Reporters, officials tour U.S. Carbide plant

By The Associated Press

INSTITUTE, W.Va. - Union Carbide officials on Tuesday took reporters on a tour of their only U.S. facility that produces methyl isocyanate and expressed confidence they can avoid a disaster like the gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people

A small army of reporters heard repeated assurances from company spokesmen that although the Institute facility is 10 times larger than Union Carbide's plant at Bhopal, India, the chemical is safely contained here in three underground tanks.

Carbide stopped producing methyl isocyanate in Institute, some 10 miles west of Charleston, the day after the Indian leak. Tuesday's tour marked the first time reporters have been allowed to enter the Institute plant since the Dec. 2 disaster in India.

Asked if he could guarantee the safety of the 150,000 residents of nearby Charleston and the surrounding Kanawha Valley, Carbide health and environmental director Jackson Browning said "the company's track record of safety and a healthy respect we maintain for this chemical" speak for themselves.

Institute plant manager Henry Karawan noted Carbide has been making methyl isocyanate here for 17 years. He said he thinks the company's safety procedures, such as an extra holding tank, scrubbers and flares, would protect nearby residents from an accident similar to the one at Bhopal.

In India, officials said some 20 million gallons of methyl isocyanate leaked from Union Carbide's affiliateoperated plant. The cause of the accident has not yet been determined.

Karawan told reporters small amounts of methyl isocyanate periodically have escaped at the Institute plant, usually because of leaky

"We have had worker exposure" to the chemical, he said. "But we never have had a situation where any employee was injured in a lifethreatening manner."

Carbide officials said the tour was intended to explain the plant's operations and allay the fears of area residents. They conducted two fours Tuesday, one for reporters and another, invitation-only session for about 50 local officials and residents.

Karawan said he wanted everyone to know Institute plant workers perform constant maintenance on the miles of pipes and valves involved in the chemical-making process.

Browning said that while the Indian and U.S. plants were of the same basic design, the engineering details at the Bhopal facility were done by a firm in India, under supervision of Union Carbide engineers.

There are some major differences in the two facilities, however. Institute's production capacity is 10 times that of Bhopal's, and the holding tanks at Bhopal are vertical and only partly underground while the Institute tanks are horizontal and wholly underground, Browning said.

Takeover attempt causes change in Phillips' bylaws

By The Associated Press

With a proposed $9.1 billion takeover bid for Phillips Petroleum Co. stalled by lawsuits, Phillips said Tuesday it had taken further defensive action by amending its bylaws and filing new charges against its unwelcomed suitor.

The uncertainty surrounding the postponed takeover bid by a partnership of Mesa Petroleum Co. and Wagner & Brown, an independent oil firm, sent Phillips stock falling $2.25 Tuesday to $50.371/2 a share. Mesa was off 50 cents at $20.371/2.

The legal skirmishing has made some traders skeptical about the success of the takeover bid, said Warren Shimmerlik, an analyst who follows the oil industry for the investment firm Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. "There's a little less certainty than there was before" of prospects that the Mesa group would succeed or that another bidder would emerge, he said.

Phillips asked a federal court in Delaware to block the Mesa Partners group from proceeding with its bid and sought $10 million in damages.

It alleged the partnership led by Mesa Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr. had misled the public and evaded federal laws relating to the registration of securities and the solicitation of shareholder support.

Mesa Partners said the lawsuit was "completely without merit."

The bylaws change affected a procedure that the Mesa Partners group said it intended to use in an effort to remove the Phillips board of directors and replace it with a panel controlled by its own nominees.

Pickens' group proposed soliciting the written consent of shareholders of the board's shakeup, a move that could be carried out by mail without the need for a special stockholders meeting.

Phillip's said its board set a procedure for such a vote and decided that only shareholders of record on Dec. 4, the date the offer was announced, would be eligible to vote. As of tht date, Pickens' group owned 8.9 million Phillips' shares, for 5.7 percent of the company's stock.

The board also said it would allow only 60 days for the consent procedure, meaning the Pickens' group would have until early February to mount its campaign to gain control of the board.

On Monday, Mesa Partners said it would not begin its previously announced offer to buy 23 million shares of Phillips' stock for $60 a share to gain seats on Phillips' board by an agreement Mesa signed last year with Dallas-based General American Oil Co. of Texas.

