Regents expected to decide tenure

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Board of Regents is expected to reach a decision today on the proposed faculty tenure policy despite Faculty Senate and Student Association requests to delay the decision.

The revised tenure policy includes a provision for extended probationary periods; five-year performance reviews of all tenured faculty; closer surveillance of university-wide tenure levels; an anti-discrimination statement; clarification of due process procedures; and a re-definition of the composition and responsibility of the Tenure Advisory Committee.

The board also will consider a proposed degree program for a bachelor of arts major in public relations. The proposed program encompasses a core of 15 hours in mass communications courses and a specialization of 12 hours and nine hours of electives within the mass communication department.

The regents also will consider the acceptance of a gift of Castro County land willed to the university and budget adjustments for the period from June 1, 1984 to July 31, 1984.

The regents will consider awarding construction contracts for renovation of the Industrial Engineering Building, improvements to the sewage and site drainage at the Agricultural Field Laboratories and the remodeling and completion of the sub-basement of the Art Building.

The Health Sciences Center agenda will include matters concerning the reactivation of the department of health organization management in the School of Medicine and an agreement with the Amarillo Hospital District.

Regents also will consider authority to award contracts for the renovation of out-patient clinics for use by the Regional Academic Health Center in El Paso.

The ratification of administrative action concerning leaves of absence for faculty members also is on the agenda. The board's policy provides that faculty leaves may be granted under conditions allowable by the state.

The delegation of board authority to the Tech president to contract with additional investment depository banks on a bid-as-required basis also will be discussed.

Council OKs first reading of city curfew

By KEVIN SMITH
University Daily Staff Writer

The City Council unanimously accepted a motion Thursday supporting a proposed city curfew ordinance that follows guidelines set by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The proposed ordinance also is consistent with the Texas Family Code, which allows a juvenile to be detained only when three offenses have been detected by law enforcement officers.

The proposed ordinance affects minors 16 years of age or younger and specifies curfew hours already in effect, 11 p.m. on weekdays and midnight on weekends. The ordinance must pass two additional hearings before the council before becoming effective.

Rickey Childers, assistant to the city manager, said the basic change in the proposed ordinance, allowing an officer to detain curfew violators after three offenses have been detected, is the result of input from juvenile judges.

Childers said the city manager's office has made an effort to publicize the proposed ordinance, passing out copies of it to local junior highs and high schools. He said comments on the ordinance received by the city manager's office all have been favorable.

Childers said the administrative procedures for the proposed ordinance include a three-month period to publicize the ordinance. During that time any signed letter questioning the legality of the ordinance must be researched and investigated by the city manager's office.

Council members also discussed the difficulty police officers have in obtaining juvenile criminal records late at night. The members claimed police officers need access to the records to determine if a juvenile curfew violator can be detained on the basis of three prior offenses. The offenses are not limited to curfew violations.

A new record system, however, eventually will make the information readily available to police officers.

Councilman T.J. Patterson said all the input from parents on the proposed ordinance has been positive.

Ex-Tech cop charged in Drane Hall robbery

Donnie Newton

By KEVIN SMITH
University Daily Staff Writer

A warrant was issued Thursday afternoon charging former Texas Tech policeman Donnie Newton with aggravated robbery in connection with the Wednesday assault and robbery of an armored car driver, according to a spokesman for the Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney's Office. Russell Honeycutt, the security guard, was carrying more than $84,000 in cash and checks from the Texas Tech Bursar's Office in Drane Hall.

Police reported that an undetermined amount of checks and the money bags, which had held the deposits, were found in a blue nylon bag in a dumpster near Lubbock International Airport.

Tech police said the airport had been under observation but that Newton had not been seen. A multi-state alert was issued for his arrest.

In a telephone interview with The University Daily, Newton's former girlfriend, who asked not to be named, said Newton is not the kind of person who would steal.

"I don't know why the police would think of Donnie as a suspect," she said. "He became a policeman because he wanted to uphold the law."

Newton resigned Sept. 10 after two years as a campus police officer.

The woman said she had dated Newton earlier in the year, but she had not been able to get in touch with him this semester. She said she knew Newton had resigned as a policeman and she had been told that he had no other place of employment. She said an armed robbery is an act totally out of character for Newton.

"I knew he'd quit his job, but he wouldn't get desperate or violent enough to hit a guy on the head and rob him," she said.

