

Marcos resigns, Aquino government recognized

By The Associated Press

MANILA — Ferdinand E. Marcos fled the Philippines after 20 years in power Tuesday and Corason Aquino, the new president, told her nation "the long agony is over."

Marcos resigned the presidency Tuesday night, driven from office by a military and civil rebellion. He was taken with his family in U.S. helicopters to Clark Air Base. Officials in Washington said they left for Guam shortly after 5 a.m. today, Philippine time.

A State Department official said the Marcoses would remain in Guam "for some time" but said he did not know their ultimate destination.

After Marcos left the riverside presidential palace, where he had been isolated for days by a revolution Aquino called "people power," Filipinos swarmed into the streets for a carnival of joy.

They created traffic jams at midnight, chanting "Cory! Cory!" for their champion, who had refused to concede after the National Assembly declared Marcos the winner of a Feb. 7 election marred by violence and fraud.

Aquino said in a brief television appearance early today: "The long agony is over. We are finally free, and we can be truly proud of the unprecedented way in which we achieved our freedom — with courage, with determination and most important, in peace."

A crowd broke into the palace, wolfing food left on the tables, carrying off shoes, monogrammed towels and other loot. They fought with Marcos supporters who were left behind, and Associated Press photographer Bullit Marquez saw one body in the lobby.

Aquino's military commander ordered soldiers to prevent looting or violence against Marcos loyalists.

Increasing U.S. pressure combined with the military and civil revolt to end Marcos' rule. He fled to the U.S. air base 50 miles northwest of Manila barely nine hours after a last hurrah of being formally sworn in for another six-year term.

Marcos was sworn in by Chief Justice Ramon Aquino, but his runningmate, Arturo Tolentino, was not present. Neither was Prime Minister Cesar Virata.

Aquino took the oath as president in a rival ceremony.

Chief Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said in Washington that the Marcoses would spend the night at Clark base, but "I do not know what their plans are thereafter."

Maj. Thomas Boyd, a Clark public affairs officer, said they stayed in the Distinguished Visitors Quarters.

Official word of the resignation came first from Washington. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Marcos, a U.S. ally throughout his presidency, would be "welcome to come to the United States."

In announcing U.S. recognition of Aquino, 53, Shultz said: "The new government has been produced by one of the most stirring and courageous examples of the democratic process in modern history. We honor the Filipino people. They have resolved this issue non-violently and in a way that does them honor."

Aquino said in her television appearance, which began at 2:45 a.m. and lasted less than a minute: "A new life starts for our country tomorrow, a life filled with hope and I believe a life that will be blessed with peace and progress."

Expert argued against fatal shuttle launch

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A rocket booster expert testified Tuesday that on the night before the ill-fated Challenger explosion, "I did all I could to stop the launch" because of a predicted bitter cold night, but he said his firm's management decided to approve it.

Roger Boisjoly, an engineer for Morton Thiokol, Inc. who deals in booster rocket structures, told a presidential investigating commission that not a single engineer in a private caucus of company officials on the eve of the space shuttle launch was in favor of going ahead the next morning.

"I have been distressed by things that are appearing in the paper," he said, describing that meeting. "There was never one positive pro-launch statement ever made, by anybody."

The engineer said he had expressed "deep concern" about launching after a night of sub-freezing temperatures. He said that when they were cold, the rubber-like O-ring seals between segments of the booster rockets would not fit properly into their seats.

"It's like trying to shove a brick into a crack instead of a sponge," he said.

Last month's Challenger launch was the coldest in the history of the nearly five-year-old shuttle program.

The shuttle was launched at 11:38 a.m. on Jan. 28 and exploded 73 seconds later, destroying the ship and killing all seven in its crew.

A leading theory of the accident is that the seals failed, allowing a deadly plume of flame to emerge from the side of the right booster rocket.

Boisjoly said a Thiokol engineering supervisor, Arnold Thompson, tried to sketch for Morton Thiokol management their concern with the joint.

"When he realized he wasn't getting through, he just stopped," Boisjoly said. "I was not even asked to give any input on the final decision chart ... I was never asked nor polled, it was clearly a management decision at that point."

After Morton Thiokol management decided to recommend the launch, Boisjoly said, "I left the room feeling badly defeated, but feeling that I did all I could to stop the launch."

Boisjoly and Thompson said they both warned their management last summer about a potential catastrophe if problems with the seals on previous flights were not remedied.

Joe C. Kilminster, the Morton Thiokol vice president who finally signed the firm's recommendation that the launch proceed, said he did so because he convinced that there was a sufficient safety factor in the seals.

"It led me to believe we were in a position of having a safe condition for recommending flight," he testified.

But earlier, Kilminster's boss, Morton Thiokol vice president Jerry Mason, had acknowledged under intense questioning that the company lacked "enough data to quantify the effect of the cold."

Another Morton Thiokol engineer testified that "I was absolutely positive" that top NASA launch officials would be told of his deeply felt opposition on three grounds to launching the Challenger.

The engineer, Allan McDonald learned later that Jesse Moore, the NASA official with final say over launch, never heard of McDonald's fears over the effect of cold temperatures on safety seals.

"I'm very surprised at that, I can hardly believe that," McDonald said. "The issue was so controversial, I was sure they were aware of that."

"Low temperatures were in the direction of badness" for the ability of rubber-like seals called O-rings to seal joints in the solid rocket boosters, McDonald said he told a conference held the night before the launch.

