SA urges support for Proposition 2

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

Texas Tech students and members of the local community are being urged to vote in favor of Proposition 2 at the polls today. The amendment, if passed, will enable Tech to receive additional financial support through the restructuring of the Permanent University Fund (PUF) and the establishment of a special higher education fund.

The Student Association reiterated its statements Monday to call attention to the proposed state amendment, which calls for the establishment of a new dedicated fund — the Education Assistance Fund (EAF) — which would allocate $100 million to state colleges not funded by PUF.

Currently, the PUF is restricted for use at the University of Texas system and Texas A&M University. The fund is fueled by revenues from 2.1 million acres of West Texas oil land.

In the past, non-PUF schools relied on ad valorem (property) taxes for their funding. However, since the state Legislature repealed the ad valorem tax in 1979, 26 state universities have had to rely on legislative appropriations.

"If Texas Tech University is going to continue to grow in the future, Proposition 2 is a must," said Tommie Stevens, chairman of the governmental affairs committee at the Chamber of Commerce.

SA President Jim Noble emphasized the importance of the amendment to Tech students.

The SA has been actively promoting the amendment through regular meetings with campus organization representatives and by hanging banners in the University Center. SA members also have been handing out Proposition 2 pamphlets.

Despite seemingly unanimous support for the amendment, the SA is concerned that there is a lack of knowledge of Proposition 2.

"There is no organized opposition to the amendment that we know of," said David Fisher, chairman of the SA Proposition 2 action committee.

SA officers said they believe the amendment is critical to the future of the university.

"Our biggest fear is that the public sees the figure $100 million and thinks it will raise taxes. It really won't raise taxes," Fisher said. "We need this amendment to ensure the prosperity of this university. It's important for Tech to be financially secure."

Proposition 2 would restructure PUF and increase the number of higher education institutions eligible to benefit from the fund. If the amendment is approved, all affiliate schools of Texas A&M and the University of Texas will continue to receive a portion of the PUF funds.

The EAF, formally referred to as the Capital Higher Education Fund (CHEF), would allocate money to non-PUF universities for new construction, rehabilitation, library materials and other educational equipment. The money from the dedicated fund would not be spent on athletic or dormitory needs.

Following are the eight proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution in the order in which they will appear on the ballot today:

AMENDMENT NO. 1 — RIGHTS OF STATE-CHARTERED BANKS

Grants state-chartered banks all rights now enjoyed by federally chartered banks. This would have the effect of ending the dual system now used, which stresses the differences between state and federal banks.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 — FUNDING FOR STATE UNIVERSITIES

Establishes a new dedicated appropriation of $100 million per year starting in fiscal 1986 to cover the construction and repair needs of 26 state colleges. In addition, the bonding authority of the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems would be increased, allowing the UT system to issue bonds and notes for up to 30 percent of the value of its share in the Permanent University Fund. This would replace the university's 20 percent limit.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 — AID TO DEPENDENTS OF PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS KILLED WHILE ON HAZARDOUS DUTY

Currently, the Legislature can provide payments to the surviving spouse and children of public safety officers (police, firefighters, etc.) who die in the line of duty. This amendment would add dependent parents, brothers and sisters to that list.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 — ABOLISHING THE OFFICE OF COUNTY TREASURER IN BEXAR AND COLLIN COUNTIES

Allows voters in these counties to abolish the office of county treasurer, passing on the duties of the treasurer to the county clerk.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 — SUCCESSION TO THE OFFICE OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Currently, the president pro tempore, who is elected by fellow senators at the end of each legislative session, would succeed the lieutenant governor until the next election. Under this amendment, the president pro tem would convene the Senate within 30 days after the lieutenant governor's position becomes open, and the Senate would again go through the process of choosing a senator to perform the lieutenant governor's duties until the next election.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 — USE OF PUBLIC FUNDS FOR MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANIES

Currently, mutual insurance companies are owned by their policyholders, with no capital stock. This amendment would allow public funds to be used to pay premiums on "nonassessable" life, health and accident insurance policies and on retirement plans.

AMENDMENT NO. 7 — STATE COMMISSION ON JUDICIAL CONDUCT

The commission can recommend the suspension of judges with conduct "clearly inconsistent" with that expected of judges. This amendment would change the makeup of the commission, replacing one court of appeals seat with seats for a municipal court judge and a county court at-law judge.

AMENDMENT NO. 8 — LEGISLATIVE PAY RAISE

Changes the system of compensating legislators for expenses during sessions, calling for a floating amount of daily compensation equal to the maximum federal income tax deduction allowed for state legislators on legislative business. Currently, Texas legislators make $600 per month, and any legislators not living in Austin are given $30 each day for expenses during regular and special sessions.

Area candidates optimistic about elections despite poll predictions

By GREG VAUGHN
University Daily Staff Writer

If pre-election polls are any indication of the final vote count, election day 1984 may prove to be a long one for some area candidates, while victory celebrations may begin rather early for others.

Based on their own political opinion polls, both Democrat Don Richards and his Republican opponent Larry Combest are confident of victory in today's election, but both candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives agree that the race is too close to call.

Although Richards and Combest may not get to bed until late tonight, the converse could be said of incumbent John Montford in his race against Republican Sol Thomas for the Texas state Senate.

Richards said Friday a recent poll completed by his campaign showed him to have a strong lead in the rural counties of the district and indicated a "close" race in the urban centers of the district, Lubbock and Odessa.

The former aide to outgoing congressman Kent Hance said he expects to garner 55 to 60 percent of the vote in the 19th District's rural counties, although he said he was not as confident about winning in the urban counties.

The former editor of The University Daily said he "feels good" about the campaign and is glad that it is finally winding down to a close.

"You've got to realize that this (the campaign) has been going on for over a year now," Richards said.

"Election day is always tough, and this will be the third one for us this year — I'll be glad when it's over, and I know the voters will be too."

Citing his recent blitz of television commercials, Richards said his campaign has been geared for the last week to 10 days of the election. He said that unlike his opponent, he has not had the money to advertise throughout the campaign.

At a press conference at his headquarters Friday, Combest said he expects to carry Lubbock and Odessa as predicted and said there might be some surprises in the rural counties as well.

As a result of the last poll completed for him by a private research company in Austin, the former aide to U.S. Sen. John Tower predicted he will win the election today with at least 55 percent of the vote.

Combest said he was pleased he had more money to spend than Richards and added that his contributions were a sign he has the support of people interested in good government.

"It's not that he has not asked for it (money); his problem is he is just not getting it," Combest said.

