While Director of Development John Anderson declined to comment on the internal goals of the campaign, he said the three-year drive will target both the public and private sectors.

"Three years of work is finally coming to a fruition Oct. 4 with a press conference, a reception and a dinner at the civic center," he said. He said major donors and friends of the university will be among those attending Friday's festivities.

SAE's lose recognition

By LINDA BURKE University Daily News Reporter

While it has not been made public exactly what disciplinary action was taken against the Sigma Alpha Epsilon (SAE) fraternity last week, Larry Ludewig, dean of students, said Monday the fraternity "is not a registered organization with the university right now."

He said the group can petition to become registered.

An investigation into the hazing incident was completed last week. The fraternity chose not to appeal a decision handed down by the Dean of Students Office. The actions ruled upon by the office were prompted by the hazing of Texas Tech freshman Cary Stenholm during the fraternity's hell week. Stenholm spent four days in the hospital recovering from 'physical exertion,"

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, Stenholm's father, said the chapter will be run by the alumni.

"I'm sure the decision was made in the correct way for all parties involved," he said.

David Alderson, SAE president, said everything has gone fine and that the matter is resolved. "Life goes on," he said.

Committee proposes replacing computers

By FRANK BASS

University Daily News Reporter

A proposal to switch the Texas Tech computer system from an IBM mainframe computer to two other computer systems will be submitted to Tech President Lauro Cavazos Wednesday, sources say.

The proposal, the work of an ad hoc committee appointed by Donald Haragan, interim vice president for academic affairs, will recommend that the current IBM mainframe system used by both academic and administrative departments be replaced by two VAX 8600s and a Control Data Corp. (CDC) mainframe.

"The faculty has had no input at all into the process," said an anonymous source. "Someone needs to warn the teachers that a disaster is going down, because we'll be turning out students who can't compete."

Despite the source's allegations, members of the ad hoc committee, which is chaired by Donald Gustafson, chairman of the computer science department, said the proposal has been given serious consideration.

"One of the problems with the existing system is that when the administration uses the computer, it's during heavy usage hours," said Kathleen Hennessy, an associate professor of electrical engineering.

"About the last one-third of the semester, the system is operating at between 85 percent and 90 percent capacity, there's a brown-out and no work gets done," she said. Hennessy said another reason for the committee's consideration of the proposal, which would place two VAX 8600s in the colleges of Business Administration and Arts and Sciences and one CDC in the College of Engineering, is that the VAX 8600s are less expensive.

Hennessey said individual computers could be purchased for less than $10,000 compared to the $3.5 million total cost of the current computer system.

"Most students are doing work that can be done for a smaller cost," said Hennessey.

Another beneficial aspect of the proposed systems, Hennessey said, is the complexity of the existing system.

"My view of computing systems is that at the lower-user end we need something small and very accessible," she said. "The present system is like using a sledgehammer for every job, when some people are only trying to kill an ant." A source said if the computer system is changed to a VAX-CDC combination, several services curstudents would be shut down. "It's going to cut off Wilbur, CI/CS, V-Sam, VM/CMS, Script, rently available to most Tech

Techpub, Syspub, MVS/370 and JCL," the source said. "We believe they should have both IBM and VAX - like they're using now.

Hennessey, however, said many of the services that would be discontinued are too complex for many beginning students. She said several of the services performed by the current system can be done easier by less expensive, less complicated systems.

Hennessey said the Tech proposal will be similar to a proposal being considered at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, which has a system similar to Tech's.

College of Business Administration Dean Carl Stem said the proposal will not be acted upon immediately.

"We will have a meeting Wednesday with President Cavazos to brief him on this," Stem said, "but I think the IBMs will still be here for a long time."

Some faculty members expressed surprise about the committee's proposal but did not protest the proposal.

"The last time I checked, 80 percent of the mainframes in 'the real world' are IBM," said Dennis Adams, an instructor in the information systems and quantitative sciences division of the College of Business Administration.

"I don't think a change would devastate us," Adams said. "I believe for the average student, it may be easier to learn on the VAX."

Other professors reached for comment late Monday afternoon said they would be unable to comment until they have more information on the proposal.

"They have kept this whole proposal very quiet," a source said. "People have been told they can't talk about it."

Opening testimony began Monday in a federal lawsuit filed against Elizabeth Haley, Texas Tech dean of the College of Home Economics, and John Darling, former vice president for academic affairs and research.