A news release from University News and Publications at Tech describes the 27-year-old Newton as dark-complected, about 6 feet, 1 inch tall, of medium build with light brown hair. At the time of the robbery he was described as wearing a mustache.

Newton is a suspect in the attack of a Puroator Armored Inc. security guard as he was leaving Drane Hall Wednesday morning. Honeycutt was struck on the head with a pistol while his attacker made off with the two money bags he was carrying.

The bags contained more than $6,000 in cash; the rest of the $84,000 was made up of checks and credit charges. The robber was pursued by a witness who lost sight of him near the University Center.

Honeycutt was taken to Lubbock General Hospital for treatment of head lacerations and was released later Wednesday.

Campus protesters support nuclear arms freeze

By CHERYLE LOCKE
University Daily Staff Writer

A group of students and faculty members affiliated with the South Plains Alternative Resources Coalition (SPARC) participated in a five-hour demonstration outside the University Center Wednesday in an attempt to generate support for a nuclear arms freeze.

Students mingled with protesters, exchanging opinions on the arms race with the Soviet Union and discussing the pros of cons of Soviet-American negotiations.

SPARC members held up a long, white banner with a dove and missile emblem stitched on it and the words, "Nuclear Moratorium." Protesters took turns holding the banner while others stood in front of it voicing and exchanging opinions with those passing by the UC. Members also read from several books that portrayed the horror of nuclear warfare.

One unidentified student challenged the demonstrators, "We can't expect the Soviet Union to do it (declare a freeze) just because we do. I'm not saying those in the Soviet Union are cruel and inhumane. I've never met anyone from Russia, but we can't be guaranteed of the fact that they will stop all arms buildup just because it is what we decide to do. They want to survive just like we do."

SPARC member Leigh Ann Lessenberry responded by saying, "We have to start somewhere. We have to begin with negotiations. President Reagan is the first president who has never sat down and tried to negotiate with the Russians."

Michael Wenzler, another SPARC member and a psychiatry resident at the Texas Tech School of Medicine, said, "We believe the Soviet Union has had an interest in stopping their arms buildup. They have kept their part in the SALT I agreement. There was a formal committee set up to investigate possible violations of the treaty. The committee is made up of both Soviet and U.S. officials. Occasionally allegations are made (that one of the two countries have broken the treaty), but when they are investigated by the committee there has never been anything found.

"Every president since Eisenhower has negotiated a treaty except Reagan. In terms of arms control, the only president you can't admire is Reagan. He is unwilling to budge from his original position. He has worked very hard against the signing of SALT II, also."

Wenzler said he began his protest of a continued arms race after he completed a long, detailed study of the issue.

He was quick to stress the fact that the freeze option is a bipartisan issue, not a Republican or a Democratic one. He said several recent polls have shown that 60 to 70 percent of people across the United States support a freeze if it is bilateral and verifiable.

"The freeze is not suggesting that we stop defense altogether," he said. "We've got so many weapons right now that if we stop building them, it will in no way weaken the United States. Our purpose is not to weaken America and strengthen the Soviet Union. We both have enough weapons, and it's simply time to stop."

Former Board of Regents member dead at 74

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

Former Texas Tech Regent Harold Hinn, 74, died at 8:50 a.m. Wednesday in Dallas. Services are scheduled for 11 a.m. today at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Dallas.

Burial will be at Hillcrest Memorial Park in Dallas under the direction of Sparkman Hillcrest Funeral Home.

Hinn was born in Plainview and graduated from Plainview High School. He attended the University of Texas at Austin and the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Hinn was a member of the Tech Board of Regents from 1957 to 1969. He began the "Carol of Lights" Christmas tradition, which still is an annual campus event.

"His heart was with Texas Tech, and he said his future hope lies in education," said Frances Holden, Hinn's cousin. "His family and friends feel like the 'Carol of Lights' is a living memorial to him.

"He was a person of vision and a very modest and unassuming person."

Hinn was responsible for acquiring 76 acres of land for the Tech museum when the museum outgrew its quarters at Holden Hall. Hinn also was chairman of the building committee that approved plans for the new museum.

A conference room in the Textile Research Center also was named in his honor.

Hinn became president and chief executive officer of the Harvest Queen Mill & Elevator Co. in Plainview in 1940. He was a supporter of grain sorghum research and founded the High Plains Research Station in Halfway.