McDonald and his supervisor, Jerry Mason, both told the commission they felt NASA officials were pushing them to agree to the launch.

Asked if he felt pressure by NASA to go ahead with the launch, Kilminster replied: "I did not feel a significant amount of pressure in that regard."

Tech officials call budget cuts impossible

By JAY MILLER
University Daily News Reporter

After several days of meetings looking at many aspects of the budget, Texas Tech administrators have deemed the task of trimming 13 percent from the university and health sciences center budgets "impossible."

"With the constraints that have been put on us previously, and given the areas of the budget that cannot be touched, we have found that it is just impossible to meet the governor's request for a 13 percent cutback," said Tech President Lauro Cavazos.

Meetings were scheduled throughout the day Tuesday in an effort by Tech administrators to develop a "skeletal plan" for complying with Gov. Mark White's executive order. The possible savings after the figures were tallied totaled a mere 3 to 4 percent of the university's $79 million budget.

"I sent the vice presidents and deans back to the drawing board following the meetings in an effort to do our best to comply, but we remain steadfast in our commitment to preserve Tech as a fine academic institution," Cavazos said.

Actions taken by Tech administration Tuesday include a hiring freeze on all non-faculty positions unless a commitment already has been made by the university, a freeze on all non-faculty promotions and merit pay increases without written approval by Cavazos and the cessation of all out-of-state travel except when proven necessary and approved by the vice president for finance and administration.

Cavazos pointed out that the 3 percent salary increase for faculty and staff effective Aug. 1, 1986, will not be affected by the reductions. Employee award programs also will remain unaffected by the cuts, Cavazos said.

Other Tech efforts to comply with the governor's mandate include reviewing all campus utility use and the implementation of energy conservation measures, reviewing all program functions in an effort to eliminate duplication and discontinuing all purchases of non-essential supplies, capital equipment and cars.

Cavazos said even though deans and vice presidents will examine their respective areas more closely, he doubts any significant increase in the 3 to 4 percent figure can be found.

"I feel like it's the best we can do without reducing salaries, releasing personnel or eliminating academic programs," Cavazos said.

Officials of other state agencies and universities expressed similar difficulty Tuesday in complying with White's plan to solve the state's fiscal crisis.

White's orders came last week following a prediction by state Comptroller Bob Bullock that given Texas' current economic trends and the declining price of oil, Texas will end its two-year budget cycle on Aug. 31, 1987, with a $1.34 billion deficit.

A study by the state comptroller's staff has shown that under "the most optimistic assumptions," White's proposals would cut $557 million, less than half the $1.3 billion shortfall. The study was outlined in an internal memorandum obtained Monday by the Dallas Times-Herald.

A more realistic estimate, the memo says, puts the potential savings from cuts in nine specific budget areas targeted by White at about $300 million, leaving the state with a $1 billion deficit.

"We're going to try to comply with the governor's order, but so far we've found that it's an impossible task," Cavazos said.

Bush to arrive in Lubbock as part of local festivities

By LORRAINE BRADY
University Daily News Reporter

Vice President George Bush will be in Lubbock Sunday to participate in the local Texas Sesquicentennial Celebration at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Bush will give a short speech saluting Texas at the closing ceremony of the celebration, said Mackie Bobo, organizer of the event. The celebration will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, and the closing ceremony will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Bush's appearance in Lubbock is his only official appearance in the Texas celebration activities.

"As a citizen of Texas by choice, Vice President Bush is delighted to help us celebrate our 150th birthday," Bobo said.

Bush moved to Texas in 1948. His wife, Barbara, also will be in attendance at the ceremony.

Former Texas Gov. Preston Smith of Lubbock also will participate in the closing ceremony in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center theater.

Bush also will be the special guest at a political fund-raiser for U.S. Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock. The reception for Combest will begin at 5 p.m. at Lubbock Country Club, and Bush is expected to speak about 6 p.m. at the reception.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev rejected President Reagan's new arms control proposals Tuesday and said timing of the next summit hinges on an "understanding" about banning nuclear tests or eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe.

Convening the 27th Communist Party Congress with a speech that set the tone for the Kremlin's new generation, Gorbachev sharply criticized Reagan's stand on space weapons, his rejection of a freeze on British and French arsenals, and his call for cuts in the Soviet Union's Asian nuclear forces.

"It is hard to detect in the letter we have just received (from Reagan) any serious preparedness ... to get down to the business of eliminating the nuclear threat," Gorbachev told the 5,000 delegates to the congress.

Gorbachev said the next summit, to be held this year under an agreement reached at the Geneva meeting in November, "ought to produce practical results in key areas of limiting and reducing armaments."

"There are at least two matters on which an understanding could be reached: The cessation of nuclear tests and the abolition of U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles" in Europe, he said.

"Then, as a matter of fact, if there is readiness to seek agreement, the question of the time of the meeting would be resolved of itself: We will accept any suggestion on this count," Gorbachev said. "But there is no sense in holding empty talks."

Gorbachev spoke for about 5½ hours at the opening a gathering that occurs at least every five years. The last party congress was in 1981.

The party general secretary, who turns 55 on Sunday, broke sharply with the years of the late Leonid I. Brezhnev, which he said were marked by stagnation, corruption, uncontrolled bureaucracy and economic mismanagement.

Gorbachev said the party will "actively purify its ranks" of those who have abused privilege and power.

He also outlined a program to reorganize centralized planning and government, modernize industry and agriculture, make prices more responsive to demand and create incentives for producing higher-quality goods.