The suit, filed in September 1983, alleges that Darling and Haley violated the civil rights of Tech professor Cora McKown. McKown is asking for more than $10,000 as compensation for the alleged violation of her civil rights. The plaintiff's lawyers have charged that McKown's rights under the first, fifth, ninth and 14th amendments were violated.

McKown, former chairperson of the department of family management, housing and consumer science, began teaching at Tech in While no longer chairperson of the department, she still serves as a professor.

Haley has taught at Tech since 1981. Darling, who resigned July 22 as vice president for academic affairs and research, is a professor in the College of Business Administration.

Capital campaign kickoff worthwhile, way past due

On Oct. 4, Texas Tech University will kick off its first capital campaign, a drive expected to bring $60 million to Tech's sagging endowment fund.

We would like to commend the officials responsible for initiating this campaign. Tech is at the stage now where more funds are necessary for the university to continue operating at a high caliber.

The university's reputation in research, exemplified by the grant given last year to the College of Engineering for Strategic Defense Initiative laser research, is one of climbing excellence.

But new research opportunity is only one reason for Tech's increasing need for more money.

Tech was the only state-supported college or university to report an enrollment increase this fall. More and more prospective students are learning of Tech's new programs and educational opportunities.

cial bracket and attempt to gain the prominence held by older universities such as Texas A&M and the University of Texas.

In its 60th year, Tech is ready to boost itself into another finan-

Tech finally is standing on the threshold of the door leading to prestige, with only dollar signs keeping us from obtaining the reputations held by older Texas universities.

During the three-year campaign, Tech will be soliciting for donations to the university from the public and private sectors.

As a relatively young university, Tech finally has reached the frontier of Big Bucks. The university needs more money to expand its academic, scholarship, research and recruiting programs. Simply having the money in the bank isn't going to solve Tech's money shortage problems, but getting the money in the bank is an important step.

We urge alumni to give back to the school that gave them their education. We urge parents of current Tech students to give and help make Tech an even better place for their children to learn.

We urge Lubbock business professionals to give to the university. Tech students have supported Lubbock businesses in the past and continue to do so. Consequently, businesses should give back to the university. A networking relationship is a benefit for both

A campaign on a smaller scale could be instigated by Tech students who want to give to the university. After all, as individuals we are a part of the private sector the campaign is targeting.

The key word in this campaign is SUPPORT. Tech officials took the initial step in organizing and structuring the drive; now it's up to us, our parents, ex-students and the business world to prove our faith in Tech as a learning institution.

We want YOU to give!

What drainage system? Sleep and win in class

University Daily Staff Reporter

I was sitting with some friends a while back and I jokingly said, "I think I'll write a column on the Lubbock drainage system."

Laughter rang as they all turned simultaneously and said, "What drainage system?"

Living in larger cities for much of my life, I've become somewhat accustomed to luxuries such as public water, electricity, sewage disposal and water drainage. The last of which Lubbock is terribly lacking.

I really don't know what Lubbock's beloved forefathers were thinking of when they designed the city. They must not have heard the famous joke:

First speaker - "Lubbock doesn't get that much rain. Fifteen inches a year isn't bad."

Second speaker — "Yeah? Well, you should be here on the day it comes!"

final point on the agenda rises. Our heroes of the past all are sitting around a poker table in a dark, smoky saloon.

The voice at the head of the table strikes up, "Last, and of course least, is the question of an underground drainage system."

"Well, Zeke," says the dealer from under his worn visor, "I don't think we needs to be worryin' about no water drainage system. It purt-near never rains here anyhow. What say we build a prairie-dog town instead?"

This may not have been the case, but it has an accurate feel to it.

You'd naturally think officials would catch on and do something about the problem. But after 76 years, they still haven't got the WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan asked Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler Monday to give up her cabinet post for the ambassadorship to Ireland, the White House announced.

Heckler, who launched a campaign in recent days to save her job at the helm of the government's largest department, asked for and was given a few days to think about it, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said. Heckler met with Reagan alone in the Oval Office for 50 minutes Monday afternoon to try to talk him out of reassigning her.

But Speakes said the president, who denied earlier in the day that he would fire the HHS secretary, urged her to accept the job as "a promotion."

Overloading, bad fuel blamed for crash

JENKINSBURG, Ga. (AP) - A single-engine plane whose crash killed the pilot and 16 skydivers carried contaminated fuel and may have been overloaded, federal aviation investigators said Monday.

A black discoloration was found in the right fuel tank of the Cessna 208 Caravan, said Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. Investigators did not know what had contaminated the fuel, or its source, he said.