Richards is having to borrow money to run his campaign, Combest said, because the people of the district do not view him as a viable candidate.

Displaying the confidence of a sure winner, Democrat Montford said Friday he has "70 percent plus" of the vote as indicated by his most recent poll.

The former Lubbock criminal district attorney said he views the election as a temperature gauge of the good job he is doing, particularly considering that this is a year when the Republican Party is expected to dominate the major races.

Thomas said he thinks the two candidates are about even at this point in the election and is confident he will receive a broad base of support throughout the 28th Senate District.

Thomas has criticized Montford over the passage of the education reforms in the last session of the Legislature, saying that if he is elected, the first thing he will do is introduce legislation to repeal that package.

Thomas also has called for the construction of a new prison in the Pecos area and views water importation as "the only solution" to the state's current water problems.

Montford has countered that Thomas' proposals are cost prohibitive and would require a 50 percent sales tax just to finance the prison and water importation plan.

Bruno death ruled homicide by county JP

By KEVIN SMITH
University Daily Staff Writer

The death of Texas Tech football player Kerry Bruno was ruled a homicide Monday by Lubbock County Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack.

Bruno died from chest injuries following a two-car automobile accident at the intersection of 19th Street and Avenue H early Sunday morning. Bruno was a passenger in a 1979 Ford Mustang that was eastbound on 19th Street when it collided with a 1974 Buick Riviera northbound on Avenue H.

Blalack said that according to blood alcohol measurements at Lubbock General Hospital, the driver of the vehicle in which Bruno was traveling had a .195 blood alcohol reading. A person with a reading of .1 or above is considered legally intoxicated in Texas.

Gerald Bean, also a Tech football player, was listed as driving the Mustang at the time of the accident. Blalack said that under the circumstances he had no choice but to declare Bruno's death a homicide.

No charges will be filed in the incident until a police special accident investigation team has completed its report. Following the investigation, the criminal district attorney's office will determine if there is enough evidence to prosecute.

Bean and senior cornerback Roland Mitchell were treated and released.

Bennie Lynn Cooper III, driver of the Riviera, was listed in satisfactory condition at Lubbock General Hospital.

A memorial service for Bruno is scheduled for 11 a.m. today at St. Elizabeth's Church at 2305 Main St.

Proposition 2

Tech won't lose on this deal

By KENT PINGEL University Daily Lifestyles Editor

After graduation, in December for many, May in my case, Texas Tech graduates will receive an onslaught of correspondence from various alumni associations.

The majority of these good causes will ask you for three things: your membership, your time, your MONEY

Many of us will want to join alumni organizations and contribute money to support Tech education and athletics.

But TODAY, through a limited offer, you can take a few moments of your time to help Tech. Vote YES for Proposition 2 (on the election ballot), and award millions of educational dollars to your school and 25 other schools around the state.

Authorities on the issue expect the proposal to appropriate a minimum of $7 million to $9 million a year to Tech, because of the university's size.

It won't cost you a thing! Proposition 2 will be near the end of the ballot and might be overlooked by many voters. The proposed amendment will allocate millions of dollars to non-PUF (Permanent University Fund) schools.

The plan would provide $100 million a year for new construction and rehabilitation of university buildings. Although this funding will not be used to build future football teams — a more beautiful, sound university should attract more blue-chip recruits.

While on the subject of football and taking pride in one's university — HOW 'BOUT THOSE RAIDERS?

The Tech/UT game Saturday provided enough thrills to rank in the top three "loyalty rushes" I've experienced at this school.

My seat was in the second row with an excellent view of the action on the line of scrimmage. Also, I could see the whites of the Tech cheerleaders' eyes (minus that annoying distortion in the PA system speakers behind the front rows).

Those crazy percussionists, called ZITs, were even more enjoyable and comical from a close vantage point. The entire spectacle was as exciting as the major football rivalries presented on television.

While yelling for Tech, I experienced the weirdest physical sensation — getting sunburned about the face, while at the same time, my 13 chest hairs stood on end because of the chills of Tech loyalty dashing through my body.

Admittedly, the spectator enthusiasm at the game never threatened to empty the reserved seating for radical goal post levelings. However, there was a high tide of spirit waves throughout the contest.

Even the most skeptical Tech student would have been deeply moved by the game and the Lubbock crowd's attitude.

Football, like quality education, has contributed to university growth for decades. Last Saturday, the gutsy Raiders provided one of those seldom-seen glimpses of the "college life" spectacles we dreamed of as children. It was a clear-cut example of Tech, the underdog, attempting to rise up and bite the collegiate ass of the Austin Fatcats.

The athletic scenario of the game parallels the fighting spirit of this college as it attempts to operate and prosper on the dusty South Plains, miles away from the state capital (and the more secure schools of the state).

Thanks, Raiders, for such a fine display of determination on the field. Fine examples like the UT game make fans want to help TEXAS TECH!

Voting for Proposition 2 provides the easiest manner of assisting Tech that I have seen. PLEASE VOTE YES!

Relishing the right to vote

To the Editor:

It has been fascinating to me, as a member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, to listen to the discussions by the two major parties which have centered around the topic of religion.

Fortunately, one's personal belief or unbelief in God doesn't prevent him or her from exercising that most precious privilege — that of voting for the candidate of one's choice.

Every person eligible to vote needs to place a high priority on this privilege.

Today, we should join our fellow Americans in going to the polls, and rejoice that we reside in a land where there is a choice of candidates.

NanC Fuller Vice president, S.D.A. Youth For Christ

To the Editor:

It used to be fun to be a Republican. It's not so much fun anymore.

It's kind of a strange sentiment; this year, for the first time in the last 20 years (actually 28), the Republican Party will make enormous gains in the House, possibly in the Senate, and of course, the White House. By all measurements, it should be a very fun year for Republicans. Yet, it isn't for this Republican.

Sure, it will be fun to have Mr. Reagan back in the White House. And it ought to be enjoyable to have Phil "Just don't get between me and a TV camera and you won't get hurt" Gramm in the Senate. I suspect that Larry Combest will make a pretty good congressman, too. So what bothers me so much about this year?

This could just be a guilt trip. The liberals have been telling us for so long that Republicanism is bad for the country that we just might be starting to believe them. I doubt it, though; we've been saying the same thing about liberalism, and they haven't been on any kind of a guilt trip lately.

It's possible that the Republican Party has been down for so long that we've just forgotten how to win, and how to act when we do. Seems to me that the Republican Party did plenty OK four years ago, though. And I don't recall that there was any shortage of celebrations in 1980, either.