Accusing the United States of blocking progress at the Geneva arms talks, Gorbachev commented for the first time on Reagan's response to Gorbachev's Jan. 15 proposal for a three-stage elimination of nuclear arms by the year 2000.

The plan would begin with eliminating Soviet and U.S. medium-range missiles in Europe and freezing British and French nuclear arsenals, followed by cuts in strategic missiles and a ban on space weapons.

Reagan's reply was delivered on Sunday. U.S. officials have said Reagan agreed medium-range missiles should be eliminated as a first step but rejected a freeze on British and French arsenals.

Britain and France, which refuse to include their missiles in U.S.-Soviet arms talks, are modernizing their nuclear forces and would presumably be blocked from doing so by Gorbachev's plan.

Gorbachev said Reagan's letter "seems to contain some reassuring opinions and theses. However, these positive pronouncements are swamped in various reservations, linkages and conditions which in fact block the solution of radical problems of disarmament."

Elderly support

Gramm-Rudman threatens funding cuts for various aged groups

University Daily Staff Writer

Jay Miller

While many people stand to lose various forms of federal assistance and services with the institution of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, no group may be more affected than America's elderly.

In the wake of the mandatory 4.3 percent across-the-board spending cuts, the elderly will suffer greatly. Moreover, those approaching the "golden years" will stand a greater chance of falling victim to a number of crippling diseases affecting thousands of our nation's elderly daily. The Gramm-Rudman law has vowed to wipe out many on-going research projects.

A few of the areas under the budgetary scalpel that will adversely affect the elderly are:

- A $500,000 reduction in a $10.4 million research project to determine the cause of Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's afflicts 2.5 million Americans, slowly destroying the vic-times' memories.

- The Administration on Aging will be forced to turn away 56,000 elderly people a day from 14,000 feeding sites around the country.

- Veteran's Administration medical centers will be forced to reduce personnel by 1,300 nationwide.

- A cut in construction of new housing units for the elderly and disabled that is financed by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

- Social Security's administrative budget will be trimmed by $125.9 million, which could disrupt service or cause significant changes in processing times, waiting times and payment accuracy.

Social Security payments to the elderly were benevolently spared from the Gramm-Rudman knife, but Medicare and Medicaid stand to suffer deep cuts. So if you're old and healthy, the effects will be minimal. If you're low-income, elderly and sickly, you will suffer greatly.

When U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, ran for his seat in 1984 he stifled rumors that he would cut Social Security benefits by frequently airing commercials showing him holding a check with an ear-to-ear grin on his face saying, "If I'm elected senator, no one will ever take my Mama's Social Security check away from her, or your mama's either."

I'm glad Mrs. Gramm has not had her check snatched from her hands by her son, who makes a lofty salary as a U.S. senator, but what about the rest of the nation's elderly?

During the past 20 years, there has been an increase in the number of homeless and hungry in this country. Many of those people are comprised of elderly people who have no means of support. Regardless of who is responsible for their condition the government or themselves, the fact remains that they are still there.

In light of the current budget crunch, I realize a certain amount of federal support needs to be relegated to the private sector. The problems facing the elderly, however, must be considered among our top priorities in both the private and public sectors.

As students we are always being told we are "America's future." The elderly, however, was America's future only a few short years ago and remain a precious American resource. It is time we and our legislators address the problems facing the elderly and hope that one day future generations will reciprocate the concern.

Reagan's popularity fails to help poor; political/economic mysteries remain

Syndicated Columnist

James Reston

Pay attention to outer space, says Secretary of Defense Weinberger. Our Strategic Defense Initiative in outer space is the hope of the future. Don't call it "Star Wars," he says, call it SDI, but at home and abroad a lot of serious scientists, outside of politics, think SDI is a Silly Damn Idea.

All this raises a fundamental question about what the administration is doing and whether it is reasonable to suppose that these budget, scientific and military tangles really can be left to the people.

Thomas Jefferson did not think so. He believed in "representative government" and wanted the members of Congress to puzzle over problems he thought were beyond the understanding of the ordinary voter. That's what Congress now is trying to do.

There, not only the Democrats but the Republican leaders in the House and Senate are challenging the president's budget, particularly his defense increases at the expense of social programs.

When the Republican leader in the Senate, Robert Dole of Kansas, was asked what he thought about all this, he said, well he didn't want to argue with the president on his 75th birthday. It's fairly clear what the administration is doing as it comes up on the congressional elections of 1986. It is trying to hold control of the Senate in the last two years of Ronald Reagan's second term in the White House. If it cannot do so, with no chance of holding the House, it clearly will be in trouble.

So the administration is appealing to the people over the head of Congress to support the president. If you like him, which the people obviously do, back him and the candidates of his party. That's the White House theme.

With this in mind, the president is mounting another publicity campaign with the people. He has never been more energetic than he is now, planning speeches all over the country, meeting with foreign leaders here in Washington, celebrating anniversaries, supporting Republican senators for re-election and looking forward to another summit meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev here in Washington in the summer.

It's a fabulous exercise for a 75-year-old man, condemning the welfare state philosophy of the Democrats in the past and dreaming about "Star Wars" and a capitalist triumph in the next century.

The voters obviously love it, but don't quite know what to make of it. Reagan is so popular that if, for example, he had proposed in his State of the Union Message that the 22nd amendment should be scrubbed so he could run again, they might even have gone along with it.

