Senator Sheppard Attacks Sponsors Of Wet Campaign
Any member of congress who votes to permit light wines and beer will thereby violate his oath of office to support and maintain the constitution, Senator Morris Sheppard, father of National prohibition, declares in an introduction he contributed to a dry campaign book by Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas, superintendent of the Texas Anti-Saloon League.
Dr. Webb was in Colorado recently and several copies of his book were sold here. The work, titled "Dry America," vigorously attacks "wets" and sets up that the National prohibition act has been successful and must never be repealed. It is being released and sold throughout the country in response to demands that modification to the liquor laws should be made.
"In each succeeding Congress a persistent and aggressive effort is made to amend the Volstead act so as to permit the sale of so-called light wines and beers," writes Senator Sheppard. "This is in reality another and more subtle line of attack on the Eighteenth Amendment—an endeavor to bring back the traffic in intoxicating liquors under the very terms of the constitution forbidding it, a movement involving a violation by every Representative and Senator who supports it of the oath they took to support and maintain the Constitution."
"Without moral sentiment the Volstead act which applies it, and in fact all the ordinances of government are vain and useless. We must never cease to cultivate the idea that in the supremacy of law may be found both the glory and the hope of this Christian Republic. In a fundamental sense the cause of prohibition is the cause of every citizen regardless of his personal views as to the propriety of its enactment. Prohibition is the law, and he who defies it or encourages others to do so, strikes at the foundation of order, civilization and progress."
In the main body of the book, Dr. Webb, the author, under the subheading of "Corrupting Source of Public Information," charges that "the whole field of current literature, with a few notable exceptions, is saturated with falsehoods and inflammatory utterances deliberately intended to mislead the people and fan them to a frenzy of fanaticism against our Nation's dry policy."

Farmers Over Federal Reserve Area In Good Shape, Monthly Bank Report Says

The Colorado territory is not the only section of Texas in which better times are being realized among the farmers, according to monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, issued Saturday. Conditions throughout the 11th district are improving and restoration of confidence is being reported generally, the statement said.

Farmers of the district are to be in a strategic position to hold the cost of producing next year's crop to a new low level, by virtue of large production of all major crops this autumn and an abundance of food stocks, especially in those counties in which the aid of farm and home demonstration agents is being used. From 25,000 to 500,000 quarts of home canned foods, along with large stores of feed are in reserve in scores of those counties, it is shown.

Colorado has not suffered as much as other communities as a result of the low market prices at which farm commodities have sold during the marketing season, a comparison of results covering the district will show. In most cases this condition has impaired the debt paying and purchasing powers of the farmer. This advantage, however, has been partially overcome through policy of the planters to use members of their own families in harvesting.

Ideal weather in September allowed rapid harvesting, though lack of moisture retarded the seeding of winter grains. Beneficial rains fell toward the middle of October. The ranges in some portions of the district deteriorated during September but improved with the October rains.

Both wholesale and retail merchandise distribution was handicapped by unseasonably warm weather, delaying purchases of seasonal goods. Though department store sales in larger cities increased 22 per cent, the increase was less than seasonal and sales were 27 per cent smaller than a year ago. Sales in most lines of wholesale trade increased but the gains were due very largely to the fact that retailers had bought sparingly earlier in the season, replacing stocks as demand developed.

The report of R. G. Dun & Company for September showed commercial failures increased both in number and in total liabilities. They were also appreciably greater than in September, 1930. There were 93 failures in the district during the month, as against 81 in August and 60 in September, 1930. Aggregate indebtedness was $2,229,515 as compared to $1,094,300 in August, and $1,320,965 in the corresponding month last year.

Demand for Federal Reserve bank funds expanded rapidly. Loans to member banks were $13,651,000 on September 15 and $19,339,000 on October 15. On October 15, 1930, they were $10,578,000. Commercial loans of reserve city banks expanded moderately and the investments showed substantial increase. The daily average of combined net demand and time deposits of member banks declined. The September average was $724,824,000 as against $746,063,000 in August, and $830,125,000 in the corresponding month of last year.

Building permit valuations were 9 per cent smaller for the principal cities than in August and 59 per cent smaller than in September of 1930.

SEVEN WELLS NEWS NOTES

R. P. ADAMS, Reporter
These November days have found our community to be a very busy one. However, a majority of the cotton has been harvested, but there is enough left to last until the middle of this month. Enough of the cotton has been gathered, however, that parents feel they can now send their children to school. It has been unusual for so many of our children to be in the cotton patch, but the depression has made it a very difficult problem.

Everybody seems to be busy, some with cotton, some with late feed and some with syrup making. There are many gallons of syrup being made this week, as Mr. Zink Smith has his mill in operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Lanier Bassham and Irvin Wallace and Ordle Walker of Midland spent Sunday visiting relatives and friends in Cisco.

Mr. Elliott was in Lorraine on business and called on his sister.

Halloween brought much frolic in our community. Seems the spooks brought Mr. Dossey and family a new car, as they are driving one.

Sporenberg Merchant Who Gave Life To Save Neighbor, Is Cited by Hero Fund

Action of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission last week in awarding the late W. K. Billingsley, Sporenberg merchant, distinction of being one of the 48 outstanding heroes of the country and ordering paid to his widow death benefits at the rate of $80 per month, recalled the tragedy, occurring at Sporenberg last year, to a number of Colorado citizens, some of whom knew the former merchant personally.

Sporenberg is a small inland town between Big Spring and Lamesa. Local motorists recalled Monday that both the dead merchant and filling station operator he paid out his life to save when attacked by a hijacker, were known here.

The following press dispatch, released at Pittsburg Saturday, tells the story:

A Texan who gave his life to save another's today was named by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission as among the 48 throughout the country who were recognized for outstanding acts of heroism.

He was William R. Billingsley, 46, a storekeeper of Sporenberg. To his widow the commission has made the posthumous award of a bronze medal and given death benefits at the rate of $80 a month.

The commission reports that Billingsley "suffered fatal injuries rescuing Thomas A. Bryce, 21, a filling station attendant, from a homicidal attack at Sporenberg, May 1, 1930. A man wearing a mask entered the filling station, attended by Bryce at night, intent upon robbery. He threatened to kill Bryce handling him roughly and punching him in the breast with the muzzle of a revolver.

"Billingsley, who lived across the highway, was attracted and he borrowed a shotgun and went to the filling station. Through a window he saw the man menacing Bryce with the revolver. He opened a screen door and the man fired through the glass of the main door, wounding Billingsley. The robber then opened the door and again fired at Billingsley, and Billingsley, who was unable to move the safety catch of his gun, struck the holdup man over the head with it and then fell. The robber fired twice more at Billingsley and then ran away.

Others went in to see the dead man and hear his moans and groans. Many games were enjoyed until refreshments of doughnuts and coffee were served at a late hour.

56 Ships Are Rusting at Anchor in Mississippi.

New Orleans.—Anchored in mud and rusting into decay as they face an abandoned old age, 56 steel ships, part of a once mighty fleet that had a direct bearing on the ending of the World war, lie in the Mississippi river here.

The ships, designated by a signboard as the "U. S. Laidup Fleet," were part of the bridge of vessels that America rushed to completion near the close of the war. They were to have been used to transport 2,000,000 more American soldiers to foreign soil; to carry foodstuffs and munitions to the greatest expeditionary force in the history of the world.

After the armistice, the fleet quickly was turned to carrying foodstuffs to stricken European countries, and returning unused munitions to the United States. Foreign tonnage mostly was destroyed in the war and this reserve fleet gave America unchanged supremacy of the sea. American wheat and cotton was moved to all parts of the world. America was independent and wealthy.

Soon foreign ships began to appear again and trade began to slacken, so the less desirable of the American ships were laid up. Some were sold and transferred to service under foreign flags. The superior craft were left in the service, but the weaker ones were sent to "marine graveyards," to be stripped.

Many of the vessels here have been partly stripped. A lone watchman rules supreme on each, but he guards his charge even from cameramen, who might reveal the condition of the boats. Some of the ships easily might be reconitioned.

Seven Varieties Of Vegetables May Be Grown in Hotbeds

There are at least seven varieties of choice vegetables that may be successfully grown in winter hotbeds, joint announcement made on Monday by the farm and home demonstration agents, outlined. There may be others, but the seven listed are recommended especially for this territory.

Included in the list are radishes (scarlet globe) lettuce, (iceberg) onions (Bermuda), mustard (Giant Southern curd), carrots (Denver's half long), and beets (Crosby's Egyptian).

The agents, recently inaugurated campaign to popularize hotbed culture of garden vegetables during the winter months. Model of the proper type hotbed was on display at the fair and attracted considerable interest.

Those interested in the plan will find either of the agents ready to offer such aid suggestions as may be required, governing both the hotbed construction and cultivation of the vegetables.

IDENTIFY MURDERED WOMAN WITH X-RAYS

Detectives Turn to Science to Solve Mystery.

Copenhagen.—How sensational clues to a murder mystery were obtained by the use of X-rays has just been revealed here.

Following the discovery of a woman's legless body in the moat of the old fortress of Langeland, the cleverest detectives of the Copenhagen force found themselves baffled. There was not a single clue to go on—no marks on the clothing, nothing.

An examination of the people residing in the district failed to produce any information which would clear up the mystery.

It was then that a woman reporter suggested that X-ray photographs be taken of the body to see if some distinguishing formation or tissue might be discovered.

Photographs Taken. These photographs were taken, and the developed plates showed that the victim had suffered from a badly infected tubercular lung. Her condition revealed by the X-rays was such as to suggest that at one time she had been a patient in a hospital.

Armed with this information, the police made a search of all the hospitals in the district and examined all the photographs which had been taken in recent years of patients suffering from tuberculosis. Among them they discovered one of a lung which tallied in every detail with the X-ray picture taken of the dead woman.

Names Revealed. Examination of the hospital records revealed the woman's name and address, and when inquiry was made it was discovered that she had occupied an apartment in the city some two months before, but had not been seen since. Photographs of fingerprints on the furniture and door knobs established beyond all doubt that the former occupant was the murdered woman.

With this information in their possession the police were able to discover that the woman had been the sweetheart of a man with whom she had quarreled. He has since been arrested and charged with the crime.

We May Soon Be Getting Food in Frozen Bricks

New York.—A new development in the meat and drink problem indicates that soon we'll be getting many of our principal foods in brick form.

Clarence Birds-eye, an American scientist, recently has perfected a process that uses 50 below zero cold to freeze perishable foods as hard as paving blocks.

His idea came from his experiences in the Far North, where the intense cold kept his meat and fish in good eating condition for months.

According to reports on experiments and fasting tests, meats, seafoods, poultry, vegetables, and fruits frozen by this new method retain their original fresh qualities as long as they are kept hard frozen.

Scientists explain that no change in flavor, appearance or texture takes place because the intense cold congeals liquid content so rapidly that ice crystals formed in the products are too small to cause damage.

Marfa, Texas.—Only one wartime winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor continues in the enlisted ranks of the army.

He is Sgt. Lloyd M. Seibert of headquarters troops, First cavalry, stationed here. Seibert received the award for leading a charge on a machine-gun nest in France.