Maybe I don't agree with a majority of the Republicans. I know, I know — this is blasphemy in the eyes of the national GOP, but I'm not sure if I am better off now than I was four, or even eight years ago. Four years ago, I was a senior in high school.

Being a senior in high school is probably about as good as it gets. Besides, I was probably closer then to getting a college degree than I am now.

I think I know what bothers me, though, and it scares me.

Americans are, for the first time, starting to take their politics seriously. This is reassuring, yet a little alarming. It used to be that neighbors could start to discuss politics, agree that no matter whom they supported, it was all bunk, and turn to the more important matters at hand, i.e., cinchbugs in the lawn, the Cowboys-Steelers game and the boss at work.

Chances are, now, if you come to a political disagreement with your neighbor, you'll end up calling him a "secular humanist liberal pinko commie," and he'll probably call you a "fascist pawn of the conservative establishment."

Some of the things being said by candidates bother me. The U.S. Senate races always are pretty bad about this, no matter who's running against whom. Remember 1982? Lloyd Bentsen, "Senator Socialist," running against "Der Fuhrer," Jim Collins? That was pretty low, but it pales in comparison with the Gramm-Doggett race.

I'd like to see a new commercial. It could open up with a picture of Gramm and Doggett, and a voice-over saying, "Look at that! Look at that! Listen to what they're saying now!" Then, "Hello, I'm a registered voter, and if you'll give me the chance, I won't vote for either one of you, over my dead body!"

Well, I'll probably vote mostly Republican, but it won't be the Republican Party I'd like to vote for. I'd like to vote for a Republican Party that's as graceful in victory as it is in defeat. Unfortunately, this GOP is not a good winner.

But I'm not a liberal, either. I suppose that the best way to describe my party affiliation would be to say that I'm a "Rational Republican." Of course, I'm kind of a right-winger on some issues....

See what I mean? We just take our politics too darn seriously these days. Frank Bass

Exposing Reagan's flaws

Supporting Reagan seems to be a new craze on campuses this election year. After seeing the Reagan advertisement in The UD on Thursday we decided to write a column to present the issues as we see them. However, we weren't sure how to appeal to students to change their popularity vote for Reagan to an issue vote for Mondale. Here are some excerpts from the conversation:

"Why don't we talk about the deficit. Write down that Reagan's four-year deficit is larger than that of all prior U.S. presidents from George Washington to Jimmy Carter combined."

"The majority of us will suffer in more ways than one from Reaganomics. Did you know that today women only make 59 cents for every $1 a man makes? In 1980 (before Reagan) women made 62 cents compared to the $1 a man made."

"Yeah, and Reagan still says we don't need the Equal Rights Amendment, when women with college degrees make $8,000 less than men with college degrees. The fact is that women college graduates make about the same as a man with an eighth grade education!"

"That's nothing. In 1982, Reagan blamed the rise of unemployment on the increase of women in the work force. It's beyond me why any working woman would vote for him."

"What about minorities? Reagan almost destroyed the Civil Rights Commission, and he wanted the commission to investigate reverse discrimination against white males!"

"His administration tried to gut the 1964 Voting Rights Act when it was up for renewal in 1982."

"Yeah, but after it passed in Congress, he made sure he received press coverage when he signed the bill into law."

"That's typical."

"Here are some facts for the Ag students. Since Reagan took office over 200,000 farmers have been forced out of business. That's a rate of 1,000 families pushed off their land every week, the equivalent of all the farms and ranches in California and Iowa, our two largest farm states."

"Today, one of every five American children is poor. That's more poor children than at any one time in the past two decades. Over half a million children have been knocked off school lunch programs because of Reagan's budget cuts."

"So Reagan doesn't care, and most college students don't have children. Just don't bring up the abortion issue."

"No, we should. Reagan has a shaky stand on abortion. As governor of California, he signed the most liberal abortion law in the nation that provided state funding of abortions and then called it a "humanitarian measure."

"Really? But he's pro-life now."

"He says that, but he has cut funding for prenatal care and child nutrition programs. In the past four years, the infant mortality rate has risen in parts of our cities to match those of the poorest Latin American countries."

"What about this 'star wars' plan of Reagan's?"

"Most scientists predict that Reagan's 'star wars' fantasy won't even be possible until well into the 21st century. The U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency predicted that even if it were 98 percent effective against attack, 40 million Americans still would die. With the proposed budget of $26 billion over the next five years, that's a high price to pay."

"I don't know how Reagan comes off with his theme of America being better off than it was four years ago. He's changed the image of America to one of aggression rather than of peace."

We don't want another four years of Reagan's irresponsibility and unconcern for the American people. Think about the issues and then vote your future. Vote for Mondale-Ferraro.

India: post-assassination mayhem slows

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — The ashes of Indira Gandhi were sent out to the distant corners of India Monday as her son and successor struggled to keep new violence from flaring across this bloodied, embittered land.

The worst of the deadly anti-Sikh reprisals for Prime Minister Gandhi's assassination subsided over the weekend, but at least three people were reported killed Monday in New Delhi — two Sikhs burned to death, and one person shot dead by snipers said to be Sikhs.

Other deaths were reported in Sikh-populated Punjab state.

Rajiv Gandhi, the new prime minister, asked the Indian Supreme Court's chief justice, Y.V. Chandrachud, to head a commission to investigate Mrs. Gandhi's slaying last Wednesday by two men identified as Sikh members of her security guard, the news agency United News of India said.

Unsubstantiated newspaper reports persisted of a high-level military conspiracy behind the assassination. Justice Chandrachud was expected to give his reply soon to Gandhi's request, UNI said.

One of the assassins was killed by other Gandhi guards, but the second, identified as Satwant Singh, survived with gunshot wounds and was listed in serious condition Monday at a New Delhi hospital. Reports conflicted on whether Satwant Singh was well enough to be interrogated.

In the chill gray dawn Monday, about 36 hours after Mrs. Gandhi's body was cremated on a sandalwood pyre beside the Yamuna River, her son returned to help collect her ashes.

On Saturday, in a final ceremony, the ashes will be scattered over the snow-capped Himalayas beloved by Mrs. Gandhi.

The rioting that exploded after her assassination took more than 1,000 lives, mostly Sikhs, in one of the worst sieges of communal violence since the Hindu-Muslim carnage at the time of partition of the subcontinent in 1947.

Over 500 were reported slain in New Delhi alone, many of them Sikhs slaughtered Thursday and Friday in a poor district of east New Delhi.