But Congress has another idea. It has listened to all his notions about the Pentagon and taxes and cutting down on the programs of the New Deal, and it is drawing a line between the president's popularity and his programs.

They know the voters don't and can't know about all these mysteries of economics and outer space, and so the members of Congress will vote as they should in a representative government: for what they think is right, regardless of what is popular.

Students urged to enjoy Texas party

University Daily Staff Writer

Linda Burke

Months of planning coupled with donations of time and services have been done by the Lubbock Sesquicentennial Committee in preparation for the party.

The Lubbock Sesquicentennial Birthday Party will be March 2 at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Exhibits on farming, ranching, scouting, banking and the evolution of Texas arts and crafts will be presented at the day-long extravaganza.

Vice President George Bush will highlight the event as the guest at the closing ceremonies.

Because the celebration falls on a Sunday at a time when many Tech students are looking for something to do, there should be good incentive for student attendance. Admission to all the exhibits and demonstrations, not to mention the entertainment review and the fashion show, is free to the public. Great for the student budget.

A huge birthday cake will be cut by Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos and distributed free to everyone. The Texas Tech German Dancers will perform during the entertainment review, which will run nonstop during the entire day's events.

Restaurants such as the Elephant Restaurant and Bar, McDonald's, Sea Wings seafood restaurant and Oscar's will have booths set up to sell samples of food items on their menus. What a perfect way to test a restaurant inexpensively!

The celebration will run from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. and has varied programs planned to suit many interests. It's also a good way to get involved in the statewide celebration of Texas.

State-sanctioned souvenirs will be for sale at the birthday party and could be worth some money in the future. It's not every day that Texas celebrates 150 years of independence.

Take advantage of an inexpensive opportunity to help Texas celebrate a birthday that won't come around for about another 150 years.

LETTERS

Event coverage

To the editor:

In response to Sharon FitzHenry's letter regarding UD coverage of entertainment, I just wanted to set the record straight.

Unlike the other activities you mentioned in your letter, David Copperfield was an event sponsored through Texas Tech. Copperfield was sponsored by University Center Programs — a student organization which uses student money to implement events for the Texas Tech community. UCPrograms also has difficulties, on occasion, obtaining coverage in The UD for our events, but we appreciate the coverage we get.

The UD's coverage of local events helps the Tech population realize that Tech and Lubbock are interdependent rather than mutually exclusive entities. If campus events are left out of the paper so that local events can be included, it is just the price we pay to get a well-rounded entertainment section.

TA blunder

To the editor:

Unfortunately, the next to the last paragraph of Missy Bleiberg's story Friday entitled "English program required for foreign TAs" was badly garbled by the editors.

It should have said that each year three awards for outstanding graduate teaching assistant performance are given at the department of chemistry and biochemistry awards banquet.

Selection for the awards is based upon student evaluations of teaching effectiveness. In 1984 and 1985, two of the three awards went to graduate teaching assistants from foreign countries. Thus, undergraduate students judged the teaching performance levels of these foreign teaching assistants to be excellent.

Principal contradicts testimony

By The Associated Press

LIVINGSTON, — A former junior high school principal accused of murdering the football coach over the affections of a school secretary contradicted his earlier statements repeatedly in his trial testimony, a prosecutor said Tuesday.

In his closing arguments in the six-week trial, prosecutor David Walker cited the four-page written statement that Hurley Fontenot gave to investigators even before the body of Billy Mac Fleming was found, and the differences in that statement and his later testimony.

"Nobody else brought in a written statement about what they were doing on April 12, 1985. For all anybody knew, Billy Mac Fleming could have been in Reno spending his money, or in Cozumel or sitting on a beach in Galveston," prosecutor David Walker said.

"But that man knew he wasn't," he said, pointing at Fontenot.

Fontenot's defense lawyers were to begin their closing arguments later Tuesday, and jury was to begin its deliberations after that.

Fontenot, 48, former principal at Hull-Daisetta Woodson Junior High School, is accused in the April 12 shooting death of Fleming, whose body was found 10 days later in a densely forested area southwest of Livingston.

Fleming, 36, had been shot twice in the back of the head with a .22-caliber weapon.

Defense attorney Dick DeGuerin had suggested someone else killed Fleming, possibly a former business associate who was "a big-time drug dealer" or the coach's estranged wife who collected $55,000 from three insurance policies.

Prosecutors contend Fontenot and Fleming were rivals for the affections of Laura Nugent, 36, a school secretary who had planned to marry Fleming last summer.

Walker noted that Fontenot had said that he did not care about Mrs. Nugent. But he said the former prinicipal continued to pursue a divorcee.

"I think you know that Hurley Fontenot's interest in Laura Nugent — sexual or otherwise — never ended," Walker said. "That interest just changed its manifestation."

He also noted that Fontenot denied he owned a .22-caliber revolver, even though several teachers testified that Fontenot boasted of always carrying one.

Fontenot also denied going to a hotel where Fleming and Mrs. Nugent had spent the night, even though two of Fontenot's fingerprints later appeared on the receipt, which was sent with an anonymous letter to the couple denigrating their relationship.

NEWS BRIEFS

White tries to raise investors' confidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — After defending the budget cuts he has proposed to cope with diminishing oil revenues, Texas Gov. Mark White said Tuesday he was heading for a series of Wall Street meetings to bolster investor confidence in the state.

White was in Washington for the National Governors' Association winter meeting, where he was told that President Reagan will meet at some later date with oil-producing states to talk about the problem of dropping oil prices.