Under that agreement, Mesa said it would not buy more General American stock or attempt to take over the company for five years from Jan. 6, 1983. The next day, Phillips agreed to pruchase General American for $1.14 billion. Once the legal questions were resolved, it intended to buy additional Phillips' stock, either through a tender offer or by other means. It said it might seek additional financing.

Shultz says U.S. attacks would get big support public support.

"We are talking about defending ourselves through defensive measures, through pre-emptive actions of one kind or another that can be identified clearly," Shultz told reporters during a flight from Washington.

He said the United States should not hesitate to retaliate for terrorist strikes, although "we haven't talked in terms of retaliation with a sense of revenge." He said retaliation should be seen as action to prevent future strikes, adding, "The object is to defend ourselves."

Shultz would not say if the United States was considering a retaliatory strike in response to the Dec. 4 hijacking of a Kuwaiti airliner to Iran that lasted six days and resulted in two American passengers being killed.

He said U.S. officials wanted to talk to two surviving Americans before offering any judgment on the sincerity of Iran's effort in trying to end the hijack crisis. Iran security forces stormed the plane Sunday, freeing the last of the hostages.

But he remarked, "It was a long time the airplane was on that tarmac before definitive action was taken."

Shultz arrived at Gatwick for a 24-hour visit as a guest of British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe. Shultz will go to Brussels, Belgium, today for a three-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers.

During the flight from Washington, Shultz made several comments suggesting the Reagan administration is ready to strike at terrorists when it has conclusive evidence they are ready to strike at American interests.

The secretary dismissed the idea that the United States might be risking more GATWICK, England — U.S. Secretary terrorism if it attacked terrorists and acof State George Shultz said Tuesday that cidentally killed some innocent people. attacking terrorists before they attack He said previously that the lives of inno-Americans would be an act of self- cent civilians and U.S. combat forces defense that he thinks would have broad might have to be risked if the United States retaliates against terrorists.

> "They (the terrorists) don't seem to need additional excuses to try to hit us," he said. "They seem anxious to do what damage they can."

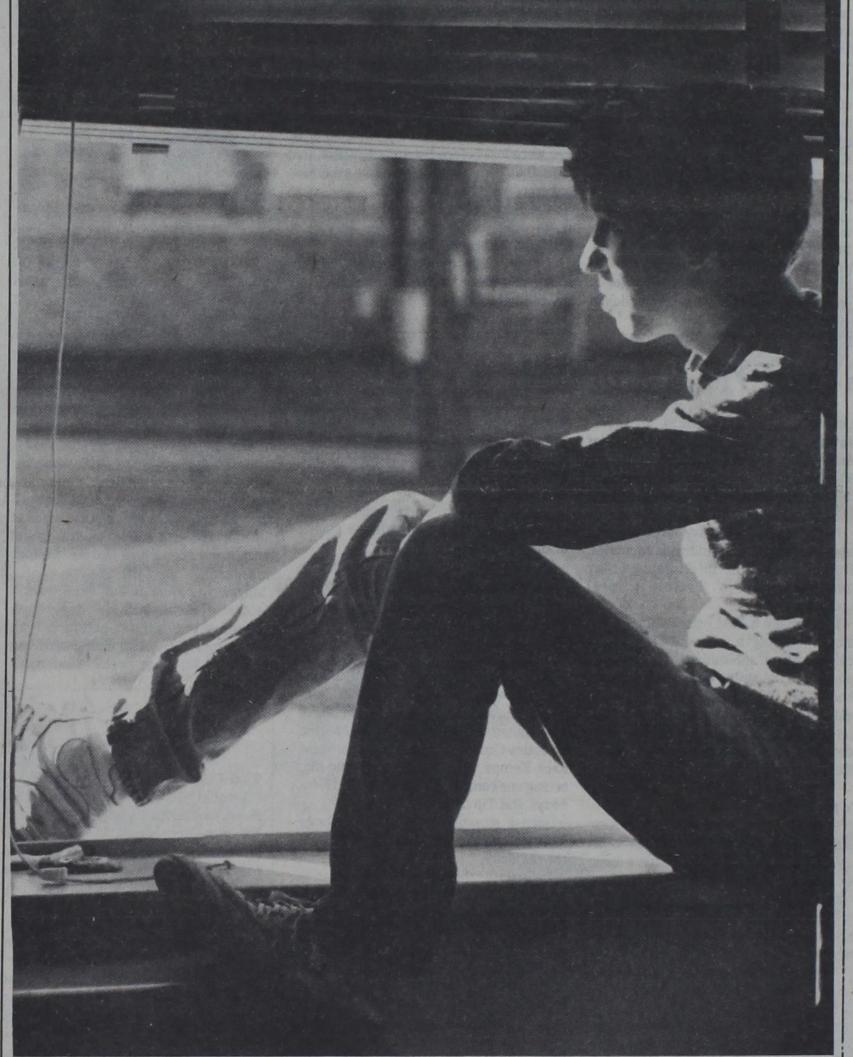

Shultz acknowledged differences exist on the issue of retaliation between himself and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who has voiced concern about risking American lives in retaliatory strikes that might not have public support.

