Murdered freshman's funeral set for today

Services for Christian Lee Fisher, 19, of Fort Worth will be at 4 p.m. today at Rosen Heights Baptist Church in Fort Worth. Private burial will follow.

Fisher, a Texas Tech freshman psychology major, was killed Monday night during a shooting spree that left two people dead and another in serious condition.

Michael McBride, 23, of 1903 26th St. has been charged with two counts of murder in connection with the incident. Bonds of $100,000 have been set for each of the murders.

Fisher was a May 1985 graduate of Boswell High School and was a member of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority at Tech.

She is survived by her parents, Michael Fisher of Bedford and Karen Tidwell of Fort Worth; her brother, Scott Fisher of Fort Worth; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Anderson of Paris, Tenn., and Mr. and Mrs. G. Gene Fisher of Fort Worth; three stepisters; and three stepbrothers.

City delays water park opponents

By DAVID CORTES
University Daily News Reporter

The Lubbock City Council voted Thursday to delay until Nov. 14 listening to public opposition concerning financing the development and operation of a water theme park.

At the last meeting, council members voted 5-2 in favor of splitting financial costs with FantaSea Isle of North America, a California partnership, to develop the water park on 25 acres of land located north of East Broadway in Mackenzie State Park.

In order to hear public opposition at Thursday's meeting, a unanimous vote by the council would have been required. Mayor Alan Henry and Councilwoman Joan Baker, however, voted to reject the resolution.

"I feel there are other needs in the city," Baker said. "I know this company (FantaSea) has been turned down by banks in Lubbock. As far as I'm concerned, this project's a risk. If it's such a good deal, why can't they provide their own financing?"

"Council members have been receiving phone calls on all sides of this issue," Henry said. "This meeting was not advertised as a public hearing."

The water park development costs are estimated at $4.8 million, with the city financing $2.4 million for public improvements in conjunction with FantaSea financing $2.4 million for the investment.

Profits generated from the park would be split 80 percent to FantaSea and 20 percent to the city. Additional revenue would go first to pay off any debts incurred by FantaSea and then to the city.

Proposed financing for the city's portion of the park would be met through certificates of obligation. FantaSea would rely on the sale of industrial revenue bonds (IRBs).

Opponents of the water park, led by Southwest Lubbock Water Park, have stated their intention to sign a petition that would force the city to conduct a special referendum on the bond issue so that voters could block the water park project.

Under state law, opponents of the bond issue would need 4,800 signatures to force the city to conduct a referendum.

Under the state law that went into effect Sept. 1, people who sign the petition must be legal registered voters in the city of Lubbock.

However, if the city decides to issue IRBs, the bond issue would not be subject to election.

Opponents of the park then could block development of the park by successfully contesting any one of the city's votes concerning the project.

'Star Wars' to figure prominently at summit meeting

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the fourth in a four-part series on the Strategic Defense Initiative, also known as "Star Wars." Today's story deals with the role of "Star Wars" in the November summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

By CHIP MAY
University Daily News Reporter

President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), also known as "Star Wars," may play a major role in his summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in November.

Gorbachev has said if the United States would halt SDI research, the Soviets would talk about deep cuts in nuclear weapons. Reagan has said the SDI research will not be negotiable.

Reagan, however, has showed some signs that he may be willing to make a deal. According to Newsweek, Reagan has not absolutely ruled out the idea of negotiating on SDI, but he has discouraged trading U.S. research advances for reductions in Soviet nuclear missiles.

Clarke Cochran, a Tech political science professor, said Reagan is convinced SDI can work and that the president is willing to negotiate with the Soviets.

"It's clearly both," Cochran said. "He's (Reagan) convinced that it can work, but he feels it can be used as a bargaining chip. The Russians are afraid of 'Star Wars.'"

In an article in Foreign Affairs quarterly, former President Richard Nixon, who negotiated SALT I (Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty) with the Soviets, gave his views on the Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

The Soviets have 300 ICBMs compared to 40 in the United States, Nixon said. The majority of the U.S. nuclear arsenal is in submarine-launched and cruise missiles.

Because ICBMs are more accurate and have a longer range, Nixon said, SDI is "indispensable to arms control. Without it, the Soviet Union would have no incentive to limit its offensive weapons."

Nixon said Reagan is correct in insisting that research on SDI research is not negotiable because "a ban on research is not verifiable, and because if there is even a remote chance to develop a total population defense, it should be a priority of our defense establishment."

Deployment, as opposed to research, of SDI is the ultimate bargaining chip, Nixon said. "We should agree to limit our deployment of defensive weapons only if the Soviets significantly reduce and limit their offensive weapons," he wrote.

Ed George, a Texas Tech foreign language professor, said SDI is taking our minds off nuclear missiles.

"I think there's too much concern on SDI," George said. "The rhetoric from the administration is that this is the true path to peace. Defensive weapons can escalate to offensive weapons. It certainly is incomplete if the government wants to solve the nuclear arms problem."

George said he cannot understand why SDI is important when it is in the research stage.

"Frankly, I'm confused. When you talk to experts, it's (SDI research) all ground-floor business," he said. "I don't see why it's a major part (of the summit) when it's so primitive."

Howard Curzer, a Tech philosophy professor, thinks SDI is harmful to arms control.

"The main point is I think SDI is disabling arms control," Curzer said. "Suppose the Soviets see in 10 years that the U.S. has nuclear blackmail. The Soviets might panic."

"Here, in the U.S., people say, 'better dead than Red.' In the Soviet Union, they believe something like 'better Red than capitalists.' Their leaders might be more likely to launch a pre-emptive strike."

Nixon answered critics who say the Soviets are ahead in land-based strategic missiles because they cheat on their treaties.

"There is no question that the Soviets will do all that is allowed under an arms control agreement and will stretch it to the outer limits and indeed cheat if they can get away with it," Nixon said. "But they gained their superiority in strategic land-based missiles not because of what they did in violation of arms control agreements but because of what we did not do with in the limits."

Nixon, however, said the United States cannot depend on an SDI system that, at best, would not be ready to deploy until the 21st century.

He suggests that the United States develop a strategic defense system to protect U.S. missile sites. Nixon said such a system is possible within 10 years and would deny the Soviets a first-strike capability on our missile sites.

Reagan cites need for 'fresh start' in American-Soviet relations

By The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan committed the United States on Thursday to "a fresh start" in U.S.-Soviet relations and the search for world peace, proposing that Moscow join him in trying to settle conflicts in five war-torn nations where he said the Soviets are contributing to the daily loss of life.

Launching a public relations counter-offensive from the podium of the United Nations General Assembly on its 40th anniversary, Reagan shifted his focus for next month's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev from nuclear arms reduction to local flashpoints in the Third World.

And he said that before he goes to Geneva for the Nov. 19-20 summit he will present new proposals for ending what he called the unjustified division of Europe between East and West.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who drew worldwide attention two months ago with his proposal from the same lectern for "star peace" instead of "Star Wars," sat impassively in the packed but silent chamber as Reagan spent a half hour presenting what he called the plain and simple but deep and abiding differences between the United States and Soviet Union.

The Soviet foreign minister addressed the world body after Reagan, reiterating that "the Soviet Union has countered the concept of Star Wars with the concept of Star Peace and of lasting peace on earth."

Without responding directly to Reagan's speech, he denounced the United States' recent attempt to redefine the 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty to permit development of Reagan's strategic space shield, popularly called Star Wars.

The president and Shevardnadze met later in the day for a 30-minute discussion on plans for the Geneva summit.

Campus safety group to consider new rape phones

A proposal has been submitted to the university space committee to acquire nine new emergency phones to be placed in buildings with heavy night use.

Continuing concerns about campus safety lead to proposal to put new emergency telephones in seven academic buildings

By LINDA BURKE
University Daily News Reporter

In an effort to enhance campus safety, a proposal has been submitted to the university space committee for installing emergency phones in seven academic buildings.

Fred Wehmeyer, associate vice president for physical plant and support services, said his office has recommended that nine phones be placed in academic buildings which have heavy night use and no other access to phones.

"The lines will have direct access to the university police for emergency use," he said.

Wehmeyer said $7,020 is being requested from the State Higher Education Assistance Fund (SHEAF) for the project.

"The proposal will be considered by the space committee along with all the other projects campus-wide requesting SHEAF funds," he said.

The emergency phones considered for installation are two in Holden

"The plan is a good one. It will cut down on the time it takes to contact the police when there is a real emergency."

— Nikki Sanders

Hall, two in the architecture building, and one each in the business administration, foreign language, psychology, English and agricultural engineering buildings.

Nikki Sanders, a volunteer with the Rape Crisis Center on campus, said the added phones will increase safety on campus.

"The plan is a good one. It will cut down on the time it takes to contact the police when there is a real emergency," she said.

The sooner a person in trouble can get to a phone the better chance they have of escaping harm, Sanders said.