He also was the director of Citizen's National Bank in Lubbock and a member of the Texas Grain & Feed Dealers Association, the National Grain & Feed Dealers Association and the Millers National Federation.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Albert of Dallas and Carl of Fredericksburg; a brother, Robert of Plainview; and a sister; Virginia Tudor of Plainview.

Tech VP says deans' tenure vote unofficial

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

An academic deans' ballot that showed 86.9 percent of the Texas Tech voting faculty disapprove of the proposed tenure policy was not an official vote but was intended to provide faculty feedback, said John Darling, vice president for academic affairs and research.

The academic deans' ballot was separate from a Faculty Senate ballot that was announced this week. The deans' ballot was conducted through individual departments and colleges according to each dean's discretion.

Darling said the President Lauro Cavazos never asked for the ballot but that the deans jointly decided it would be one way to provide feedback. "There was no uniform method of voting," Darling said. "Each dean handled it on his own. They agreed to take a vote, but they didn't agree how to do it. The vote was not conducted through this office."

Faculty members who were eligible to vote in both the Faculty Senate ballot and the deans' ballot included those who have been at Tech for at least a year and have a tenure or tenure-track position. However, the deans' ballot may have included faculty members who are not members of the voting faculty.

"Obviously, there are vast differences in the number of faculty who approve (the policy) and disapprove, but unfortunately we don't know why they disapproved," Darling said. "They might not have liked one item or the whole policy."

Darling said he has some doubt in the accuracy of the Faculty Senate ballot. "I would like to know why I didn't get a ballot," he said. "I meet the eligibility requirements, and I'm tenured. I know the president got a ballot. If I didn't get a ballot, it makes you wonder how many others didn't get ballots."

Darling said the results from both the senate ballot and the academic ballot and the degree to which those results will influence the decision on the policy will depend on how the board weighs each item.

The results of both ballots have been furnished to Cavazos. "I think he viewed it as just another bit of information," Darling said. "I can't say what impact it will have, but the president will lead the discussion at the board meeting."

"I believe the board will consider some changes based on the faculty input."

Darling said the Faculty Senate cannot say that there is no faculty group that supports the tenure policy, which was proposed Sept. 5, when 48 people, or 46.6 percent, in the College of Engineering approved of the policy.

Weymouth donates 'float' money to children's home

By LISA MORRIS
University Daily Staff Writer

Weymouth Hall residents will not enter a float in this year's Homecoming Parade. Instead, the Weymouth men decided to contribute their allocated Homecoming funds to escort several underprivileged children from the Buckner Children's Home to the football game.

The Texas Tech football team already has helped entertain the children, letting them watch team practice, get players' autographs and dine with coach Jerry Moore and the Red Raider team members Wednesday.

Steve Ellison, president of the Weymouth Hall Council, said the residents decided to contribute their money to a good cause instead of spending money on a float.

"We want to put something back into this community," Ellison said.

He said five Weymouth floor presidents, along with some Buckner Children's Home staff members, escorted the children to the practice and dinner. Residents also will escort the children to the game.

Espinoza said, "We're trying to make this an annual event. We want to mainly emphasize changing Weymouth's image of being a jock and up-percrust dorm, with providing a service to the community."

Beta Theta Pi fraternity members also decided to perform a community service by taking some mentally retarded students from Ballinger Elementary School to the Panhandle-South Plains Fair Thursday.

Scott Kaley, Beta Theta Pi project coordinator, said the fraternity's members want to aid severely handicapped and mentally retarded elementary students.

"We want to bring the needs of these children to the public's attention in hopes of promoting charitable activities."

John Lawrence, Beta Theta Pi project designer, said the idea to take the children to the fair stemmed from the Lubbock public schools' Adopt-A-School program. He said the program is a method in which school districts match up needs of particular schools with different groups and organizations within the community.

Lubbock ISD Superintendent E.C. Leslie said the program "is a method in which the schools and the community work together. It allows you (groups and organizations) to become involved in the education and future well-being of the children in Lubbock."

Lawrence said the Adopt-A-School program promotes public involvement that may contribute to improving the public school system.

Kaley said taking the children to the fair exposed them to an emotion they do not often experience. "Giving these children a value of self-worth is important in their development."

"We hope to bring out the best in the students," Lawrence said.

Citibus provided transportation to and from the school and fair grounds.