Shultz said he thought it "very good" that Kuwaiti authorities did not yield to terrorist demands to release 17 prisoners convicted of bomb attacks on the U.S. and French embassies and other installations in Kuwait last year.

Regarding the North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting, Shultz said the major focus of his talks with the NATO allies will be East-West relations and his meeting next month with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva, a meeting that will mark the resumption of U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations.

Shultz said he will be "actively looking" for his allies' views about the talks. He said President Reagan has not yet made the major decisions on what positions the United States will take at Geneva, indicating the views of the allies will be a major factor in devising U.S. negotiating strategy.

He declined to answer a question on whether the United States would consider offering the Soviets a moratorium on testing of anti-satellite weapons. The Soviets had in the past demanded a moratorium as a condition for holding talks on controlling space weapons.

Controversial blue laws began for religious purposes

Editor's Note: This is the first part in a three-part series examining the controversial blue laws. Today's story explores the history of the law. Thursday's story will examine the law's effect locally and in Texas.

By KIRSTEN KLING University Daily Staff Writer

One of the oldest institutions in the United States is under attack in the courtrooms. The Sunday closing laws, commonly referred to as blue laws, have survived several assaults in the Texas Legislature in the past two decades.

Blue laws, which have existed for centuries, prohibit various activities and the sale of certain items on Sunday. The blue laws have existed in the United States since the 17th century, when the incentive for the law was purely religious.

Blue laws have a long history, which may make banning them in some states difficult. Currently, the laws are under attack by a group of major retailers, including Sears, who are questioning the validity of the blue laws in the 1980s. Whether or not the laws are constitutional and the modern significance of the laws are being examined by today's lawmakers and citizens.

"The original reasons for the blue laws were religious," said Charles Bubany, a Texas Tech law professor. "Now it protects small businesses and labor. We're groping around for ways to justify the

"If the religious reason is lost, it makes the whole law kind of murky.'

Despite consumer complaints against the Texas law and attacks on the Legislature and state Supreme Court to remove the law, it remains on the books. Public opinion has grown increasingly hostile to blue law restrictions. According to Texas Monthly magazine, about 70 percent of Texas consumers oppose

In Texas, the blue law prohibits the sale of goods on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays. Although stores may sell merchandise on Sunday, most stores statewide close their doors on Sunday to be able to remain open on Saturday.

Texas adopted its first blue law in 1863, which prohibited working, drinking, horse racing and gambling on Sunday. By 1984, Texas had expanded its list to include 42 other regulated items of

The term "blue laws" originated in 1781, when the Sunday laws of New Haven, Conn., were printed on blue paper. The concept of blue laws dates to Roman times, however. Although about half the states in this country have blue laws, the pattern and focus of Sunday laws varies depending on the geographical region. New England and Middle Atlantic states have the strictest Sunday regulations because of their early Puritan influence. Some Middle Atlantic states require Sunday observance influenced by settlers. On the other hand, Far West states have few Sunday laws, and those enacted are less severe.

According to the law books, "the earliest restriction upon sabbath activities may well have been the biblical commandment proclaimed on Mount Sinai that the seventh day of the week shall be a holy day of rest."

The first compulsory observance of the Sunday sabbath occurred about 320 A.D., when Roman Emperor Constantine ordered all judges and residents to rest on Sunday, according to history books.

The first recorded observance of Sunday as the Christian sabbath occurred in the second century, "when Roman Christians congregated on that day to pray, read and eat together ... "

The University Daily/Mark C. Mamawal

The act of 1676, passed during the reign of Charles II, influenced American blue laws. The law was in effect at the time of the American revolution in 1776. It required church attendance, prohibited all unnecessary labor and prohibited the sale of any merchandise on Sunday.