White was due to return to the state tonight after an overnight trip to New York to talk to bond raters and investment analysts.

The meetings, he said, are "just to let them ask me questions and explain what's going on in Texas."

"A lot of people equate Texas and the oil industry," White said. "We're obviously very dependent on the oil industry; but not nearly so much so as some of the other states."

The state is dependent on oil and gas severance taxes for about 13 percent of its revenues, White said.

Hance aide says fund-raising on course

AUSTIN (AP) — Although Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance has asked supporters for $100,000 "immediately" to buy television ad time, his campaign manager said Tuesday that Hance's finances are fine.

"Our campaign fund-raising is right on course," said Byron Nelson, adding that the letter seeking $100,000 is one of several pending direct-mail requests for contributions.

In the recent letter, Hance told backers, "If I can't raise $100,000 in the next two weeks, I will lose critical time slots on television in the month of April leading up to primary election day."

Nelson declined to say when the letter was mailed. But he said direct-mail experts told the campaign that letters which specify a purpose for which money is being raised generally are more effective.

"This is just simply an effort to show people where their money would be spent. Fund-raising people tell us that if people see where their money would be spent they're more willing to give," Nelson said.

Court lets cities restrict adult theaters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday made it easier for the nation's communities to restrict the locations of adult movie theaters and other adult-entertainment attractions.

By a 7-2 vote in a case from Renton, Wash., the court said communities may use their zoning powers to "preserve the quality of urban life" by relegating all adult movie houses to one isolated area or by requiring that the theaters be scattered.

The court had said that much in 1976, but Tuesday's decision is a key one because it frees communities, especially smaller ones, from having to wait to see what effect adult movie theaters have before restricting them.

The justices said Renton, which had no such theaters in 1981 when it passed a restrictive zoning ordinance, lawfully could rely on the experiences of other, larger cities to assume that adult theaters would be harmful.

Testimony in Elizabeth Chagra trial ends

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Testimony ended Tuesday in the trial of Elizabeth Chagra, accused of helping plot the 1979 murder of U.S. District Judge John Wood in San Antonio.

Attorneys' final arguments were scheduled Tuesday afternoon with jury deliberations expected to begin today.

Mrs. Chagra, 32, is charged with conspiracy to commit murder in the rifle slaying of Wood outside his condominium May 29, 1979. If convicted, she faces up to 30 years in prison.

The jury changed Tuesday when U.S. District Judge William Sessions said he had been informed that a woman juror had overheard two women jurors say they were "prejudiced."

After talking with the three women, Sessions dismissed Irma Nava, an Austin cake decorator, because she felt she might be influenced because she had been the victim of a robbery last summer.

Defense Attorney Warren Burnett said he would have challenged her during jury selection if he had known she was a crime victim.

Sessions allowed another woman juror to remain on the panel over defense objections. Burnett argued that she had said her reported conversation in the jury room indicated she might be prejudiced against Hispanics, "which is the ancestry of the defendant."

Session said he was allowing the woman to remain on the jury because she said she could make a fair decision on the basis of the testimony.

Government attorneys tried to prove during the trial, which began Feb. 5, that Mrs. Chagra was part of a conspiracy that included her husband, Jimmy Chagra, a Florida drug dealer and Las Vegas gambler, and her brother-in-law, Joe Chagra, a former El Paso lawyer.

Joe Chagra testified that the plot was hatched because Jimmy Chagra was scheduled to be tried on narcotics trafficking charges by Wood, who was known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he handed out to drug dealers.

Joe Chagra said Mrs. Chagra had no part in her husband's decision to have Wood killed.

Mrs. Chagra testified she had no part in the conspiracy although she later learned she had delivered a $250,000 payoff to a Las Vegas hotel for Charles Harrelson, who is serving a life sentence for killing Wood.

She said she thought she was paying some of her husband's gambling debts and did not know the money was for Harrelson until months later when Joe Chagra told her.

Much of the government case was based on seven reels of tape played for the jury. The tapes were excerpts from about 72 hours of conversation the FBI had recorded when Mrs. Chagra or Joe Chagra visited Jimmy Chagra in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.

Aquino's campaign aimed at ending Marcos' reign

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Corazon Aquino started her political career as a reluctant candidate but became a determined campaigner who rallied millions of her countrymen behind a drive to end Ferdinand E. Marcos' 20 years as president.

To the surprise of many Filipinos and many foreigners, the petite, 53-year-old woman managed to channel widespread dissatisfaction with Marcos into a powerful stream of opposition that swept him from power.

She became well known only after her husband was assassinated in 1983, a slaying that started the chain of events that brought down Marcos.

Today, Aquino swore an oath of office as provisional president and said she was "taking power in the name of the Filipino people."

An hour later Marcos took the oath as president at a palace ceremony. As an indication of how his power had crumbled, the broadcast of the ceremony was knocked off the air by rebels who took control of the station. They substituted a John Wayne film.

Several hours later, the man who dominated the country for two decades resigned.

Aquino is a daughter of the wealthy Cojuangco family of Tarlac province, which has sprawling sugar plantations. Her first cousin, Eduardo Cojuangco, is a close business associate of Marcos and believed to be one of the wealthiest men in the Philippines, controlling a coconut monopoly granted him under the Marcos administration.

Stepping forward after her husband was assassinated, Aquino waged an emotion-laden campaign in the Feb. 7 presidential election and made a strong showing in balloting that was tainted by fraud, according to her supporters and to independent election observers.

