Public Visits Lamesa Research Farm

Farmers, research scientists and educators working together to improve South Plains agriculture and protect the environment shared the spotlight in Lamesa Wednesday, Sept. 12 at the dedication of the Agricultural Complex for Advanced Research and Extension Systems (AG-CARES), says Kirk Lewis, Yoakum County Extension Agent, AG.

Speakers at the dedication said the complex could become a showplace to help urban leaders throughout the country better understand the complexities of food and fiber production.

More than 250 persons attended the program and first public tour at the 160-acre farm two miles north of Lamesa on U.S. Highway 87. It is believed to be the first full-scale farm in the country for validation and incorporation of crop research and extension education programs.

A sign at the entrance to the complex states: "This farm is dedicated to the producers of Dawson and area counties for the preservation of profitable agriculture and safe environment."

AG-CARES is a cooperative effort of Lamesa Cotton Growers (LCG) - a producer organization - and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas Agricultural Extension Service - agencies of the Texas A&M University System. Support also has been provided by Dawson County Commissioners' Court, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Soil Conservation Service, USDA-Agricultural Research Service, Texas Tech University and private industry.

Dr. Zerle Carpenter, state director of the Extension Service, called the project a unique organization of concerned and innovative farmers and the agencies. "This will provide an opportunity to bring technologically proven methods and apply them on a larger basis," he said.

"This project is being watched all over the country," said Dr. Robert Merrifield, deputy director of the Experiment Station. "You're out in front on major national issues of sustainable agriculture."

We'd like to use this as a showcase to bring people from Washington and show them what agriculture is about," said Dr. John Abernathy, resident director of research for the experiment station at Lubbock. He noted that legislators and policy makers in the nation's capital could use information from AG-CARES to increase their understanding of farm production and management.

Kent Nix, president of Lamesa Cotton Growers, said his organization

J.B. Wilson
Principal, Plains High School

Most parents do not even know what hits them. They sail along, raising their children, enjoying the family, everything going just fine until one day - out of the blue - it hits them, the TEEN YEARS.

All of a sudden many of the skills they've learned no longer work. The confidence they've gained as parents during the early years crumbles. They're left with a lot of questions and not nearly enough information to effectively parent their teens and pre-teens.

Four suggestions in parenting teens are as follows:

- 1.) Take an active style of parenting. Support your teen in their interest and activities, at school, church, and in all areas.
- 2.) Instill courage and self-esteem in your teen. Find ways to promote confidence and independence without being overprotective.
- 3.) Try to develop responsibility through discipline. Avoid playing the "Blame Game" with your teen. Search for effective ways to resolve problems constructively.
- 4.) Win Cooperation through Communications. Parents should try to get family members working together for their common good. Mutual respect is a must in a good Parent-Teen relationship.

Texas ALLTEL, Inc. Provides Book Covers For Elementary

With school underway again, Texas ALLTEL, Inc. (formerly CP National/Texas Midland Telephone Company) provided elementary schools in their serving area with a supply of specially designed book covers for the returning students. Drug abuse prevention book covers were presented recently to Pat Hinkle, secretary of the Plains Public Schools, by Travis Jones, representative of the company.

The colorful covers which use the international symbol for no, the red circle with a slash over the offending drugs, also carry a H E L P line telephone number. Over 3,500 covers were delivered to elementary schools in the 26 exchanges served by the Company in an effort to help prevent additional young people from even trying drugs. K.M. Holt, State Manager for Texas-ALLTEL stated, "By reaching the elementary student, we hope we can stop the cycle before it begins, and a book cover is an ideal constant reminder."

Superintendents and principals have been very receptive to the program and have expressed appreciation for the company's efforts to help combat the drug problem in this way.

The parent company, ALLTEL, provides telephone service to more than 1.1 million customers in 25 states, natural gas service in three states, and has subsidiaries or investments in companies that provide cellular telephone, long-distance and information services, communications products and other related services.
