Spreadsheets: Can They Be Done On Computers?

Encouraging news for business executives ranging from accountants to sales managers is the ease in which spreadsheets can be developed on personal computers.

On computers, spreadsheets, whether they be projected income statements or yearly sales charts, consist of electronic worksheets large grids of entries which can be in the form of words, numbers or formulas.

One program is the IBM Personal Computer Planning Assistant. It is an electronic spreadsheet that gives users a chance to ask, "What if?" Business experts consider this type of electronic worksheet a powerful analyzing and planning tool because of this capability. Moreover, because Planning Assistant calculates for the user, it replaces pen and paper as well as a calculator.

The worksheet itself is a rectangle with an array of intersecting rows and columns. A space one col-

When one number in a spreadsheet is changed, the spreadsheet program automatically updates all the other numbers in a chain-reaction of calculations. This saves users time and effort, and makes electronic spreadsheets superb modeling and planning tools.

Voice Of Business

Richard L. Lesher, President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

Hollywood loves a sequel. Topping today's movie listings are followup films like "First Blood II," the third "Mad Max" adventure and the umpteenth James Bond. Also popular are horror sequels -- expect no rest until there is a "Friday the 13th the 13th."

Given that Washington provides stranger-than-fiction story lines that would put Hollywood to shame, it was only a matter of time before the funhouse on the Potomac got into sequels as well. And who better to make us squirm again that those acknowledged masters of the "horror story" tenre, the folks at the Internal Revenue Service.

I told you earlier about the scare the IRS boys put into law-abiding business people who suddenly discovered they had to scribble down business mileage every time they pulled up to a stop sign. Then came "Jaws of the IRS II," in which the "revenooers" fell months behind on refunds, shredded letters and hid tax returns.

Just as Hollywood is finding it must escalate the blood, gore and special effects with each go-round, the IRS crew had to have beenscratching their heads trying to come up with something to top those spine-chillers. But don't worry - they didn't let us down.

Actually, the latest shocker was hatching for some time. Back in 1982, Congress relaxed some restrictions on "Keogh" plans - essentially personal pension plans for selfemployed individuals - to put them on a "parity" footing with group plans. That's good. What isn't so good is that Congress also required many Keogh plan participants to file the same kind of lengthy reports required of group plans. That's a burden most individuals can't carry off, especially since the information required to fill out the forms is generally not in their possession and the form contains three errors!

But that isn't even the worst of it. What's really bad is that in three years, the IRS hasn't anything to tell individual plan participants about the new filing requirement. Yes, the IRS did a press release on the new form some time back - and it printed a notice in the IRS Bulletin, a publication read mostly by tax lawyers, which was reprinted in the Federal Register. But tell me - do you sit down and read the Federal Register before you sit down and do your taxes? Neither do I - and neither, I would wager, do a pretty fair share of the 663,000 Keogh plan participants who probably do their own taxes.

For many of these taxpayers, the first news they have of this filing requirement was to have been a "Greetings" from the IRS - with a bill enclosed for $25 for each day after August 1 they hadn't filed. Given the IRS's track record this year, they would have received those notices sometime in 1986.

"Engrained in our concept of due process," wrote late Supreme Court Justice William Douglas, "is the requirement of notice." That was especially the case when "circumstances which might move one to inquire as to the necessity of (compliance) are completely lacking." It may be entertaining when the great white shark springs out of the blue in the movies, but it isn't so much fun when the IRS puts the bite on innocent taxpayers without so much as a word of warning. The IRS knew, for the most part, who the Keogh participants were, and greater efforts should have been made to let them know about the filing requirement.

Every good cliff-hanger ends with the good guys escaping harm at the last minute - and sure enough, the IRS backed down and extended the time for Keogh participants to file. The date of the announcement: why, August 1, of course. The IRS also claimed that individual taxpayers, without partners, don't have to answer all the questions.

But once again, the shear-'em or scare-'em crew on Pennsylvania Avenue missed the larger point. They have tremendous power to disrupt people's lives (the threat of a $25-a-day fine would disrupt mine) and that power should be used judiciously, not aggressively. When it is not - as it was not in the Keogh case until the last minute - a grisly finale is in order: the sight of heads rolling at the IRS.

A story from my childhood brings comfort to many. Let me share it.

"It's bedtime now," spoke the gentle voice of my mother to my last brother. But Nathan Noel acted as if he did not hear her. "You must sleep now," urged her gentle voice. Still he did not lay down his toys. Then her firm hand took him by the arm and led him through the bedroom door.

At the door Nathan turned and looked at us who were not ready to rest. Resentment and misunderstanding showed in his face. "Why should I be called away when the day is at its best? Why be forced to lay down my toys when play is at its climax?" These questions were not immediately answered.

But when morning came, Nathan came out of his bed smiling. The dread of night was gone with the rosy dawn. The new day needed no explanations from the night before. Nathan was happy.

To each of us who are Plains citizens, either while we are young like Nathan or when we have matured with age, the call will come from our Father, God, "It's time to rest now." It will not matter when the calls come, the time will not seem right. Friends, family, toys...will still have their fascination and we will have unfinished plans for life.

Still, that heavenly voice will call and a strong hand will lead us away. There will be weeping because we must count the day finished and draw about us the curtains of the night.

Ah, there will be a morning for us, too. After the night we shall come out smiling and immortal. The One who calls us will be there with us. It shall be morning forever. We shall understand and be happy.

Soon after this experience Jesus took Nathan Noel home to heaven.