She campaigned throughout the country, always smiling and always wearing yellow.

Study finds family size may affect SAT results

By The College Press Service

"We are talking of aggregate data, not individuals."

The real reason Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are rising is that students these days come from smaller families, according to a University of Michigan study.

The study found that the smaller a student's family, the higher his or her SAT performance. Scores should continue to rise until the turn of the century, UM researcher Robert Zajonc predicted.

Many researchers have theorized why average SAT scores fell from 1963 through 1980, when they began to level off and why they now are rising again.

While President Reagan once blamed student aid for the decline, others have cited everything from working mothers to "open" elementary schools to bad high schools and even atmospheric nuclear testing as the culprit.

Zajonc, in turn, studied how family demographics influence academic performance before finding a statistical link between family size and test scores.

He cautioned that students from larger families shouldn't despair, however.

Many students from larger families did very well on the SATs, he says.

His research "analyzes the influence of family factors on intellectual development — the number, order and the spacing of siblings — as they contribute to intellectual growth."

Another recent study — by Hunter Breland of the Education Testing Service — also found a high correlation between performance on the National Merit Scholar Test and family size.

Breland, however, is reluctant to attribute performance to family size.

"It could be socio-economic factors that actually cause higher scores. Rich people tend to have smaller families," Breland said.

Zajonc remains adamant. "Even if you control for social-economic status, family size predicts performance on tests of all sorts," he said.

High school seniors taking the SAT in 1963 came from families that, on the average, had 1.5 children preceding them.

But seniors taking the exam in 1980 usually were the third offspring in the home.

Based on such data, Zajonc correctly predicted in 1976 that the scores would fall until 1980 and head upward again because students taking the test would be coming from smaller families.

Drawing to highlight preview of UC computer store opening

By LAURA TETREAU
University Daily News Reporter

A drawing for an Apple Macintosh 512K computer and printer will be conducted today as a preview to the April opening of a computer store in the Texas Tech University Center.

The drawing is part of a special showing of the entire Apple computer line from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in the UC ballroom. Tech students, faculty and staff are eligible to register for the 5 p.m. drawing.

The computer is supplied by Apple, said Tom Shubert, assistant director for UC operations.

During the special showing, the entire line of Apple computer equipment will be displayed and demonstrated. Apple representatives also will display new equipment recently introduced on the computer market. Included will be Imgewriter printers, Lazerwriter printers, 800k external disk drives and 20mb hard disks, Shubert said.

The special showing is a preview to the opening at the UC of a computer store called High Tech in a section of the The Well, the UC's video game room. Besides Apple, the store will offer computers from Zenith, Texas Instruments, Radio Shack and Digital Equipment Corp., Shubert said.

The UC is in the process of constructing and wiring the space for High Tech, Shubert said.

"The purpose of the computer store is that many computer manufacturers offer substantial education discounts, but the only way to take advantage of them is to have a campus facility selling them," Shubert said.

In the past, an education discount could be obtained only by placing a large order with the computer company. The campus computer store can provide the discount to students by placing bulk orders prior to receiving individual orders. Students can receive their computers within 24 hours of placing an order, Shubert said.

High Tech also will allow students to select their system from among several computer companies.

Hotline to give health information

By SCOTT FARIS
University Daily News Reporter

Texas Tech Student Health officials will answer general information calls with a newly installed medical hotline.

"Any question they have on health-related matters, we'd be glad to have them use it," said Murdo MacDonald, director of Student Health. Any conversation on the hotline will be confidential.

The hotline number is 743-2613. It will be manned between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

MacDonald said the staff tending the hotline will seek out answers to any questions callers might have. "If we don't have the answer right off, we'll find it," said MacDonald.

MacDonald said he expects telephone calls to vary with the various sicknesses going around campus. MacDonald said flu is spreading now and probably will be a common subject.

Some calls may be in reference to sickness "myths," centering on mononucleosis and Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), according to MacDonald. He said many sicknesses have accompanying false beliefs.

The hotline originally was intended for AIDS information. "It came about as a result of the lack of information about AIDS," said MacDonald. He said the lack of hysteria at Tech concerning AIDS prompted Student Health to rename the hotline.

MacDonald said other phone numbers also are available for medical information. The City Health Department number is 762-6411.

Students miss increased funding

By The College Press Service

The gap between what college students need and what states can provide is widening, researchers report, despite record amounts of state money for higher education.

"We can't find any wholehearted evidence that states are taking up the slack from federal government cuts," said Jerry Davis, co-author of a report for the National Association of State Scholarships and Grant Programs.

"Our most important finding has been that the growth rate in state funds has not been keeping up with increases in the cost of education," he said.

"And my best prediction is more of the same."

In calling for further cuts in federal student aid last week, U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett noted increasing state aid to colleges would help keep students in college.

But reports on state aid, released just before the federal cuts proposals were announced, contradict the secretary.

Though there were record increases, state funding growth slowed this year, Davis said.

State governments pledged $1.5 billion for higher education for 1985-86, a record amount that Davis said is misleading.

"Growth isn't expanding across the board," he explained. "Eighty-eight percent of the increase came from only 16 states."

And while the record-setting $1.5 billion represents a 7 percent overall increase, operating costs jumped 11 percent last year and 19 percent the year before, said Glen Pruyne, a research assistant at the Illinois State University Department of Education Administration, which tracks higher education costs and appropriations.

"And in the 13 years I've been a researcher, cost increases have never dropped below 11 percent, Pruyne said.