The capital appeared to be returning to normal Monday as a curfew was lifted during the day, and shops, banks and government offices reopened. The streets were jammed again with the usual chaotic traffic of cars, motorscooters, rickshaws and bullock carts.

But new killings were reported late Monday.

There had been unconfirmed reports in recent days that some Sikhs were planning to retaliate against Hindus for the wave of looting, arson and murder directed against the Sikh religious minority.

NEWS BRIEFS

Strikers arrested in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — At least four people were arrested Monday as 6,400 workers represented by the machinists' union struck General Dynamics Fort Worth Division, the manufacturing plant for the F-16 jet fighter.

The four were arrested as striking workers attempted to block cars being driven into the plant by non-striking employees, said acting White Settlement City Manager Bob Salinas.

The union president said the average wage scale at General Dynamics here is $12.01, about 85 cents an hour below the next lowest for his union's members in the industry.

The walkout by District Lodge 776 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers union idled construction of about 15 F-16 jet fighters currently being built each month, said Pat Lane, the district lodge president.

"We've worked for the number one defense contractor in the United States and yet they want to be the cheapest when it comes to paying wages and benefits," Lane said.

Lake yields dismembered man

AUSTIN (AP) — Body parts pulled from Town Lake near downtown Austin probably came from a Hispanic man who might have been a painter, but investigators said Monday they knew little more about the remains.

Two arms, two thighs and two legs cut off below the knees were found in the lake on Sunday by fishermen and a woman walking her dog. Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo said the victim "was cut up with a sharp instrument, probably a hunting knife."

His study of the parts showed they probably came from a Hispanic male, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds. Bayardo said the man was in his late 20s.

Dallas shooting trial continues

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors spent Monday on the nuts and bolts of their murder case against Abdelkrim Belachheb as police testified about the site of six killings and the defendant's arrest.

Belachheb, a 39-year-old unemployed Moroccan waiter, was identified by a series of witnesses last week as the calm gunman who began shooting patrons off their barstools.

He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to six counts of murder and one of attempted murder.

Maximum punishment on each of the murder charges is life in prison.

Chemical weapons treaty unlikely

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. arms control officials are hoping for Soviet approval of a new anti-chemical weapons treaty which would give each of the superpowers the right to make unprecedented and wide-ranging inspections of the other side's military and government facilities.

The proposed treaty, which has been offered by the United States at the ongoing 40-nation Geneva disarmament talks, is now the subject of intense discussion among U.S. allies, according to sources who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

With polls showing President Reagan likely to win re-election, the arms control policies which would be pursued in a second Reagan administration are now under review by advisers who are divided on how to verify any pacts, particularly amid U.S. charges the Soviets may have cheated on past treaties.

The unprecedented inspection proposal in the draft chemical weapons treaty is one possible way to keep the Soviets from cheating, say administration officials.

But the Soviets have publicly criticized the U.S. proposal and it is unclear whether they will ever allow it.

Douglas Feith, deputy assistant secretary of defense for negotiations policy, said in a recent interview that the U.S. treaty "is totally unprecedented. We've never made an offer like this."

The heart of the U.S. proposal is an offer to permit "special inspections" of all government facilities, including any military installations, along with all "government-controlled facilities," which would include private companies doing contract work.

That would permit the Soviets to inspect a wide range of U.S. facilities if they wanted, even the Pentagon or the White House, Feith acknowledged.

But the United States would have the same right to look at Soviet facilities, something the Russians have never granted, he noted.

The U.S. proposal would create a "fact-finding" panel of five nations, including the United States, the Soviets and three other countries. Only those five could order a "challenge" inspection and any treaty member wanting a check would have to convince one of those five to seek it.

After the inspection was requested, the challenged nation would have to open its installation within 24 hours. The challenge inspections would be in addition to normal, routine checks the panel would make.

The American proposal didn't win the approval of all segments of the U.S. government when it was first raised.

Kids get chance to meet police on 'friendly' terms

By CAMILLE WHEELER
University Daily Contributing Writer

At first, teachers and students at Wilson Junior High School didn't know what they had done to deserve a visit from Lubbock Police Officer James Armstrong five days a week. Armstrong is one of three Lubbock police officers participating in the city's School Resource Officer Program. The program, aimed primarily at grades seven through nine, is based on a similar program in Plano, said Lt. Jim Kimber, who heads the Lubbock program.

The program began in January 1984 when the Lubbock police department and Lubbock school system launched a four-month pilot program at Atkins Junior High. The pilot program, financed by a federal grant, was a success. "At the end of the program," said Armstrong, "they (Lubbock school officials) evaluated it and wanted one for every junior high."

The program was expanded to three officers for the 1984-85 school year: Armstrong at Wilson Junior High, Officer Larry Ladd at Alderson Junior High and Cpl. Dave Tillery at Atkins Junior High.

The program is designed to give students a chance to talk with police officers on a personal basis. The program also promotes voluntary juvenile compliance to criminal laws.

The program is successful because of the confidentiality between the student and officer, Kimber said. "The student will often go to the officer before he goes to the school counselor," he said.

"We're just here on a one-to-one basis to help the kids," Armstrong said. "We want to let students know that the police officer is human; he hasn't grown up in a sterile world."

Some students were hesitant about the program for several days. "There was that initial ice-breaking period where the biggest question was 'What have we done? Why do we have to have a police officer?'" Armstrong said.

Wilson, Atkins and Alderson junior highs were chosen because of their good records, Armstrong said. The three schools chosen by the school district's central office "had very few juvenile delinquent referrals."

Armstrong now is a welcome sight at Wilson Junior High. He talks individually with two or three students a day, and he spends time in the classroom. "More and more, the teachers are making use of us," Armstrong said. "I spent one entire day in a classroom rap session."

School resource officers are required to make presentations to classes and PTA groups and provide referral information to students about such subjects as drug and alcohol abuse, suicide prevention and crime control.

By integrating his material with classroom material, Armstrong has found the secret to having a captive audience.

For example, he recently brought several police reports to an English class. "I let the students decide whether or not they were good reports," he said.

Armstrong also plans to teach fingerprinting to a science class studying binomial classification. "I'll bring a portable fingerprint kit from the police department and let them classify their own fingerprints," Armstrong said.

Students at Wilson Junior High will be given an opportunity to monitor the speed of cars on Quaker Avenue by using a police radar gun. "I'm going to let them clock the cars," Armstrong said.