The Federal Aviation Administration said it grounded the plane Friday because of contaminated fuel, but Burnett said the plane's owner took off without correcting the problem, which would have been a violation of FAA rules.

Firemen search for capsized raft victims

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — City workers and county volunteer firemen searched Monday for 21-year-old twin brothers whose raft capsized in the rain-swollen San Antonio River.

Gerald Joe and Harold John Juarez were reported missing Sunday, officials said.

The two were floating down the river on a homemade raft with another brother, Lincoln Juarez, 18, and a friend when the raft capsized and the Witnesses said one of the brothers was wearing a life jacket when he slipped under the water.

New Coke outsold by Classic formula

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Coca-Cola Classic is outselling the reformulated Coca-Cola "hands down in almost all markets across the U.S.," the trade magazine Advertising Age reported Monday.

In some markets, Coca-Cola Classic, which is the new name for the original formula Coke, is outselling the reformulated brand by 9-to-1, the magazine said.

Advertising Age said its staff surveyed 23 Coke bottlers across the

"These conferences ... were conficial procedures," states the 1958 involvement. AAUP report.

During Abernethy's meeting, Watkins read portions of three letters written by former students after the board's decision. In one letter a student complained of Abernethy's "classroom attitude," while another student wrote that Abernethy had embarrassed the college by being a "highly controversial figure."

Watkins said the three letters were typical of the 10 letters he had on file, all written after the board's decision and at Watkins' request.

Watkins denied that Abernethy was dismissed because of his political activities. However, the chairman did admit Abernethy's involvement with the liberal wing of the Democratic Party of Texas had been discussed by the board members during the June

The AAUP report quoted Abernethy as saying, "Thus, at the close of this conference, I remained about as much in the dark as I had been before it occurred, as to the real reasons for my discharge."

In a recent interview, Abernethy said student and peer evaluations of himself were generally favorable. He also said more numerous letters of support for him were sent as letters to the editor of The Toreador (now The University Daily) than the 10 negative letters that Watkins said were on file.

Joe Walsh reflects time spent and enjoyed with the Eagles

By The Associated Press

The Eagles were touring in 1975 and their cautious country approach wasn't going over very well, according to Joe Walsh. They were not getting rave reviews, to say the least, and people were saying they sing brilliantly but just stand there.

"The rock 'n' roll people were really starting to like them. I was a vehicle for them to show they were in transition into a damn good rock 'n' roll band. That's why I wanted to be in it," Walsh said.

"We had the same manager. We had hung out. I produced Dan Fogelberg's album, 'Souvenirs,' and used (Don) Henley on it. They thought I was crazy and funny and respected my guitar playing. I was pretty aggressively into playing rock 'n' roll on stage. The intellect of lyrics wasn't a priority. It was get out there and turn the kids on."

Walsh had been in the James Gang, then went solo. "I was getting stagnant and lonely. I wanted to be in a band," he said.

"The Eagles realized they were going to have to teach me how to sing, which they did. I got four really good years of free vocal coaching.

"We went to Australia. Boy, did we stink. It took awhile to get it going on stage. I had to learn Bernie's part on 30 songs and my singing part and had to change it if it didn't blend."

They came back to the United States a well-prepared, primed band, Walsh said. "Hotel California' came out. It wasn't 'Hotel California' yet; it was 'Boy, I hope we pull this off.' We had songs, not many completed. We sat down and organized," he recalled. "Eight months later we had an album of songs, talking about loss of innocence of our generation and realizing we're going to have to begin growing up pretty soon whether we wanted to or not.

"I'd be hard pressed to say anything bad about anybody in that organization. We velled and screamed and nobody liked this guy for awhile. We poured beer on each other's heads, 'Band fight, band fight.' That's healthy for a band, blow it out."

Walsh is writing his next album with Waddy Wachtel. "I've got it in my head, but I don't know how it's going to come out," he said. "I've told a producer I've got a killer guitar part to add to a track. He says, 'Forget it.' Rats. I should have put that on first.

"I lost the ego. I've accomplished everything I set out to accomplish, beyond my wildest dreams. Being in the Eagles, affecting that many people on the planet. When I do gracefully fade into the history book of rock 'n' roll - I'm not ready yet - I want to go as a person having made valid, creative statements for the generation I represent."