Seibert also holds the Silver Star Citation, the French Medaille Militaire, the French Croix de Guerre with Palm, the Italian Croce de Guerra, and the Montenegro Medaille pour la Bravoure Militaire.

Of the 90 congressional medals awarded for bravery during the World war 28 were posthumous. Approximately 60 holders of the medal are still living, however. Several are army officers, but the majority are no longer in the service.

Quiet Site Sought for Statue of Gov. Everett

Boston.—A bronze statue of Edward Everett, fifteenth governor of Massachusetts, has suffered many indignities in recent months.

Rowdies put a battered hat on the head and an empty whisky bottle in the palm of a hand.

A bullet of undetermined origin bored a hole above the heart.

An automobile rammed the bronze and knocked it flat to the ground.

Now a site other than busy Edward Everett square in Dorchester is being sought for the statue.

State Council Plans to Train Dogs for Blind

Harrisburg, Pa.—The state council for the blind in Pennsylvania plans to train 600 police dogs to "act as eyes" for as many blind persons in the state.

At present there are only 14 dogs so trained guiding blind persons under the council's sponsorship.

A national organization provides the dogs, already trained for the work. A three week period of further training to adapt the dog's habits to the new owner is required.

WARTIME VESSELS AWAIT GRAVEYARD

56 Ships Are Rusting at Anchor in Mississippi.

New Orleans.—Anchored in mud and rusting into decay as they face an abandoned old age, 56 steel ships, part of a once mighty fleet that had a direct bearing on the ending of the World war, lie in the Mississippi river here.

The ships, designated by a signboard as the "U. S. Laidup Fleet," were part of the bridge of vessels that America rushed to completion near the close of the war. They were to have been used to transport 2,000,000 more American soldiers to foreign soil; to carry foodstuffs and munitions to the greatest expeditionary force in the history of the world.

After the armistice, the fleet quickly was turned to carrying foodstuffs to stricken European countries, and returning unused munitions to the United States. Foreign tonnage mostly was destroyed in the war and this reserve fleet gave America unchanged supremacy of the sea. American wheat and cotton was moved to all parts of the world. America was independent and wealthy.

Soon foreign ships began to appear again and trade began to slacken, so the less desirable of the American ships were laid up. Some were sold and transferred to service under foreign flags. The superior craft were left in the service, but the weaker ones were sent to "marine graveyards," to be stripped.

Many of the vessels here have been partly stripped. A lone watchman rules supreme on each, but he guards his charge even from cameramen, who might reveal the condition of the boats. Some of the ships easily might be reconitioned.

Find Colored Lights Soothe Jangled Nerves

Paris.—The use of colored lights to soothe jangled nerves and insane minds has just been recommended here by psychologists attending the International psycho-therapeutic congress.

Blue was described as the best color to induce a cool, calm, calculating state of mind, while red was advised for those in need of stimulation. A green background was said to be the best for prolonged tranquility. Black was banned as having a depressing effect upon the mind.

The practicability of decorating offices in colors that would best suit the mentality of the business men concerned was discussed. It was suggested that asylums should have different colored rooms for different states of neurotic minds. Prison life would be less dismal, it was said, if the walls and bars were painted green or blue.

Dr. Jean Potheau of Nice told how many thermal resorts in France are utilizing the action of varicolored rays.

Pennsylvania Defends Official Tree's Repute

Harrisburg, Pa.—Pennsylvania has come to the defense of the hemlock, the official state tree, with the declaration that sap from the forest king is not poisonous.

"The Athenian philosopher, Socrates, who drank brew of hemlock, did not drink the sap from a hemlock tree but the fatal infusion of a plant called the hemlock, a herb related to our wild carrot," the forestry department said.

"Another point considered of interest to students is the derivation of the scientific name of the hemlock, Tsuga canadensis. Tsuga is not of Indian origin, as many people suppose; it is Japanese."

"Bicycle Built for Two" Comes Back in England

Washington.—At the same time that women's hats and dresses are reverting to the styles of the "gay nineties," the tandem or "bicycle built for two," is said to be making a very strong comeback on the roadways of England, according to a report received in the Commerce department from George Lewis Jones of the commercial attaché's office.

The older generation which knew the joys of this form of combined sport and transportation is said to be watching the development with keen interest, according to British comments on the subject.

Two Couples Wed in Four Minutes

The Pas, Man.—What is thought to be a new world's record for quick marriages was created recently on the Hudson Bay railway when Archdeacon Farley of the Anglican church, passing through station Mile 214 on the Canadian National railway way freight, performed a double wedding in slightly less than four minutes.

All arrangements were made by wire, for the ceremonies had to be performed during the short time the train stopped. When the train arrived the archdeacon put the question to the two couples in machine-gun fashion.

There is no time for hesitation in a wedding service on the Hudson Bay line, where there may not be another minister along for three months.

'FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY' WILL BE HONORED FEB. 22 IN PROGRAM AT COLORADO

Judge Thompson Is Named Chairman of Organized Leader Group

Colorado will pay tribute to the memory of George Washington, "Father of his Country," in a patriotic program to be given February 22, two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Washington. Definite plans for such a memorial pageant were completed Tuesday evening at a meeting of interested citizens at the chamber of commerce.

Judge C. C. Thompson was named chairman of the executive committee. Others on this committee include Mrs. Jack Smith, secretary; John E. Watson, W. S. Cooper, and Jim Greene.

"It is fitting that the citizenship of this city and county join in the American public in paying special tribute to Washington upon the centennial anniversary of his birth," Thompson stated Wednesday morning. "It is my sincere desire that the civic and social organizations of Colorado, along with all our patriotic organizations, lend every support to such a worthy cause."

Plans for the celebration outline three distinct programs. Opening in a downtown auditorium in the morning, the program is to be mostly of music, instrumental and vocal. A. F. King, R. H. Ratliff, Rev. W. M. Elliott, Mrs. L. B. Elliott and Mrs. P. C. Coleman are on committee to arrange this program.

The afternoon program will feature a parade, band music and the planting of a tree in Riddick Park, the latter to be dedicated to Washington. Mrs. A. L. Whippley, Mrs. J. A. Ferguson, J. Y. Fraser, Ben Cooper and Mrs. Jeff Dobbs will direct this program.

The day's celebration will be concluded with a patriotic pageant at the high school auditorium. Directing this presentation will be Mrs. Jas. T. Johnson, Mrs. C. C. Thompson, Roy Hester, Mrs. R. J. Wallace and Miss Ruby McGill.

Other committees named at the Tuesday evening meeting were W. S. Cooper, Lillian Pond and Jim Greene, publicity; J. H. Greene, L. B. Elliott, Edwin Moerer and T. C. Tunnell, arrangement committee, whose duty it will be to provide the auditorium, lights, janitor service, and such other requirements for properly carrying out the general program.

MILLS CHEVROLET CO. OPENS BIG CAR SALE

The most sensational used car sale ever advertised in Colorado, is the way the Mills Chevrolet Company talk of their special selling event, open during this week.

Joe E. Mills, owner and manager of the concern, stated Tuesday afternoon that prices had been posted on dependable machines that would not fail to move them. Price announcement is made in display advertisement in another column of The Record today.

Amarillo Takes Up War Again on High Phone Rates There

AMARILLO, Nov. 2.—Signers of petitions asking the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company for another rate cut by November 1 were urged today by the chamber of commerce to carry out their pledge to have phones disconnected.

As a result of the chamber of commerce request there was no telephone service tonight at either the Amarillo or Herring hotel, none at the city hall, except police and fire departments, and none at the chamber of commerce offices.

Telephone company officials have asked that orders to discontinue the service be made in writing.

"The chamber of commerce is going to keep on working until every telephone subscriber has been interviewed," O. V. Vernon, chamber of commerce manager said.

City officials late today sent letters to all telephone subscribers asking for written orders to discontinue the service.

Each telephone in hotels that disconnected service Monday night bore a card:

"This telephone has been disconnected in cooperation with the citizens of Amarillo. Your patience will be appreciated."

First of the chamber of commerce petitions went to the telephone company last Wednesday and others were presented Saturday.

The petitions were circulated following telephone company's statement that it would be impossible to make a further reduction at present.

The statement accompanied a financial statement which showed the company's earnings in Amarillo for the last five years.

Financial report was filed after a reduction in rates was made, effective September 1.

Wichita Falls Will Take Gas Rate War To Polls Dec. 5th

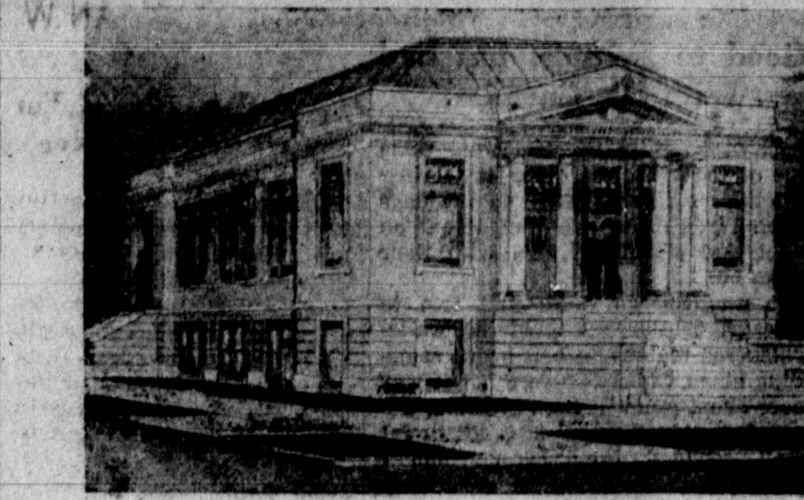

Wichita Falls is another West Texas city to have its gas fixing ordinance set aside by the Texas Railroad Commission and proposes now to take the rate war to the polls. An election has been ordered for December 5th to determine whether the city shall be authorized to enter the gas business.

The ordinance, passed Monday night as an emergency, stipulates that the proposed gas distributing properties shall be paid for out of their own revenue.

The action follows a long bitter fight on gas rates at Wichita Falls. Since the Railroad Commission set ordinance fixing price at 50 cents aside, patrons of the utilities company have been requested to pay their gas bills under protest.

FUTURE FARMERS' BABY BEEVES ASSURE OWNERS OF INVESTMENT PROFITS

"Best Calves I Have Seen In This Country," Class Teacher States

Boys of the Colorado chapter, Future Farmers of America, have no occasion for worry because they are responsible for 125 prime baby beefs, being scientifically fed as both a class experiment in advanced beef cattle breeding and to also make money for their owners.

Doyle Williams, director of the vocational agriculture department in the high school, stated Wednesday afternoon that the individuals were the best he had ever seen "in this or any other country." He estimated that the calves, on feed thirty days at that time, had gained from one and one-half to two pounds each daily since the experiment was begun October 3.

"It looks as if those boys have a sure shot in making some good money out of their investment," Williams continued. "The market has remained unchanged during the past 30 days, a fact most favorable to prospective advances later. As a rule the cattle market goes down during this season of the year. We are looking for an upward trend in quotations about the time our calves are to go on sale."

The calves are to be kept on feed 150 days. Williams was much pleased to note that considerable saving was being realized to the boys in feed costs. "Heretofore it has cost these boys about $30 an animal to feed them during the 150-day period. This time we are meeting that expense with an outlay of only $10 per head for the feeding period."