School resource officers also are urged to attend after-school affairs, eat lunch in the school cafeteria and mingle with students in the halls between classes. "It's like the old days when a cop walked the beat and knew everybody," Kimber said.

Kimber said the police uniform still is a barrier, however. "Kids will approach an officer more if he's wearing civilian clothes," he said.

Armstrong does not miss his uniform. "I wore that thing for eight years, and I'm enjoying not wearing it," he said. "Now I wear it whenever I have a mind to."

The School Resource Officer Program operates in conjunction with the Lubbock Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and Methodist Hospital in counseling depressed adolescents.

Sex experts to speak at seminars

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

Topics focusing on the ambiguous sexual standards that lead women to confuse sex and love and the reasons behind teenage pregnancy will be discussed in seminars this weekend by Carol Cassell, president of the American Association of Sex Educators.

Cassell, who will be the keynote speaker on two speaking occasions, is the author of the new book, "Swept Away: Why Women Fear their own Sexuality." Cassell will speak on teenage pregnancy at a community education forum Friday sponsored by the Planned Parenthood Association of Lubbock.

Another keynote speaker will be state Rep. Irma Rangel, who will discuss "Unity Among Women's Groups."

"This is the first year an entire month has been designated National Family Sexuality Education Month," said Donna Sollie, Texas Tech assistant professor of home economics. "We want to emphasize the women have about sexuality and promote responsibility for sexual activity, in addition to importance of everyone in the family being involved with sex education. Our goal is to try to provide ways a family can enhance communication of sexuality in the education field," she said.

Cassell

"Carol's keynote speeches will help identify fears many providing more information," she said.

Cassell also will speak Saturday at the sixth annual Prime Time for Women. The conference will allow women to share ideas and gather knowledge from experts in politics, education, childcare, law, health and other various topics. The ambiguity of today's sexual standards will be one of the topics for the forum.

In her book, "Swept Away," Cassell examines the difference between sex and love, including the good girl/bad girl standard, religious upbringing, birth control issues and the women's movement.

Sollie pointed out that both speech topics are relevant to college students as well as family members and those who work with family trends, community education and sexuality education.

"The book 'Swept Away' brings a welcome message to women everywhere. It heralds a true sexual revolution, one that will allow women to act on their desires without having to cloak them in false romance; one that will enable women to control their lives, to make conscious decisions with clear, unfettered minds," she said.

"We are fortunate to have a speaker of Carol's stature to talk with us," Sollie said. "She is a dynamic speaker and what she has to say makes a lot of sense."

Rangel is serving her fifth term in the Texas House and was elected as a delegate to the National International Women's Year Conference in 1977.

Rangel also was appointed to the Texas Advisory Committee of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights in 1980.

Some topics to be discussed are "Women and Depression," "Financial Planning," "Childcare Issues," "Women and the Law," "Women in Politics," "Women and Depression," "Superwomen: Making Choices" and "How to Market Yourself Effectively."

The teenage pregnancy seminar will be from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Friday in 169 Home Economics Building. The Prime Time forum will begin at 9 a.m., and workshops will continue until 5 p.m.

Mayor commends apology for stolen flags

By LISA MORRIS
University Daily Staff Writer

Lubbock Mayor Alan Henry read a letter at the Student Association meeting last week commending the SA for its resolution apologizing for any Texas Tech student involvement in the theft of more than 300 spirit flags.

According to the SA resolution, 340 spirit flags donated by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce were displayed on Broadway and University Avenue the week of the first Tech home football game "to beautify the area, as well as to promote Texas Tech spirit." "It is truly regrettable that so many of the flags were stolen," Henry said.

He said he believes "maintaining a close relationship with Texas Tech continues to be a top priority."

Most of the flags later were recovered.

SA Senate President Alison Bennett said SA representatives will distribute information on Proposition 2 today in the University Center.

"If Proposition 2 passes, millions of dollars each year will be given to Tech," she said.

Proposition 2 is a Texas constitutional amendment proposing the restructuring of the Permanent University Fund (PUF) and the establishment of a special higher education fund.

If Proposition 2 passes, a portion of the Educational Assistance Fund (EAF) will be allocated to Tech. The EAF previously was referred to as the Capital Higher Education Fund (CHEF).

Currently, PUF funds are restricted to the University of Texas system and Texas A&M University. PUF is financed by revenues from 2.1 million acres of oil-rich West Texas land.

Proposition 2 would restructure the PUF and increase the number of higher education institutions eligible to benefit from the fund.

Assistance Fund (EAF) will be allocated to Tech. The EAF previously was referred to as the Capital Higher Education Fund (CHEF).

According to the resolution, the proposed hours should cater more toward students' MWF class schedules by beginning at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday and continuing until 10:30 a.m. Friday.

In other business, Shelly Fischer, SA external vice president, was officially commended for her "diligent efforts in putting together The Word magazine for the 1984 school year."

Career led Tech vice president halfway round world

By LAURA TETREULT
University Daily Staff Writer

A large, framed map of the world is located on one wall of the office of the Texas Tech vice president for academic affairs and research. That map symbolizes the international interests of the man who has held that office since 1981.

John Darling's duties as vice president for academic affairs and research include general administrative responsibilities of the academic programs in the six colleges, the Graduate School and the School of Law. He also is the communication link between the faculty and the administration.

"I've got two hats to wear. I represent the president to the faculty and I have to represent the faculty to the president," Darling said.

Darling also oversees the Office of Research Services, the Junction Center campus, University Libraries, the Ranching Heritage Center, official publications and the public television station, KTXT-TV.

Darling brings to the office experience from both the academic and business circles. His specific professional interests include administrative leadership, planning and strategic decision-making and international management and marketing.

Darling has co-authored six books about international management and marketing. He also has written numerous manuscripts published in professional journals.

"I think it's very important that administrators in the academic setting maintain some continuity in their scholarly activity," he said.

Several aspects of international marketing and management are applicable to the academic setting, Darling said. Topics such as social styles in management, conflict management and administrative management are relevant to the administration of a university.

John Darling

"This is a marketing position. The skills you need to promote and develop are very much entwined in the marketing discipline," he said.

"Every day I'm dealing with a management-related issue. A student complaint against a professor is a management issue."

Darling has achieved several of the goals he set when he came to Tech in 1981, including completion of a period of major administrative recruitment. Since Darling assumed his position at Tech, five new academic deans and several other administrators have been appointed.

Darling also has reviewed and revised all academic affairs policies during the three years he has been at Tech. As a result, a whole range of policies and procedures relating to academic affairs and research have been formulated, he said.