The first blue law in the American colonies, the Virginia Act of 1610, ordained harsh punishment for men and women who failed to attend morning and evening church services. A first offense was punishable by the loss of one week of provisions, while the penalty for a second offense was a whipping and provision loss for a another week.

Slowly, exceptions to the Sunday law became evident. Licensed sports activities were allowed in addition to other activities. The Lord's Day statute was replaced by the Common Day of Rest Law in 1962 in such states as Massachusetts.

Today the blue laws generally are viewed as "a product of the early union of church and state, originated as religious measures designed to promote

Since then, the constitutionality of the law has been strongly questioned. The U.S. Supreme Court has recognized that although the blue law origins are religious, modern Sunday closing laws are distinct, without religious meaning for many. The court has recognized Sunday laws as promoting "a day of rest, recreation and family togetherness, rather than as a means of promoting a particular religion."

Today some state courts have declared various state and local Sunday closing laws to be unconstitutional. Several states have eliminated their blue laws or eliminated specific categories from their lists of prohibited items.

Finals: In my way they lie

"Fortune and glory, kid." Fortune and glory ... adventure and gold. Maybe not literally, but in the long run that's what drives us all to pursue the goals of passing grades and graduation, isn't

OK, maybe it isn't a faraway jungle temple full of ancient deathtraps and hanging skeletons. Maybe it's just finals.

The trick is not so much surviving the actual physical dangers as making the most of the hardship undergone. Most of us already have survived the worst physical challenges of the semester (well, OK, not counting ROTC cadets and maybe physical education class finals).

But all across the nation, thousands of students are embarking on the grand adventure called "the end of another semester." Maybe you know it as "dead week." It's that frenetic last few days when everything you've been putting off all term comes due, with more crushing force than a rolling boulder and more frightening speed than a flooding mine

Maybe you know it as "pre-finals syndrome." It's that affliction that makes glassy-eyed slaves of otherwise normal young people, sending them into concrete catacombs like zombies, mining away day and night in search of the keystones of knowledge that will empower them to master a ritual of finance.

Maybe you're familiar with it under the name of "cramming." It's the lastditch effort to amass incredible amounts of knowledge, under the influence of mind-bending potions that prevent sleep and produce a semi-hypnotic state in which victims are extremely susceptible to suggestion.

Some victims can be identified by their lack of response to spouses, friends, loved ones and sidekicks.

Others are more difficult to diagnose. They work for hours over humming typewriters, with frowns on their faces and deaf to everything around them.

Some become hysterical. Risking life, limb and sanity in pursuit of a final project or a completed paper, they will labor with incredible energy for hours that challenge the Guinness statistics and never turn a hair. Then, almost clear, with perhaps one paper left or one exam in the whole week ahead, a broken fingernail will send them into screaming fits.

But, fellow scholars, do not despair! The magic stones of knowledge lie at the tips of our fingers. Let not the thought of being dropped into the vortex of finals daunt your hearts; let not the notion that once again, teachers are about to reach into your living minds (so to speak) and rip out everything their classes have implanted there during the semester make you cringe. One quick flick of the wrist will wrest the secret bounty from that recalcitrant computer, and then escape is easy: simply regurgitate everything the professor ever thought about saying in front of

Take heart: the leap from one track of knowledge to another is short and straight. Falling off and hurtling down into the depths of failure is a negligible danger now.

We are the heroes of the piece, as we draw near to the end of another semester. We must succeed.

In a few short weeks, we can pack all this useless knowledge we now stuff into our protesting brains back into the nightmare arks of our texts (and hopefully, we can sell those) from whence it came. Then, with chosen spouse, friend, loved one or sidekick, we can wander away and ignore the whole thing, till next semester

At this time of year, when we exchange Season's Greetings with what might appear to some to be careless conventionality, I want to extend to all your readers my sincerest wishes for a Happy Holiday.

I wish a safe journey to all our Tech travelers, the homeward bound students and the faculty and staff departing for the holiday.

To the Editor:

I, unlike Kevin Treible, have learned quite a few facts about Central America. Freely elected governments in Guatemala, Chile and the Dominican Republic have been murdered by the CIA and U.S. government. Never has the United States supported true freedom or democracy in Latin America. This would mean the end to an abundant source of slave labor for U.S. corporations.

The "atrocities" of the CIA wars in Central America are the very blockades to freedom. Read the book "Missing" to learn about U.S. fascism.

