability in starting—with mechanical 4-wheel-brakes, for certainty in stopping—and with a six-cylinder, valve-in-head engine, for engine performance that is the envy of the motor car industry.

Buy a Buick! It is a more dependable and more enjoyable motor car. THE GREATEST BUICK EVER BUILT JACK GARRETT Local Dealer Colorado, Texas

Farm and Ranch On Reduction Of The Cotton Crop

(From Farm and Ranch)

Farm and Ranch believes in the doctrine of "Fewer and better laws, and a better enforcement of the law." Farm and Ranch stands ready to support earnestly and forcibly any and all legislative measures that will place the agricultural industry on an even footing with other industries of the country, but is unalterably opposed to any form of legislation that will take opportunity away from the farmer. We are for the repeal of any and all laws that give any other industry an unfair advantage over the farmers of this country in their efforts to place their business on a profitable basis.

Many reader friends of Farm and Ranch are staunch advocates of a law to restrict cotton acreage and have taken issue with us on our stand against such a law. With but few exceptions these readers have been fair and courteous in presenting their side of the case, giving Farm and Ranch credit for its sincerity and honesty or purpose in its opposition to that form of legislation. And, because the subject's one of importance at this time, we are summarizing in as brief a manner as possible what we consider the outstanding objections to restrictive laws and their application to agriculture.

In the case of Spann vs. the City of Dallas, the Supreme Court of Texas refused to recognize the right of the city to prohibit the erection of stores and business houses in resident sections of the city, and in so doing declared "that it is not the law of this land that a man may be deprived of the lawful use of his property because his tastes are not in accord with those of his neighbor."

We believe that a law restricting the planting of any legitimate commodity would be unconstitutional, notwithstanding the numerous citations of cases where the government has interfered with the apparent liberties of those engaged in industry or in transportation. Laws governing railroads and banks, semi-public institutions, are for the protection of all the people, and not for any particular class. The real purpose is not to protect the railroads and banks or to make them prosperous, but to restrict them from making illegal combinations and from manipulating rail rates, interest rates or in any other manner performing acts to the injury of the people.

Laying aside the question of the constitutionality of a law restricting cotton acreage by admitting that it may be possible to bend, warp and otherwise distort the document, or disregard it altogether, there are enough other objections to condemn that form of legislation in the minds of all persons who will look just a little farther than the price of cotton this season. Briefly stated, some of them are as follows:

No law has ever been passed either by the federal government or by any state in this Union prohibiting or restricting the production of any legitimate commodity.

Therefore, such a step would be a radical departure from any known form of legislation and would increase the power of the government over the acts of individuals to a dangerous degree.

Granting the constitutionality of such a law, it must be conceded, to be just, it must be nation or commodity wide. It would be poor business for the Texas legislature to limit the cotton acreage and thus encourage farmers in all other cotton-growing states to increase acreage to make up the difference. This objection alone should eliminate any thought of even introducing that for most legislation at Austin this winter or at any other time.

The reduction of cotton acreage by law is being given serious consideration in but few states and no congressman, so far as we know, has ever thought it worth while to mention it in Washington. It must be conceded that there is not one change in 1,000 that the matter will ever be presented before either house of Congress.

A law controlling the acreage of cotton could be logically followed by laws governing the acreage of wheat, corn, oats, alfalfa, watermelons or turnips. Acreage control by the government implies the power to force an increase in the production of any farm crop. This is illustrated in the law controlling railroad rates. Assuming that power, the government became responsible for the construction of new lines and now even controls the purchase of new equipment.

Acreage control is one step from government ownership of all farm land. Ownership of farm land by the government means a form of communism even more adroit than that the Soviet government is trying to impose on the Russian peasants.

An unpopular law is unenforceable in this country. Restrictive legislation would become unpopular before the first year expired. It would take thousands of enforcement officers and millions of dollars annually in attempted enforcement and then with less success than has attended efforts to make this country dry.

National legislation, if precedent is followed, would be subject to the influence of the party in power, therefore the New England spinners would have more to say about cotton acreage than the Southern cotton farmers.

It would be strictly class legislation and is confessedly aimed at the landlords and big cotton growers, and while Farm and Ranch would like to see a system of balanced farming practiced throughout the entire South, it opposes class legislation as a matter of principle.

