ACROSS THE CATTLE GUARD

by LEO W. WHITE
County Agent

For two or three years I have been trying to convince some of the irrigated farmers of the advantages of growing irrigated pastures. The main grasses that I was bragging about were Coastal Bermudagrass and Midland Bermudagrass. We learned this year that Coastal will not stand as much cold weather as Midland because some of the trial plots died back during the past winter.

About three weeks ago there was an article in the Lubbock paper about Mr. W. B. Price of Lubbock who had some Midland Bermuda that furnished grazing for an almost unbelievable amount of cattle. This article did more good than all of my harping and several farmers came in and asked where they could get a start of this grass. Garland Swann is the only one that has made a deal so far. He ordered 20 bushels of sprigs from the Robson Ranch at Catoosa, Oklahoma. They shipped the sprigs by truck in two different shipments. The first 10 bushels came on May 21st and Garland got them set out the next day. A week later he received the remainder of the sprigs and this time they sent 13 bushels instead of 10. He got all but one bushel set out that following day and finished up early Saturday morning. The 23 bushels covered almost five acres. The sprigs cost $2.50 a bushel plus the hauling cost. They were set out with hand labor and we have estimated the per acre cost of seed and hand planting to be about $18.00.

The grass was planted on land where a silage crop was already growing. The hybrid forage sorghum was about two inches high and very little of it was destroyed when the grass was set out. He will be able to harvest a silage crop from the land while the grass is getting established. Next year he can dig sprigs from this land and it should produce enough to set out 50 or 60 acres if he wanted to plant that much. Most people would not want that much Midland Bermudagrass if it will carry as many cattle as Mr. Price over at Lubbock put on his. He had ten cows to the acre during the growing season and the grass still had to be mowed twice because it got too tall. The average farmer could not afford to buy livestock for very many acres.

We were surprised to learn the Robson Ranch in Oklahoma had already finished sprigging their grass by the time we contacted them early in May. They dug all of their sprigs in early April but they were kind enough to dig some more in order for Garland to get a start. Mr. Robson assured him that he was not getting his top quality sprigs because it was so late that many runners had developed and each bushel of material had more runners and less roots than he usually sold. The earlier digging will handicap us to some extent if we try to plant the grass in a crop of grain sorghum or forage sorghum. We need to wait until May in order to have a crop growing on the land. The existing crop would have the benefit of all the starter fertilizer that was applied to get the crop set. After the nursery is established it would probably be better to set the sprigs very thick on clean land and try to get some grazing during the first year. If very many is to be set out it would be better to use some kind of machinery and do away with the hand labor as much as possible.

Mr. L. O. Smith has what seems to be a good idea for setting it out. He plans to drag a two-row knife sled behind his tractor with two men riding backwards on the back of the sled. The sled would be equipped with a set of disks that would throw the dirt in on each row. The two men would have a wash tub filled with sprigs sitting in between them and as the rig moved along they would set the sprigs just ahead of the disks and hold them until they were covered with only the tip of the sprig left above the ground. He knows this rig will work because that is the way he used to set out common Bermudagrass down where he grew up.

Garland says that some of his sprigs have started coming through even if they were completely covered up. Within the next two weeks we will be able to tell what kind of livability he got from the Oklahoma sprigs.

THIS MEASURE

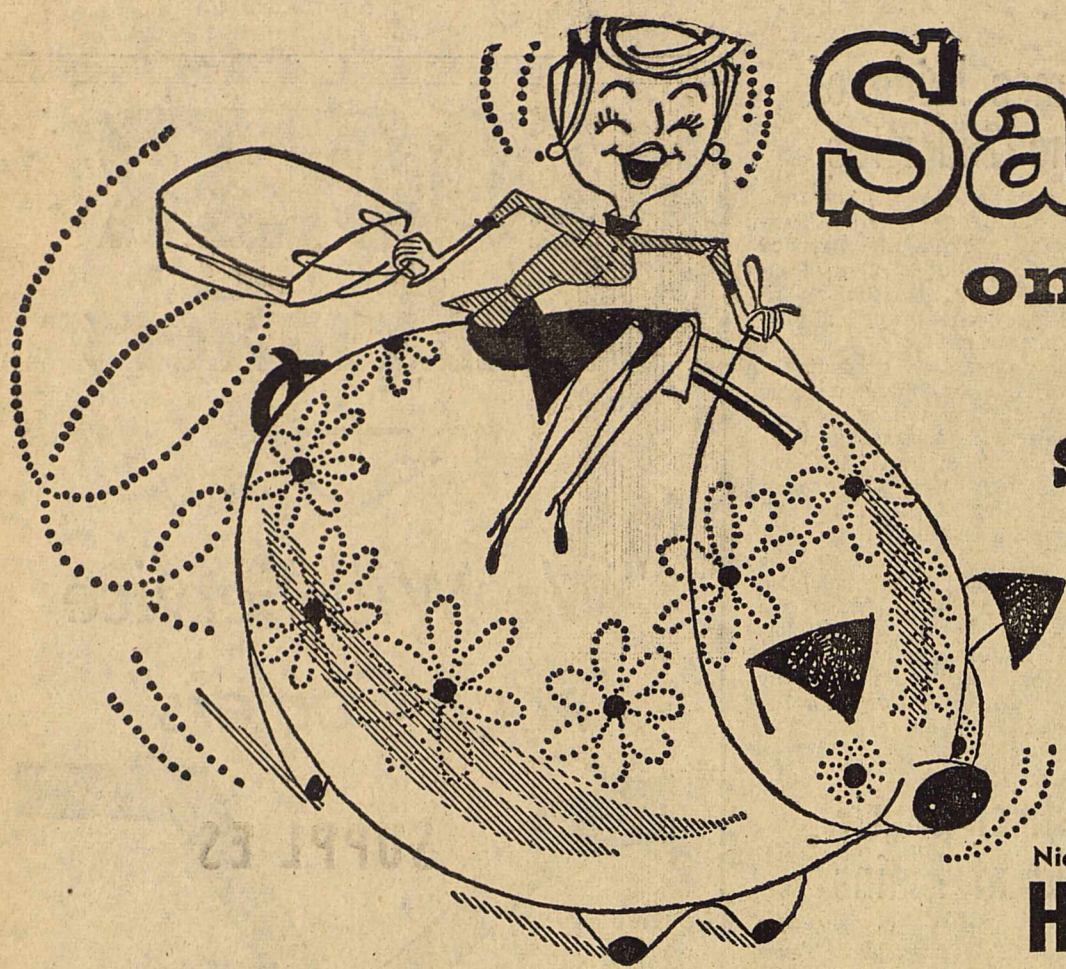

Here is my watch. If it is to be of value to me, it has to be a watch I can count on. When I look at its face, I must know beyond doubt, that it can be trusted. If I have to be forever checking it, it is of little use to me, and certainly it is not fulfilling the purpose for which it was created. Life too, is that way!

If a man is to be of value, he must be the kind of person that can be counted on. His face must radiate dependability. If those who live about you have to be forever checking on you... you are not fulfilling the purpose for which God created you. Now, Paul said, "those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do; and the God of peace shall be with you."

Help us to attend church worship every week and to draw near to Thee. May we gather in thoughts that stray and control feelings that may be troublesome. For sin give repentance, for sorrow give trust, for strife of passion and care grant rest. Through this timepiece illustration, may we be led to bring our lives to Thee, that we may test and measure them by thine unerring law.