Jamaican reggae continues climbing in popularity among Tech music fans

By MARK PERKINS University Daily Contributing Writer

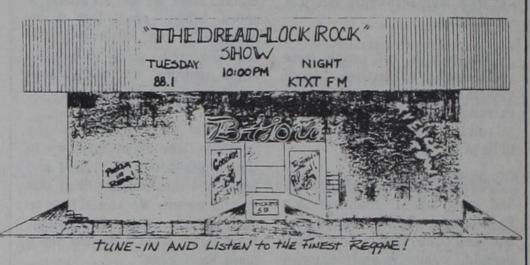

About three years ago, a young DJ from San Diego, Calif., came to Lubbock to study at Texas Tech. He brought with him a box of "leftwing records" and a Hawaiian shirt that he wore on his back. His air name was Johnny Skank, and he went to KTXT-FM to change the staff's perception of music forever. He exposed them to the music of the Third World: reggae, Ska and African pop.

At the time, "The Dread-Lock Rock Show" was conceived in the mind of Johnny and through his efforts was put into action. The airing of Eddy Grant's previous effort, "Electric Avenue," was a big hit nationally and locally while also giving "The Dread-Lock Rock Show" a big shot in the arm. At first the listeners were skeptical of this strange imported music, but considering the tremendous influence reggae has had on American artists such as Lionel Richie and Stevie Wonder, the public already has been exposed to the basic rhythms behind reggae in such American songs as "All Night Long" and "Fuel Injected Passion."

In its current form, reggae music originated in Jamaica brought to Jamaica by black slaves.

Reggae music is greatly influenced by the Rastafarian religion, which promotes world peace and the "uplifting of the people of the 'Third World,'" i.e.: the black man. Reggae in its best form

Howard's ramblings personify absurdity

University Daily Associate Sports Editor

Kent Best

Some funny things are going on in Washington, D.C., these days. Yeah, you've heard of Washington. It's the home of the Has-beens — I mean the Redskins.

Well, it seems since our appointed servants in the nation's capital don't have a decent football team to root for anymore, they're trying to satisfy their sport's cravings on the House

Of course, you'd think they had more than enough problems of their own. But no, they've got to find something sporty they can do something that gets them mentioned in the same breath as Barry Switzer.

Well, it seems U.S. Rep. Jim Howard from New Jersey has taken it upon himself to make sure student athletes who receive scholarships graduate within five years.

Howard's bill, the College Athlete Pure and simple. and Protection Act of 1985, would require at least 75 percent of all students receiving athletic scholarships to graduate in five years or less.

If the measure becomes law, college athletic departments that have less than a 75 percent graduation rate over a five-year period among their student-athletes would not be allowed to accept tax deductible contributions for at least another five years.

Aw, come on, Jim. Why not make it a 90, or even 100 percent graduation rate?. We can't pussyfoot around on this thing, Jimmy. Let's lower the boom on these athletic freeloaders. A mind is a terrible thing to waste!

Well, I guess since Jim's from New Jersey, he can't help being stupid. Plus the fact that being from the wondrous "Garden State" (figure that one out), he can get away with proposing such ignorant legislation (does New Jersey have any college athletic teams, anyway?).

So Jim, I'll forgive you this time. But before you wander back to your ivory tower, let me teach you a little bit about discrimination.

Have you ever heard the word discrimination, Jim? Oh, too many syllables for you? Well, that's OK, because I'm going to explain it to you real simple.

Discrimination is when you single somebody out for punishment just because they are different. Or in this case, just because they run faster.

Hey, Jim, you're discriminating against people who have devoted a good portion of their lives to something they enjoy and to something people enjoy seeing them

So what if a college basketball player doesn't graduate from college? That's his choice. If he would rather spend all his time practicing field goals instead of hitting the books, that's his business.

As long as he keeps his grades at the (already monitored) minimum required by his university, I don't care if he gets his diploma or not. And the United States government shouldn't, either.

For the government to say Joe Linebacker must graduate in five years or his school will pay the price is ludicrous. And discriminatory.

And what about me, Jim? I've been working at this college thing a long time. How 'bout some legislation that will make sure I graduate? Hey, I'm a student, too. My folks and I make annual contributions (tuition) to this fine school to keep me in the academic ball game. So, why discriminate against me by giving incentives to Tech to graduate its student-athletes, but not its student-nothings?

Besides, what are you going to do to make sure all the athletes graduate? Give them brain steroids? Come on, get serious, Jim.

Despite all your posturing and sanctimonious ramblings about the disgraceful state of affairs in college athletics, you, Rep. Howard, have done nothing more than hit a shallow pop fly in the big league of life.

College athletic departments indeed should encourage their studentathletes to earn their diplomas. But the idea of requiring schools to graduate 75 percent of their scholarship recipients borders on the absurd.