Center offers visually impaired students unusual variety of equipment

By LISA MORRIS
University Daily Staff Writer

Texas Tech's Center for the Visually Handicapped, established in 1978, is the only such center among Texas universities.

Louis Escolas, a rehabilitation counselor at the center, said that through a third-party agreement, Tech provides office space for the State Commission for the Blind on the third floor of the library. He said the University of Texas and the University of Houston are the only other schools in Texas that have on-campus State Commission for the Blind offices.

The commission provides services for visually impaired students which include career counseling, tutors and readers.

Escolas said Tech's center has 12 individual reading rooms and the latest in technical equipment to assist visually impaired students. He said about 30 to 35 students per semester utilize the equipment. Of those students, about 50 percent have congenital blindness and the other half have impaired or total vision loss due to diabetes, nerve damage or traumatic accidents.

"Many of our students can't even proofread their own work, but with the help of our machines they can check their work," he said.

Some of the equipment includes a 30,000 Kurzweil reading machine, which Tech obtained thru a Xerox Corp. grant. The machine appears similar to a copy machine; a book can be set on top of a glass window, and at the touch of a button a computerized voice can read the text, rapidly or slowly at the student's request.

The center provides access to an Opticon, a small handheld camera that when run over regular print can vibrate the shape of each letter on the reader's fingertip. Escolas said the Opticon allows students to privately read a letter and can be used to check grocery prices.

The center also provides closed-circuit reading machines where print can be placed under a camera so that it is enlarged 60 times on a television screen. Escolas said professors will arrange to send tests to the center for a visually impaired student.

He said many times if a student is visually impaired his chances to perform to his best ability on an exam are less than the chances of a normal student. "A visually impaired student can't take a test at the same pace a normal student can," he said.

Escolas said the commission provides services for visually impaired students from Tech and from surrounding public school systems.

"Many people believe the commission just gives money to blind people, but we try to put our people to work. We help them to help themselves," Escolas said.

The center also has a VersaBraille, a micro-mini-computer that translates print into Braille. The center also provides electric typewriters, electronic volleyballs, softballs, talking clocks and calculators, cassette players, Braille typewriters and large-print dictionaries.

SAVH is attempting to set up a computer room where the students could have access to Tech's central computer, "WYLBUR."

Tech students win research grant

By CARLA R. McKEOWN
University Daily Staff Writer

Research on an instrument that uses computers to measure family relationships has earned two Tech students grants totaling almost $1,200.

Each year the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy awards a grant for student research. This year the grant was presented to Brent Atkinson and Paul McKenzie, Ph.D. candidates in the department of home and family life.

Atkinson's and McKenzie's research involves the use of a computer instrument, the Multiple Vantage Profile (MVP), in the assessment phase of marriage and family therapy.

The contest for the grant is highly competitive, Atkinson said. Atkinson and McKenzie were selected as the winners of the contest after submitting to a committee a grant proposal outlining their research.

They describe the instrument in an article, "The Multiple Vantage Profile: A Computerized Assessment of Social Organization in Family Therapy" to be published in Computers and Family Therapy. Bradford Keeney, director of family therapy and research, co-authored the article.

Several versions of the MVP are available for different types of computers. Most of the versions require a sixth grade reading level, but one is geared toward young children. Several can be used on home computers.

In therapy, each of the family members are asked to determine the closeness or distance of relationships within the family. The family members can respond in a variety of ways. Each person describes how he or she perceives each relationship in the family and how he or she would like to see the relationships.

The optic scanning method allows members of the family to rate the relationships on a scale. Answers are recorded on a computer answer sheet and read by an optic scanner. Then the data is organized by the computer for use by the therapist.

A second format, Compu-Score, requires the therapist to read the information from the MVP answer sheet and type it in to the computer to be organized.

The third option, computer interactive, allows the members of the family to use a "joystick" and move stick figures closer together or farther apart, signifying the distance in the relationship.

Writer gives section editor 'the run-around'

By ROBIN FRED
University Daily Staff Writer

After The University Daily received a flier in the campus mail about the Red Raider Road Race and Fun Run scheduled for Saturday morning, the powers-that-be had a wonderful idea.

Basically, the idea was: let's get Robin to run in the race and write a column about the experience.

But when my pseudo-friend Kent Pingel came up to me and said "Hey, why don't you run in this race — it would make a great column?" I responded that I had a better idea for a column.

The result is this column on why, although I admire anyone who can run a long way, I am not about to compete in the 3.1-mile "fun run" or the 6.2-mile road race.