There are many other objections to restrictive acreage legislation, but we believe that any one of the above mentioned to be sufficient to condemn any effort to interfere with the right of any farmer to conduct his business as he sees fit. We do not believe that it is any more logical to attempt to make good farmers by law than it is to make farmers good by the same process. Some might argue, and probably would support a proposed law to require every farmer to go to church twice each Sunday and to hold family prayer every morning and evening. They would favor it on the grounds that it would improve the morals of the country and therefore benefit the whole people.

The law should not be treated as one of the old-time patent medicines guaranteed to cure everything from the pip to a broken back.

Some Baby

A young business man who was deacon in his home church and was going to New York on business was asked to purchase a new sign for the front of the church. He copied the motto and dimensions of the sign but when he reached New York the paper was nowhere to be found. Deciding that he must have left the paper in a coat at home, he wired his wife:

"Send motto and dimensions."

An hour later a message came over the wire and the young lady clerk, who had just come from lunch and knew nothing of the previous wire, faintly read. When they looked at the message she had just taken they read:

"Unto us a child is born six feet long and two feet wide."

Which Limb?

Uncle Sol threw aside the letter he was reading and uttered an exclamation of impatience.

"Doggone!" he cried. "Why can't people be more explicit?"

"What's the matter, pa?" asked Aunt Sue.

"This letter from home," Uncle Sol answered, "says that father fell out of the apple tree and broke a limb."

Henry Ford Says There Will Be No Change in Cars

The annual new year of Christmas interview with Henry Ford resulted in a few more denunciations of a mythical Ford six cylinder car or what have you.

"We did build a six twenty years ago," declared Mr. Ford, according to an interview in the press. "We built a thousand of them, but two of them are now in the museum."

That was about all that Mr. Ford would tell the newspaper men who eagerly questioned him relative to the future plans of the Ford Motor company.

Mr. Ford, it may be said, also predicts a normally prosperous year for 1927. He also criticized the extent of deferred payment purchasing and was somewhat alarmed at the extent of repossessions which he declared was high.

That the present Ford car will remain and that the dealers will fight their battles with it, seems to be the outstanding feature of one of the interviews published. The interviewer for a New York newspaper put the question to Mr. Ford that the Ford car could not compete with the newer sixes sold so largely the past year. To this Mr. Ford is said to have replied:

"We have heard that ever since we began doing business. They used to say the Ford car wouldn't run at all—too light—but we have made fifteen millions of the mby way of proving the reverse. There must be some sufficient reason for the people buying fifteen million and more of Ford cars. It is not our intention to change our cars in any important particular, except as we have always done by constant improvement. We are steadily improving parts and adding equipment as seems desirable. But we have no intention of introducing a 'six.' We made 'sixes' 20 years ago.

"The Ford car is a tried and proved product that requires no tinkering. It has met all the conditions of transportation the world over. We are developing broader markets in South America, Australia and Europe. Within ten years Russia will be a big customer of ours. It is a sizable one now, a shrewd buyer that knows values. The Ford car will continue to be made in the same way. We have no intention of offering a new car at the coming automobile shows. Changes of style from time to time are merely evolution. Our colored bodies seem to have found favor. But we do not intend to make a 'six' or an 'eight' or anything else outside of our regular products. It is true that we have experimented with such cars, as we experiment with many things. They keep our engineers busy—prevent them tinkering too much with the Ford car."

Meanwhile the guessing as to what was the actual Ford production for the past year still goes on merrily, with no one apparently possessed of the real facts. Some have painted a gloomy picture indeed, and none has been wise enough to admit the possibility that the year just passed was not so bad as characterized. For instance, the Dow-Jones News Service recently sent a story out of Detroit stating that Ford production for the year was 1,447,915 whereas it was actually more than 1,500,000 without certain foreign plants accounted for.

The right angle to approach a difficult proposition is the try-angle.

Northern Writer Says Texas Now U. S. Great Asset

"Watch Texas. An automobile would have to run 200 miles a day for two and a half years to traverse its highways, and would burn 8,500 gallons of gasoline and wear out 70 tires. Ambitious Amarillo is growing so fast that retreating jackrabbits run themselves to death trying to keep ahead of subdivision builders. 'You can go abroad for six cents, which is street car fare at El Paso.' These are a few of the high spots, odd things and recordings of the mind-boggling growth of new Texas as told by Frederic Simpich in the February issue of the Nation's Business.

