MOORE or Less

By Johnnie Moore

I heard a pretty good one the other day. Seems some Greek immigrants had come to this country to make it their new home. They all were very excited to attend their first football game.

After several minutes of play had taken place on the field one of the immigrants turned to his Greek friend and asked what in the world was supposed to be going on. The Greek replied, "I don't know. It's all American

In the 16 months during which I have been editor of this sheet, I have been approached many times, the first time, just two days after I was installed as editor, about a particular situation in this county which, evidently, a great many people are interested. Two different individuals have approached me within the last few months saying,

"We've got the goods that'll blow the lid right off this situation." So far, I've not seen such information.

The situation can best be described in the way that it has continually been put to "What in the world is happening to all the money that is being paid into the County's till by the taxpayers of Yoakum County?".

My answer, which never seems to satisfy this kind of querry has always been that evidently it is being spent.

It seems that we quite often are prone to want to accuse people in public office, sometimes with reason and many times without just cause, of having their hands in the public pocket.

I am of the opinion that such thinking, just or unjust, needs to be answered by the people concerned.

I have quite recently done some checking in another South Plains County for the purpose of comparing their financial picture with the one in Yoakum County.
The county, the name of which I won't mention, is not endowed with any mineral wealth as we are in Yoakum, consequently, their taxable valuation is much smaller than is the local one. In that county the valuation is set at just below $14,000,000.00, while Yoakum County's is set at $58,500,000.00. This is quite a large gap.

In keeping, of course, the annual budget of county expenses is much lower there than it is here with more valuation, and an identical tax rate.

The budget in our nameless county for 1963 is set at just under $400,000.00. Yoakum county's budget is almost, I am told, $1,200,000.00.

The other county has practically no bonded indebtedness on which sums must be paid each year, whereas Yoakum County will spend just under $300,000.00 this year on the bonded indebtedness of this

Even though this is the case many say, this still leaves a total difference in the two budgets of about a half a million dollars, more difference than the total of the other budget in its entirety. What about that kind of difference, many have asked me when I pointed out the above facts. I, personally, do not be-lieve in mud slinging tactics, or in groundless accusations. I also would like to go on record as saying that I most certainly believe we have as fine and conscientious a group of public officials as can be found anywhere. But the question still persists, "Why does it cost us over double what it costs another, comparable county, to run our county?" Many times the very people who gripe the most about high taxes and the like are as much to blame as anyone. For instance, I wonder how many free loads of dirt are included in that mighty big budget for next year. Let's all, everyone of us, stop and think for just a minute. There is no free dirt, or caleche, or blading of private roads, or any of the free seromy they ask for.

vices that we seem to expect. Gasoline, upkeep on trucks and equipment, men's salar-ies; all these things cost dollars, tax dollars.

Our nameless county that we've been referring to, yes, they charge regular rates for such services.

I've gotten free dirt and services too, but I am certainly for a brand new policy of letting those who get the services pay for them, instead of tax-ing everyone in the county for them.

Let's take a little of the saving and apply it to that long - standing overdraft the county has been laboring under of over $169,000.00.

I have had on several oc-assions, had the program the county is operating under, described as an "Austerity program," By dictionary definition, austerity means severely simple, or, in other words, the county has been, by officials, described to be spending money only where it is absolutely necessary.

I am of the opinion that if a real program of this kind were to be initiated, many of the fine public buildings and such that we are fortunate enough to have could have been obtained without plungi ing the county further in debt.

Is this the kind of thing we actually want in Yoakum? If it is, tell your officials about They're not crooks or are they seeking to be dictators. People, by-in-large, get the kind of government and the kind of governmental econ-

NO ONE in our family was ever able to forget Mr. Benham, a timber buyer for an eastern lumber company, who stopped for a week at our northern Idaho homestead in the fall of 1901. We always remembered him as the bearer of the first news of the assassination of President McKinley and as the most learned and implacable atheist we had ever known.

Mr. Benham could recite with persuave dignity the main arguments of Robert G. Ingersoll. He frankly stated that he had most of his money and practically is years proving his position as an . Irrevocably fixed was his position that there was no Supreme Being. There was no afterlife, and no Heaven. There as no spiritual penalty for earthly sin and likewise no spiritual reward for earthly integrity and character.