Lost In The "Woulds"

Some church members are hopelessly lost in the "woulds":

I would go to Sunday school today, but I enjoy too much my little extra sleep on Sunday morning.

I would take my children to Sunday school and church, but Sunday is my only day to play golf.

I would teach a Sunday school class, but my job just doesn't leave time for that much involvement in church.

I would witness to others about Christ, but I never seem to say the right words.

I would give more to the church, but there's just not much left after paying the bills.

The only way to find your way out of the "woulds" is to set your eyes upon Christ. He will show the way.

LIGHTING...

Incandescent bulbs are readily available and inexpensive. They're interchangeable (a 100 watt bulb can be replaced by a 25 watt bulb), so light intensity may be changed without changing the fixtures. But, they're very inefficient and dissipate much energy as heat rather than converting it to light.

Labor Day is past and its back to the old routine after our last summer holiday. Hope everyone had a good day. Now we can look forward to Thanksgiving.

We had 28 for a fun night last Friday. Things were spiced up by the Grooms from Alabama, and Thompsons from Plains at the "42" and domino tables. Also Odell shared his birthday with us. We all wondered how many ??! Remember Friday night meetings. They are pretty special, and its a good way to lose the Friday night blues. Also Plains has games on Saturday night.

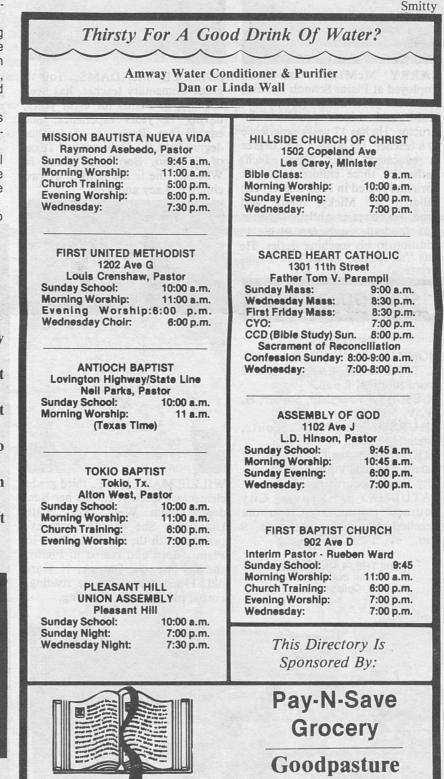

Pat Clark is home from the hospital. We are all glad she is on the road to recovery.

Some of our people were out of town on Labor Day. Maybe all will be back home for the balance of the week. Our lunch crowds are growing everyday. To all newcomers we say, "Welcome", and to everyone "Please call us and register if you plan to be at the Center for lunch."

Our Ceramic and Craft Sale goes on...

This has been a short week...therefore a short report!

For the past two years we have operated four bus routes to transport our students to and from school. However, this year, because people are moving farther apart, we are adding an additional route. This will cause three of last year's routes to change somewhat. It is very difficult to please all bus riders since our district covers five hundred and ninety-nine (599) square miles. It is our desire that no student ride the bus longer than forty-five minutes.

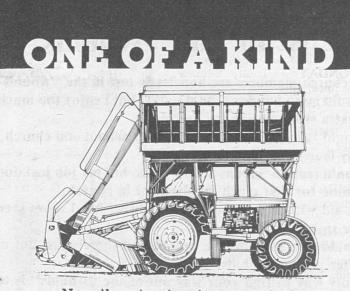

We also run a bus to Brownfield each day for our students in certain special education classes there, and for our cosmetology students. An aide is assigned to this bus and she and the driver work during the day with our students who attend classes in Brownfield.

We consider our bus drivers to have one of the most important responsibilities in school. We ask that you be courteous and considerate when a school bus approaches.

Bus drivers this year are Dub Nelms, Paula McMinn, Jim Baldwin, Johnny Gallegos, Bill Strickler, Robert Rios and Dennis Casey.

The free seminar is aimed at making persons aware of the Texas Mental Health Code which governs the commitment of mentally-ill persons to treatment facilities. In the past session of the Texas Legislature, the Texas Mental Health Code was revised, affecting the commitment process and psychiatric treatment. Those changes, which go into effect this month, restructures the commitment process and the safeguards instituted to protect the rights of the patient.

Harry Deckard, a lawyer for the Texas Department of Mental Health/Mental Retardation (TDMHMR), will be the featured speaker for the seminar. Deckard will address the group on the revisions of the Texas Mental Health Code and how they affect the commitment procedure and treatment. In other sessions, a panel of experts on the psychiatric and substance abuse commitment processes will discuss in detail the Texas Mental Health Code changes.

Sponsors of the informationsharing seminar are Charter Plains Hospital, Lubbock Regional MHMR, Central Plains MHMR in Plainview, and the Mental Health Association in Texas. Registration will begin at 9:45 a.m. at Charter Plains Hospital, 801 North Quaker Avenue, Sept. 26. Q. Insects are chewing on the foliage in my yard. The damage is unsightly, but I'm more concerned about whether this will permanently harm my shrubs and trees. What can I do about this problem?

A. Plants depend on their leaves to convert sunlight into plant energy, in a process called photosynthesis. Plants generally have more leaf surface than they need to survive, but too much leaf surface loss can starve plants. In the United States, there are many different insect pests that damage plants and shrubs. The pests vary greatly from region to region. There are, however, broad spectrum insecticides, such as SEVIN* brand carbaryl, which are effective for homeowners across the country.