"I plan to invest a great deal of resources to add top-notch faculty to the great faculty that already exist at Tech," Darling said.

"I think we are going through a period in the next five years of not rapid growth, but rather refinement and dramatic attention to improving the quality of programs and the quality of students."

Since 1975, Darling has lectured in 35 countries on various areas of international marketing and management. During the summer he accepted an invitation by the Chinese government to lecture on international marketing. He spent two weeks in mainland China and another two weeks in Hong Kong, South Korea and Taiwan.

Darling also has presented seminars and lectures across the United States and in countries such as Australia, Canada, Egypt, Finland, Poland and Sweden.

Darling also is the U.S. special representative for Skobank, the largest bank in Finland.

"My position with Skobank concerns working with clients of business firms in Finland concerning their questions of marketing products in the United States," he said.

Darling received an associate degree in 1957 from Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa. Two years later he received his bachelor of science degree in commerce and business administration from the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Majoring in marketing and minoring in economics and management, Darling also received his master's from the University of Alabama. He received his doctorate in the same major and minors from the University of Illinois in Urbana.

"If I had to go back and write the script of my life, I wouldn't change anything," he said.

A key professional move for Darling came in 1971, when he moved to Wichita, Kan. While a professor of administration in the College of Business at Wichita State University, he also served as president of the Business Research Associates Inc. "The Wichita, Kan., move was a key move professionally because it helped me develop a close tie between the academic and business worlds," Darling said.

His international interest was limited until he taught international marketing in 1974-75 at the Helsinki School of Economics in Helsinki, Finland. Teaching only international marketing for a year had a major impact on his life. The experience of living in Finland and traveling in Europe, Russia and Scandinavia also changed the lives of his wife and three children, Darling said.

In 1976 Darling was appointed dean of the College of Business and Administration for Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Ill. Darling said his appointment at the university was another superb opportunity because he became involved in a management training program for businesses in Egypt during the time of the Camp David accords.

"The opportunity to come to Texas Tech University has got to be considered a highlight in my life," Darling said. "I couldn't have a better job for me right now than what I have now."

"When I get up in the morning I look forward to coming to the office," he said.

Brave Combo plays courageous deviation from accepted musical forms

Brave Combo

By PETE WILKINS
University Daily Staff Writer

Patrons of Fat Dawg's were treated to an unusual musical alternative by Brave Combo Friday night.

Brave Combo, a quintet hailing from Denton, is different from the average rock band in that it is not really a rock band — polka is their bag.

Yes, polka — but not your typical Lawrence Welk stuff, either. You won't hear Lawrence Welk playing the "Jimi Hendrix Polka," no matter how long you watch his show. You will hear Brave Combo play Hendrix, as well as obscure tunes like the theme from the movie, "Rosemary's Baby" (a waltz) and the television hit "Green Acres."

Brave Combo's performance Friday was an intense show consisting of three sets, each lasting almost an hour. From the beginning, the band played energetically. After about the sixth song, lead singer Carl Finch invited the audience to get up and dance. Then things really started to get hot.

With a crowd dancing frenziedly in front of the stage, Brave Combo continued to pound out one polka song after another, ranging from Tennessee Ernie Ford's "Sixteen Tons" to "People Are Strange" by the Doors.

Although the crowd at hand was not excessively large, it seemed to consist of quite a few hardcore polka fans. Many people in the audience were familiar with the band's material, and those who weren't could yell out their requests with reasonable hope of hearing the song played with a slightly new beat.

In addition to a vast repertoire of traditional polkas, Brave Combo also displayed an amazing ability to transform today's latest music into a polka, mambo, waltz or just about any other European or Latin format.

Carl Finch was equally comfortable sitting at the keyboards or strumming his battered guitar. He also took an occasional jaunt on accordion. No matter what he played, Finch proved to be an excellent musician.

The other members of the band appeared to be earning their pay as well. Bassist Lyle Atkinson was not content to play simple lines on the bass but chose instead to play fast, intricate parts that sounded great and were fun to watch, to boot.

Drummer Mitch Marine provided the pulse of the band, proving to be adept at an extensive variety of tempos and rhythms. Woodwinds player Jeffrey Barnes was no slouch, either. Barnes not only played three saxophones and a clarinet throughout the evening, but at one point he played two saxes AT THE SAME TIME. Tim Walsh, also a woodwind player, was not present for the show.

By the third set, Brave Combo was playing almost every request from the audience, from The Who to Led Zeppelin to TV show themes like "Jeopardy." The crowd continued to slave away over a hot dance floor, getting more exercise than a solid week of "Twenty-Minute Workout."

Some of the more courageous members of the audience were persuaded to try the "Duck Dance," which was described by Finch as "perhaps the fastest growing dance craze in the world today." Maybe, but it has yet to make its appearance on "American Bandstand."

Much of the material presented Friday was from the Combo's latest album, "World Dance Music." The LP contains 14 songs featuring polka, ska, cumbia, waltz and reggae, as well as a host of other forms not normally heard on your FM dial.

Following their third set, Brave Combo once again took the stage for a customary, but well-deserved encore. The audience took this last opportunity to dance before stopping for a much-needed oxygen break.

In an interview following the show, Finch answered the question that has been asked of the band since Brave Combo began: Why polka?

"Basically because we didn't want to listen to or play copy tunes," Finch said. "I really started liking polka about 10 years ago, which was square at the time."

Finch said much music today, including polka, emphasizes the upbeat, which is what makes the music attractive. He said some rock music today has become "self-indulgent" and that some of the performers seem to be playing only for themselves.

"It's no good unless you're doing it WITH the crowd," he said.

For those few uninitiates who have not yet been polka-tized by Brave Combo, there is a good chance that the band will play an acoustic set in the upcoming Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York.

Moore: Raiders down, not out

By LYN MCKINLEY
University Daily Staff Writer

Jerry Moore's face showed its 44 years Monday. His voice was hoarse. His message was clear. The Texas Tech Red Raiders are hurting.

The Raiders lost a football game to the No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns Saturday. They lost only 13-10 after leading 10-7 with six minutes left in the game. They came so close to one of the top upsets in college football this season.

Moore and his team lost a football player Sunday morning, when senior linebacker Kerry Bruno died from injuries suffered in a car accident eight hours earlier. Practice was canceled Sunday, and a private memorial service was observed Monday by Tech players.

"It's kind of hard to sort out where to start," Moore said. "As for the game itself, our players played hard and almost as good as they could. After looking at the films, I don't find any difference in the outcome of the game or with our effort. We maybe didn't execute on a play or two on offense and defense, but we played pretty darn good against Texas."