Cost and funding rates vary widely from state to state, both researchers agree.

Only a select group of states seem to be enjoying most of this year's increases, Davis said.

New York, Illinois, California, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Michigan, Ohio and the need, you'd be seeing more students getting aid," he said. "Our evidence is that state agencies are turning down more and more eligible students."

State legislatures will need new and creative programs if they are to help college students, said Ron Field, director of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Federal budget proposals spread across his desk, Field said what he's reading only makes his "crystal ball" cloudier.

President Reagan again wants to eliminate the State Student Incentive Grant — which helps states set up their own aid programs — and consolidate College Work Study and Basic Equal Opportunity Grants.

Congress has resisted such requests in the past, Field said, and may again this year.

"But it looks like higher education is going to take the brunt of the cuts in education in general, and states will have to try to cover those losses," Field said.

Tax reform, which promises to stop letting people deduct their state taxes from their federal tax liability, also could make it harder for states to make up for federal aid losses by raising state taxes.

Minnesota have pledged more than $50 million each toward higher education.

That leaves $270 million, or 18 percent of the increases, divided among the other 37 states and territories.

About 1.34 million students received state aid this school year, a small increase from last year, when about 1.32 million received aid.

Tech offers credit from English university

By CARLA R. McKEOWN
University Daily News Reporter

Students from the Southwest can attend classes in Sheffield, England, this summer in the "Summer of a Lifetime Abroad" program sponsored by Continuing Education at Texas Tech.

The students will begin the seven-week trip from the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport May 27 and will return July 10.

Courses in mass communications and English will be offered to the students at the University of Sheffield. The students can select two or three courses.

James Marra and Hower Hsia, faculty members in the mass communications department, organized the program. Marra said he will accompany the students on the trip, and Hsia said he may take the trip, depending on the number of students going.

In addition to studying at Sheffield, the group will spend five days in Moscow and four days in Paris. Marra said the students will take guided tours, aiding those working on independent study courses.

"In Moscow, there will be very tight security," Marra said. "That will be part of the excitement — being searched, having our luggage searched."

"With the recent talks between the Soviet Union and the United States, we thought it would be a good idea for the students to see the Soviet Union first hand," Marra said he sees several advantages of this program over similar programs.

"With most trips, the students either spend all their time in one place or spend only a couple of days in several places. On this trip, we will be staying in one place but will have a chance to get out and go other places," he said.

"Not many programs include a trip to Moscow. This will help expand the students' horizons. The cost of this trip is comparable, if not lower than similar programs, and the time period — seven weeks — is longer than most other programs."

"Another advantage is the fact that students can take up to nine hours in this program. In other programs, the students can only take three to six hours."

The cost of the trip will be about $3,600 to $4,100 per student, depending on the air fare. The fee includes round trip tickets between the Dallas/Fort Worth airport and London, lodging, two meals a day and excursions to London, York, Stratford-on-Avon, Cambridge, Moscow, Leningrad and Paris.

The fee also includes extension credit tuition, use of the University of Sheffield's facilities, guide services for most excursions and administrative fees.

Students must register for the trip before March 7. A deposit of $300 is due March 14, and a final payment is due by March 28.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

HSC committee hearing rescheduled

Testimony on behalf of the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center will be heard by the state Select Committee on Higher Education March 10 in San Antonio, according to Sharon Nelson, assistant to Tech President Lauro Cavazos.

The testimony, originally scheduled to be heard Thursday in El Paso, was rescheduled in order to consolidate the testimony being given by the numerous state health sciences centers.

The committee visited Tech Feb. 13, hearing testimony from Cavazos as well as other administrators, faculty and members of the Board of Regents.

The 23-member Select Committee was formed last spring by Gov. Mark White in an effort to examine and outline the goals and problems of higher education moving into the 21st century.

Dads Association honors Tech students

Four distinguished alumnae have been named for 1986 by the Texas Tech University College of Home Economics.

Receiving the honor are Betty Price Anderson of Lubbock, Mary Elizabeth Leigh of Stillwater, Okla., Floyce Taylor Masterson of Lubbock and Laurel Earline Weddle of Sun City, Ariz.

The alumnae will be honored during Home Economics Awareness Week at a noon luncheon March 6 in the UC ballroom.

Burning burrs cause smoky skies in city

The smoky, polluted air conditions that covered Lubbock Tuesday afternoon resulted from the burning of waste cotton burrs in a field on the border of Hockley and Terry counties.

A spokesman for the Terry County Police Department said the controlled fire was started in a field about three miles southwest of Ropesville.

"It was out in the middle of a field, so the fire wasn't going anywhere," the spokesman said.

Tech, ATP provide weekend dramatics

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

I'm still trying to figure out how Copperfield shish kabobbed that lady during his show last weekend. I'm telling you, the woman was impaled — right through the gut.

HUB CITY HAPPENINGS

I don't expect such dramatics from the cast and crew of "Trojan Women," the University Theater's spring season opener, but we can't rule anything out.

After all, the play does deal with the Greeks conquering Troy and you'd have to figure one or two or them carried swords. And maybe if one of 'em just happened to fall on one of the characters and ... maybe not.

Anyway, "The Trojan Women" is a classical Greek drama written by Euripides and first was produced way back in 415 B.C. The production, directed by Clifford Ashby, opens Thursday and runs through March 3 at the University Theater.

Tickets cost only $2 for students and are available at the University Theater box office. Showtime is 8:15 p.m. Call the University Theater at 742-3601 for additional information.