J. W. Watson, president of the school board, and other school officials have expressed much satisfaction in progress noted in this department. "Basically, the vocational agriculture course, giving practical experience in terracing, animal judging, feeding and breeding and other farm subjects, cannot be overestimated as to its importance to the boys making up the Future Farmer class," he declared.

Man Well Known In Colorado Reported Missing By Family

W. L. Ray, Fort Worth filling station operator and the son-in-law of Mrs. C. C. Blandford, also of Fort Worth, was reported missing Monday. Mrs. Blandford formerly lived in Colorado and the family is well known here.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram for Tuesday morning carried the following account of Ray's disappearance:

Fear for the safety of W. L. Ray, 42, of 2808 Avenue D, increased on Monday as police extended their search for him to neighboring towns. Bulletins giving a detailed description of the filling station manager who has been missing since early Sunday morning were sent to police departments of other Texas towns.

Ray, manager of the Texas Company filling station at Hemphill and Allen avenue, disappeared after he left home at 5:30 a. m. Sunday. He was due at the station at 6 a. m. Police found his keys in the driveway to the station. They presumably had been dropped before that hour, for his assistant opened the station at 6 o'clock and waited half an hour before notifying superiors that Ray had not arrived.

It is believed the missing man had $25. He was wearing a khaki suit and a brown sweater. His automobile, a dark blue coach, bears the license number D3-0051. He is married, has one child, and lives at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. C. C. Blandford.

Income from Cream Is Possible All Year U. S. Report Shows

There is one farm industry that has suffered less, on the whole, from the agricultural price depression than any other. Conditions in the dairying industry have held up remarkably well, and the outlook this fall is favorable for Texas producers of sweet and sour cream, butter and whole milk. Within the last month the price of 92-score butter at New York, whose market prices have a marked effect on prices in other areas, has advanced 5c a pound, and the level of prices on Oct. 8, this year, was only 4.5c lower than the average a year ago.

Another favorable factor in the cream and butter outlook is the very small supplies in storage. Even though creamery butter production in the United States this year thru August was 1.36 per cent larger than a year ago, storage stocks of butter on Oct. 1 were 51,314,000 pounds less than a year ago, and 57,995,000 pounds less than the five year average. This can mean but one thing, if butter consumption continues at anything like a normal rate, replenishing of butter stocks will be necessary, and cream and butter prices are likely to improve.

As an indication of the strength of dairy prices milk prices during early October in the South Central States, including Texas and Oklahoma, averaged $1.35 a 100 pounds, compared with $1.79 in September. Texas storage stocks of butter were much smaller on Oct. 1 than in previous months and than a year ago. Recent low prices tended to increase consumption of milk, cream and butter; production of butter substitutes showed a decline this year and indications are that more families are eating low-priced butter instead of the substitutes that were higher. Probably, also, more butter is being eaten by the average individual and larger quantities used in cooking. It hardly seems too much to say that a 40c retail price for butter will prove more profitable to the dairyman in the long run than 50c or 75c butter.

To the farm dairyman, cream, especially sweet cream, offers an attractive means of marketing. In most populous rural sections of Texas and Oklahoma there are cream and milk routes. The carrier picks up each farmer's output daily, and better return usually is received than through other methods of marketing dairy products. To cite one example where this system has proved profitable, a trip through Brooks and Jim Wells counties, in South Texas, will show almost every farm along the main roads has a station from which dairy products are received by a carrier.

With an efficient separator, equipment for keeping the product, and clean utensils, dairy production is not the task that many farmers and their wives suppose. If the farmer will keep a few hogs, chickens or calves, skim milk also offers a very profitable source of income, as it is a valuable addition to a livestock or poultry ration.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon having the proper equipment. That is a primary requisite to profitable dairying.

Backbone of Texas Agriculture Found Where Agents Are Working, News Finds

The backbone of Texas agriculture is to be found in those counties of the State wherein agents of the Extension Service, A. & M. College, are identified with the county farm projects, according to The Dallas News for Monday.

Services of the agents have been made even more vital to farm stability and farm progress since passage of the cotton acreage reduction law. The News declares. Full text of the editorial follows:

In various parts of Texas county farming programs are getting under way to meet next season's problem brought about by passage of the cotton acreage reduction law. There never was a time when the right kind of farm leadership was so necessary. County farm planning usually is built up around the county agent and the home demonstration agent. A county without these agents at this time stands to lose much. The county agent is the go-between of the Extension Service of Texas A. & M. College, the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the farmer. He speaks their language and is looked to for sound leadership and counsel.

Some 180 out of the 254 counties in Texas have county and home demonstration agents and these counties comprise the backbone of Texas agriculture. They are in position to approach the farm problem as a whole, analyze the needs of the time and the locality and likely to bring together banker, merchant, landlord and tenant on a common basis. Although chambers of commerce and luncheon clubs may contribute their part it is usually up to the county agent and the women agents to put the agreed upon plan into operation. The latter are held responsible for its success because, representing the great institutions which they do, it is presupposed that they have adequate training for the work. They are on the firing line and must deliver.

Director Martin of the Extension Service, recently pointed out that no farmer need go more than ten miles from his farm to find the answer to "What shall I do with my extra acres released from cotton in 1932?" On all sides he can find outstanding examples of farm demonstration work organized by the county agent, crop rotation, terracing, successful feeding of livestock, and the like. In any plans for meeting the requirements of 1932 the lars worth of products annually, has been a victory for the agents. They have not fought alone, for business men and farmers have come in as allies with the cry that economy should be intelligent.

The agents cost the county not more than the average rural school principal gets, about $1,000 to $1,400 a year, and they supervise the work of the greatest industries in the west—farming, ranching and the business of making the home a better and happier place to live. The State pays the other half of their salary.

PAL OF BILLY THE KID LAUDS OUTLAW

Good to Friends, but Bad With His Enemies.

Chicago.—Billy the Kid's pal came out of the West the other day, bringing tales of New Mexico in the days when feds meant shooting it out on sight and platinums died with their boots on.

It was George Coe's first trip to Chicago. The broad-shouldered, white-whiskered platinum had heard something about Chicago before but it was more about gunmen than greeters.

"I'd heard Chicago had an awful rep," confided the visitor, "but I haven't seen anything to confirm it since I've been here."

With Mr. Coe are his wife and niece, the latter, Mrs. Louise H. Coe, New Mexico's first and only woman state senator.

"How'd I get that?" repeated the platinum looking down at the stub of an index finger on his right hand. "Back in the days when Billy the Kid and me fought together out in Lincoln county, N. M."

"It was the battle at Blazer's sawmill when Bill Roberts of the other faction walked in unaware there were thirteen of us. He wouldn't surrender, so every one started pumping lead. One bullet tore off my index finger and knocked the six-shooter out of my hand. I got a couple of other good wounds before I got out of the country after the Lincoln county war."

How Trouble Started. "It all began because Sheriff Brady and his gang, the Murphy faction, killed an English cattleman, J. H. Tunstall. There was a faction that didn't want any other cattleman in the country. They tried to sew the whole country up for themselves and would try to run out newcomers."

"The Englishman bought a ranch and started up a sort of supply store in competition. His number set things off. It made Billy the Kid go wild because Tunstall was the best friend he had. Before he was done man-killing, the Kid had got all of twenty-one men."

"The really bad part of the war lasted six or eight months—it began February 18, 1878—and when the whole war was over there were seventy-two men dead. About even on both sides, I should say. The soldiers interfered and most of us got out of the country. We had been fighting fair and square, but when the soldiers came in we knew we couldn't fight the United States. President Hayes sent a committee down to investigate after the Englishman's family had raised a row, and they found we had been in the right."

The affection that still existed for Billy the Kid, who died with his boots on at the age of twenty-one, was apparent as George Coe talked of his pal.

Praises Kid's Principles. "He was a great boy with plenty of principle with his friends but pretty bad with his enemies. I was his pal for eighteen months. He was the most sensible man I ever was with. Outside his man-killing he was fine. He didn't use half the bad language the rest of us did."

"We felt as if we had about the same bringing up, and that made us kind of chummy. I was left an orphan when I was four years old, and his father died when he was four, too. He did his first killing at Silver City. That was when he was twelve years old. His mother took in washing for their living, and a blacksmith she washed for got insulting. Billy went out looking for him and make him take it back. He told me he didn't mean to shoot, but he did."

Rich Fossil Beds Found in Western Nebraska

Sidney, Neb.—New rich fossil beds have been discovered in western Nebraska by a party of investigators working near here and at Bridgeport during the summer months.

Fossils located here and at Bridgeport are reported to be particularly productive by C. B. Schulz, leader of the excavation party.

Work done this year was primary, Schulz said, but resulted in discovery of valuable oligocene beds. Two members of the party, digging near here, unearthed a mastodon skull, prehistoric rhinoceros, camel, turtle and evidences of a rare three-toed horse. The party will return to this location next year to further develop this bed.

One of the most important finds ever made in Nebraska was reported from near Bridgeport, where the jaw of an amphibian was unearthed.

Attending the baptism were two cousins of the Deacon baby, each born on the 13th of the month.

Early the next morning a dozen men, under the leadership of Rans Tullos, left Oakville bent on vengeance and the recovery of their livestock. They picked up the trail of the Indians about noon and followed it until nightfall. They camped for the night where they were.

A light fall of snow during the night obliterated the trail. Next morning the men rode straight ahead toward Turkey Creek, over the line in McMullen county. Andrew Tullis, Only Survivor of Last Texas Indian Battle, Dies at Age of 84

The last survivor of the last Indian fight in Texas is dead. He is Andrew Mitchell Tullis of Beville, 84 years old, who answered the final call recently.

There may have been sanguinary brushes of a minor nature with the predatory red man since the battle in which Andrew Tullis played a leading role, but on the declaration of no less an authority than James B. Gillet, famous frontiersman, ex-ranger and author of "Six Years with the Texas Rangers," that battle was the last real one.

In the brave days of 1872, Andrew Tullis was a hard working young ranchman of western Live Oak county. The home he had established for himself and his little family was on his ranch 14 miles west of the then famous cow town of Oakville. There also, the two houses, separated for mutual protection by only a few yards, was the home of his brother-in-law, Timothy Cude.

The year 1872, at least in that part of the country, was one of deprivations. Livestock losses were many and heavy, but all of the raids were laid to the operations of cattle rustlers from across the Mexican border. These continued until December of that year, when events occurred that put an end to them and in so doing, made history.

The connection between such staple articles of pioneer diet as hot biscuit, wild honey, hot coffee and dried beef, and a smoke covered December battle field might seem remote. Nevertheless, one was the direct cause of the other. Too much beef became tiresome, and it was to pork that the family turned for welcome variety.

Accordingly, on this December morning young Andrew Tullis buckled on his pistol and knife and rode from the ranch on a lone hog hunt. From his daughter and personal historian, Mrs. A. J. Turner of Beville, comes the comment that, "In those days hats were big and shoes were boots; and pistols were worn by all men as part of their clothing—like their pants. And there were times when they were infinitely more necessary than pants."