Moore continued to analyze the Texas contest, saying the team improved this week despite the loss. The Raiders planned to pass more against Texas' young secondary, especially after the ejection of Jerry Gray. But the game just didn't turn out the way the coaches planned.

"Offensively we didn't do as well as we would have liked. But the Texas defense had a lot to do with that," Moore said. "There were things we could have taken advantage of, but the time factor entered in."

"The only time we thought about sitting on the ball was at the last. We threw on first down, trying to get the ball in field goal position. We wanted a chance at a field goal or a touchdown," Moore explained. "We wanted to run time off the clock. Even my wife knew what was in store if they got the ball back then, with that great field goal kicker."

And then Moore turned the conversation to another matter, a subject closer to the heart than a heartbreaking defeat.

"We've had more distractions the last 24 hours than before," Moore said about the players' reaction Bruno's death. "We've got a bunch of classy men here. I know they'll be emotionally bothered for awhile."

"You don't dress with, play with and live with another player and not get attached to him as more than just another football player. The relationship is man to man among players. It hurts when you lose

Morren nominated for award

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Tech quarterback Perry Morren is one of 11 quarterbacks who have been nominated for the 1984 Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Award, it was announced Monday.

Other nominees include Damon Allen, California State-Fullerton; Robbie Bosco, Brigham Young; Doug Flutie, Boston College; Bernie Kosar, Miami (Fla.); Chuck Long, Iowa; Peter Muldoon, Holy Cross; Eric Thomas, Florida State; Mike Tomczak, Ohio State; Willie Totten, Mississippi Valley; and Jack Trudeau, Illinois.

a guy like Kerry Bruno," the coach said.

Moore then paused, choosing carefully his words to describe a delicate situation.

"It's different. It's an empty feeling. We've all been around death before. You want to say the right thing, but sometimes you hurt inside and the words don't come out like you want. We feel his loss as a person, not only as a player."

After the team members' memorial service Monday, the Raiders began preparations for a football game. Tech plays TCU in Fort Worth Saturday, perhaps the squad's toughest game of the season. Coach Jim Wacker has psyched the Frogs to 7-1-0, 4-1 and a national ranking. Even Jerry Moore believes.

"TCU is one of the hottest, if not the hottest team in the country right now," Moore said. "I think they're the best coached football team in the country. They may not have as much talent as other teams in the Top 20, but they're doing an excellent job utilizing the talent they've got."

The Horned Frogs defeated Houston 21-14 Saturday in the AstroDome, perhaps burying the myth that this TCU team is only Wacker's dream. The Frogs are second in the nation in rushing offense, averaging 310.8 yards a game. They're third in the nation in total offense, averaging 473 yards a game and are third in the nation in scoring offense, with 36.4 points a game.

TCU running back Kenneth Davis is the top runner in the country with a 8-yard average per carry. He's also second in the nation in scoring with 13 touchdowns and is third in the country in rushing with 145.6 yards per game. The Frogs' victories include a come-from-behind 32-31 win over Arkansas, a game Moore said was the turning point of TCU's season.

"Jim Wacker has done a tremendous job convincing their players they can win. I've got to take my hat off to Jim and his staff," Moore said. "He's made them into that kind of football team."

Moore said he would give the players time to regroup Monday at Bruno's memorial service. Then the past will be forgotten. At least until the '84 season ends.

"We've got to finish our season. We could end up 7-4," the coach said. "I'm not trying to take away any of the hurt or downplay the accident. It's a permanent thing on our minds right now. But that's what Kerry Bruno would want—for us to go about our business after the right amount of time. It's time to get back on track."

Corralling a Longhorn

The University Daily/Rea Robertson

Texas Tech's Leonard Jones wraps up Texas' Kevin Nelson Saturday in the Red Raiders' 13-10 loss at Jones

Stadium. Tech will play its final road game of the season Saturday against surprising TCU in Fort Worth.

Akers says 'you win 'em anyway you can'

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas Coach Fred Akers said Monday the Longhorns' squeaker win over Texas Tech — salvaged by a field goal with three seconds to go — fit neatly into the way he likes to win games.

"We don't care how we move the football. We don't care how we win the ball games. Just so we do it," Akers said at a news conference.

The win pushed the No. 2 Longhorns to a 6-0-1 mark as they prepare for Saturday's contest here with Houston, 4-4.

Actually, Jeff Ward's 35-yard field goal with three seconds to go gave Texas its most comfortable win since a 38-13 rout of Rice four games ago. In last-play wins over Arkansas and Southern Methodist, it was the Longhorns' defense that held on for the win.

In the Tech game, it was the offense — moving into Ward's range — that pulled out the 13-10 win over unranked Texas Tech. It's a trend Akers likes.

"We find different ways to protect wins," he said. "Against Arkansas and SMU our defense was on the field protecting the win. This time it was our offense moving it to get the win. I think any time you do that it has to help you."

"You win 'em any way you can win 'em. After getting the start that we got and providing as many breaks as we did for our opponent, to come on back in the second half — especially the fourth quarter — that's a fine comeback win," Akers said.

For his role in moving the Longhorns in for Ward's winning kick, quarterback Todd Dodge was named by Texas coaches as one of their outstanding offensive players against Tech.

The Port Arthur senior hit 12 of 25 passes for 190 yards, including a short touchdown toss to Bill Boy Bryant, the other outstanding offensive player selected.

Spikers whip Angelo State

By REAGAN WHITE
University Daily Staff Writer

Karri Ohland

The Texas Tech volleyball team made its last home appearance of the season Monday with a convincing win over the Angelo State University Rambeles at the Student Recreation Center.

The match also marked the last home appearance in the careers of seniors Debbie Vela, Karri Ohland and Cecilia Lange, who coach Janice Hudson said "have provided a lot of leadership and a lot of other good things for this team."

"We're grateful to them, both as a team and as a coaching staff. I really think that if your seniors take over for you, and do a good job, then consistently you're going to have a good team," Hudson said.

Tech's three seniors have done that this season, resulting in a very successful year for the team, she said.

Tech had had success in both previous matches with ASU this year, and the Rambeles seemed determined to stop Tech's streak, jumping out to a 4-1 lead in the first game.

The teams exchanged scoring streaks as Tech went ahead 6-5, then fell behind 11-7. Lange then ripped off five consecutive serves for points, putting Tech ahead 12-11 and taking over the game's momentum. Tech went on to win, 15-12.