First of all, I fail to see how running more than three miles could be considered "fun." If that's a fun run, I'd hate to see a hell run.

I once ran more than two miles, but not by choice. A so-called friend forced me to participate in a so-called two-mile fun run a couple of summers back, and I had very little fun.

The first mile was fine. No sweat (pardon the pun). The second mile was the killer, and that's my real problem with the fun run at Tech. If the second mile was that bad, what might I expect from a third mile? Or a fourth, fifth or sixth?

It wasn't all bad — I survived the race and got a T-shirt that I look real athletic wearing, (once when I had it on I overheard a sorority girl say I looked like a jock — or maybe she said "jerk," I'm not sure).

Personally, I think I have plenty of good reasons not to run in the fun run or road race Saturday morning. But for those of you who don't want to run but don't have a good excuse not to, here are a few good excuses you might want to try.

- The race starts at 9 a.m. The best excuse is the honest one: 9 a.m. is too early in the day to be running around in shorts.

- You could make a spectacle of yourself on television, as the race route carries runners past the Homecoming parade, which is being aired on KAMC-TV, Channel 28. Imagine practically millions of viewers seeing you sweating and panting on television. Very embarrassing.

- Running ruins your socks and makes your Nikes smell like you died in them a long time ago.

- Running makes you sweat all over and it's hard to pick up chicks (or guys, if you are a female) when you're sweating.

- You might lose and you'd get an inferiority complex.

- You might win and you'd be hounded constantly by the media.

- Competition makes you nervous, which gets your stomach upset, which is bad for your health. And since you're in this for your health anyway, that defeats the whole purpose.

So, there you have a few excuses for being lazy like me and not running in the race Saturday morning.

But for those brave souls who are masochists or athletes and want to participate, here's the basic info: The third annual Red Raider Road Race and Fun Run will be at 9 a.m. Saturday beginning at Boston Avenue between the Tech Library and the University Center. Check-in is at the west lobby of the UC from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. today and 7 a.m. to race time Saturday. Entry fee is $7.50, and certificates and T-shirts (athletic-looking ones) will be awarded to all finishers.

Classes will be divided into several age brackets of men and women, and a good time should be had by all, so be there or be square (yakovatImean?).

Texas Gold

San Angelo-based Texas Gold will perform during the annual Homecoming Dance at 9 p.m. today at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. The dance will end at 1 a.m. Admission will be $5. Proceeds will support Texas Tech academic programs. Telephone the Ex-Students Association at 742-3641 for more information.

Landscape planned for local coliseum

By JAN DILLEY
University Daily Staff Writer

Scenery at the Lubbock Coliseum/Municipal Auditorium will take a turn for the greener once work begins on a recently proposed landscaping plan.

To be implemented in three phases, the plan will include a new irrigation system, extensive planting of trees and shrubbery, the installation of ditches and the screening of the south side of the building from the trash container area. About 30 parking spaces will be added to the holding area that currently is used for large vehicle parking north of the coliseum.

Estimates place the project's cost at $357,000. Work on the first phase, for which the city already has appropriated $120,000, will begin later this year and should be completed by next summer, said Dan Kamp, city parks and recreation director. After designs for the irrigation system are drawn, bids for its construction will be accepted. If work progresses as planned, the new system will be in place by late spring.

Landscaping of the grounds, from University Avenue to the Tech Freeway on Sixth Street, will be coordinated with that of the surrounding area. Brick paving like that on sidewalks at Texas Tech will be installed.

Kamp said the area around the coliseum supports heavy pedestrian traffic which requires salting of the sidewalks in winter to prevent accidents. As a result of melting ice and snow, the salt washes off onto surrounding vegetation, killing the grass. The new system will include grading to allow salt water to flow inward and ridges next to the turf and bed areas to retain water on the hard surfaces.

"Some of the trees will grow and give us a canopy cover within 60 years," Kamp said. "Others may live 200, 300 or 400 years. We don't want to lose the trees after just a few years. The idea is to have trees with different life expectancies. This way, we'll get a diversity of species throughout the system. We want to have some mature trees at all times."

Warm-weather insect noises 'aren't cricket'

By ALISON GOLIGHTLY
University Daily News Editor

I am glad the cold weather has arrived, but not for the same reasons as most people; not because I can wear my new fall wardrobe — I don't have one; not because of the football games — I was too poor to buy coupons; and not because it reminds me that graduation is just a short time away — I have too much to do between now and then. No, the reason I am glad the temperature finally has dropped is because I'm hoping it will kill the crickets.