It was just as well for Tullis that he wore his gun at that time. Instead, far out on a distant slope he sighted a large herd of horses, held in a close bunch and apparently guarded by two black dogs which, as he rode at a lope toward them, he solved themselves into two men whose he took to be Mexicans. He rode still closer, and had no difficulty in singling out several fine horses that belonged to his father. Contemptuous of the two other riders, he calmly started cutting them out of the herd.

Results were immediate. The two men opened fire, and Tullis, not to be outdone, returned shot for shot, and only the excessively long range prevented casualties. Tullis suddenly became aware he had only three cartridges left. Just as suddenly, he was presented with plenty of good reason for saving them. For lashing their ponies into a dead run, there came streaking into view over the brow of the hill a band of wildly yelling savages, long feather head dresses streaming in the wind and on every left arm a gaudily painted shield.

Tullis ran for it. The best he hoped for was to reach the protection of a "granjeno" bush and there, if it came to that, to make a last stand, and to sell his scalp at the price of one Indian for each of his last three cartridges. But the thundering hoofs, and the shots and the war whoops of his pursuers sent his little paint horse, Foxy, at a pace his rider did not know he had in him. They made the edge of the prairie, and safely ran in the lead.

On the Oakville road Tullis met Tim Cude, his brother-in-law, returning from that town with a load of supplies. Together they hurried to the ranch on Spring Creek. There the two young wives and the two babies were gathered and taken immediately to the home in Oakville of Rans Tullos (as he spelled it) father of Andrew.

Meanwhile, it was later found, the Indians had appeased their wrath at losing Tullis by halting at the old J. Campbell ranch, later known as the West ranch, where they tortured a Mexican herder by dragging him by the neck with ropes tied to their running horses. He was left for dead.

Early the next morning a dozen men, under the leadership of Rans Tullos, left Oakville bent on vengeance and the recovery of their livestock. They picked up the trail of the Indians about noon and followed it until nightfall. They camped for the night where they were.

A light fall of snow during the night obliterated the trail. Next morning the men rode straight ahead toward Turkey Creek, over the line in McMullen county. In the saddle at dawn, they rode "blind" until sunup, when a thread of smoke from the bed of Turkey Creek revealed the presence of some sort of camp. The approach was silent and swift. The Indians were caught lolling about their camp at breakfast, with apparently no guards posted. The surprise was complete.

No one ever knew exactly how many Indians there were. Only one was seen to escape, but there may have been more. The battle lasted only a few minutes, but at its conclusion, after putting up a fight that won the admiration of the white men by reason of its gameness and courage, every Indian was dead.

Among the dead was a squaw. Attention had been directed to her at the outset when, as the first volley was fired, all the Indians rushed to her side, seemingly far more concerned for her safety than for their own. Whether it was a display of gallantry, or whether the woman was some sort of leader, or the daughter of a chief, is still open to question.

Among the whites there was only one casualty. An arrow, striking Sebastian Bell in the mouth, cost him a front tooth. Possibly it was the discovery among the trophies of the Indians of the scalp of a golden-haired little girl that caused some of the victors to indulge in a little scalping on their own account. At any rate the victory was a complete one.

Turkey Creek, on which the battle was fought, is now known as Hill Creek. It was midway between the old Encino ranch and the Nueces river, on what is now part of the Shiner ranch. A short distance to the southeast is San Cajo mountain, into one of whose caves the bones of the slain warriors were later placed. Still later, the bones were removed, supposedly by other members of the tribe sent to recover them. The tribe was never identified, but from the fact that the Indians spoke at least some Spanish, it was presumed they were from Mexico.

It is part of the story that some of the white men turned back just before the fight. But the names of those who stayed to see it through are given by Andrew Tullis as follows: Rans Tullos and his two sons, Andrew and Woodie, Tim Cude, Coker, Bob Nations, Pleas Walker, John Wilson, John Edwards, Cullen Anders, Sebastian Bell, Sam Nations, and Toke Odöm.

Andrew Tullis, the last survivor, discussed the occurrence with the greatest reluctance, and then only with his children. He was of the opinion that although the event was historical, and its narration, perhaps, of value for that reason, he believed the taking of human life reflected no glory, and his later reaction on the matter was of regret. In any event, he desired it clearly understood that he did not take part in the scalping and that to his certain knowledge he did not shoot the Indian squaw. It might be pointed out in passing, however, that the squaw fought like a wildcat, taking her place as ferocious a warrior as any of her male companions, and that shooting her in the general fighting or the hand-to-hand combat that followed was as justifiable as it probably was unavoidable.

WASHINGTON'S GOOD WILL TRIP THROUGH NEW ENGLAND

Throughout New England, October of this year brought historic reminders, for in that month of 1789 George Washington, seven months after being sworn in as first President of the United States, began the first Presidential "swing around the circle." That is, on October 15 President Washington set out from the National capital, then New York City, for a good will tour of the New England States.

President Washington's purpose, we are told by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in this visit, was to give the people a sense of the fact that they now had a National government, and he thought it a good thing for himself to note the condition of the country and its people.

As usual, Washington himself is the best authority for what happened to him on this journey. Methodical in all his actions, he jotted down in his diary every fact and figure that struck him as worthy of note. From what he did record, it is clear that either he was not interested in the feeble stirrings of politics, or else chose not to set down his observations. His concern was rather for the material than the political progress of the country, and not a detail escaped him as to the condition of New England's farms, industries, fisheries, and habitations.

President Washington set out from New York at 9 in the morning of October 15 and proceeded along what was then, and still is, known as the Boston Post road. Covering 31 miles the first day through Lower Connecticut, over a highway that he notes as rough and stony, he found the country thrifty and well-tilled, but in some places still bearing the marks of British destruction. Stamford had a mill-dam which interested him, and Norwalk then was a busy shipping port. Curiously enough we learn from President Washington the size of Yale College in 1789.

Pausing at New Haven, he took the trouble to learn that it numbered 120 students.

From there he struck northward through Wallingford to Hartford on his way to Springfield and Massachusetts, where he immediately noted a fact that struck him. That was the prevailing equality of fortune among the people. In Massachusetts there were neither the very rich nor the very poor.

At Brookfield, Massachusetts, a few miles beyond Springfield, President Washington was met by citizens from Governor Hancock, inviting the President to be his official guest in Boston. The President had no intention of permitting the Governor of any State to assume, even as a host, a position superior to that of the Chief Executive of the United States. To carry out the intention he insisted on stopping at public quarters, the first official call to be paid by the Governor upon the President.

Let George Washington himself tell what happened. In his diary he records the triumphal arches under which he passed on arriving at Boston, with inscriptions such as "To the Man Who Unites All Hearts," "To Columbia's Favorite Son," and "Boston Relieved March 17, 1776."

"The streets, the doors, windows and tops of the houses were crowded with well dressed ladies and gentlemen," he goes on. "The procession being over, I was conducted to my lodgings at a widow Ingersoll's (a very decent and good house) by the Lieut. Governor and Council, accompanied by the Vice President (John Adams), where he took leave of me. Having engaged yesterday to take an informal dinner with the Governor today, but under a full persuasion that he would have waited upon me so soon as I should have arrived—I excused myself upon his not doing it, and informing me through his secretary that he was too much indisposed to do it, being resolved to receive the visit."

That was on Saturday, October 24. On Sunday, President Washington attended two churches in Boston, and between the two visits received the belated visit from Governor Hancock. The Governor appeared swathed in bandages and alleging a serious attack of gout. Probably he fooled no one but himself and "gout or no gout," President Washington had compelled him to pay the first call and thus render homage to the higher station of the President of the United States.

Yet while Washington could thus, by his cool aloofness, enforce respect for his office, he showed another side at Cambridge, before arriving at Boston. General Brooks, commander of the Middlesex Militia had there requested President Washington to review that body. Washington declined, on the excellent ground that while the President of United States was commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and of States' militia during a state of war, he would not establish a precedent in giving the President military rank above the Governor of a State over State troops in time of peace. If he meant the presidency to be respected, he was equally scrupulous in regard to a Governor's prerogatives.

During his stay in Boston Washington visited textile mills, inspected the harbor and its shipping, and was gratified to note everywhere a promising industrial progress.

Next year it will be just 143 years since President Washington made his tour of New England. It is to be hoped that in 1932, when whole nation celebrates the Two Hundredth anniversary of his birth, every New England city that he then visited will re-enact the scene or otherwise mark the occasion, as part of the tribute which the entire world will then render to the greatest American and one of the loftiest figures in human history.

SATURDAY WAS BEST DAY OF THE YEAR, COLORADO STORE MANAGERS REPORT

Brisk Trading in All Lines Is Reported for the Day; Stores Crowded

Saturday was the best day that Colorado merchants had experienced during the year, to summarize statements by managers of several leading retail concerns of the city.

There might have been days in which as many people were on the street and crowded the stores, but Saturday marked the setting of a new high record in volume of cash business handled. Business men were smiling over the upward trend of trading here.

"Shoppers crowded into the store in such large numbers that we were unable to wait on them and I am confident that we lost a considerable amount of trade from that source," to quote expression made by some of the larger store managers.

Two reasons are being assigned for the rapid return of better times in Colorado. One is expressed in fact that people are becoming more optimistic and viewing the immediate future. The other is easier money and more of it due to the cotton harvest.

Former Roscoe Man Takes Over Paper Issued at Loraine

John King, former publisher of the Roscoe Times, has purchased the Mitchell County News at Loraine and assumed charge of the publication, effective Monday of this week.

Walter A. Edmiston, who established the publication six months ago, reported while in Colorado Saturday that he did not know just what his plans for the future might be, but would probably return to his former business as a music dealer.

King, after publishing the Roscoe paper for some time, sold the business to others about two years ago.

Farmers Arrested By Highway Patrol Released by Court

Several farmers were charged with violation of the State vehicular illuminating laws in complaints filed here Thursday night by patrolmen of the State highway department. As a rule the arrests were made at local gins where farmers had come with wagons loaded with cotton.

The men were sent to Peace Justice Stoneham who dismissed charges against them after he had cited provisions of the law regulating the lighting of all vehicles used on the highway after dark. Mr. Stoneham intimated Saturday that the court would be forced to impose fines in event of the second offense.

State highway authorities announced a few weeks ago that operators of all vehicles operating on the highway after night without regulation illumination equipment would be arrested.

SKEET HARKINS, STAR ON WOLF GRID ORGANIZATION, SUSTAINS BREAK TO ARM

Is Injured in Colorado-Big Spring Conference Tilt Friday Afternoon

"Skeet" Harkins, fleet back on the Wolf grid squad, is probably out of participation in all future conference games to be played by the team. He sustained a bad break to his left arm while playing in the Colorado-Big Spring tilt at Big Spring Friday afternoon.

Harkins, as in the game with Sweetwater at Cantrill Field a week previous, was fighting hard. The fleet back had made another of his spectacular tackles when his arm became entangled in legs of a racing Steer, breaking the member between the wrist and elbow.

The injured man was taken to a Big Spring hospital, where the arm was set. He was removed to his home in Colorado Friday night.

Colorado was outclassed in every department in annual clash with the Steers. The score was 79-0, running up total points for the Big Spring club to 398 for the season and maintaining record of not being scored on.