"This is especially good because there aren't any phones near the buildings where the additional phones will be put in," she said.

Brenda Arkell, University Police crime prevention officer, said the phones would enhance personal safety.

"It's an excellent idea. I've been pushing for the additional phones since last March," she said.

The major force behind the recommendation for more phones to be installed on campus was the Personal Safety Task Force Committee of the Dean of Students Office, Arkell said.

"With the phones inside the building, people will have access to an inside phone and will be more apt to report suspicious activity."

For What It's Worth...

University Daily Editor

Kirsten Kling

Almost everyone on the Texas Tech campus has seen them. Those mighty, fearless revivalists from who knows where often stand on the flowerbed cornerstone outside the University Center, preaching their own interpretations of the Bible.

Yes, we've had missionaries and self-proclaimed ministers and evangelists from many religious backgrounds. Students have been able to discover new religious beliefs on the way to class.

Sometimes, the so-called evangelists can be interesting to listen to and watch — good entertainment, you might say. I mean there's nothing like watching a screaming, righteous individual accuse a student audience member of being a "homosexual," a "sinner," or a "slut."

There becomes a time, however, when the comments of the Holy Rollers no longer are amusing. They are hurtful and can be a thorn in the side of those who try to make it through daily life without snide comments. If their main objective is to try to save lives as they call names and get people upset, they definitely are going about it in the wrong manner.

This brings to mind an incident at Illinois State University in which one student just had enough of the words of a raving evangelist.

Traveling campus evangelist Jed Smock tours campuses across the country, and one of his favorite arousing techniques is calling students "sinners" or "whores." This is for the sole purpose of provoking them. Well, one day Smock was physically pushed around by an unidentified student, according to the College Press Service.

Smock, being a mature evangelist (if you'd call it that) turned the other cheek and declined to press charges. His comment was "only a wimp would attack a preacher who he knows must turn the other cheek."

Nothing like a wimp calling someone a wimp. Yes, I believe some evangelists are wimps. Sure, they'll always be around with the necessary rights of freedom of speech and religion in their back pockets, but calling a stranger a "whore" or a "sinner" is a sick way of getting the message across.

Granted, freedom of speech and religion is of great importance, and those students who stand, listen and react to harsh words are encouraging such sermons.

Although it seems evangelists always will find college campuses "happy hunting grounds," they had better beware of the possible hazards that may lay in the way of their "popular sermons."

If it's been a hard October week for you, cheer up and try to find something new and innovative to do this weekend. If you have a dog, here's an idea for you.

Peggy Swan lives in Saginaw, Minn., and one of her hobbies is collecting hair from her dogs and recycling the hair into clothing for family and friends.

According to The Associated Press, this is how it works: She goes around collecting dog hair from dog-owning friends, relatives and others, turns the hair into yarn on her spinning wheel and dyes it with sugar-free Kool-Aid. And voila — you have yarn for a genuine dog sweater.

Neat, isn't it? She says her favorite flavors are grape and lemonade. I wonder if all the dogs in her neighborhood are bald by now? I wonder how her family feels about going to school and work in dog-hair garments? I wonder if she de-fleas her final dog-hair product?

LETTERS

Losing together

To the editor: This letter is a response to the so-called Tech fans who seemingly know very little about football. You probably attend games simply because it is a social event, and you probably do not even know the difference between artificial turf shoes and cleats worn on natural turf.

Obviously, while you scream at Coach Moore, you fail to realize that four potential touchdown passes were dropped — but guess what? None were dropped by Coach Moore or any of his coaching staff.

However, Coach Moore is man enough to take more than his share of the blame because he understands the concept of football being a team sport. You win as a team, lose as a team, score touchdowns as a team, etc.

I realize that one is entitled to his or her own opinion, but what the Tech football team needs right now is the support of the fans in the effort to finish this year with a winning record.

What the team does not need is the distraction of people screaming for a coaching change. By the way, Tom Landry didn't have a winning season in Dallas until his sixth year as head coach.

—Jimmy Stinnett

backs like a Steve Worster, Roosevelt Leaks or Earl Campbell.

The wishbone does not lend itself well to passing and is designed to control the ball with short gains to perpetuate first downs. Backs are in a low stance, and handling the ball fairly close to the line of scrimmage can result in fumbles.

The Longhorns have long since abolished the wishbone, as it is not an offense to catch up and get back into the game. Oklahoma University uses it but scored only two touchdowns against Texas, which gave up some 30 points against Stanford. OU also scored only two touchdowns against Miami.

Offensive attacks should be designed to score, and pro teams have proved that a mixture of passing and running is essential to keep the other team off balance. The Rice team mixed traps, quarterback draws, passing and good kicking to whip Tech.

Offensively, Tech has been extremely conservative in play selection. The first down in a series should get a few yards at least, but they failed timed after time on first down, forcing them into a recognizable passing situation.

Tech has played like they were trying not to lose rather than trying to win until it is too late — a basic difference in philosophy. No one could possibly fault Jerry Moore or his staff for elementary mistakes made in the Rice game, but it is time to start analyzing, with the material on hand that we have, why our offense does not move the ball consistently. Or why our defense allows a 73-yard touchdown over guard without anyone ever touching him, why Tech is playing in or near the cellar, or why our passer has not enough time to get a pass off.

I personally think our present group of coaches can solve these puzzles, but corrective action is badly needed.

Cafe sick trays

To the editor: I am writing about the terrible treatment people receive in the residence hall cafeterias when they are sick. I live in Stangel, and when I recently was sick my roommate took my ID to get a sick tray for me. She was told that only soup and salad were given on sick trays.

I went down to speak to the manager about getting something else, and she said there had been trouble and people were getting sick trays for carry-out trays instead. She called the assistant manager over to help me.

He told me I must not be too sick if I wanted normal food. He also griped at me and told me not to ever come to the cafeteria in my socks. He told me to go back to my room, put some shoes on, come back, and then I could fix my sick tray.

I thought he had terrible manners and his mistake had gotten me out of bed with 100 degree fever in the first place. I ended up not going back for my dinner, because I didn't feel well enough to walk down there again.

I hope he will try to improve his manners and that the Stangel/Murdough cafeteria will try to improve on their sick tray policy.

Tough task to secure Tech at night

University Daily News Reporter

Jan Dilley

It's 10 o'clock. Do you know where your roommate is?

Did she suddenly slam her books shut, grab her sweats, adjust her walkman and dash out the door for the Rec Center, muttering "Gotta run?"

Unless she's planning to meet a couple of friends or a big and beefy jogging companion down in the dorm lobby, you might have cause for concern. Most nights, the Rec is teeming with activity both inside and outside its doors. Unfortunately, much of the outdoor activity takes place in the dark.

Inrequent spacing and unpredictable use of street lights characterizes the large block on which the Rec is housed. Located on the west side of the campus, the Rec is bordered partially on two sides with residence halls.

When there are no night-time games being played in the fields, the stretch along Flint often is dark. Granted, this area is wide open, the adjacent street carries a considerable amount of traffic and help may be only a call away if the nearby dorm windows are open.

Right around the Rec complex, bright lights illuminate the sidewalks, but the light fails to extend much beyond the buildings. With the weather turning cooler, it is likely that fewer casual joggers will be planning their runs so late at night.

"Serious" joggers, however, probably will not alter their exercise patterns. They will continue to run whenever the mood suits them, regardless of time or temperature — or lighting conditions.

The dark patches around the Rec pose not only physical hazards such as not being able to detect muddy sections or broken glass, but they provide a weak link in the campus security chain.

Cautioned against being out by themselves at night, most Tech women are aware of the risks they take by using the Rec Center's exercise path alone after sunset. Still, most nights, several of them may be seen warming up, jogging or cooling down somewhere along the often dimly-lit path.

By necessity or by choice, they do their jogging or walking at night, and they elect not to exercise in the Rec facility. Like their male counterparts, they deserve the opportunity to exercise under conditions that are as safe as possible. A well-lit exercise track is a reasonable request.

But it will take more than better lighting and warnings from the administration, student organizations and the campus police department to secure Texas Tech at night. The issue of campus safety is one that requires the foresight and common sense of every student at the university.

Potential candidates plan for 1988 campaign

Syndicated Columnist

Tom Wicker

The movers are moving, the shakers are shaking, and the 1988 presidential campaign is therefore upon us. But whatever else you hear, see or read, remember that only two facts about 1988 now exist: (1) an election will be held that year; and (2) Ronald Reagan will not be in it.

Right up to the day the votes are cast, that second fact could be the one that matters most. Someone will have to substitute on the Republican ticket for one of the most popular presidents that's like trying to play third base for Kansas City after George Brett retires.

That same someone will have to take the blame for the negatives left over from Reagan's eight years in of-vice — and there could be a lot — without being able fully to claim credit for the positives. Richard Nixon found out in 1960 how hard that is to do, and Hubert Humphrey learned the same lesson in 1968.