I said I did not believe in the Bible. This does not mean I have no understanding of

In speaking of our forefathers, why doesn't Treible try to remember what our revolution was about? It was to overthrow a repressive military government determination to the majority of Americans, the very same reason Central Americans are revolting against their militaristic regimes propped up by U.S. imperialism.

I will admit that I have more to learn about various Latin American countries. But my "small intelligence" far outweighs Kevin Treible's total ignorance.

I will make a deal with Treible. I will stop vocalizing my liberal (although I call it radical. Liberalism is for the supporters of the status quo) and unwanted knowledge if the United States agrees to get the hell out of Central America and let (countries there) establish true democracy and economic independence. Kevin Barksdale

To the Editor:

Once again, Kevin Barksdale has given us his slanted version of world events. He says "more than 50,000 people have died, because millions of dollars are taken from the needy of this nation to buy military equipment for the Salvadoran government to continue its reign of murder and terror."

In the first place, the Salvadorans were fighting before we began supporting their government, and the Nicaraguans are still fighting now that Congress has ended our support for the Contras. The fighting in Central America is likely to continue, regardless of what we do.

More important, the Salvadoran government is not conducting a reign of terror. Jose Napoleon Duarte was chosen by his people in a free election to lead way, the guerrillas refused to participate. Any government that is freely chosen by its people has not only the right, but the duty, to defend itself against a minority of its society which refuses to peacefully tolerate the choice of the majority.

This is what the Salvadoran government is doing. Yes, terrorist acts also are committed by right wing death squads, but whatever the case might have once been, Duarte's government is trying to end this, too.

Differences of opinion are an important safeguard of our rights and privileges. Although I am a conservative Republican, I would scarcely like seeing an entire Congress of Jesse Helmses and Jack Kemps any more than I would like seeing one composed entirely of Ted Kennedys and Tip O'Neills.

Such a situation could easily change from rule of the majority to tyranny of the majority.

In Britain, the party out of power is known as "Her Majesty's loyal opposition." You, Mr. Barksdale, take a very different view. Instead of working within the system to change what you see as its faults, you say that you "would gladly move elsewhere and let this country die from its self-inflicted wounds."

Well, if this is how you really feel, what's stopping you? I can only hope for your sake that you manage to find some other place where you can write an editorial against the government in power and not worry about anything worse than an indignant reply.

Making 'dead week' live

To the Editor:

I would like to address an issue that should concern all students at Tech. As the semester comes to an end, we students are bombarded with extra notes and the work that we all have put off doing until now. We are definitely swamped as we prepare for finals.

But I am amazed that many professors are not aware that this last week of the semester is "dead week." The university has provided some relief for the students with its policy of no quizzes or exams during this time. Yet many professors have violated this policy and continue to add to our workload.

The professors condemn us for waiting until the last minute, and some will probably say we deserve it. The quiz and test scheduled in two different classes of mine have been canceled "dead week" instituted at Tech. It's onbecause I reminded professors of the

I think this policy is minimal, considering that many universities across the country (including the one I previously attended) discontinue classes during the very last week so that students can study for their exams and so that professors can catch up on grading projects, papers and exams. The policy is considerate to all involved in the university atmosphere. It is ludicrous for this university to expect students to attend classes this Friday when there is a final exam scheduled the very next day for that

Secret files hold scenarios of World War III actions

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In the secret files where such nightmares are kept, many scenarios describe the opening days of World War III.

One version — based on a strategy called "the follow-on force attack" - has attracted public attention lately, partly because it has a happy ending. Here it is:

Sometime in the future, say 1995, tensions between the Soviet Union and the 16-member North Atlantic Treaty Organization grow dangerous, and negotiations fail.

The 2.9 million-man NATO army, including roughly 300,000 Americans, and the 4 million-strong Soviet bloc forces line up on both sides of the East-West border. Most of the Western forces are committed to the front-line defense along the 1,056-mile West German border with East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Aware of the U.S. capability to reinforce West Europe with several fresh divisions within two weeks and counting on the desire of both sides to avoid nuclear weapons, the Soviets launch a conventional attack. Their aim is to use their massive tank divisions to crush the outgunned defenders and force them into a quick surrender.

The first days of fighting are fierce, but the Allies are confident they can hold the leading edge of the Soviet offensive without using "battlefield" atomic weapons that surely would trigger a worldwide nuclear holocaust.

Behind the East Bloc lines, waiting for a weak point in the defense, are the bulk of the Soviet armies.