Before end of the game Coach Obie Bristow was using several of his second and third string men. It was demonstrated that Big Spring has three powerful strings, and some of the best football technique seen on a West Texas field in several years.

The Wolves have no scheduled game for this week and will go to San Angelo November 11 for contest with charges of Hardy Pearce, former coach here. McCamey is another strong team yet to be encountered by the local club.

MRS. McSPADDEN WINS IN ELECTRIC CONTEST

Mrs. A. L. McSpadden, member of the clerical force in offices of the Texas Electric Company at Colorado, won first place in district contest closing Saturday at midnight. She is to receive cash award of $25.00. Another member of the Colorado office force, Mrs. Jim Ferguson, won third place in the contest and is to receive a $15 prize. A member of the Snyder office force won second place.

The contest was based on electric lamp sales during a certain time. Mrs. McSpadden had field first place for several days before close of the contest.

CHARGES AGAINST TEN DROPPED AT SHERMAN

Indictments charging ten Grayson county men in connection with the burning of court house at Sherman in 1930, were dismissed Monday on motion of the district attorney.

PIONEER WOMAN OF WEST TEXAS CALLED IN DEATH OF MRS. W. L. DOSS HERE

Wife of Prominent Colorado Business Man Succumbs After Long Illness

Funeral services for Mrs. W. L. Doss, Sr., were conducted Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the First Methodist church, with her pastor, the Rev. L. A. Webb, officiating. He was assisted by Rev. Oran C. Reid, pastor of the First Baptist church, and Rev. W. M. Elliott, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Burial was in the I. O. O. F. cemetery.

Mrs. Doss died at the family residence, on Elm street, Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, following a lingering illness. The end came quietly and was not unexpected by members of her family, all of whom were present at the time.

The large throng of people attending the funeral rites, together with the profuse floral offering, said to have been among the most beautiful ever seen at such a service in this city, bespoke the esteem in which Mrs. Doss was held in Colorado and this section of the State. Her pastor paid strong tribute to her life as having been one of strong devotion to Christianity and to those with whom she came in contact.

Surviving are her husband, W. L. Doss, Sr., and two sons, Milburn Doss and W. L. Doss, Jr., all of whom are successful business men of the city, and one daughter, Mrs. W. R. Motley of Marshall. Two brothers, J. A. Milburn and F. M. Milburn of Weatherford, also survive. All were present at the time of her death. Frank Milburn of Adelo and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright of Big Spring were other relatives attending the funeral services.

Mrs. Doss has been prominent in club and lodge circles of her home community and State for a number of years. She was a charter member of the Hesperian Club here and a past president of the Rebekah Assembly of Texas. Last year, when due to ill health she was unable to attend the State Rebekah Assembly meeting in Fort Worth, officials of the fraternity passed resolutions commending her work as a leader in that fraternity and expressed their love and esteem of her. She was also a charter member of the Woodman Circle and prominently identified with other civic and benevolent organizations.

She was equally as active in programs of the First Methodist church, of which she was a member. During her life many important offices in the church had been filled by her. The Eastern Star was another fraternal organization in which she was active for many years.

Mrs. Doss, nee Miss Kate Milburn, was born in Tarrant county, Texas, in 1866, and was married in Weatherford in 1886 to W. L. Doss, at that time a Colorado business man. She had made her home since marriage, a period of 45 years, in Colorado.

Active pallbearers were J. T. Johnson, T. W. Stoneroad, Jr., Dr. B. F. Dulaney, Sam J. Smith, O. F. Jones and J. Lee Jones. Honorary pallbearers included all physicians of Colorado.

SWEETWATER YOUTH DIES FOLLOWING MOTOR WRECK IN NOLAN COUNTY SUNDAY

Daughter of M. S. Goldman, Former Colorado Citizen, Driver of Machine

Funeral services for A. B. Chambers, Jr., 14, were held at Sweetwater Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The boy was an only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Chambers of Sweetwater and died at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon from injuries received when a motor car in which he and nine other children were riding on Highway No. 1 east of Sweetwater, overturned.

The machine, owned by Mrs. M. S. Goldman of San Angelo, was demolished. Her daughter, Jimmie Lou, was at the wheel. Both Mrs. Goldman and her daughter formerly lived in Colorado and are well known here. Martha Jane Majors, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Majors of Colorado, was another member of the party.

Jimmie Lou Goldman and Martha Jane Majors were in Sweetwater to visit their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Majors. They had gone to Sunday school and decided to take a ride in the machine between the Sunday school and church service hours. Eight other Sweetwater children crowded into and outside the car.

Driving east and downhill the car skidded in soft earth on a shoulder of the highway at a turn. Jimmie Lou attempted to right the machine but it was lost from control and overturned into a ditch. All of the children were thrown clear of the car. Young Chambers was thrown onto the pavement, the impact fracturing several ribs that penetrated his lungs.

Father of the dead youth is a trade salesman and is well known to the trade in Colorado.

385 MITCHELL FARMS HAVE NO COWS, SAYS UNCLE SAM IN REPORT

Some startling facts are revealed in final report of the 1930 census, received here this week. Out of a total of 1,481 farms listed in Mitchell county for last year, there were 385 on which no cow was owned, showing that about 25 per cent of the families residing in rural districts had no dairy products supply at home.

There were 316 farms on which no poultry was listed, and 633—or almost one-half the entire number—reported no hogs. Out of a total of 7838 head of work animals reported there were only 441 under two years of age, indicating that breeding of that class of livestock was on the decline.

BUFORD FARMER WINS ON MAIZE AT DALLAS FAIR, SAYS REPORT

J. W. Blasingsame, 4-H Club member, won third place on his pure line maize exhibit entered in open competition at the State Fair, according to word received here last week from the fair officials.

The exhibit was selected from Mr. Blasingsame's demonstration plot which was planted with pure seed grown by a Mitchell county seed breeder and furnished the club boys by the Colorado chamber of commerce.

J. W. Blasingsame is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Blasingsame of Buford.

COLORADO PASTOR HOLDS COMMENDABLE RECORD IN LOCAL CHURCH PROGRESS

Rev. W. M. Elliott, Pastor Of First Presbyterian For Over 13 Years

It is a commendable achievement to merit universal recognition in the community as a leader in religious thought and activity; it is another to hold distinction of being the dean among his fellows.

Both those are rightfully credited to the Rev. W. M. Elliott, pastor of First Presbyterian church, now in his thirteenth year as pastor of that congregation. His leadership in the church, among his own people and those of other congregations of the city has ever been outstanding. He has been active in the ministry of this community longer than any other Colorado pastor.

May 1, 1908, Rev. Mr. Elliott came to Colorado to accept pastorate of the First Presbyterian church, leaving one of the larger congregations in Albany, Indiana, to come to West Texas, believing he could better serve the church here. At that time the congregation was worshipping in a small frame building at Locust and East Second streets, and a small number of parishioners attended the services regularly.

After spending four years here, he resigned and during the ten years he followed served as pastor of churches in three States. He first went to Missouri and came back to Texas at Weatherford. He went from there to Clovis, New Mexico, and from there returned to Colorado in 1922.

It was not long after his return to the people he had learned to love so dearly that plans for erection of a modern church and manse were being considered. The result was that in 1925 the attractive church home at East Fifth and Chestnut streets was built. The property is free of debt and is valued at $30,000. Membership in the church has been more than doubled since he became pastor.

This Colorado pastor is most active in civic and public welfare programs of the community and section. For many years he has been an aggressive champion of boys' work. Before coming to Colorado he was an active leader in "The Knights of King Arthur," boys organization functioning similar to the Boy Scouts. And when he came to Colorado he soon had a chapter of that organization here. Chief of Police Dick Hickman, Clyde Broadus, Harry Ratliff, Roy Farmer and others were members of that organization during their youth.

When the Buffalo Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America, was organized in 1923, Rev. Mr. Elliott was named president of the area organization. He filled that office for six years, building in four West Texas counties one of the strongest Boy Scout units in the country. He retired at his own request and has since been retained as a vice president of the council.

The First Presbyterian church of Colorado is outstanding in this city and West Texas. Its pastor and membership are among the recognized leaders in the District and State Synods. Dr. P. C. Coleman, who has been an elder in the church for 49 years, was elected as moderator of the State Synod two years ago, a distinction seldom held by others than the clergy.

COUNTY GIN RECEIPTS TO REACH 30,000 IN OPINION JIM JOHNSON

Farmers of Mitchell county will harvest a 30,000-bale crop from the acreage devoted to cotton in 1931, Jim Johnson, local ginner and land owner, stated Saturday. At that time total gin receipts had reached approximately 18,000 bales.

Scores of farmers are finishing up the work of gathering their cotton, while there are others who have picked only a small portion of the crop, Johnson pointed out.

WESTBROOK BAPTISTS ARE BACK IN THEIR CHURCH

We are now back in our church and tabernacle. Prayer meeting on Wednesday night was very interesting, only a few present. Mrs. Hattie M. Berry conducted the meeting, bringing us a good message. Everyone made a talk and the spirit of the Lord was with us.

We had about 50 in the Sunday school.

We had no preaching services and most everyone present went to hear Rev. Whatley, Methodist minister, deliver his farewell sermon.

Next Sunday and Sunday night the pulpit will be filled by Bro. G. W. Parks.

METHODISTS HEAR PASTOR'S FAREWELL SERMON

We regret to report a decrease in our Sunday school attendance, as we only had 81 last Sunday morning.

Rev. W. M. Whatley, the pastor, preached a fine sermon to a large crowd Sunday night, which will be his last sermon for us, since he is moving to San Saba, where he will be pastor. We regret very much to give Rev. Whatley and his family up. They have been so faithful to the task. We appreciate very much the good work they have done. Our prayers will follow them to their new field of labor.

MRS. MOORE GIVES HALLOWEEN PARTY

Mrs. J. J. Moore was the lovely hostess to a Halloween party Saturday night for a number of her young friends. Upon arriving the guests were met at the front by a bold highwayman and in like fashion ushered to the door, to be met by various spooky characters who solemnly greeted them. Weird games were played, horrifying stories told, and several very enjoyable stunts were performed, much to the delight of all.

Refreshments of hot chocolate and cake were served to about 30 guests, and many laughable and unsuspecting fortunes were revealed.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY HALLOWEEN

The Young People's department of the Methodist church enjoyed a delightfully planned Halloween party at the church Friday night. The young people, dressed as "ghosts of their former selves," arrived at the hour of 7:30 and enjoyed fortune telling, the hall of horror, a death chamber, ghost stories and many interesting games under direction of Miss Ruth Skelton, until 11 o'clock when apples were served.

FRESHNESS and flavor in a cigarette trace right back to natural moisture.

If you overheat or process tobacco so harshly as to dry out all natural moisture you drive out freshness and flavor too.

Camel never parches or toasts the fine Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos it uses—they are naturally smooth, cool, mellow, with natural moisture retained.

CAMELS
Made FRESH—Kept FRESH

Don't remove the moisture-proof wrapping from your package of Camels after you open it. The Camel Humidor Pack is protection against sweat, dust and germs. In offices and homes, even in the dry atmosphere of artificial heat, the Camel Humidor Pack delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until the last one has been smoked

That's why the Camel Humidor Pack proves such a blessing to Camel smokers—it brings them a fine cigarette fresh to start with, and fresh to smoke.