Still, hope, ambition and the lust for power spring eternal. Vice President George Bush, the front runner, and Rep. Jack Kemp and Sen. Bob Dole, the major challengers, already have made preliminary moves in Michigan. There, a new Republican delegate selection system actually will begin in 1986, giving Michigan the dubious pride of place occupied in recent years by the Iowa caucuses.

Former Sen. Howard Baker also is forming the customary political action committee and laying in a stock of drip-dry shirts to carry him around the airport-motel circuit next year — even before the mid-term elections are out of the way. The Great Mention has dropped the names of Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon and former Gov. Pierre duPont of Delaware; but it's not known if anyone is listening.

Nor does anyone know how many Republican hopefuls might rise on the wings of television from the ashes of the 1986 congressional and gubernatorial elections; but there will be one, or more. How about, for example, a phenom who could grab off Alan Cranston's Senate seat?

Even more intriguing is the likely candidacy, in 1988, of M.G. "Pat" Robertson of Virginia, the Yale Law School graduate and television evangelist who heads the Christian Broadcast Network with its 24 million viewers. Don't scoff. The Rev. Robertson's potential candidacy would be based on massive contribution lists, ample funds and proven television appeal to an audience larger than that of Time, Newsweek, The New York Times, the Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post combined.

For those reasons, Richard Viguerie, the conservative activist, has said he takes Mr. Robertson seriously; so has Ed Rollins, the former White House political director. Rollins has signed on for George Bush — who might well be the benefactor if a Robertson campaign split right-wing fundamentalist support away from Jack Kemp.

It's not clear, however, that Reagan can consistently translate his high personal standing into legislative victories on tax reform, budget reduction and other thorny issues — particularly in the second half of a term. Even if he could, it's even less clear that those achievements could be passed on to the benefit of whomever the next Republican presidential nominee may be.

Bush, of course, will picture himself as Reagan's ever-loyal, hence deserving, lieutenant; Kemp will claim to be the president's ideological and spiritual heir; both may be right, but the more important fact is that neither is Ronald Reagan, a deficiency that will not be lost upon the voters.

As for the Democrats, if they can't even figure out how to make Reagan and the Republicans take the heat for having doubled the national debt in five years, they don't deserve to win.

Senate nixes Jordan arms sales

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate, moving to sidetrack President Reagan's unpopular $1.9 billion arms sale to Jordan, voted 97-1 Thursday to ban the deal until March 1 unless King Hussein begins "direct and meaningful" peace talks with the Israelis.

GOP leaders said Reagan agreed reluctantly to accept the restriction, and several senators said his only other alternative was to have his sale of sophisticated aircraft, air defense missiles and other weapons shot down altogether.

But Hussein, speaking in an interview in Amman, said the Senate's action amounted to "reneging" by the United States. "One wouldn't like to use the word blackmail, but it's totally unacceptable. Obviously it's not a way to deal with problems among friends."

"I have made it abundantly clear to our friends in Washington that unless the agreement between us and the United States is implemented in the manner agreed upon ... this (peace talks) is the last we would do to try to secure this particular package," Hussein said.

More than 70 senators had lined up to oppose the sale of F-20 or F-16 aircraft as well as other weapons, which Reagan proposed to bolster Jordan's own defenses and reward Hussein for his movement toward joining the Middle East peace process.

Opponents said Hussein should not receive U.S. arms as long as he was technically still in a state of war with Israel and until he sat down for direct peace talks with the Jewish state, but made clear at the same time they wanted to encourage the king's peace efforts.

The sale also has drawn the opposition of more than 270 House members, and legislation rejecting the sale was formally introduced in the House chamber a few hours before the Senate vote.

The measure approved overwhelmingly in the Senate was a hastily crafted attempt by GOP leaders to avert an outright major foreign policy defeat for Reagan at a sensitive time in the Middle East peace process, and less than a month before his summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., cast the sole vote against the measure, saying it did not go far enough because it did not guarantee opponents a vote any time before March 1 in case they want to block the sale permanently.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said the measure met "needs of all the parties" — including Reagan and congressional opponents who fear the effects of a sale.

NEWS BRIEFS

Rioters take to streets in Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Hundreds of rioters carried their rage against apartheid to the heart of white Cape Town Thursday, smashing windows and overturning cars in a fashionable shopping street, witnesses reported.

Police headquarters in Pretoria said seven black and mixed-race people had been killed in townships around Cape Town and in other parts of the country.

Journalists on the scene said chaos reigned as police pursued the rioters beating rioters with rubber whips.

"Initially they beat everyone who was not white. Later, they beat everyone indiscriminately, even whites. If you were walking in a group, they beat you," one reporter said.

In Pretoria, President P.W. Botha announced that the state of emergency had been ended in six of the 36 black communities on which it was imposed July 21 because calm had been restored there.

Gay educator moved out of classroom

HOUSTON (AP) — A homosexual teacher who was criticized in a television editorial for allowing his picture to appear in a magazine article about AIDS has been transferred temporarily to a non-teaching position.

Patrick di Battista, an English teacher, "was temporarily reassigned to the research department so the learning environment at Kashmere High School could get back to normal," Rosalind Young, a spokeswoman for the Houston Independent School District, said Thursday.

"A lot of attention at the high school made it difficult for the principal," Young said. She said she did not know how long di Battista would remain in the non-teaching position.

Di Battista, 25, was criticized by KTRK-TV reporter Marvin Zindler during an Oct. 15 broadcast.

Most get an extra hour of sleep Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — For most Americans, it's nearly time to regain that hour of sleep they lost when they shifted to daylight-savings time last spring.

That extra hour, a boon to everyone except night-shift workers, arrives at 2 a.m. this Sunday, when the most of the country returns to standard time.

On Sunday, the change benefits morning people, as an hour of daytime shifts from evening to morning. Everywhere except Hawaii, Arizona and portions of Indiana, clocks should be turned back — from 2 a.m. to 1 a.m., for example.

Because that hour in the evening during summer's longer days provided extra time and light for recreational activities, some daylight time boosters say that time should be used all year to save energy on nighttime lighting.

Hobby predicts Houston passage for plan

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Voters in Houston, the state's most populous city, will approve the proposed $1.43 billion water plan, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby predicted Thursday.

Hobby said he hopes the plan will pull 60 percent approval in Harris County.

The Houston outcome is considered crucial by the plan's backers because of the expected high turnout for a scheduled mayoral election and because of the area's opposition to past water proposals.

"I think Harris County, for the first time probably ever, will support this plan," Hobby told a news conference during a campaign stop with Gov. Mark White and House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

White called the plan "the best ever forwarded for ratification by the voters."

The governor also said an advertising campaign pushing the plan should begin the week before the election. Fund-raising hasn't reached even half the original $1.25 million goal, he acknowledged after being asked why no ads have appeared so far.

The two-part plan will be listed on the Nov. 5 ballot as proposed constitutional Amendments 1 and 2.

Amendment 1 would authorize $980 million in state bonds to raise money for water conservation, flood control and development projects.

Kidnapped daughter of President Duarte set free

By The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — President Jose Napoleon Duarte's daughter was freed by her guerrilla kidnapers Thursday in the first part of an exchange for 118 jailed and wounded rebels and political prisoners, the president's chief adviser said.

The government freed 22 political prisoners, who left Mariona prison on a bus, newsmen and the rebels' Radio Venceremos said.

A group of wounded guerrillas who were being given safe conduct out of the country were en route to San Salvador, a civilian source in the eastern province of Usulután said.

"She was freed," the presidential adviser, Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, told reporters about Duarte's daughter, Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 35.

Duarte Duran and a friend who was kidnapped with her as they arrived for class at a private college Sept. 10 were flown by helicopter from the rebel-held mountain village where they were freed to a military school in San Salvador. Duarte and dozens of reporters greeted the civilian helicopter carrying Duarte Duran and Ana Cecilia Villeda Sosa, 23, when it landed at the military school at 2:06 p.m. CDT.

There was no immediate word on the release of small-town mayors and municipal officials who were taken in a series of kidnappings that began last spring and also were part of the exchange agreement.

Lubbock Right to Life group to walk Saturday

By MARLENE ELLIS
University Daily News Reporter

Members of Lubbock Right To Life will be staging a walk against abortion at 9:30 a.m. Saturday starting at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC). The walk is sponsored in conjunction with the Walk Across America by Norman Stone and Jerry Horn, who are walking from the West Coast to the East Coast in an effort to gather signatures on a Petition For Life. The petition will be presented to President Reagan, Congress and the Supreme Court on Abraham Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12. The walk will start at the health sciences center and end at the Melonie Park Baptist Church parking lot at 66th Street and Indiana Avenue. Anti-abortion petitions are being made available at the Good News Bookstore, the Baptist Bookstore and the Love Shop in the South Plains Mall. Those interested in participating in the walk are asked to drive to the HSC, let their passengers off, then drive to the Trinity Church parking lot off Canton Avenue and South Loop 289. At Trinity, a bus will take the drivers back to the HSC. The last bus will leave the church parking lot at 9:15 a.m. Lubbock Right To Life is encouraging individuals to make signs to carry on the walk. "Silent Scream," a film about abortion, will be shown at 2 and 2:30 p.m. in the Melonie Park Baptist Church. Literature and pro-life items will also be available for purchase.