"Like another Golden Route to Samarkand, the great trade route of a changing southwest sweeps into awakening Texas," he says. "Cow paths are turned into motor highways. 'Riding out of Fort Worth—where a million cattle bawl their way to market every year—you see modern covers lifting their skyscraper-per heads above a busy land that not so long ago was only a race course for coyotes and jumping jackrabbits. Today 5,300,000 happy Texans toil and spin, sow and reap, and live and love where a bare 20,000 untitled whites held their own against Mexico when Sam Houston came.

"No region in all the surging southwest is luring more men and money than Texas." The author emphasized the statement with tales of the estimated numbers of people entering the state each year and of the wealth brought in with them. The 43-story Sterling Hotel at Houston, the ship channel which brought the Gulf of Mexico inland, the low cost of cotton production and the opportunity for erection of more mills for manufacturing cotton products, the distribution of crops that has forced cotton into the position of representing only 40 per cent of the value of farm products, and a multitude of other things from oil to mineral springs and good power lines to bad water for the best of these things are commented on by Simpich in a glorious recounting of a few outstanding reasons for Texas' rapid advancement in the last few years.

Simpich closes his story with a complaint against the famous Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, because Thorpe gave him orders to keep his story within 3,500 words. "He says the high spots of the few most notable things of interest about Texas have a hard time jumping themselves into 3,500 words.

Rector Says the Greatest Need Of County Is Roads

Reverend Frank H. Stedman of Big Spring, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church of Colorado, was in Colorado last week and called at the Record office to say something about the roads in Mitchell county. The Reverend Mr. Stedman expressed the opinion that the greatest need of Mitchell county is improvement of the Bankhead highway. He came over from Big Spring in a bus line car recently and experienced all kinds of trouble getting through the flat land west of Colorado, and he says hundreds of autoists are warning others about the Mitchell county roads and suggests that something be done to improve this road.

This is a question that has been discussed here frequently and is a question that seems to be far from settlement, yet we have the assurance of the present highway engineer that something is to be done to the Bankhead highway west of Colorado this year. Claims are made here that the State Highway Commission has not been expended on this road that should have been spent and that this county has not received its portion of these funds.

The Record does not undertake to say what should or could be done with the highway situation in this county, yet we do know that we should have relief from some source. Last week in Stanton, at the district meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, we heard much adverse criticism about the roads in this county, and it was only because of the impassable roads in Laton Flat that the Colorado Medical Band could not go to Stanton.

If the citizens of this county could bring some pressure to bear on the highway commission or other proper authorities it appears that some relief from the present road situation might be had. We are not criticizing any one about the roads. We are only passing along the information we receive and the kicks we get, so that the citizens of the county can offer a solution or consider the matter in whatever light they wish.

D. 1927, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 11th day of August, A. D. 1926, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 32, wherein H. H. Armstrong is plaintiff, and Joe Gabler is defendant, and said petition alleging that the defendant, Joe Gabler, is indebted to the plaintiff, H. H. Armstrong, in the sum of forty and 15-100 ($40.15) dollars for labor and material furnished defendant by plaintiff at defendant's special instance and unpaid, plaintiff in past judgment and costs in this case. West Texas Dry Goods Co. Is New Name Old Firm

The West Texas Dry Goods company is a new name for the old established firm in Colorado heretofore known as the Colorado Bargain House. This concern announces the change in its name henceforth but with no change in the personnel of the management or the ownership, but will continue to do business at the old place. This popular store is principally owned by L. Landau and Max Berman of Colorado, and Levy Bros. of Sweetwater. Levy Bros. are large property owners in Colorado and have other business interests here besides large interests in Sweetwater. They own the Sweetwater Dry Goods company, and together with the local men and A. P. Baker of Midland, own the West Texas Dry Goods company at Midland. They report a very large volume of business at all their stores and are apparently very prosperous despite the slump generally credited to portions of the south. L. Landau is manager of the Colorado store with Max Berman as assistant and advertising manager. Each of these have had years of experience in the mercantile business and have made a success in the dry goods field. Landau reports the change in name to become effective at once. It is planned to incorporate the company under the new name, we are informed.

Price Bros. will sell you a 2, 3 or 4 Disc Plow to break your land. The price is right.