The second game saw ASU again get off to a quick start, going up 6-2. A Tech timeout seemed to get the Raiders ready for action as they scored seven of the next eight points, going up 8-7.

With Tech leading 12-9, the Rambeles called a time out, apparently hoping to get the same sort of results Tech had earlier.

It didn't work. Tech refused to allow ASU back in the game, and a Debbie Crown kill ended the game, 15-10.

The third game saw the physically outmatched ASU squad dominated at the net by Ohland, Allison Hetterich and the rest of the Tech team.

Hetterich served five consecutive points to put Tech up 10-5 and seemed on her way to more of the same when an aggressive kill attempt by Crown went out of bounds.

Hetterich returned the favor with a good natured kick to Crown's pants.

But Crown redeemed

herself on the next point with a powerful kill shot, and Tech rolled on to a 15-5 victory to end the match.

Hudson said the last home match always has an added emotional element that makes it harder for the players to play their best. "They wanted to play well. When you don't too much, usually you don't play well," she said.

"It's a bittersweet ending. We're very pleased with what we've done so far, but there should be more."

The Raiders do have one more match. Tech will take on Texas A&M Monday in College Station, and a win would tie Tech with the Aggies for second place in the Southwest Conference.

"All the pressure is on A&M, and none is on us because we know if we beat them, we tie them for second," she said.

Netters win tourney

The Texas Tech men's tennis team won the title in its own Tech Invitational Friday and Saturday at the Tech Tennis Courts.

Tech players won three divisions and totaled 27 points. Midland College was second in the meet with 23 points followed by West Texas State with 17, Abilene Christian with 12 and South Plains College with 7.

In No. 1 singles, David Leatherwood and Simon Hurry, both from Tech, made it to the finals. They will play later this week for the title.

In No. 2 doubles, Lamar May and Monte Montigel defeated Roger White and Shane Thompson of ACU, 6-3, 7-6.

May won the No. 3 singles title by defeating Andy Bruner of Midland, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Robert Vrij of Midland won the all comers division, beating Tech's Tony Blaas, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

Cavazos finds sport a way of life

By BRENDA KAY RICE
University Daily Staff Writer

Cavazos

Running is something Veronica Cavazos always has taken seriously. She runs not just one or two miles a week, or even 10 or 20. Seventy miles a week is not unusual for Cavazos. And she enjoys it. "I love cross country because you run in one event and that's it," Tech's No. 2 cross country runner said. Cavazos and her teammates have little time left to train for Saturday's NCAA District VI meet in Austin. For Cavazos, a day of running varies. She often totals 12 or 13 miles in addition to her regular drills. "I've seen a lot of runners come and go, because if you don't have the talent, it's pretty tough," she said. Cavazos said Tech coach Jarvis Scott, who competed in the 1968 Olympics for the United States, somehow makes the training a little easier to take. "When Coach Scott cheers you on or gripes you out, you can't turn to her and say, 'Why don't you run?' because she's been there," Cavazos said. "She knows how you feel because she's done those workouts. She's real tough. "I guess that's helped me to try to keep a tough attitude. You really have to want to be out there running every day, because if you don't have the talent, it's really a lot of work."

Cavazos began running cross country just four years ago at Lubbock Coronado High School. Having just moved to Lubbock from Concord, Mass., she decided to join the squad "to make friends."

That year, Cavazos won the district meet, placed fifth in regionals and advanced to state competition. But Cavazos said her high school accomplishments mean little now.

"Running is so personal," Cavazos said. "I like to talk to Jarvis, and she helps me set my goals. Timewise, you always want to have a faster time than last week, or you want to beat someone you didn't beat last week."

Cavazos said she feels close to her teammates and her coach because she spends so much of her time with them.

"Our team is real close," Cavazos said. "It's nice; they understand. When you start to nag, they say, 'Just do the best you can. That's all we ask.'"

After her career at Tech is finished, Cavazos hopes to compete in road races. She said that while much money could be made in the events, she would not want to run for pay.

Cavazos said race promoters can earn as much as $70,000 while many runners can earn as much as $10,000. Large companies sponsor the runners, providing running gear and various other items.

"It's hard — you have to be really good," Cavazos said. "As a runner you have to be tops."

Writer's true sympathies obscured by objectivity

By REAGAN WHITE
University Daily Staff Writer

White

Before every football game at Texas Tech, persons sitting in the press box are treated to a warning. They are told they are sitting in a "working press box," and that "cheerleading" for either team will not be tolerated. "Offenders will be escorted from the press box by security personnel," the message concludes.

And so, no matter what happens on the field, nobody in the press box yells. Nobody does anything but sit there and scribble throughout the game.

This is an amazing demonstration of self-control. There probably is no one in the world with stronger feelings about who should win a game than your average sportswriter, who has chosen to make a living covering sports events.

The reason they don't get to bang their heads on the ground when something goes bad, or throw confetti when something goes good, is a concept called "objectivity."

Sporting events are news events, and news events must be covered impartially if a newspaper intends to be a newspaper very long.

It is hard to be impartial. One of the toughest struggles I have with objectivity comes every week when I make my Fearless Forecast picks. Who I want to win and who I think will win often are two completely different things. Did I want Tech to beat Texas?

You're damn right I did. I would have given anything to be out on the field for just one play, so that I could take a running shot — preferably a cheap shot — at one of the Longhorns, who preferably wouldn't be looking.

But when the Fearless picks were published Friday, I had picked Texas. Did I do it because I'm a Benedict Arnold? Did I do it because I'm the sort of guy who'd grow up in Texas, then go play for Oklahoma?

Would I give my mother rat poison?

No. I did it in the name of OBJECTIVITY. I would have picked Texas over any team in the nation. I also would have expected Tech to give them one of the toughest games anyone in the nation could have given them.

Those who criticized me for picking Texas over Tech are getting me mixed up with the guys who wear the tight red and black pants on the sidelines.

My job at The University Daily is to be an objective journalist. It also is helpful to be honest. For me to be anything else would reflect poorly on the credibility of both myself and The University Daily.

I'm not in the public relations business. As long as I'm a member of the press, I'll try to take the advice of that grim announcer in the press box and keep the cheerleading out of my reporting.

If I get booted from the UD staff, maybe I can get a pair of tight red and black pants and let everybody know who I'm pulling for, every game.

In the meantime, I'll pick who I think will win and won't apologize for my opinion.

By the way, I'm picking Tech over TCU next week. I would have loved for Tech to prove me wrong against Texas; I'd bet money they'll prove me right against TCU.