Tech Republicans commemorate Grenada

By FRANK BASS
University Daily News Reporter

A campus organization commemorated the second anniversary of the United States invasion of Grenada with a speech and candlelight prayer service Thursday night.

"The reason why we're doing this is to memorialize the lives that were lost in the invasion of Grenada," said Mark Shniderson, president of the Texas Tech College Republicans.

Although Shniderson said the invasion was "a major victory for the Reagan administration," he said he was sorry lives were lost in the Oct. 25, 1983, invasion.

Seventeen Marines were killed in weeklong fighting after troops from the United States, Barbados, Dominica, Jamaica, St. Lucia and St.

Vincent were met by resistance.

The invasion occurred four days after Marxist president Maurice Bishop was killed during a coup. Bishop, a strong supporter of Cuban President Fidel Castro, had invited Cuban military advisers to Grenada.

A speaker at Thursday night's meeting praised the military action and said the United States learned a number of valuable lessons.

"One of the things we learned is not to believe the rhetoric of Communist surrogates," said Mikel Ward, congressional district director for the Freedom Council, a conservative political action group.

Ward, a member of the Conservative Caucus, defended the invasion of Grenada, noting that evidence seized on the tiny island nation indicated basic nature of Soviet deception." Soviet influence.

"One of the main things, and something the media possibly hasn't brought out, is the capture of 17 tons of materials linking the Soviets with Grenada," she said.

Ward also said after the invasion, several hundred persons allied with either Cuba or East bloc countries were captured and returned to their native countries.

Ward said 750 Cubans, 49 Soviets, 16 Libyans, 14 North Koreans, six East Germans and four Bulgarians were repatriated to their respective countries.

"The people they have doing their dirty work are not always Soviets," she said. "We learned a lot about the Ward also said the ascendancy of Mikhail Gorbachev as general secretary of the Soviet communist party did not necessarily mean the Soviets are taking a less combative stand towards the United States.

"To work your way up to that position in the Soviet Union, you've pretty much got to be a conformist to the Soviet line," she said.

The group's observation of the anniversary will conclude early Friday morning.

At 8:20 a.m., College Republicans will observe a flag-raising and singing of the national anthem. Lubbock City Councilwoman Joan Baker also will present Shniderson with a proclamation designating Friday as "Grenada Day."

Amendment to satisfy employer/worker interests

By FRANK BASS
University Daily News Reporter

Compromise legislation, designed to comply with a recent Supreme Court decision, is a "promising attempt" to balance the interests of employers and employees affected by the decision, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said last week.

In a prepared statement released by his office, Combest said a bill designed to provide public employers with an option in complying with the Court's decision, will help state and local governments from being swamped with "tremendous overtime costs."

The bill, HR 3530, is an amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) and would modify the effects of the Court's Garcia vs. San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority decision.

On Feb. 19, the Court ruled that overtime pay provisions in the FLSA must be applied to state and local municipalities.

The National League of Cities has estimated the total cost of compliance with the decision to cost $1 billion in 1986.

Combest said Lubbock would have to pay an additional $211,000 in overtime pay.

Although 15 bills have been introduced in Congress to modify the effects of the decision the Court handed down in Garcia, the House voted to postpone enforcement of the decision until Nov. 14.

Combest said HR 3530, the bill approved on Oct. 10 by the House Education and Labor Subcommittee, would give state and local governments until April 15 to revise their personnel practices.

The bill calls for giving public employers the option of providing employees with time-and-a-half compensatory time off or overtime wages for each hour worked.

Existing collective bargaining agreements, that call for cash payment for overtime, or provide employees the option of either cash or time off, would not be effective.

After the effective date, compensatory time off would be at the time-and-a-half date.

The bill would exempt volunteers and state and local legislative staffs from coverage.

Combest said the legislation is the result of an agreement reached between public employee organizations and employer organizations.

He said the Committee on Education and Labor will consider the legislation later this month. The legislation should be addressed on the House floor in late October, Combest said.

"HR 3530 is a promising attempt to balance the concerns of both the employer and employee who are affected by the ruling," Combest said. "It may well be enacted into law in the near future."

Symposium will review past with document's help

By MARLENE ELLIS
University Daily News Reporter

A symposium comparing medicine and water use in A.D. 70 with modern times will be conducted at 9 a.m. Monday in the Kline Room of the Museum at Texas Tech University.

The one-day symposium titled "Medicine and Water: Modern Problems in Light of Ancient Cultures," is sponsored by the International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) under a grant from the Moody Foundation.

The symposium results from studying the Codex Syriacus, a document in St. Catherine's Monastery in the Sinai. The Syriacus is a palimpsest, a manuscript with at least two writings, one hidden beneath another.

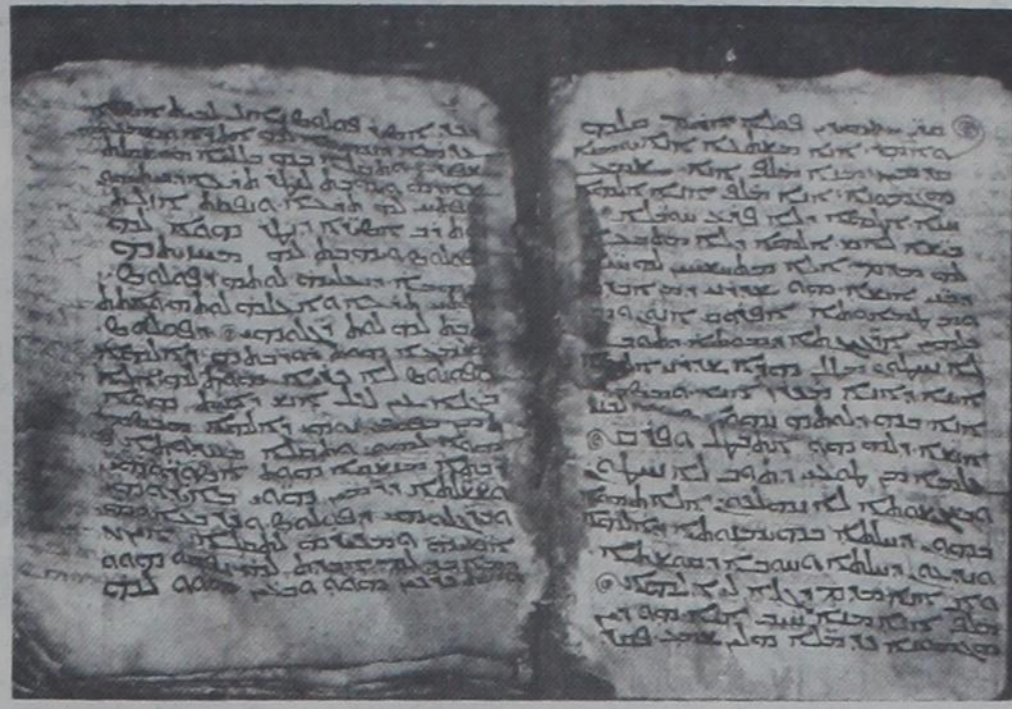

After three trips to the monastery, James Charlesworth, the George L. Collord professor of New Testament at Princeton University, was given permission to photograph the manuscript using new photographic techniques. He asked linguist Bruce Zukerman and his brother Ken, who had worked on photographing moon dust, to help with the photography.

The team photographed the manuscript, using at least 13 techniques on each side of a leaf (manuscript page). A combination of ultraviolet light and a yellow filter gave the best results.

"To our excitement, the underwriting popped into view," Charlesworth said. "Over 2,000 photographs are now being processed. These will be fed into a computer so the upperwriting can be distinguished from the lower writing, and eventually removed so that the lower writing can be enhanced and printed."

The Codex Syriacus was written in the fourth century by a scribe who copied the oldest Syriac version of the gospels on vellum, which was thin calfskin specially prepared for uses similar to parchment. In the eighth century, another scribe tried to remove that handwriting and copied the "Lives of the Female Saints" on the vellum, Charlesworth said. "The manuscript will significantly help us understand the earliest traditions about Jesus of Nazareth, including his healing miracles, which are the special research interest of members of ICASALS," he said.

Dead Sea manuscripts

St. Catherine's is a library for many of the Dead Sea Scrolls found in 1948 in caves around the Qumran area. The scrolls include books and fragments of the Hebrew Bible and documents about the organization and life of the community itself.