Now you Japanese people out there who think these obnoxious little creatures are good luck, don't start getting all uptight because I want them to die. I'm sorry if you think the noise they produce by rubbing their legs together is a melodic, soothing sound — personally, it rubs me the wrong way.

I have been known to lie awake in bed for hours at a time, wondering just where they were hiding. And wouldn't you know it — just when you get brave enough and mad enough to search for them, they shut up and watch you make a fool out of yourself trying to find them. But as soon as you give up and jump back in the bed, it's like you turned the crickets on or something and they start in again (probably with a snicker).

Once I was fortunate enough to have two members of the Cricketbusters show up at just the right time, when two little black creatures thought it was safe to go on the prowl. But the little creatures got caught and were tossed outdoors — a more humane departure than if I had happened to find them.

You see, I can't bear to catch one after what happened the first time I tried. The plan, similar to the one the Cricketbusters had used but a little less brave, was to sit on the side of my bed and drop a giant cup over them. I was then going to scoot a piece of cardboard under the cup, open the door and toss him in the yard. The plan failed because the cricket got spastic and hopped out of my target range.

Well, I had a number of options after my first scheme failed. I could have stepped on him (but I would have had to listen to him crunch) or I could have called a friend whose cat loves to feast on them (but I thought it would be an unfair match). So, I got out the Spray and Wash, aimed the nozzle, closed my eyes and sprayed. Every once and a while I would take a peek to see if he had stopped moving. And finally, engulfed by fumes, he turned over on his back and died.

If the crickets stay on their side of the door, they won't be doomed to death by an ominous can of Spray and Wash. After all, it's pretty bad when you have to check your shoes to make sure it's not someone's new living quarters. Or when you have to turn on the light to get a drink in the middle of the night because you're afraid a varmint might be lurking somewhere along the path to the kitchen.

So when the crickets take it upon themselves to come into my house — they'd better bring their cages from Japan with them.

Rookie takes 'Upper' hand in Lajet

By The Associated Press

ABILENE, Texas — Rookie Brett Upper took advantage of what he called "perfect conditions for scoring" to compile a 6-under-par 66 and move into a tie for the first-round lead Thursday in the $350,000 LaJet Golf Classic.

Upper, a 25-year-old graduate of the mini-tours who made four appearances at the PGA Tour Qualifying School before gaining his playing rights, completed his effort on the Fairway Oaks Golf Club with a birdie-birdie finish.

"This year has been a learning experience for me," Upper said. "The first half of the year I was just getting adjusted.

"As the year went on, the more I learned, the more confidence I got and the better I played."

Upper, who has a pair of eighth-place finishes as his career best, shared the lead with Ronnie Black, a winner in the Anheuser-Busch Classic earlier this season, and Jodie Mudd, who did not make a bogey in what he said was "a very simple round + the kind I'd like to have every day."

The group at 67, a single shot off the pace, included Howard Twitty, Canadian Dan Halldorson, Dan Forsman, Jim Simons, Vance Heafner, Curt Byrum and Mark Brooks. Tom Watson, who made a last-minute entry in this event in order to protect his position at the top of the Player of the Year standings, scored an eagle-3 on his way to a 2-under-par 70.

"I made a couple of no-brainers, but the putts I needed to make I either misread or misread," said Watson, who holds a two-point lead over Denis Watson, a South African who is not competing here, in the Player of the Year standings.

"The conditions were ideal," Watson said of the chilly, cloudy weather and absence of wind.

"Seventy was about par today, but still not a bad score," he said.

PGA champion Lee Trevino also was at that figure.

Vikings kicker having best season of career

By The Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — In the corner of the Minnesota Vikings' locker room, amid the shoulder pads, blood-stained tape and deodorant, a wooden rocking chair sits in front of Jan Stenerud's stall. Like the 41-year-old kicker, it's old, but steady. Stenerud is having perhaps the best season of his 18-year first week I did pretty good, I kicked a 52-yarder, then I got a 54-yarder and then five this time. But what you have to guard against is getting content. I don't relax until the season's over."

If Stenerud kicks two field goals Sunday against Seattle, he'll become the first player in football history to kick 350 field goals. He's already the NFL's all-time field goal leader.

