The Live-at-Home Fair to be held nere in October should be looked forward to as one of the greatest achievements within reach of the people of this county, declared Tom Johnson, president of the fair association, Thursday.

"If there was ever a time in which the people of this county needed to lend their support to such a constructive program as this fair is going to be, it is right now," he continued. "The lessons we are to learn in providing many of the necessities of life at home will be of untold worth to our people, especially those of the rural communities.

"I have always been a supporter of the program of our county farm and home demonstration agents, but it was not until last week that my eyes were opened so that I could see their actual worth to the people. I drove through several West Texas counties, in which some of the best crops that I have ever seen have been made. In those counties in ONLY 12 BALES RECEIVED been made. In those counties in which the agents are employed the farmers were more progressive, had more and better livestock about busy canning vegetables and fruits for winter use.

"We people here in this county should be proud that we have the services of such leaders to help us in saving our foods as we know Mr. Foster and Miss Sevier to be. The programs that they are carrying to our rural homes will be enlarged upon during the fair in October."

The depression that is being felt alike by all interests makes it even more imperative that the fair be made a success, Johnson continued. He based his statement on the contention that any program that had to do with encouraging diversification on the farm merited the support of the people-in good times and in bad. ,

"The second Annual Live-at-Home Fair is going to be considerably more successful than the one held a year ago," Johnson declared with a sparkle of optimism in his eye. "There will be on display a coliection of home-grown and home-prepared foods, gathered from the homes of our citizens, that will cause many of us to wonder, because of the extensive variety and excellent the board of deacons comprise eigh quality portrayed."

The part that boys and girls of the county are to have in tais fair should not be overlooked, Johnson said. These youngsters, working un-

DOVE SEASON OPENS HERE LAST TUESDAY

With September 1 and the opening of the dove season, Texas hunters hauled out their long-idle shotguns and went forth to the slaughter of those game birds.

The Texas laws decree that doves may be killed in the Northwest sector, except in a few counties governed by special legislation, from September 1 to October 31.

This rule applies to country lying north of the Southern Pacific railroad. South of the tracks the season is one month later.

The fact that the S. P. tracks divide the zones gives shooters in the neighborhood of Del Rio the benefit of an extra 30 days of sport.

During October the Del Rio sportsmen may shoot doves south of the tracks and have another month of hunting by the simple expedient of crossing the railroad tracks.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 1 .- Six men now touring the State have novel detective job. It is that of trapping gasoline bootleggers.

Devious ways have been found to evade the four cents a gallon tax, but under a revised law making refiners responsible for the tax, the work has been much simplified. There are about 100 refiners while there were five times as many wholesalers to check under old law.

It is not the refiners alone who are watched. Many retailers have Mrs. Pratt had undergone a major ness was nothing serious, but as he the law there is no tax on casinghead gasoline. The detective problem has been to find where it is first sold in Texas.

Audits furnish the best clues to violations, according to John Byrne, who heads the gasoline division of the Comptroller's office. When reported retail sales do not tally with refiners' figures, a search traces out the leak.

In the same chapter in Mark from which the quotation at the head of this article was taken are these well known and meaningful words, "For what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own

The man who tries, as it were, to 'gain the whole world"-that is, t' acquire such an abundance of weatth that he shall be "independent" of others-has his mind blinded. He can not see nor possess "spiritual riches," for a blind mind has no signt any more than a blind eye.

One becomes in nature and dis position like that about which he thinks most.

Such a one is much like an old cow over whose eyes a board blind has been placed. Because she can not see the top of the fence, she naturally concludes that it has no top. Because the miser keeps his eyes glued to the dollar he begins to think it is the only there in the world worth having.

These thoughts bring to mind the tory of the banker and his friend. loan. A panic was on and the banker told his friend that the bar could not loan money because of business conditions. The friend insisted, bringing up the fact that he and the banker had been friends all their

Finally the banker told him that he had recently had an artificial eye put in place of one that had to or removed, which so resembled his good eye that it was difficult to tell one from the other; that is, which was artificial and which was natural. The banker told his friend that if he would look into his eyes for a moment and then tell him which was the artificial eye he would make him the loan anyway. After looking into the banker's eyes a moment the friend said, "Your right eye is the glass eye." Upon being asked why he so judged he said, "Because I thought I saw a little human sym-

When Mercury put the hundredeyed Argus to sleep by telling him a story and Juno took his many eyes and scattered them over the tail of her peacock, they were about as effective in discovering the beauties of spiritual things as are the eyes of one who expects to find happiness exclusively in material things. It might be, too, that the Cyclops set the fashion of wearing monocles. since they had only one eye each.

These somewhat frivolous observations can not reasonably be severely criticized, since light things are appreciated in summer weather. Also Tom Moore speaks of "unholy eyes of blue," and Shakespeare, who liked humor and indulged in it to a greater or less extent, makes Mercurio refer to Romeo as having been "stabbed with a white wench's black

But poor Romeo was not the only one treated that way. Also it is not at all strange that those so stabbed should die, for are they not all stabbed through the heart?

The eye of faith needs no monocle to strengthen its vision.

Material eyes see only material things. The highest-powered telescope ever built could not reveal what Elisha saw.

After Paul had told Agrippa of the vision he saw on his way to Damascus he also said, "Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision."

When the servant of Elisha saw the great host of men and chariots sent by the King of Syria to Dothan to bring to him the Israelitish propket, he exclaimed, "Alas, my master! How shall we do?" ### WHAT WILL COLORADO DO?