Excavation of the Qumran area, inhabited from the early part of the first century to about B.C. 31, revealed evidence of a dam with channels to lead water from the dam to eight cisterns.

Besides studying the manuscripts, Idris Traylor, director of ICASALS and associate professor of history at Tech, collected data on Egyptian water use and met with officials of Cairo University.

"The applied research that has been done in this region, and how formerly barren desert lands have been transformed into productive agricultural and range lands, is impressive," he said.

After studying the effect of the Aswan Dam on the Nile and the irrigation systems in Egypt, Traylor traveled to the Monastery of St. Macarius at Wadi Natrun, where monks work with crops and cattle in a desert region.

Traylor completed his research of water use in Israel. He met with several officials at the Ben-Gurion University and the deputy minister of agriculture in Tel Aviv to outline mutual areas of research interests, sources of funding and areas of cooperation between ICASALS and Israel.

Traylor also arranged a formal agreement or affiliation between ICASALS and the Desert Development Institute of the American University in Cairo.

TTU: Then & Now

Tech Museum moved from Holden Hall to larger site leaving Peter Hurd's $2 million mural

By CARLA R. McKEOWN
University Daily News Reporter

A son-of-a-gun pot, a Dutch oven, an old pack saddle and several branding irons, donated by S.K. Bynum, formed the beginnings of the first Texas Tech Museum in the chemistry building.

The Plains Museum Society was formed in 1929, to help make collections for a museum and to encourage the museum movement in general. Representatives of the four schools of Texas Technological College agreed to assemble displays in the chemistry building until a permanent building was built.

Mary Doak, a Tech dean, traveled to England in the summer of 1928.

While there, she visited the British Museum and provided ideas to the society.

The departments of geology and biology helped off to a good start with a small collection of specimens. The School of Home Economics volunteered to focus its activities on costumes and ceramics.

In order to obtain funds to build a museum, the Plains Museum Society became the West Texas Museum Association and involved many counties surrounding Lubbock. The historical commission allocated funds totaling $25,000 which allowed the building of the basement of the museum.

In January 1937 the basement was ready for occupancy. The first site of the museum was the building now called Holden Hall, named after William Holden, museum director from 1929 to 1965.

The formal opening of the museum was March 5, 1937. The small museum and its few exhibits were viewed by 35,000 people a year.

In 1940 a "Give-a-Brick" campaign was staged to help start a collection for the building. In addition to many bricks, donations from business organizations totaled $50,000.

In October 1948 the Board of Directors of the college allocated $180,000 from a surplus of veteran's program to the museum fund. The money from the Board of Directors and the collections from the "Give-a-Brick" campaign made possible the completion of the building.

On Oct. 19, 1950, the museum's formal dedication was celebrated, along with the College's Silver Anniversary. The festivities included a ranch dinner of barbecued beef and beans and other typical ranch food in the art gallery.

President Emeritus Clifford B.

Jones opened the ceremonies. He described the museum as "not merely a repository for old bones, but a place to broaden the cultural horizon of the Southwest."

Peter Hurd painted the historic fresco in the museum in 1954. The mural covers 1,300 square feet of wall space and features 16 panels picturing pioneers of West Texas from the 1890s and early 1900s.

When the museum became too large for the original building, campus planners suggested bulldozing the building. Holden convinced them that the mural, which could not be moved, was worth $2 million.

The building, now called Holden Hall, houses the administrative offices of the College of Arts and Sciences and the graduate school. In addition to the mural, Holden Hall also contains a bronze bust of Holden.

At the 35th annual meeting of the West Texas Museum Association in 1964, plans were revealed for construction of a new museum building on a 15-acre tract.

In 1968 the Tech Board of Directors took action and contracts totaling $2,500,000 were awarded for construction. The money was planned for a facility three and one-half times larger than Holden Hall.

The new facility was to include a central unit, an industrial gallery, a sculpture courtyard, Moody Planetarium and a third of the main exhibition wing.

Christian musician entertains crowd with inspiring gospel tunes, testimony

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

First off, so-called Christian concerts need to be put into immediate perspective. The performers and audience are attending the show for entertainment, no doubt, but the more basic purpose of the such concerts is inspiration. Many Christian performers are not only on a tour, they're on a mission.

With that in mind, Russ Taff, with opening act David Meece, were on target last night at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater.

David Meece, promoting his new album played a number of upbeat selections that were extremely well received by the near sellout crowd. The audience rarely found time to sit down while Meece and his band churned out many of his better known songs.

Almost every song Meece performed was met with enthusiastic clapping and, in some cases, singing from the fans. Meece did an exceptional job as the opening act for Taff.

Taff played with conviction the majority of the selections from his newly released album. Taff has a wonderful voice that was, unfortunately, often difficult to discern.

The acoustics at the Civic Center were not to blame. The Civic Center Theater is an excellent location for concerts. The speakers and mixing were at fault here. The volume was awfully tame for a concert of this size. No one walked out of the Civic Center with ringing ears.

But, again, that goes back to the nature of the performance. In addition to college-age fans, Taff and Meece draw a fairly large family crowd. The range was from elderly to infantile, which could explain the volume problems.

The crowd seemed to deeply appreciate Taff and his songs. During one tune, he asked everyone to join hands. While he sang, the audience, arms raised, swayed back and forth to the music.

Each performer addressed his personal religious convictions in different ways. Meece's went something like this: "You see miracle after miracle, man, and some people still keep doubting the existence of God. No matter what you do, man, some people just don't believe."

Taff spoke of his convictions several times during the concert. "You know, you can find freedom. You know, you can find liberty. You know, you can find strength. Right now," Taff said.

"Maybe someone just had sex with their boyfriend out there and she's feeling ugly, dirty and small. You're confused. I'm telling you Jesus is here, Jesus is here."

Taff

Christian musician Russ Taff inspired a large crowd with testimony and singing Thursday night. Taff and opening performer David Meece played to a near sellout audience at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Adam Ant teases willing crowd

By CHERYLE LOCKE
University Daily Lifestyles Editor

The motivations of concert-goers are diverse. Some go to dance, some go to hear the music and some go to "really get to know the performer." Adam Ant churned out good music to dance to, he played all his hits and more, but he didn't put forth much personality.

Adam Ant played the Lindsey Theater last night to a marginal crowd. The audience was ready to dance and was sliding and gliding in the aisles long before anyone came on the stage. When Ant finally hit the stage, he was received with a few heartfelt screams and then everyone began to dance.

Ant, dressed in jeans that were ripped from mid-thigh to knee, a blue lame shirt with gold fringe and a black leather jacket, teased and flirted with the crowd during his entire hour-and-a-half set. He smacked a wad of gum and managed to sing and snarl at the same time.

He looked like he was well aware of his ability to seduce the crowd. He rubbed the microphone up and down his body, and it seemed to turn on at least a few people. Before the night was over he stripped down to a scant Adam Ant T-shirt which he ripped to shreds so everyone could see his exposed chest. He is a good performer, but big deal.

The bass player did a swell job, but at times the bass, the drummer and the two added drum sets dominated Ant's vocals. Ant and his three-piece band performed on a crude, simple set, and it worked well because it did not shadow the performers or the attention the music deserved.

During Ant's performance of "Vive le Rock," he proved that he is the show within himself, regardless of the appearance or talent of the other band members. Ant has a charismatic quality that draws out any other presence.

He gave the people what they wanted and serenaded them with extended, ripping versions of "Desperate, But Not Serious," "Strip" and "Goody Goody Two Shoes." Ant also played a bunch of tunes from his latest album, "Vive le Rock." Everyone seemed completely satisfied with every note and body movement Ant gave out.

Adam Ant

Ant's performance was a bit too polished and too rehearsed. His cute one-liners grew old. Somehow it just seemed obvious that he said the same lines, raised the same eyebrows and growled the same sensual growl the night before and that he'd probably be cranking it out again and again...

New film 'Target' scores

By The Associated Press

Just when you thought all the spy plots had been expended by James Bond, George Smiley and associates, along comes "Target" with a new and intriguing premise.

Gene Hackman runs a lumberyard in Dallas, living a quiet, comfortable life with his sensuous wife, Gayle Hunnicutt. Their son, Matt Dillon, is something of a problem, a self-admitted underachiever who has dropped out of school with ambitions of becoming a race car mechanic. Hunnicutt leaves alone on a European tour, and disappears in Paris.

Father and son fly to Paris to hunt for her, and suddenly they are involved in shooting scrapes. The son, who considers his father as hip as Lawrence Welk, discovers that the old man can speak fluent French and handle a gun.

"A long time ago, I worked for the CIA," Hackman confesses. In fact, he had been chief spy in charge of the misnamed Operation Clean Sweep. An enemy agent escaped the dragnet, and he has kidnapped Hackman's wife, intent on revenge.