The supreme Allied commander, a fourstar U.S. general, now plays his ace in the hole: NATO's superiority in sophisticated non-nuclear forces capable of stopping the Soviet follow-on forces that would tip the

Reconnaissance aircraft that can fly over home territory but "see" 20 to 100 miles into enemy territory tell friendly forces where every enemy tank and troop formation is

Manned fighter-combers and Lance and cruise missiles, armed with "smart" munitions that don't miss, hit the masses of waiting tanks, planes and troops.

Airfields, roads and railheads are knocked out with remote-controlled mines and "runway buster" ammunition with names like KERP (kinetic energy runway penetrator), and ERAM, which uses seismic sensors to zoom in on tanks.

The Red Army's follow-on forces are wiped out, the attack stalls, and the war ends in either a stalemate or an Allied victory without a nuclear shot being fired.

Plans to develop a "strategy" that would make such a scenario workable were revealed last month when NATO ambassadors in Brussels ordered military planners - most of them Americans - to incorporate the "follow-on force attack" into Western defenses.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, NATO's top commander, dislikes calling it a "new strategy" because it's always been NATO policy to attack forces in the rear, if possible, without high losses. Now it's possible because of the new weapons, he says.

Ector County denies funds to repeat child's transplant

By The Associated Press

ODESSA — Ector County commissioners have denied funds to pay for a second liver transplant operation for a 5-year-old girl who is a ward of the county.

The girl does not realize the crisis around her and seems happy most of the time, said Vella Connally, a volunteer who has worked on the child's case, said.

"Mary Evelyn knows she's surrounded by a lot of love of the foster parents. She's just a real little fighter," she said.

Commissioners voted 4-1 at an emergency meeting Monday to deny funds to pay nearly $170,000 in hospital bills for Mary Evelyn Mosqueda, a patient in Dallas Children's Medical Center awaiting her second liver transplant in six months.

"We can't pay for everyone that is sick," Commissioner Julian Pressly said.

County Attorney Gary Garrison said he had talked to the state attorney general's office, which said the county had no legal liability to pay the bill.

"Harsh as it may sound, we have to look at reality," Garrison said.

When an agreement between the county and the state to care for the girl was reached, it was never intended to include paying for "organ transplants," Garrison said.

Connally said the girl's situation is much different than others.

"We feel what makes Mary Evelyn different from another organ tranplant child is that she is a ward of the state," Connally said Tuesday.

Mary Evelyn underwent her liver transplant last June at the University of Minneapolis hospital. State Medicaid and donations totaling $83,000 paid for the child's medical expenses and she was sent home after a month's stay.

But her body began to reject the donor liver and she was returned to the Minneapolis. She now has an outstanding bill of $147,000, Connally said.

On Nov. 1, Mary Evelyn was transferred to the Dallas Children's Medical Center, where the first liver transplant in Texas recently was performed. Dallas also is closer to the North Central Texas community of Mineral Wells, where Mary Evelyn's foster parents live.

Connally said the bill at the Dallas facility now is about $33,000. She said the girl's final bill could total $400,000 and that the children's board has only $23 left for Mary Evelyn.

Houston stores ditch bad water

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kroger officials voluntarily ordered bottles of drinking water pulled from almost 170 stores after state health department tests showed some of the water contains a non-hazardous bacteria.

The presence of the fecal coliform bacteria was discovered during tests by the Texas Department of Health, but the bacteria is not likely to cause illness, Lenwood Scholtz, of the department's food and drugs division, said Tuesday.

"There's no hazard," Scholtz said. "This has been blown out of proportion."

Scholtz said state health officials had not ordered the water removed from Kroger's 169 stores in Texas and Louisiana.

Four of 18 one-gallon con-rour of 18 one-gallon containers tested by the agency contained the bacteria — which is not a contaminant, but is used to determine if contamination is present, said health department spokesman Mark Lowry.

Peter Larkin, director of public affairs for Kroger, said the bacteria was found in some one-gallon plastic bottles taken from Springdale drinking water and dated Aug. 24, 1985, and July 31, 1985. "The fact that coliform is present does not necessarily mean there is any danger," Larkin said.

Larkin said Kroger was voluntarily pulling the product from its shelves.

"We are doing it voluntarily as a precaution," Larkin said.