Announcement from Hereford Wednesday morning that the 42 towns and cities served by the West Texas Gas Company had organized to fight for reduction in the gas rates again presented to this newsper the interrogation: "What Will Colorado Do?"

Backed by popular sentiment of- made cigaret, tax and all. ficials of this city a few months ago joined with other West Texas municipal leaders in move to bring relief to the public, but aside from a few mass meetings at which orators were given opportunity to spread their stuff, nothing was ever done.

If the gas rate in Colorado is too high, there is no justification in us continuing to pay the 75 cents that we do. Every necessity of life-and every luxury of life, insofar as we are able to find, has gone down and down in price to reach one of the lowest levels known in years. The gas company continues, however, to gather from its patrons the same amount of monies for service rendered that obtained a decade ago when money was a cheap commodity and high prices were realized in practically all business transactions.

There is no reason why Colorado should not take the initiative in this campaign. The Record can see no consistency in resting on the oars. If the price being demanded by the gas company is justifiable, then let | ing the "early bird." us forget it and turn our attention to other things. #### 0-0-0 DODGING THE CIGARET TAX

(From Abilene Morning News) The new cigaret law promises to the next few months at least.

Already many fine points of law have been raised, and others doubt-

For instance, army officials Fort Sam Houston have ruled that cigarets sold to soldiers through the army stores are not subject to the State tax. The State treasurer has asked the attorney general for a uling on the point.

The collector of customs for the Southern district of Texas has ruled that it is unlawful, under Federal law, for a-man to buy a cigaret-rolling machine, grind out a tailor-made cigaret, and give it to a friend. If a man wants to use the machines to roll pills for his own consumption, he may do so; but if he hands one to a friend, he immediately becomes the object of a Federal warrant.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram makes an appeal to patriotic Texans to endure the tax rather than buy their fags from out of State dealers in order to evade the tax. The Star-Telegram intimates that the tobacco stores have been opened up in Oklahoma for the express purpose of selling tax-free cigarets to Texans. It asserts that this bootleg business in six years Congress lifted the Presicigarets will cost Texas merchants dent's salary to its present status at $300,000 per annum, and points out $75,000, with the Act of March 4, Representatives and Senators rethat that $300,000 per annum would 1909, making William Howard Taft mained the same. In 1853, however, Congress became more generous and raised the vice president's salary to $8,000.00. while still paying the President salary of $25,000. In 1873, when the President's pay was doubled to $50,-000, the vice president was raised to $10,000, the old ratio of one-fifth again. But in 1907 the vice president beat his chief to the next and last salary-raise when Congress awarded him $12,000. The Presidential raise to $75,000, in 1909, left the vice president a pay ratio of less than one-sixth, but in 1925 Congress corrected this and increased the vice president to his present rate of $15,000.

Cabinet officers were, from the beginning, let in on the ground floor. It seems odd to look back and learn that a Secretary of State of the United States once received a salary that in these days might be sniffed at by the sub-assistant to the creditor manager of a department store. Yet, Thomas Jefferson, our first Secretary of State, was paid precisely $3,500. So was the first man to hold the office now filled by Andrew W. Mellon. The great Alexander Hamilton drew down his $3 .-500 and no more. As for Washington's Secretary of War, Gen. Knox, he was let down with a mere $3,000. During Washington's administration the U. S. Attorney General had so little to do that it was a part-time job, and its holder had to rely on other sources of income.

TEXANS APPLAUD STAND OF GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT

Governor Roosevelt's open warfare with Tammany Wednesday of last week elicited cheers and applause from admiring Democrats in Texas who hope to see him the party's presidential nominee next year. Although the New York Governor's clash with the political organization is nothing new in his record, since he has consistently been anti-Tammany throughout his political career, the present fight is regarded as of utmost importance in its bearing on his chances to receive the nomination. His anti-Tammany attitude is regarded as one of Governor Roosevelt's greatest political assets over the country, especially in the South and West. For a New Yorker, however, it's regarded as extremely courageous to oppose what is probably the strongest political organization in the country, one in almost complete control of the party's

Or would he have farm machinery by the shiploads, to quit when he got forty acres abandoning the old methods of the planted in order that he did not ox and the wood plow of former plant cotton on the same land two days. years in succession."

The answer is that the bill itself is a little obscure. It would have prohibited "all persons, partnerships, associations and corporations who own, lease or rent land, from growing, cotton during the year 1932 on more than one-half the land previously cultivated in cotton during the year 1931; and prohibiting the last 10 or 15 years would have planting cotton two years successively without rotation."

The writer isn't a lawyer, but he would say that the man who had 100 acres in cotton this year and 40 acres in other crops would be afas follows: In 1932 he could plant which would cotton only half the acreage so planted this year; that would mean 50 acres. He would not be permitted, under the law, to plant more than half of his entire cultivated would be 70 acres. Therefore, the man with 100 acres in cotton on his 140-acre farm this year, would be limited to 70 acres of cotton in 1932. That would be 50 acres of the original cotton land and 20 acres from the 40-acre tracts planted in other crops, a total of 70 acres -half of his farm.

But most of the letters are entirely favorable to legislative action and an overwhelming majority are committed to the acreage limitation

In the general chorus of praise for acreage control plans, however, is one vigorously dissenting voice. It comes from B. M. Whiteker, once agricultural manager of the West Texas' chamber of commerce and now as always a practical dirt far-