"Target" is the work of experienced hands: producers Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown ("Jaws," "The Sting"); director Arthur Penn ("The Miracle Worker," "Bonnie and Clyde"). The movie has a rich, authentic look, and Penn handles the chase scenes masterfully.

The script by Howard Berk and Don Petersen is ingenious if untidy. Characters and guns are misplaced and never found again. The most affecting scenes are between father and son. After Hackman brings them through a perilous car chase, Dillon mutters, "And you're the guy that warms up the car in the summertime."

Hackman hasn't been in such good form since "The French Connection." Compassion shines through that plain American face, and he is convincing as a man capable of swift, deadly action.

In "The Flamingo Kid," Matt Dillon revealed depth behind his well-known boyish charm, and he is again impressive in "Target." If he continues to mature and make good choices, Dillon could enjoy a lengthy career.

Life on rodeo circuit not bad for professional cowpoke Mahan

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

Every sport has its true heroes. Football has Johnny Unitas, baseball has Lou Gehrig, basketball has Larry Bird, golf has Byron Nelson. And rodeo has Larry Mahan.

It has been said that rodeo would be in deep trouble if it weren't for the mild-mannered Mahan, who has won a record six titles as world champion all-around cowboy. Tell him that, and he clams up and starts crediting other people. He is modesty at its best.

"I was brought up in a house that had a small amount of acreage," he said. "My folks always had horses around, and I was 8 when they gave me one. From there I got involved in youth rodeo, and I came through the ranks that way."

After finishing high school, Mahan moved to Arizona, where he joined the Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association and started to enjoy the benefits of his talent.

"I was going to go to college, but the tuition was more than I could handle. Once I joined the PRCA, rodeo started paying the bills for me so I sort of became a road scholar. And don't ask me to spell it," Mahan said, laughing.

"I certainly don't recommend that today. Education is much more important today than it was back then and, believe me, it was important back then too," Mahan said. "You've got to have brain power when you get out in the world. Your mental and physical aspects go hand in hand."

"It's tough now because the competition is extremely talented these days. The rodeo programs for college, high school and youths are really putting out some quality riders. I think parents are beginning to realize that rodeo is a great game. Kids learn responsibility, and the sport gives them an opportunity to travel and learn about the real world."

If you haven't figured it out, Mahan loves rodeo. But this father figure-type doesn't live and die for the game. He remarried two years ago to a woman named Robin. His son from his first marriage is attending the University of Texas at Austin.

Any plans of following in the footsteps of Dad?

"Not at all. I guess I would have enjoyed seeing him go into rodeo, but there's a fine line between loving a sport and playing it for your parents," Mahan said. "Guidance is extremely important, but young people have to make their own decisions."

"You know, that's a major problem with this planet," Mahan said. "If people don't start pulling together, we're going to continue to have problems. I mean, 'Star Wars' isn't going to feed anyone. Agriculture is the most important industry we have because it feeds people."

"If we don't get off our rear ends and pull together, we're going to have major problems."

Why Bother?

to de-bunk a bunch of harmless myths about drinking? Because they're not so harmless.

For instance? If a guy thinks it's okay to smash down 8 or 10 beers every night because "it's only beer" ... he could develop a serious drinking problem without even knowing it.

We have nine million alcoholic Americans. It's become a national plague. Yet in some other societies, where they don't share our misconceptions about drinking, alcoholism is rare.

So the more we know about drinking, the better we can handle it. The better we can decide whether, where, when, why, how much, and with whom to drink.

Tough guys find fun in rugby

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

A short guy yells out some random numbers and tosses this oblong ball into a lined-up bunch of fellows. One guy catches the ball and everyone else starts hovering around him forming a tight, confused sort of huddle. Then the ball comes flying out of this mass of people and everyone runs around and starts hitting each other. Real hard. And without padding.

No big deal. Just your basic Texas Tech Rugby Club practice.

For those who aren't familiar with the sport, team player and coach Nicholas Mongero is going to give you a quick lesson.

"You're only allowed to use lateral passes, you must stay behind the ball, you may kick the ball at any time, you can only rap an opponent (as opposed to killing him, I think), and you can only tackle below the shoulders," Mongero explains.

There. Now that you have a complete grasp on the do's and don'ts of rugby, we can move on to more important things like the 3-0-1 undefeated record of the Red Raiders. They've scored 43 points to their opponents' 12 in the four games played.

Forget the hapless Texas Tech football team for a second and enjoy this success story.

After playing team rugby in Connecticut, Mongero came to Tech in search of an architecture/construction degree. But, yearning for raps, lateral passes and other rugby-associated stuff, it wasn't long before Mongero took it upon himself to organize a rugby team at Tech. The team's doing great now, but Mongero is quick to tell you success didn't come all at once.

"It was extremely unorganized. We were constantly thinking it wouldn't go and the end was near. We just had to take it one semester at a time," Mongero said. "I advertised for talent, and that brought in some experienced people. Pretty soon it got to the point where players were arguing about who got to play and who didn't."

It's tough to tell at a glance, but this year's team has a shot at bringing the Southwest Conference rugby championship home to Lubbock.

The team's current roster sports 45 of the most unlikely players you can imagine. Some of these guys don't look like they weigh much more than an overweight pompon girl. Others look like they're storing a few six-packs under their rugby jersey. Regardless, you'd better believe these fellows are in shape and capable of knocking those who would argue that to the floor.

Captain Mongero makes sure of that. He briefly interrupted practice Tuesday to make sure the team understood the qualities of a good hit.

"I don't want to see any chicken-shit tackles out there. Don't grab a player and swing him around by his jersey. Make it a clean hit," Mongero instructed.

But Mongero isn't out there just throwing instructions around. He coaches, yes, but his real love is playing the game and watching others get as much satisfaction out of it as he does.

No sport for the weak

"I love this sport, and it's the caliber of people that make it what it is at Tech," he said. "We've had a lot of help getting where we are today (he credited several people). This team has a good chance at being the Southwest Conference champions. We have a hell of a good club."

Mongero said it's not too late to become part of the Tech Rugby

Club, and he encourages those interested to practice with the team. "If you pay your dues and come out and practice with the rest of us, we'll let you play," he said.

"You should be in excellent cardiovascular shape, because it's a full 80-minute game. You should also have the ability to think under pressure, violent pressure, and be able to stay calm under those circumstances."

Daring women subject of author's new biography

By JONI JOHNSON
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

Writer Elizabeth F. Olds will speak Monday about the extraordinary backgrounds of four American women explorers she brings back to life in her biographical collection "Women of the Four Winds."

Olds will present a slide show and discuss the research and writing of the book beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Blue Room of the University Center.

In completing her most recent work, Olds postponed her research at the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech to begin an extended search for the historical women explorers.

The four women Olds eventually chose were Annie Smith Peck, Marguerite Harrison, Delia J. Akeley and Louise Arner Boyd. Each woman ignored her Victorian background to make a life of exploring during the early days of the 20th century.

Olds said the era in which the adventurers lived was a time when women explorers first emerged.

"I feel the women of that era were the trailblazers for the women today," Olds said. "They proved that women could be welcomed in the field of research. Women today have doors open to them that they didn't have."

Peck, the first of the four women Olds discusses, gave up her job as a schoolmistress and devoted her life to mountain climbing. At almost 60 years of age, Peck became America's most famous woman mountain climber by completing the trek up

Peru's highest peak.

The third explorer in Olds' biography is Marguerite Harrison. She became an American spy in Russia and was the first woman to be arrested and incarcerated by the Soviets. Later she filmed the annual migration of a nomadic Persian tribe, producing the second documentary ever made.

The first woman to lead a museum expedition was Delia J. Akeley. A Midwestern farm girl, Akeley became known for her big-game hunting as she traveled across Africa with natives as her guide. She collected specimens and lived with pygmy tribes.

Leading seven expeditions to icy Greenland was Louise Arner Boyd, who became one of the world's most knowledgeable experts on the shores of the island in the Arctic Ocean.

All four women that Olds has written about were members of the Society of Woman Geographers. Also a member of the organization, Olds served for three years as international president of the society.

Olds also will discuss Monday her experience as a journalist. She was an editor for Women's Wear Daily, a foreign correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, on the staff of Time-Life, and a roving reporter in Europe for Reader's Digest.

Copies of "Women of the Four Winds" will be sold at the discussion, and proceeds will go to provide material to the Southwest Collection about women in the Southwest.

Watson wins first match in Tucson Match Play

By The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Tom Watson scored an easy first round victory as the defending title-holder in the Seiko Tucson Match Play Championship Thursday, while Craig Stadler was the victim of an upset. South African David Frost, a rookie on the American PGA Tour, ousted the veteran Stadler 1 up, and Jodie Mudd eliminated Vardon Trophy winner Don Pooley 1 up in another major upset.

"One of the highlights of my season, one of my big thrills," said Frost, who was competing in match play for the first time since 1981. Frost said he was even par for his 18 holes over the Randolph Park Municipal Course and Stadler was one over.