If you don't realize what natural moisture means in genuine freshness and flavor, switch to Camels and see.

Try this mild, slow-burning, throat-friendly favorite for just one day—then leave it, if you can!

SIGNIFICANCE OF ARMISTICE

Colorado will pause Wednesday to observe another anniversary of that day on which arms of the world's conflicting armies were stilled to end the most destructive war the world has ever known. There may not be so much of the outspoken array, common to programs celebrating this holiday in some of the larger cities, but there will be no slackening of evidences of patriotism among the citizenry of this city and county as they reflect within their hearts the traditions of that conflict.

The principles of Americanism that have been enunciated by the American Legion had their inception at Armistice. Colorado Legionnaires have ever been active in support of those tenets, through both word and deed. And these men will assume initiative in whatever observance the community may be called upon to sponsor Nov. 11.

Mitchell county furnished a strong quota to recruits making up the American Expeditionary Forces. The strongest and best of this county's young manhood left all, determined to pay out all, if need be, in order that the challenge of their chieftain, Woodrow Wilson, should be sustained, and "democracy had peace existed everywhere and there is a growing silent rule among the people of all nations that we are to have no more wars.

Colorado will reverse the traditions of this Armistice Day. Colorado will reverse the memory of those of her noble sons who found their last resting place on foreign battle fields, "where poppies grow."

WILL WE BE ENROLLED?

Another roll call is to be launched on Wednesday, November 11, by the American Red Cross and the challenge to lend every support to this organization comes to no people with stronger application than it does to us. "The Greatest Mother of Them All" did not turn away when our people were left desolate and bleeding in wake of a destructive cyclone a few years ago. Neither did the Red Cross refuse to listen when a few months ago the citizenship of Mitchell county appealed for seed to plant gardens and field crops.

Are we going to answer the challenge by enrolling our membership quota and then going "over the top?" The Record believes that such will be the result of annual drive to be directed by Jim Harvey. The Mitchell county quota is 600 members. Harvey and other chapter officials hope to enroll a number of life and sustaining members, in that additional funds be realized to the county unit to aid in benevolent work anticipated during the winter months.

POLITICS AND MORE POLITICS

We have before us the census of Texas by counties. Our total population gives the State three added Congressmen. Under the Constitution, it is obligatory on the part of the Legislature to divide the State into Congressional districts, each district to represent a certain portion of the population as nearly the same as possible.

Any high school boy could take a map of Texas and these census figures and divide the State into twenty-one districts, each one as compact as necessary and each one representing approximately the required number of inhabitants. He could do this job in less than a day and have plenty of time for other duties. But, in doing the job he would not be hampered by political considerations.

We have a highly-paid legislature. It has been asked by the Governor to redistrict the State for Congressional purposes. Several bills have received consideration and none of them have proved satisfactory to the majority. We repeat, the job of redistricting the State ought to be taken out of the hands of the Legislature and turned over to a non-political body. Then the job would be done without fixing boundary lines to suit some fellow who is already in Congress, or who expects to become a candidate some time in the near future.

Legislators who pay more attention to their own political interests or that of their friends than they do to the business of the State are not true to their oaths or to their constituents. In times of prosperity the people take but little note of the political log-rolling going on in the capital city, but in these days there is a demand for patriotic service and quick action. If there is any good reason why the Legislature could not have redistricted the State and thus saved the expense of elections at large of three Congressmen we have not learned of it.

THE BETTER WAY

It is better to prevent a crime than to punish someone for having committed it. And, on the same principle, it is better to enforce a few basic laws than to pass new and restrictive laws which are unenforceable, and serve only to make law-breakers of otherwise law-abiding citizens.

This is a fact of which we seem to have lost sight in our passion for passing laws. Probably no other civilized people are bound by so many legal restrictions as we are—and it is certain that no other civilized people are plagued by so much crime, or have so conspicuously failed in apprehending and convicting criminals. That is something legislators and voters might take into account when the time for consideration of new laws comes again.

Legislatures have passed so many laws that most attorneys have considerable trouble in finding time to look them up and study them. And crime is continually increasing. In London, England, the largest city in the world, policemen do not even carry pistols to control criminals.

MOTORING HAZARDS

Another accident on the highway this week, caused by a motor car farm wagon crash, and the injury of another citizen, should serve to remind the public it is about time to be more definite in demand that these hazards to property and human life be reduced to the minimum. The Record is not specifically blaming anybody for these accidents. We do not elect to claim that the motorist or the farmer was any more to blame than the other. It is apparent, however, that somebody was "taking a chance." Whether you are driving a farm wagon or a motor car along the highway—in daytime or at night—public safety demands that due precaution against accidents be respected.

Reports that farmers of this territory plan growing vegetables during the winter months by the use of hot-houses is another bit of interesting news. Farm progress is well defined in Mitchell county. It is apparent that our rural folk are making greater strides toward permanent farm stability during these times of depression than was ever the rule when prosperity abounded.

FEATURING THE EMPRESS EUGENIE NEST

In the belief that the influence of Empress Eugenie will dominate the styles for women this fall and knowing the present Eugenie trend already definitely established in millinery will be evident in modified versions in woman's ready-to-wear for the fall and for that reason this Columnist has exhausted three volumes of French history that we may give you these facts:

The Empress Eugenie hat fever is now under control.

It was the shortest and most spasmodic fashion ever imported by our ruffianly male dressmakers.

The reason for the Empress Eugenie hat was a flivverine, because the feather was in the back.

One of the earliest lessons that we learned in geography was that the feather must always be in the front.

The Eugenie hat was supposed to flop over one eye. Instead it flopped all over the States.

The woman spurned it, the husbands refused to pay for it, and the bill collectors wouldn't sue.

In the first place, a lawyer could not take one of these deep dish-skimmers into court and prove it was a hat.

Any judge and any jury would look at it in amazement and yell, "Why the feather is in the back, and it surely can't be a hat."

In the second place, which is way past our station already, the Eugenie picnic plate hid the right eye of the wearer and made the owner look like the peep-hole inspector of a New York speakeasy.

So there, my frail but beautiful constituents, is the reason the Eugenie discuss was destined for a very short stay in this vale of window-shopping and long-term loans.

It was not practicable; it was not beautiful, and the feather was in the back.

Remember that slogan during the next presidential campaign, when Hoover, Smith, Borah, Roosevelt, or "bill murray" proclaim prosperity, peace and surcease for installments throughout the land, get up and ask, "Is the Feather in the Back?"

That will stop them dead in a skinned fox. They won't be able to answer because logic conquers all.

Marie Eugenie was born during a terrific earthquake at Genada on the 5th of May, 1826. Her mother was a daughter of William Kirkpatrick, United States consul at Malaga, a Scotsman by birth and an American by nationality.

Her childhood was spent in Madrid, but after 1834 she lived with her mother and sister, chiefly in Paris, where she was educated, like so many French girls of good family, in convent of Sacre Coeur.

On leaving the convent, she traveled continually. She became practical, well-informed, worldly-wise, proud and wilful. After being disappointed in love by the Duke of Alba, she often galloped through the streets of Madrid smoking a cigarette or even a cigar. She frequented the theatre and bull-fights, flirted with the toreadors and presented them with red caps embroidered in gold. Queen Isabella of Spain dismissed Eugenie and her mother from the Spanish court for their unconventional conduct and Eugenie entered a convent. But a priest dissuaded her from this course and a Gypsy foretold that she would soon grace a throne.

At a review of the French troops at the camp of Satory she met Napoleon III. She attended the review on horseback and the Prince President at once noticed this beautiful "Amazon" who was so full of proud grace. From that day, having learned about her family, he tried hard to meet her. Eventually, he did so through Princess Mathilde, who in speaking of her said: "She is a newcomer—an Andalusian woman."

The Countess de Montijo and her daughter were invited to a ball at the Elysee. Napoleon entertained Eugenie a long time. She was amiable and coquettish and he was captivated by her beauty. She had a charming profile, fair hair with a reddish tinge, blue eyes, and shoulders that were wide and wondrously white. She rode daintily and very gracefully ASTRIDE, scorning the conventional side saddle. Like all creoles, she possessed charm and spontaneity.

On December 2nd, the empire was proclaimed and during a series of fetes at Compeigne, which lasted 11 days, the Emperor became more and more fascinated with Eugenie.

At a ball given in the Tuileries on New Year's eve, the emperor said to her: "Je vous v'engagerai" and within three days he made a formal proposal of marriage. In a speech from the throne, on the 22nd of January, he formally announced his engagement and justified what some people considered a mesalliance.

Of her whom he had chosen he ventured to make a prediction: "Endowed with all the qualities of the soul, she will be the ornament of the throne and in the day of danger she will become one of its courageous supports."

The marriage was celebrated with great pomp at Notre Dame on the 30th of January, 1853. From this date until 1870 she was Empress of France.

The Empress acted three times as regent during the absence of the Emperor—1859, 1865, 1870—when the Emperor vacilla too between two lines of policy—she generally urged on him the holder course.

When he wished to turn back from Sedan, seeing the disaster awaiting the French army, she commanded him to continue the advance which resulted in his defeat and capture of the Prussian army. She depicted everything tending to diminish the temporal power of the papacy and she disapproved of the emperor's liberal policy at the close of his reign.

It was during the reign of Napoleon III that France obtained many of her colonies—Tunis, Algeria, Morocco, and part of Indo-China.

Eugenie had often boasted that she would never leave the Tuileries in a cab, as Charles X and Louis had done, but she was forced to follow their example when the Prussians marched upon Paris and the French populace rose against her revolution. An American dentist, Dr. Evans (not the one now head of the Ku Klux) helped her to reach England in 1870.

She took a house at Chislehurst and was joined by the Emperor and Prince Imperial. She treated her son very harshly in London, allowing him only twenty pounds (or about $200) a month, when she paid 100,000 francs for a single gown. She became "petite Bourgeoise" and made strenuous efforts to regain possession of every sou of hers that still remained in France. She became a shrewd business woman and accumulated considerable property, acquiring a fine estate at Farnborough, where she built a chapel, pompously called St. Michael's Abbey.

Napoleon III died in January, 1873.

The Prince Imperial, tiring of Eugenie's restrictions, left England to take part in the Zulu war. In 1879 while engaged in combat with natives, he was captured and put to death.

Being left alone in the world, Eugenie traveled extensively and visited the principal courts of Europe. She took a lively interest in world events and during the World War she established a sanatorium for the wounded soldiers at her residence, Farnborough Hill. She died in Madrid, Spain, on July 12, 1920, at the age of 94.

Eugenie was as capricious as a child during her court life and often indulged in horseplay. On one occasion she picked up her skirts and slipped down a smooth slope. She called to her ladies to follow and they all collapsed in a huddle, looking very unlike their usual, dignified selves.

Upon another occasion, she was walking in the gardens with the emperor. He bent to examine a plant and she pushed him over, laughing heartily at his comic predicament.

Once at Fontainebleau she attended a village dance in disguise with one of the ladies. The emperor arrived in time to see a workman kissing his wife and a lively fight ensued in which wigs and artificial beards were pulled from the chins of court dignitaries.