Time diminishes unpleasant memories, and Mr. Benham's visit, while never forgotten, became a legend rather than a disagreeable event. Twenty-one years later this writer addressed a business convention in St. Paul, Minnesota, Entering the St. Paul hotel, my attention was drawn to a familiar-looking gray-haired gentleman. It was Mr. Benham. He remembered me instantly although it had been more than a generation since he was our homestead blood which was incurable and that he had less than a year to live. He then launched into an unforgettable story about an old lady who lay at death's door in a local hospital. Mr. Benham had visited the institution to get a check-up on his own hopeless physical condition. While there the woman sent her nurse to get three witnesses to a death-bed will which she could not sign due to a paralyzed arm. Mr. Benham entered the lady's ward and got the surprise of his life. There was no question about her serious condition. It was evident that she could live but a few hours. What struck my atheistic friend was the utter serenity of this woman who had been bedridden for several years and was now facing the end with a smiling countenance.

The nurse rapidly wrote the whispered instructions of the stricken woman for the disposal of her property. When the three gentlemen had signed the paper, the lady smiled, thanked them and said, "And now I am ready to leave this pain-wracked body to meet my Maker, my husband, my fa-ther, my mother and all my friends that have gone before me. Won't that be won-derful!"

As Mr. Benham got to this point, tears started down his pale and wrinkled cheeks. "Look at me," he said in a hoarse whisper,
"I've laid awake many nights since Hearned my days were numbered, staring at the soshing to look forward to except "all my : fe would end in a handful of ashes. That's the difference between me. an atheist, and the lady I have described. She, believing, faces her final days with a smile. Here am 1, a non-believer, with every moment a nightmare, facing nothing but a cold tomb." He hesitated a few moments and then added. "I would shove my hands into a bed of red hot coals if by so doing I could secure a belief in a Supreme Being and an afterlife." Then shuddering he continued. "There is nothing more lost and bewildered than an atheist in his final months. I know because I am Exhibit A.

For two hours the rueful gentleman talked. He sent back his soup, untouched, likewise his filet mignon. He took a few sips of coffee but it was evident that he was vainly trying to reach something vital be-yond his ability to grasp, or his mentality to fathom. He seemed engulfed in a sea of futile angles to a self-made problem which he was unable to solve.

"My father was a confirmed agnostic." he said. "It was the main topic in our home from the day I was old enough to understand. It is very difficult to get away from the deep impressions gained during boy-He thought a moment and said, "Dad left me with a comfortable income for life. It would have been much better for me if he had left me stone broke, but had instilled in my mind the most valuable asset anyone can possess-a well-anchored faith in a Supreme Being and life beyond the grave.

Then with intense sincerity the gentle-man added. I graduated from a great American university. Despite that fact I have built an insurmountable wall between myself and religious faith a wall against Christianity and its Pillar of Strength, Which every believer feels every day of his life and Which insures real contentment in man's final years. If you can imagine a greater failure than I have been, and still am. I wish you would name him.

Forty years of time again intervened, and my final meeting with Mr. Benham had been relegated to events of the past. until the Supreme Court handed down its strange decision in the school prayer case. I have thought a great deal about that decision and my atheistic friend ever since. and I wonder if the Court would have made the same pronouncement if the Justices of that august body could have spent one hour with Mr. Benham.

Opening lead: Five of spades. North wins the opening lead with nine of hearts in the closed hand, takes successive tricks with king and queen of hearts and leads small diamond to the jack on the board. North next sluffs the six of spades on the ace of hearts in dummy; leads small spade to the ace in closed hand and lays down four good diamonds and three good clubs to easily make the contract. COMMENT: North considered opening with three no trump, but was afraid South would pass. How-

Out from the chimney Santa popped,
Aren't you glad that he stopped?

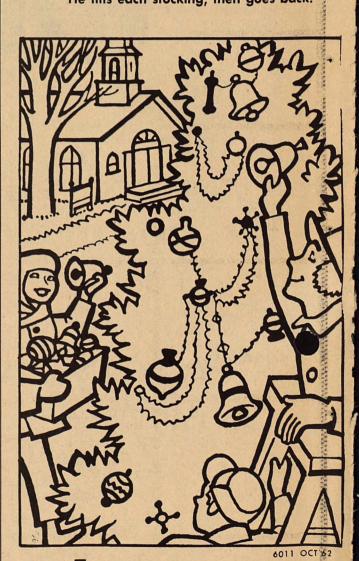

Up go the Christmas bells and holly

To make the house look bright and jolly.