Frost took a 1-up lead when Stadler bogeyed the 13th hole, and the South African won the match when he halved the 18th hole with a scrambling par from a bunker.

Watson, in a slump most of the season, was two under par against Lon Hinkle and never trailed in a 5 and 3 decision.

NBA tips off 1985-86 schedule

By The Associated Press

Of the 16 head coaches pacing the sidelines at tonight's eight season-opening National Basketball Association games, the biggest butterflies will belong to New Jersey's Dave Wohl.

Wohl is one of three coaches making his debut as a head coach, but the other two — Matt Guokas of the Philadelphia 76ers and Bernie Bickerstaff of the Seattle SuperSonics — have to wait until Saturday to get started. Wohl and the Nets, meanwhile, have to face the defending Eastern Conference champion Boston Celtics.

Wohl was an assistant coach for Los Angeles last season, when the Lakers beat the Celtics in six games to win their third NBA title of the decade.

Other openers today include Washington at Atlanta, Milwaukee at Detroit, Cleveland at Chicago, Houston at Utah, the Los Angeles Clippers at Sacramento, Denver at Golden State and Phoenix at Portland. The Clippers-Kings meeting marks the first NBA game ever at the California capital, where the Kings moved from Kansas City after last season.

On Saturday, rookie center Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks makes his regular-season debut in a nationally televised afternoon game at Madison Square Garden against the 76ers. On Saturday night, it's New Jersey at Indiana, Boston at Cleveland, Detroit at Chicago, Seattle at Dallas, the Lakers at San Antonio, Atlanta at Milwaukee, Sacramento at Denver and Houston at the Clippers.

Wohl, after coaching a Lakers' offense that could rely on all-time leading scorer Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in the clutch, says he isn't sure who can take that role with the Nets.

Wohl said he is most likely to look to forward Buck Williams and guard Otis Birdsong to take the pressure shot, but is reluctant to give that role to Micheal Ray Richardson, who already has the responsibility to run the offense. All three players, however, say they want to take the important shots.

Boston has an unquestioned leader in Larry Bird, who is seeking to become the third player in NBA history to win three straight Most Valuable Player awards.

Back spasms limited his playing time during the exhibition season and there is some doubt that he can play in the opener.

"It's supposed to clear up in two or three days," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said after Bird visited a therapist this week.

The Celtics, meanwhile, have made several changes in an effort to avoid a repeat of last season's disappointment in the finals. Veterans Bill Walton — acquired in a trade with the Clippers for Cedric Maxwell — Sly Williams and Jerry Sichting and rookie Sam Vincent have been added.

behind with 69 stops and two interceptions.

Houston (1-5, 0-3) at Ark. (5-1, 2-1) (12:04 p.m., Raycom-TV)

Arkansas dropped from No. 4 to No. 14 in this week's AP poll after losing a 15-13 gut-wrencher to Texas. The Hogs need to beat the Cougars to stay in the conference race.

The Razorbacks have the league's best defense, allowing only 235 yards a contest. Arkansas proved its defensive strength against Texas by holding the Longhorns without a touchdown for the first time since 1936.

Houston, already out of the SWC picture, has been plagued by inconsistent offensive play, but quarterback Gerald Landry (who did not start the game due to an injury) directed two fourth-quarter touchdown drives in the 37-13 loss to SMU.

A&M (4-2, 2-1) at Rice (3-3, 2-1) (2 p.m.)

The Aggies must rebound quickly after losing to Baylor 20-15 last Saturday and in the past, a game against Rice would have been the perfect remedy for such a post-loss condition.

Texas (4-1, 2-0) at SMU (3-2, 2-1) (2 p.m.)

The Mustangs got back on the winning track last week with the win over Houston and the Longhorns did the same with their victory over Arkansas.

SMU's Reggie Dupard rushed for 184 yards against the Cougars and he's averaging 135.4 yards per game (easily the best in the conference), and teammate Jeff Atkins' 88 yards a game is the SWC's second best.

The Longhorns have continued to rely on strong defense and the bullseye performances of kicker Jeff Ward. Ward's five field goals against Arkansas was Texas' only scoring offense in the 15-13 win.

This year, however, the Owls are proving to be more of a poison than a cure to their opponents.

Rice continues to lead the league in passing offense with an average of 239.7 yards a game, while the Ags are second with 217.3. A&M is averaging 431.3 yards per game in total offense to rank second in the conference, while the Owls' 390.1 is the third-best in the SWC.

Texas (4-1, 2-0) at SMU (3-2, 2-1) (2 p.m.)

The Mustangs got back on the winning track last week with the win over Houston and the Longhorns did the same with their victory over Arkansas.

SMU's Reggie Dupard rushed for 184 yards against the Cougars and he's averaging 135.4 yards per game (easily the best in the conference), and teammate Jeff Atkins' 88 yards a game is the SWC's second best.

The Longhorns have continued to rely on strong defense and the bullseye performances of kicker Jeff Ward. Ward's five field goals against Arkansas was Texas' only scoring offense in the 15-13 win.

Aztecs bring Red Raiders back to earth

No. 14 San Diego State glides to easy 15-7, 15-1, 15-12 win

By BRAD WALKER
University Daily Sports Reporter

Brick walls are solid, sturdy structures and never should be met head on. But nobody has to tell that to the Texas Tech volleyball team.

The Red Raiders had the misfortune of running into the No. 14 San Diego State Aztecs Thursday night and were knocked around in a 15-7, 15-1, 15-12 loss in the Student Recreation Center.

Tech, now 15-4 for the year and 3-0 in Southwest Conference play, travels to Austin today to meet No. 15 Texas, its third consecutive nationally ranked opponent.

San Diego State, which upped its record to 19-11, set the pace for the match quickly. Down 3-2 in the first game, the Aztecs reeled off four straight points on the help of two blocks by 6-3 freshman Kris Morton. Morton blocked her way for another score and stopped two Tech surges as the Aztecs went up 12-5. Shawn Sweeten attempted to keep the Raiders in the game with an assist block and a service ace but 5-11 Angelica Jackson from East St. Louis drilled two kills to end the game.

The Aztec defense kept Tech silent in the second game with a 15-1 rout.

The Raiders led 12-6 against the Aztec reserves in the third game before SDSU called upon Morton once again to overtake the lead and a victory.

"Morton had an outstanding match; she's really becoming a very good player," said Aztecs coach Rudy Suwara. "She pretty well dominated the net."

"We really had a good team effort. The second game we just couldn't do anything wrong. This was our best performance this year."

Tech head coach Donna Martin could not argue, as her spikers fell down to earth after an emotional win over Texas A&M Sunday.

"San Diego State is the best team we've faced all season," Martin said. "We didn't play well, but they shut down what usually works for us. This loss is good for us, though."

"We were real flat," said Becky Boxwell, who led Tech with seven kills. "We were up before the game but there was no pressure (in a non-conference match) and we just didn't play up to our potential."

Texas, the top-rated team in the South Region, is tied with the Raiders for the SWC lead at 3-0, and the winner of tonight's match will have the inside track to the league crown.

"Right now, UT should be fearful of us," Martin said. "They'll be strong because they know they can't walk through the conference anymore. We will have to play stronger than we did against A&M."

Candy Mathers/The University Daily

Another spike

Texas Tech middle blocker Stacey Blasingame, a 6-1 junior, fires the ball at the San Diego State defense Thursday night at the Student Recreation Center.

The No. 14 Aztecs won the match in three sets. Tech meets No. 15 Texas today in Austin.

Netters play Minnesota in first of three matches

The Texas Tech women's tennis team returns to action today as the Raiders compete in the first of three dual matches in Burnsville, Minn.

The Raiders will take on the University of Minnesota today, Wisconsin Saturday and Northeast Louisiana Sunday. All matches will be played on indoor courts.

The Raiders, 2-0 in dual matches this fall, will be facing tough competition.

"After this trip we will know where we really stand. All three matches will be tough. They all have excellent teams," Tech coach Mickey Bowes said. "The three-day trip will be really good for us because we will be exposed to some top-flight competition. We played several of the Minnesota women in the Husker Invitational, so we know they are tough, and the other two schools have some excellent players too."

Minnesota, fourth in the Big 10 Conference last year, is 3-0 in dual match play this fall. Wisconsin is 4-2 in dual match play and finished second in the Big 10 last spring. The Northeast Louisiana Lady Indians are 2-0 in fall dual matches and finished second last season in Southland Conference play. The Raiders were victorious in their last dual match, dominating West Texas State 7-0 Oct. 15.

"The team is playing quite well now, so I'm really looking forward to going up there to play," Bowes said.

Tech's singles lineup for the opening match against Minnesota will be Annemarie Walson, 7-2 this fall, at the No. 1 slot; Julie Hrebec, 4-3, at No. 2; Petra Pennekamp, 8-1, at No. 3; Lisa Roberts, 4-4, at No. 4; Cathy Carlson, 9-0, at No. 5; and Paula Brigance, 1-1, at No. 6.