The Norwegian native, who came to Montana State on a skiing scholarship in the mid-1960s, downplayed making five field goals from 37, 35, 34, 32 and 19 yards.

Stenerud insists that "I'm not looking to prove points at all," but he's proving that he's worth more than a middle-round draft choice.

That's what the Green Bay Packers got in return for Stenerud in a trade this summer. The Packers decided to go with a younger kicker, Eddie Garcia, who has made only one of four field goal attempts.

Stenerud's new coach, Minnesota's Les Steckel, is three years younger than his kicker.

"Nobody could understand why I'd be interested in a 41-year-old place-kicker," said Steckel, 38. "Maybe people will see why I traded for him now."

career. He's made 10 of 11 field goals, including a 52-yarder and a Viking-record 54-yarder. His lone miss was from 53 yards.

He was named this week's National Football Conference offensive player of the week for kicking five field goals and two extra points in Sunday's 29-28 victory over Detroit.

"I learned a long time ago that you can't get content in this business," said Stenerud, the NFL's oldest player. "The

Tech set for Homecoming bash

By BRENDA KAY RICE
University Daily Staff Writer

When Texas Tech meets Baylor Saturday at Jones Stadium, it almost will be like a new season. The contest will be the first Southwest Conference game for both squads.

And Tech has an additional incentive going into the game — it's the Red Raiders' homecoming. The Raiders' 24-23 loss to Baylor two years ago was Tech's only homecoming defeat since 1972.

Baylor leads the series 24-17-1, but Tech played one of its best games of year last season in Waco, taking a 26-11 win.

Baylor fumbled five times in that contest and the Raiders recovered each one. Tech led by one point at halftime and collected 16 more points in the final two quarters.

Tech placekicker Ricky Gann made field goals of 28, 52 and 26 yards to put Tech in front 19-3. Tech quarterback Jim Hart's 10-yard run in the fourth period was just icing on the cake.

Current Tech quarterback Perry Morren is said to have a 50-50 chance of playing in Saturday's game because of a wrist injury. If Morren is not ready by game time, freshman Aaron Keesee could start.

"They had a really good day against us last year," Baylor defensive end Ervin Randle said of Tech. "They came to our place and thought, 'Hey, we're playing Baylor, and we can beat them.'"

"It will be a tough match," Randle continued. "It's the first Southwest Conference game for both of us. No matter what happened up to this point, this is where things start counting."

Baylor is 0-2 after losses to national powers Brigham Young and Oklahoma. Tech is 1-1 after beating Texas-Arlington 44-7 Sept. 15, then falling 29-24 last week to New Mexico.

"Baylor has played two really strong opponents," Tech Coach Jerry Moore said. "They basically have the same team they did last year when they went to a bowl."

Baylor tailback Ron Francis said the consecutive losses to two of the nation's top-rated teams only served to make the Bears stronger.

"Those two losses, those two games, have prepared us well for conference," Francis said. "We've played two of the toughest teams in the nation on the road. That should really help us in the long run."

Tech's disappointing loss to New Mexico still could be weighing heavily on the Raiders' minds. Tech led the Lobos 18-7 going into the final period, but New Mexico's touchdown drives of 80, 96, and 20 yards in the final period ended the Raiders' hopes for a 2-0 start.

Gann booted the 29th field goal of his career against New Mexico, pulling him into a second place tie on Tech's career field goal chart. Gann could catch Bill "Blade" Adams' record of 43 by the season's end.

Three of Tech's linebackers reached double figures in tackles against the Lobos. Dwayne Jiles had 12 unassisted and 4 assisted tackles, Mike Kinsey had 11 and one quarterback sack and Hastings had 10 stops.

The Baylor quarterback controversy is expected to continue. Cody Carlson completed 11 of 25 passes last week for 117 yards and is 26 of 50 for 315 yards for the year. Tom Meucke has completed 11 of 27 for 132 yards in two games.

"With the ability their two quarterbacks have, I'm sure we'll see more passes (in this game) than we have in (our) first two games," Moore said.

"They always play great football in Lubbock," Baylor coach Grant Teaff said of Tech. "You'll remember in 1980, we had a great football team that was only able to win 11-3 in Lubbock."

"Add to that the fact that it's their homecoming, and it takes on even more meaning to them," the Bears coach added. "Unless we get some offense, it could be another long road trip."