Such was the life of the famous empress whose life star rose in such a whirl of splendor and set in such scenes of sorrow. She will be remembered forever for her three famous titles—Empress of France, Queen of Beauty, and Dictator of Fashion.

MITCHELL COUNTY FARM NOTES

"I have had my land terraced several years and the terraces have been worth at least $2000 to me," R. D. LeFevre stated while visiting the Fair last week.

W. A. Hallman of North Champion has all of his fruit farm terraced and now he is terracing his pasture land to hold the water on it.

Roy Buchanan and Miss Ruby McGil report that they will plant cherry trees and grapes this fall.

Black Tartarian sweet cherries are recommended for this section. Only one or two nurseries in the country have this variety. The address can be obtained from the county agent.

E. B. Hale is treating his seed wheat with copper carbonate to prevent smut. The treatment costs from 6 to 8 cents per bushel.

"I've got to have some more terraces on another farm of mine," says J. H. Everts of Cuthbert. The demonstration will be held in about two weeks.

M. C. Ratliff is planning to use a hotbed in growing onion plants.

L. H. Murphy built a self-feeder for his hogs last week and started them on shelled corn and a mixture of cottonseed meal and tankage.

The chief Halloween event in Colorado 24 years ago, according to The Record for Friday, November 8, 1907, was a Halloween party given at the skating rink by the Kindergarten and Hesperian clubs on Monday night.

The first booth in the rink was that of Mother Goose, with Miss Viola Henry (now dead) as Mother Goose. Mrs. Doss (The Record does not state which one) and Mrs. Griswold sold candy. Mrs. Waldo was in charge of the well where young people could behold their future "fates," and Mrs. Mosher and Mrs. McKenzie managed the "optical illusion."

The Record contained the following local items:

"Joe Smoot and Walter Whipkey who are attending A. & M. College write that they are well pleased. The school is very crowded. At the opening of the college eager students thronged the corridors begging to be admitted. When 600 had been received into college, President Harrington called a halt. The boys persuaded a professor to let them live in an unoccupied servant's house. Four sleep in an attic. Seventy-two are occupying tents.

"Colorado theater goers will be glad to learn that the Olympia Opera company, headed by that clever little comedian, is going to pay us a visit.

"On Saturday night in South Colorado, death relieved from suffering

Dickens and other points in his trade territory. Judge C. H. Earnest is absent this week, up at Lubbock looking after court matters. C. S. Knott spent part of last week in Dawson county, which he reports settling up rapidly.

"Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Pickens came home last week from the Shreveport, Louisiana, Fair, and a visit to relatives. Rev. Thomas came in the last of the week after a few weeks' visit on his ranch in Sterling county. Since our last issue the following have returned home from the fair: A. B. Robertson and family, Judge Looney and daughters, Mrs. H. B. Smoot, Mrs. C. M. Adams, Judge and Mrs. Ed J. Hamner, Brooks Bell, F. E. McKenzie, Ben Plaster, Miss Bessie McMurry, and Tom Saunders.

"J. A. Buchanan, who was called to Vaughan, in Hill county, on account of the serious illness of his father, returned home Saturday night.

"John Hubbard, after a severe spell of fever in Paris, has returned to the big store in Colorado. He and his brother, Will, are busy this week opening up a new store in Sweetwater.

"Mrs. A. S. Mason of Leander, Texas, is here this week visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. E. Lasseter. Mrs. S. F. Atkins of Georgetown is here this week enjoying a visit with her sisters, Mesdames L. E. Lasseter and S. D. Vaughan.

"Homer Woodard returned on Monday night from a two weeks' visit in Washington, Iowa. The Record heard two men discussing the financial situation last Sunday, and both averred that things had reached a pretty pass when a man with money in the bank could not draw it out to pay his honest debts. The fact that both of them put together and multiplied by ten never had fifty cents in a bank or any other safe place made no difference in their point of view.

"Miss Ethel Majors returned on Monday night from Dallas and Fort Worth. C. A. O'Keefe of Fort Worth was here Wednesday.

"Invitations which read: 'I have seen 11 Halloweens and want you to come on Thursday and help to scare the witches away from 4 to 7' were sent out by Vance Phenix last week, and 40 little friends responded. The Atheneum Literary Society met Thursday with Mable Dodson. Those on the program included Josie Mae Griswold, Breedlove Smith, Anthony Van Tuyl, and Bruce Phenix.

"The Card Club met Thursday with Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Ellis entertaining. Mrs. Brennan won the royal prize, and Mrs. Oederbolz the lone hand prize. Next Tuesday evening the club will have its first open meeting at Mrs. Bertner's.

"C. W. Simpson is a delegate from the M. E. Church here to the Northwest Texas Conference at Amarillo.

"Rev. Holmes Nichols left Sunday night as a messenger from his church here to the State Baptist convention. He will be joined by his wife, who has been visiting in Hillsboro, and she will accompany him to San Antonio.

"Considerable complaint is heard about the public road between here and Westbrook. It is almost as bad as the mud-hole down by the Colorado National Bank. This piece of road should be worked so Colorado can hold that part of the country trade."

Dumas.—One-third reduction has been made on gas rate here.

Alpine.—Construction being rushed on city's new 300,000 gallon reservoir.

Lubbock.—Highway 9 being paved from this city to Lynn county.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

A fellow I know, who was a captain in the late war, got on a street car the other day in a part of Greater New York unfamiliar to him, to receive a warm greeting from the conductor. "Don't you remember me?" said the latter. "I was in your outfit."

After talking to him for a moment, the former officer did remember him. He was a man he had demoted to a private because he was no good as a corporal. But he was glad to see him and glad the man remembered him kindly. He proffered his nickel.

"Oh, no, captain!" exclaimed the conductor, with a royal gesture of generosity. "I couldn't take money from you."

There didn't seem to be any way gracefully to refuse such a striking courtesy, but the former officer hopes there was no inspector on the car.

There is a middle-aged man of Manhattan whose business is making maps. Every time some adventurer finds an unknown jungle village, or a new river, mountain, valley or plain, this man makes little dots or lines on his maps, and does a bit of lettering in spaces which have been blank since map-making commenced. Sometimes he is the first, aside from the explorers, to know what lies beyond the mountains, across the rivers. As he puts in his dots and his letters his imagination must show him wild woods and hills, great stretches of ice, sunbaked valleys, queer birds and beasts. Vicariously, he is the greatest adventurer of them all.

He had been working hard, so they gave him a vacation, a whole month to spend as he liked, so where he wished. The first thing he did was to head for a boat. It happened to be a ferryboat. He journeyed to New Jersey and spent his vacation in Newark.

There are always discouraged persons in any large city who pick the lock of the gates of night before the dark angel is ready to open them. If they waited one more day, most of them probably wouldn't do it. But there was a peculiar suicide in New York not long ago concerning which I didn't see much in the papers.

A man who had lost considerable money in the crash, but who still had earning power and apparently no more immediate troubles than the average, laid a velvet portiere on the floor in the kitchen of his bachelor apartment, and laid himself on the portiere, after shutting the windows and turning on the gas. But the peculiar thing was that they found scattered about him, like fresh green leaves, 1,500 new one-dollar bills.

Charles Chaplin and Maurice Chevalier were at Juan les Pins this summer. One naturally would expect the children to go crazy over Chaplin, but they tell me that Chevalier was their beau ideal. One day a small girl went in great excitement to her mother.

"I talked with Mr. Chevalier," she said.

"Yes," said her mother. "What did you talk about?"

"Well," answered the daughter, "he said, 'Look out! I am going to die.'"

Martin Johnson finally has disposed of all the gorillas, chimps and native boys he brought back from Africa. The native boys went Harlem on him and he shipped them home. Some of the chimps and gorillas went. I am told, to San Diego. This gives Mr. Johnson a bit more room in his apartment, as one or two of the gorillas were his guests. They were not a bit more trouble than a couple of lions.

Lost Longhorn Herd Enriches Texas Man

San Antonio, Texas.—Remains of a lost herd of longhorn cattle, famous in the history of the Texas range, have been found by L. D. Bertillon of Mincola, Texas, and their horns have made him rich.

In 1812 Jacob Don Loner's entire herd of several thousand longhorns stampeded in a storm near Terlingua creek. They were never found. That is, not until Bertillon trailed a nearby canyon to a cave opening and found a great heap of bones and horns. Bertillon has since sold more than $50,000 worth of horns, and is now negotiating for a sale to the prince of Wales.

SEVEN WELLS SCHOOL NEWS

By LULA MAE BASSHAM

Floyd, Eula and Jack Wallace and H. W. Evans are new pupils in school this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheshire of Abilene visited the Webbs last Sunday. They spent the greater part of the day stuck in the Colorado river, reaching Mr. Webbs' about supper.

The children report two-thirds of the cotton out of the fields in the Seven Wells community.

Ed Roach and family visited Mrs. Roach's parents, the Burkes, at Looney, Sunday.

The best original story written in English this week:

A lone woman and two little children lived in the far West, three miles from anyone. One cold winter night as they sat in comfort by a warm fire, they heard and saw the door-knob turn round and round.

The mother's hands trembled as she pointed a gun at the keyhole. She did not fire it. She would be more afraid of a dead enemy than a live one. The little family crouched close together, faces white, hardly daring to breathe as they waited for the door to be crashed in. Not another sound was heard. After what seemed a long time, they noiselessly put out the light and crept into bed. They lay tense, listening. By and by nerves relaxed and they slept.

In the morning no sign of anything was to be found on the porch, nor tracks in the yard to indicate a night prowler.

The mystery remained unsolved for a week, then on Saturday, as Joe was playing in the front yard, he shouted: "Mother, Mary, run here quick!" There, with his body curled tightly about the door-knob was Mary's pet kitten, turning back and forth. Unable to knock, the gentleman cat was only trying to enter his own house as any cat has a right to do.

LAST BUFFALO KNOWN IN THIS PART OF THE WEST ARE BUTCHERED

The last remaining three head of buffalo known to exist in this part of West Texas were killed Sunday and their carcasses shipped to a San Angelo packing concern. The animals were owned by P. W. Howe rancher of Mertzon.

The animals had been kept on the Howe ranch for many years. One by one the former herd owned by this pioneer West Texas cattlemar have been slaughtered. The herd bull, aged by many years, was killed last year when he became unmanageable.

The buffalo were direct cause of some of the pioneer citizens of the immediate section coming to West Texas. Among them might be mentioned John L. Doss, Colorado drug gist, and the late W. T. Baze, who died recently at his home in Snyder.

C. H. S. WELCOMES NEW FOOTBALL STAR
 The future of all football boys is endangered by the arrival of the greatest quarterback in history, according to Mr. C. A. Wilkins. This unknown star is C. A. Wilkins, Jr., born October 30, and weighing nine pounds. The young man is so interested in football, he practices signals every hour in the night.

Assembly periods promise to be interesting if they follow the order of Monday's program. The self-appointed coach, Mr. Wilkins, gave an enthusiastic description and outlined the future of his prodigy. From all indications, it is apparent that this is not the last the student body will hear of C. A., Junior.

THAT LITTLE BOY OF MINE
 (Dedicated to Mr. Wilkins and Junior)
 A tiny turned-up nose,
 Two cheeks just like a rose,
 So sweet from head to toes—
 That little boy of mine.