In addition to the bacteria, health officials in Galveston found tiny glass or plastic beads in bottles marked with a June 23, 1985, date, said Joe Vickery, chief sanitarian for the health district

Still, safeguards are necessary for certain activities such as water sports. "I don't recommend wearing lenses - even extended wear — while swimming," she said. "The problem is that you have to keep your eyes closed the whole time, because if you open them, the lenses will wash out and float away."

Mercer pointed out the differences among three major groups within the eyeglass and contact lens industry: opthalmologists, optometrists and opticians.

The first category is composed of licensed medical doctors who perform eye surgery and treat diseases of the eye. In contrast, optometrists are doctors of optometry who examine eyes and check them for refractive error. Opticians take the optometrist's prescription and measure, fit and dispense lenses to the doctor's specifications.

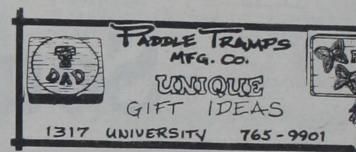

State law does not require opticians to be licensees; however, it is illegal to dispense contacts without a prescription. Mercer warned students against doing business with any company that promises to provide con-

NEW YORK (AP) - Gary Carter didn't have to think very long about whether he wanted to be a New York Met.

Tisdale got hot hand, never slowed down

By The Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. - Early in Monday night's game against Southwestern University of Texas, Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale played where he normally plays - down close to the basket, surrounded by defenders.

He connected on his first nine shots and didn't slow down much the rest of the way. By the time the game ended, the All-America forward had 55 points and the 15th-ranked Sooners had a 126-76 victory.

Tisdale, bothered by the flu lately, said he may have done better if he had felt better.

"The flu is still with me a little bit ... I was getting tired at the end," he said. "Maybe if I had been 100 percent I could have gotten 70. "When I hit my first nine shots, I figured I was on track. I thought I better miss one or people would think I might not be human."

With a little more than nine minutes remaining, the 6-foot-9 Tisdale sat down with 51 points.

"He missed an outside shot and I had to take him out," joked Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs. "We can't have that." Tisdale returned to the game about a minute later and finished the game at point guard.

"We have a deal," Tubbs said. "Any time we're 50 ahead, Wayman goes to point guard."

Landry will root for old nemesis

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday he can't stand to watch Friday night's game between the Los Angeles Rams and San Francisco — a contest vital to his team's chances of making the National Football League playoffs.

If the Rams lose, the Cowboys can get into the playoffs by ACCURATE and fast. Spelling corrected. defeating the Miami Dolphins next Monday night.

"I probably won't even look at the game because all I'm concerned about is the results," Landry said. "I've seen enough football games this year."

In reference to 49ers quarterback Joe Montana, Landry joked, "It's hard to become a Montana fan, but I guess I will,"

Montana threw the game-winning touchdown pass against Dallas to give San Francisco the National Conference title in

"I'll root for anybody who gives us a chance," Landry said.

Should the Rams win, the Cowboys still could get a wild card spot if St. Louis beats Washington on Sunday and the New York Giants lose to New Orleans on Saturday. In any case, the Cowboys would have to beat Miami.

Dallas is 9-6 and tied with the Giants and the Cardinals for second place in the National Conference Eastern Division behind

Washington, which is atop the heap at 10-5.

The Rams are 10-5 in the NFC West, but Dallas has a tiebreaker edge. The Cowboys, seeking an NFL record 10th straight appearance in the playoffs, suffered a damaging blow by falling to Washington 30-28 on Sunday.

"The Washington loss has to rate as one of the big disappointments we've had through the years," Landry said. "Our team played so hard, but it came down to the turnovers. All their fumbles bounced back to them."

Landry said he thought the Cowboys could bounce back.

"Our team must get ready right now and not wait until this weekend to get ready," Landry said. "Both the Rams and Cowboys have their work cut out. They'll have to win on the road, and if they can't then they shouldn't be in the playoffs." Oddsmakers made the Cowboys six-point underdogs for the meeting with the Dolphins. "I think our team will respond," said Landry. "If they can read, then they know what's going on. I don't know if we can reach as high an emotional level as we did for Washington, but the team just has to do it." Landry said he thinks the Dolphins, who already have clinched a playoff spot, will go all out against the Cowboys. "When you have a 13-2 record it's hard to play bad," Landry

In a telephone call to the Dallas media Tuesday, Miami Coach Don Shula confirmed that the Dolphins plan to get after the

"We have an obligation to the other teams and coaches to do the best job we can to win," Shula said.