Playing doubles for the Raiders will be teams of Walson-Pennekamp, 1-2 for the year, at No. 1; Carlson-Hrebec, 3-0, at No. 2; and Brigance-Roberts, 5-0, at No. 3.

Bowes said he might change Tech's lineup for the matches against Wisconsin and Northeast Louisiana.

Red Raider harriers host meet at Simmons Park

Texas Tech will host a men's and women's cross country meet Saturday at Mae Simmons Park, the last competition for Tech before the women's Southwest Conference Meet in Georgetown and the men's SWC Meet Nov. 4 in Austin.

Teams competing in the meet, in addition to Tech, are Texas-Arlington, Midwestern, Wayland Baptist and West Texas State. Lubbock Christian will compete in the men's division only.

The women will cover a three-mile course while the men will run five miles.

Two new runners will be in action for the women's team, while three regulars will be rested for the SWC meet.

Competing for the first time this season are junior Yvette Patterson, primarily a 400-meter sprinter in the outdoor track season, and freshman Michelle Theall, normally a middle-distance competitor.

Other women runners for Tech will be freshman Kim Mudie, one of Tech's most consistent runners, Eden Benzer, Nancy King and Lisa Zarate.

Taking the week off for the women's team are junior transfer Rit Webster, Sheryl Grochocki and Suzy Martinez. Martinez is recovering from a foot injury.

Tech men runners will be Cisco Bob, Len Fedore, D.C. Murphy, Searle Lawson, Tim Green, Reggie Senegal and Erin Griffin.

Jackson, Royals cut Cards 6-1, force sixth game

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Kansas City speed connection of Lonnie Smith and Willie Wilson came alive Thursday night, leading the Royals to a 6-1 victory over St. Louis in Game 5 of the World Series and signaling that time had not yet run out for the American League champions.

Their backs had been to the wall for so long they had written graffiti on it, Hal McRae had said. On this night, the graffiti read: "Not just yet."

The victory cut the Cardinals' advantage in the best-of-seven Series to three games-to-two heading back to Kansas City for Game 6 Saturday night.

The Royals will send left-hander Charlie Leibrandt, the hard-luck loser of Game 2, against Cardinals right-hander Danny Cox, who won Game 2 with the aid of four ninth-inning runs. With Danny Jackson pitching in and out of trouble despite allowing only five hits and striking out five, the Nos. 1 and 2 hitters for the Royals suddenly sparked a dormant Kansas City offense. Smith had two hits and scored a pair of runs, and Wilson had two hits, including a triple, and a pair of RBI.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, seemed more like the team showing pressure. Slick-fielding shortstop Ozzie Smith made an error that led to a run, and fan favorite Tito Landrum had a rough day. Landrum let runners move up to second and third on a flyout in the first, leading to one run; misplaying a fly ball into a double, leading to the game-winning run in the second; and letting another ball go over his head in the ninth for an RBI double.

The Royals scored once in the first inning against Bob Forsch and added three more in the second, beginning with the first controversial call of the Series in a disputed play at home plate argued vehemently between but he retired 11 batters in a row before Landrum reached on an infield single leading off the bottom of the ninth.

In fact, after Forsch's exit in the second inning, St. Louis actually had the better of the pitching as relievers Rickey Horton, Bill Campbell, Todd Worrell and Jeff Lahti combined to hold the Royals to one unearned run the rest of the way. Worrell worked two innings, tying a World Series record by striking out all six batters he faced and helping Cardinals pitchers fan 15 Royals, two shy of the single-game Series record set by St. Louis' Bob Gibson against Detroit in 1968.

The Royals got their unearned run, the first by either team in the Series, against Lahti in the eighth. Sundberg scored from second when Jackson, who had tied a Series record held by Mickey Mantle among others by striking out five straight times, hit a grounder up the middle fielded by Ozzie Smith at shortstop. Smith's off-balance throw skipped in the dirt past Clark at first.

KC added another run in the eighth when Pat Sheridan hit a line drive

The Royals broke a 1-1 tie with the disputed run, starting a three-run second inning and the demise of Forsch. With one out, Sundberg hit a soft fly into shallow left field, apparently misjudged by Landrum. Landrum tried to make a shoe-top catch and got his glove on it, but the ball rolled perhaps 15 feet past him for a double.

Forsch ran the count full against Buddy Biancalana, and the light-hitting Royals shortstop hit a ground single between first and second. Cesar Cedeno fielded the ball in shallow right and made a strong throw home. Catcher Tom Nieto took the throw slightly in front of the plate, and Sundberg slid head first, reaching to touch the base with his left hand as Nieto attempted a lunging tag.

If the tag was made, Sundberg was out by a yard, but Shulock said Nieto missed the runner. Nieto and Herzog argued vainly that the tag was made, and one TV replay created the impression that Sundberg had just run into the second out of the inning.

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog and umpire John Shulock.

Still left for the Royals is an unenviable task. They had fallen behind 3-1 in the Series Wednesday night when they were shut out 3-0 by John Tudor. Of 34 previous teams to face such a deficit, only four had gone on to win the Series, the last being the 1979 Pittsburgh Pirates.

But the Royals had come back from such a deficit against Toronto in the American League playoffs, and now they hoped to do the same against St. Louis.

Jackson, who worked seven effective innings in Game 2 before he left for a pinch hitter, was a little less effective in Game 5, but he was good enough. He gave up a first-inning run on Jack Clark's double and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the third,

Spurs' Iceman goeth to Chicago in trade

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — George Gervin, the "Iceman" who has sparked the San Antonio Spurs' scoring attack since 1974, was traded Thursday to the Chicago Bulls for forward David Greenwood.

Gervin, who led the National Basketball Association in scoring four years and five times was on the all-NBA team, "has been a mainstay of this franchise for 13 years," Spurs owner Angelo Drossos said.

"It was a difficult decision but a decision we had to make sooner or later," Drossos said. "We decided to make it now."

"We're not happy with making the deal. He's helped make the franchise what it is," Drossos said.

Gervin, 33, who for the first time last year in his nine NBA seasons failed to rank among the league's top 20 scorers, could not be reached for comment.

But his agent, Pat Healy of Tacoma, Washington, indicated Gervin was not happy with the trade.

"George did not initiate the trade," Healy said. "His choice was to continue to remain with the Spurs, retire in San Antonio and stay there for the rest of his life."

"But George has no choice. They said 'George, you go,' period."

Healy said the Bulls agreed to pick up the 12 months remaining on Gervin's $750,000-a-year contract, which also carries incentives up to $300,000.

Healy said Spurs General Manager Bob Bass told him that Greenwood, the second pick by Chicago in the first round of the 1979 draft, would get a guaranteed $500,000 for two years.

Spurs officials refused to comment on terms of Greenwood's contract.

But Drossos said Greenwood, who has averaged 13.5 points per game, "is a good shooter and a good rebounder."

Talk of trading Gervin to Chicago surfaced Wednesday after he failed to show up for two practices Tuesday and later was fined.

Gervin, a 6-7 guard, was generally lackluster in the preseason, averaging just 10.7 points per game. He also has been at odds with Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, who was critical of Gervin's failure to be aggressive on defense.

Last Feb. 22 in Phoenix, Gervin surpassed 25,000 career points, an accomplishment that proved to be one of the high spots of his final season with the Spurs.

He averaged 21.2 points and missed 10 games with injuries last year, the most games he ever missed in a season.

Gervin has played in seven NBA All-Star games and has a 27.3 career scoring average. He holds the NBA record for the most points scored in a quarter, established in 1978 when he scored 33 against New Orleans.

The Spurs, then a member of the now-defunct American Basketball Association, acquired Gervin in 1974 from the Virginia Squires. He played four years in the ABA before it was absorbed into the NBA in 1976.

Greenwood, 6-10, who has played six NBA seasons with the Bulls, missed 11 games last season with tendonitis in both heels. He underwent surgery on his heels in the off-season.

Drossos said he presumed Gervin would fly to Chicago Thursday and Greenwood would travel to San Antonio as well Thursday.

Greenwood said he was not surprised at the trade.

"I knew I was expendable. I also knew I was the odd man out in the Bulls' plans. It was not surprising to me, but I know I'll get a good shot with San Antonio," he said.

In moving to Chicago, Gervin will be playing under his former Spurs' mentor, Stan Albeck.

Jerry Krause, Bulls vice president of operations, said he was aware that Gervin "has been classed as an inadequate defensive player. But his former coach, Stan Albeck, will have him back again and he assured me that Gervin will not give away too many points."

Krause said the loss of guard Quintin Dailey, who has entered a drug rehabilitation program, created an opening that Gervin can fill.

"Teamed with Michael Jordan in the backcourt, we are going to be a hard act to follow," Krause said.