There are gifts for all in Santa's sack,
He fills each stocking, then goes back.

Trimming a tree outdoors is fun,
Everybody sees it when you're done.

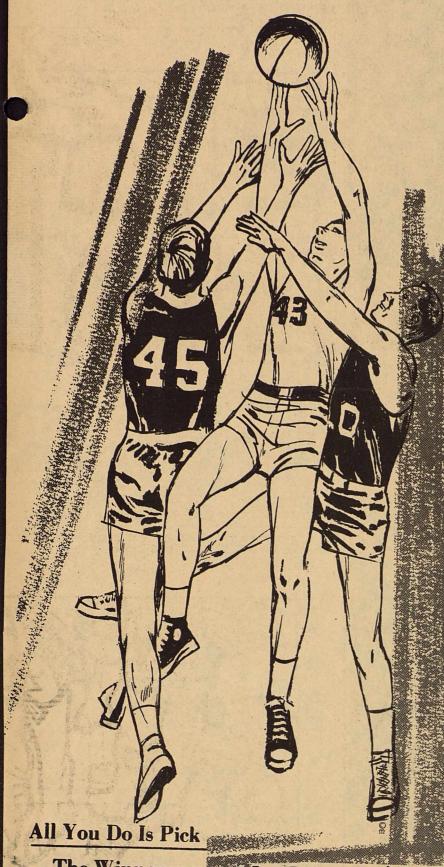

Santa's ready to visit girls and boys,

His elves are helping pack the toys.

Reading stories about Christmas' past Helps to make the Day come fast.

Cattle in Yoakum County were tested for Brucellosis and the entire county will be certified without a retest.

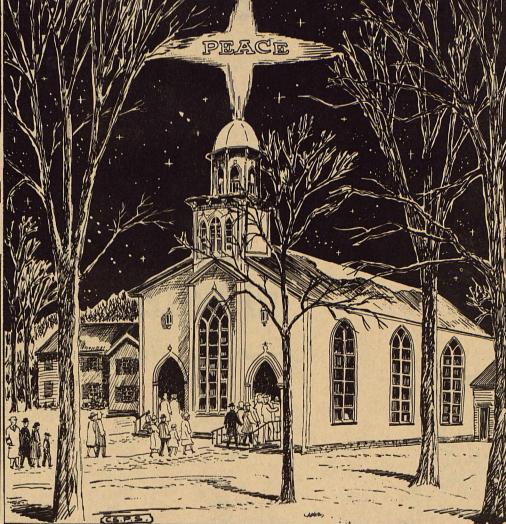

Requirements for certification are that less than one percent of the cattle must test negative and this one percent must be in less than five per-cent of the herds. When testwas completed on Nov. there was 3, 876 head of cattle that were actually test-This figure represented 6, 267 head of grown cattle in the county, in 149 different herds. Only eight reactors were found in five herds. It turned out that only 3.3% of the cattle were infected.

Dr. R. M. Zirkle, Veter-inarian in charge of the testing work, stated that Yoakum County should receive notice from the State Animal Health Commission that this area had been aleclared a Modified Brucellosis Free Area.

County Agent Leo White reports that three or four small herds were not tested while the laboratory was in the county and that an area man will return and test these animals in the next few weeks. Cattle from negative herds can move freely out of the county but cattle must come from a clean area before they can be moved into this county without being tested for Brucellosis. Once the disease is eradicated from the county, it is to the interest of the cattle owner to keep infected animals from enter-

JUST A THOUGHT:

While it may not necessarily always be darkest just before the dawn, our problems are always blackest when we do nothing but close the eyes and hope they will go away.

But though he came as an earthly child of the poor, he has be-come the chief figure in all history, though he never took up the brush he has influenced the world's greatest art, though he never wrote a line he has inspired the world's best literature, though he had not where to lay his head he is the owner of the world's head he is the owner of the universe. And he set a reckoning point in the ages—every event before his coming was reckoned as before his coming and every event there-

So you cannot write a letter, read a paper, or enter into any business transaction, without giving assent in the date to the coming of One into the world whose advent fixed a new and imperishable point on the calendars of mankind.

Let us remember that Christmas is HIS birthday and that all celebration should be in a spirit of thanksgiving and love and conse-cration to the Saviour.