Two eyes that shine so bright,
 Two arms that hold me tight,
 Two lips that kiss good-night—
 That little boy of mine.

No one will ever know just what his coming has meant,
 Because I love him so, he's something Heaven has sent;
 He's all the world to me;
 He climbs upon my knee,
 To me he'll always be—
 That little boy of mine.

ATTEND SHAKESPEARE PLAY
 Monday afternoon, November 2, eighty-eight pupils of Miss Barrett's junior and senior English classes attended a play presented at Big Spring. The William Thornton Company that is on a tour presenting Shakespearean plays, gave "The Merchant of Venice" at the high school auditorium.

These plays are well known, not only for the ability of their players to portray Shakespeare's characters, but because of their gorgeous costumes and scenery which adds a distinctive note throughout the play.

ASSEMBLY PROGRAM
 Minister J. D. Harvey of Church of Christ spoke to the student body Wednesday on "Transformation."

Many worth-while examples were brought to mind, which showed how transformation was divided into three classes—physical, mental and moral. The life of Edison was given as an example of extreme mental transformation.

In applying his idea to the students, Mr. Harvey explained how all three classes of transformation could take place, and leave instead of an unusable article, one worth while and usable in every phase.

Tuesday, October 27, Mr. Coffman was in charge of the assembly. His program was very unusual and the student body was agreeably surprised when he announced that Station WFAA at Dallas had consented to give a program especially for the Colorado High school.

At 7:30 o'clock the program began, and several band marches, "A Trip Through Movieland," and Professor Zilch were presented. The entertainment lasted for half an hour; in fact, until the performers marched into the auditorium—the Colorado High School band which had broadcasted the clever program from an adjoining room.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB
 The Vocational Home Economics club met Tuesday evening and enjoyed a talk given by Dr. C. L. Root. The girls learned many simple facts of hygiene that they did not know. After the talk the girls ate popcorn balls, which were prepared by the refreshment committee.

The club appreciates having any visitor help with programs, which are held at the club meetings every first and third Tuesday evenings at 7 o'clock.

FAILURES
 I wonder what some students would answer if they were asked why they were attending school. From the number of failing grades made this term, it is apparent that whatever their purposes may be, several are not accomplishing them. It is probable that these failing students and those just "getting by" have no set goal in school and go only because they are forced to do so. Surely no person who realizes that education is, in a way, life itself, would willingly admit that he is a failure. As the work in high school is planned for persons of normal intelligence, no failures are excusable except when a person is mentally deficient. As students of this class are provided for elsewhere, we may assume that there are three principal reasons for failure: (1) Lack of purpose; (2) lack of study; (3) lack of thought.

Young people in school have the notion pounded into them that the worthwhile part of their work is a preparation for the future. Yet they feel the irresistible urge to have present enjoyments. The "preparation" they look upon as something commendable, but stale and dull and uninviting. Such a view of life is not likely to promote effective study, to encourage the building of worthy character, or to lead to the highest forms of pleasure. How can one who looks upon the securing of an education as drudgery, and has for his only purpose that of making 70 on his courses be anything but a failure?

This type of student generally considers he has studied his lesson when he has read the assignment. He thinks it is merely a job for his eyes. He seldom concentrates on what he is reading, does not understand what he reads so hurriedly and naturally the printed matter makes an everlasting impression on his mind. And yet, he pretends to him self and others that he has studied. In this same category comes the procrastinating student. He occupies himself in some way in the afternoon and thinks he will study that night. Night comes and offers some diversion. The student fook himself into believing that he can prepare all his lessons on the morrow. Tomorrow comes, and a rapid glance at each book is his preparation for the day's work. Failing daily grades results, which are the foundation for complete failure.

Lack of thought is responsible for the majority of failures. Very few deep thinking students are to be found in high school. The majority of students accept facts without question, memorize without reasoning things out for themselves. It is not strange then, on examination, that so many students make failing grades.

Marksmen Stand Ready.
 At the top is a steel fortress surrounding the entrance, with holes for shooting, behind which expert marksmen stand. At the bottom various locked doors lead along the corridors to the ponderous steel vault door, weighing many tons, which is operated by time locks and machinery.

Behind that are iron gates with three locks, requiring three men to open them. Then the gold store is reached. Steel cells, partitioned off by steel mesh, contain shelves on which the bars of gold are stacked in ordered and numbered piles, as much as $10,000 worth of gold in each bar. Some are in bricks, and some in the conventional metal pigs and ingots, like so much iron. But the bars are smooth and deeply yellow.

In other corridors, American gold coins and English sovereigns, worth millions on millions, are stacked on similar shelves in canvas sacks, not waiting so much to be put into circulation as to remain there, like the bar gold, as guarantee for the American paper bills that are issued against them.

West Virginia Students Pay Tuition With Food
 Fairboursville, W. Va.—Appetites were whetted in the registration office of the Morris Harvey college here as new students registered and "paid" their tuition fees.

Payments in produce and farm products were acceptable, President Leonard Riggelman announced. And one student turned in the following:
 One two-year-old beef steer, dressed and ready for cooking.
 Thirty bushels of Grimes golden apples.
 Five bushels of potatoes.

Other contributions included canned fruits, hogs, hams, onions, cucumbers, and, lastly, maple sirup, which drew an involuntary wish from President Riggelman that some thoughtful student would present "buckwheat cakes for his tuition."

Washington Farmers Report Monstrosities
 South Bend, Wash.—Potatoes that grow up on vines like tomatoes, and five-in-one ears of corn were this section's contribution to 1931 agricultural monstrosities. The "aerial potatoes" appeared in the garden of R. L. Robertson. Four vines in his patch developed fully formed potatoes mere than a foot up the vines. The five sectioned ear of corn was grown by C. W. Van Tuyl. It had the shape of a pyramid, with four small ears growing symmetrically about the main ear.

Lincoln Family Frow Presented to Museum
 Peru, Ind.—A frow, a device used decades ago in making clapboards, which was once owned by Thomas Lincoln, father of President Lincoln, has been presented to the Miami County Historical society museum here by F. W. Troutman.

Thomas Lincoln used the frow when he erected a log cabin in Coles county, Illinois, where he died in 1851. John King, a neighbor, borrowed the frow and neglected to return it. He gave it to his son, who, in turn, gave it to Troutman.

U. S. GOLD SUPPLY CAREFULLY GUARDED

Treasure Caves 80 Feet Below Street Level.

New York.—The steady flow of gold into the United States continues, adding more millions to the more than $5,000,000,000 in hard metal which the vaults of the country already hold.

Recently the United States held $5,015,000,000 in gold, 42 per cent of the supply of the world. With a similar movement going to France, the two countries hold 65 per cent of the world's supply.

This vast supply of the yellow metal is stacked in vaults in various parts of the country, but chiefly in New York and Washington. About half the supply is in New York. The remainder is distributed in federal reserve vaults and such places as the Denver mint.

This gold is guarded in the storehouses of the nation.

Eighty Feet Below Surface.

Eighty feet below the sidewalks, in the massive steel and concrete vaults of the New York Federal Reserve bank, about half billion dollars in bars, ingots, and coin is stacked in great piles, awaiting the time when it may be called on as a part of the nation's reserve.

The gold presents a fascinating sight, stacked in symmetrical piles on steel shelves. To steal it would be impossible. The safeguards comprise steel and concrete walls eight feet thick, massive doors, complicated locks and electrical devices, the secret of opening which is possessed by no one man, but several. They are devised so that in event of an uprising or a revolution, they could not be rushed.

The treasure is in the bottom vaults on the deep foundations of the building. No staircases lead to them. The only ingress is by elevator and the elevators are not controlled by the operator, but from a central control room which lets the elevator down or up only on official command. The controls could be put out of commission and there would be no entering or leaving.

Nebraska Man Makes Claim to First Plane
 Havelock, Neb.—Thirty-four years ago, G. A. Hughes drew the plans for a flying machine. In 1902 he completed a model plane and sent it into the sky.

Hughes challenges any airplane manufacturer today to show any item of major consequence that has been developed in airplane construction which does not hinge on some of his plans.

In bolstering his claim that he was the original inventor of a plane to navigate the air, Hughes points out that he built 62 model planes. Finances handicapped him, he says, from carrying his project through.

He applied for a patent on his queer looking machine—a boxlike contraption with a wing spread of 9 feet—in 1890, several years before men actually flew. Hughes demonstrated his plane at a fair in Hway, Colo., in 1898. His model flew successfully.

Corporations Turning to Air Transportation
 Chicago.—Need for air travel by executives and business men is increasing. Sixty per cent of 784 corporations capitalized at $100,000 or more have executives and representatives using airplanes regularly, shows a compilation of United Air Lines.

Executives of 731 corporations in cities on its transcontinental, Middle West, intermountain and Pacific coast routes reported:

Four hundred and seventy-seven now have executives and representatives traveling by air and 201 have not and an average of four men in each firm use planes on company business.

Of 784 reporting firms, 378 reported need for air travel is increasing.

Animals Better Dental Patients Than Humans
 Kansas City, Mo.—Tex Clark, superintendent of the Kansas City zoo, finds that a tiger, lion, or polar bear makes a better dental patient than a human being.

While Clark admits he has never seen a dentist, he knowingly refers to the walls emanating from dental offices. When he filled a tooth for Ignatz, the polar bear, that worthy didn't even snarl.

"I filled a large tooth for Sultan, the tiger, not long ago," Clark said, "and he was very quiet all the time. When I had finished, he gave me an appreciative look. But the next minute he'd have devoured me."

U. S. Jewelry Bill Half Billion in '29
 New York.—The United States spent $336,949,531 for jewelry in 1929, or $437 per capita, according to the official figures of the bureau of census.

New York leads in per capita sales with $9.60, Washington next with $9.58, and California third with $8.38.

There are 20,995 jewelry stores in the country, of which 2,550 are in New York, while Pennsylvania has 1,755 stores and California 1,408.

MAIL ORDER QUACK STILL FLOURISHES

Post Office Department Reports Fakers Busy.

Washington.—The elixir of life, the chemist's secret potion, the magic ring and the miracle-working necklace still are popular with the American people.

During the last few months the Post Office department, after investigating advertisements, has put the vendors of many of these wonder-workers out of business, so far as using the mails is concerned, by issuing fraud orders. But the mail order doctor, boundless in his claims, is still functioning, the department believes.

The usual procedure is for a post-office inspector to answer an advertisement, giving the symptoms of some chronic or incurable disease, or some remedy that never existed. When the disease is received it is submitted to the proper government laboratory for analysis and tests.

Then comes the fraud order. But the business goes on in other channels and its profits are evidenced by large sums spent in advertising.

The inspectors find most of the claims ridiculous. A southern "professor" was selling two ordinary pieces of zinc which he said had electrical qualities to cure hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, heart trouble and most any other malady of man or beast.

Another had a sure-fire remedy for tuberculosis, warned against exposing one's self to fresh air and guaranteed a cure within ten days. Powdered leaves of wood garlic to be taken "during a full moon," a necklace to cure cancer and even sugar pills and plain drinking water, to be taken a spoonful at a time, all have been found recently to have a continuing popular sale value in America.