The Actor's Trading Post continues its run of "The Glass Menagerie" this Thursday at 8:15 p.m.. The Tennessee Williams play is largely autobiographical, dealing with a Southern family and their conflicting personalities and goals.

Tickets cost $4 and are available by calling 796-2729. "The Glass Menagerie," which opened last Thursday, runs through Saturday.

And now for something completely different.

Those nutty guys from Houston are back in town playing Fat Dawg's Thursday night. Yes, it's The Judy's. Expect their usual highly energetic show that includes tunes from the band's latest LP, The Moo Album. Cover for the show Thursday is $5.

The Dawg will host Grammy award-winning Gatemouth Brown Friday night. Brown is an accomplished musician of both the guitar and violin and is noted for his Texas blues/jazz sound.

Brown is such a versatile performer that it's hard to tell what to expect from his shows. Do count on it being good, however. Cover is $5.

Until Ground Zero: The Wherehouse owner Pyrrha Malouf irons things out with the city (or vice versa), the club will forego its BYOB policy, restricting the use of alcohol on the premises.

But booze or no booze, the show will go on. The rock 'n' roll jam happens tonight for $2.25 cover. Anthony Poe will be running his DNA: Situation 2 show Thursday night. Take note that the club will not open until midnight Thursday but will remain open until 4 a.m.

The Virgils play Friday night at the Wherehouse for a $4.25 cover with Poe's show to follow. The Rude Boys take over Saturday night with a $3.25 cover. Their show begins at about 8 p.m.

Finally, a rock 'n' roll/punk band from Canada, the Asexuals, will play the Wherehouse Tuesday night for a $4.25 cover. Austin DJ Thomas Long will play his recorded music following the Asexuals' set.

A little reminder: Now that the Wherehouse temporarily has gone dry, patrons 17 years of age and older will be welcome into the club until the BYOB format is reinstated.

Wait, there's more. Country band Bayou plays at Cowboy's this Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Cover is $2, $3 and $3 respectively. I suppose that's all.

The Judy's

The new music band The Judy's will be at Fat Dawg's on Thursday. The band, perhaps best known for its patented stunt using a portable TV and the set's white noise to underscore the lyrics of the tune "TV," will take the stage at 11 p.m. Backup music from Austin-based band The Effect will begin at 9:30 p.m. Cover charge is $5.

USA for Africa, Collins garner top '85 Grammy music awards

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "We Are the World," the charity anthem by an all-star rock choir which raised more than $30 million for African famine relief, won four Grammys Tuesday night, including song and record of the year, but lost out to British pop star Phil Collins for album of the year.

"The most important thing was, when we called, you responded and we thank you for it," said singer-songwriter Lionel Richie, who teamed with Michael Jackson to pen the song sung by 45 celebrities.

"When you leave here, remember the children," Jackson added, waving to a talent-laden crowd at the 28th annual Grammy ceremonies at the Shrine Auditorium.

Collins' LP, "No Jacket Required," also won awards for the British singer for pop male vocal and for its producers, Collins and Hugh Padgham. "Now that I've got these, I've got to live up to them," Collins said backstage.

Whitney Houston — snubbed for the nomination as best new artist — won the Grammy for pop female vocal performance for "Saving All My Love for You," an award handed to her by her delighted cousin, Dionne Warwick.

"Oh my goodness. First I must thank God who makes it all possible for me," squealed Miss Houston, the daughter of song stylist Cissy Houston whose debut LP, "Whitney Houston," was nominated for album of the year. Sade, a Nigerian pop princess whose sultry jazz sound on "Smooth Operator" made her a minor musical star, took the best new artist award.

Stevie Wonder took his 16th Grammy award, tying him with Quincy Jones for fourth on the all-time list. Chicago Symphony conductor Georg Solti is first with 23, followed by composer-arranger Henry Mancini with 20 and classical pianist Vladimir Horowitz with 18.

"I'd like to thank all of you for making a reality, Dr. King's birthday a national holiday," said Wonder, honored for rhythm and blues male vocal for "In Square Circle."

Nominated in six categories including record and album of the year,

"We Are the World" also won for best pop performance by a duo or group and for best music video, short form.

Backstage, Richie apologized for his silent co-author, saying of Jackson, "he's so shy," but took great pride in their project.

"It was an opportunity to write for the people. We wrote it to save lives," Richie told reporters. "We came tonight to keep this message alive."

"Our hearts are racing because we did something for people. We wrote an anthem for the times."

Dire Straits won best rock performance by a group for "Money for Nothing," while the group's "Brothers in Arms" album also won a Grammy for engineering.

Whoopi Goldberg, nominated for an Oscar as best actress in "The Color Purple," won the comedy album award for "Whoopi Goldberg" and ad-libbed a four-letter word in her acceptance speech, apologizing that "I forgot where I was."

Lifetime achievement awards were voted to clarinetist-bandleader Benny Goodman, classical guitarist Andre Segovia, and the Rolling Stones, who have never won a Grammy.

'F-X's' effects make new film worth viewing

By The Associated Press

The dictionary defines a sleeper as something "that unexpectedly achieves a striking success." Movie reviewers define a sleeper as a joy forever, and that's why it's so refreshing to stumble on a film such as "F-X."

It came to the marketplace with no advance trumpeting by Orion Pictures, no superstars and a title that could have denoted another science fiction yawner. But glory be! "F-X" is the real article, a genuine, soul-satisfying sleeper.

About the title. It is the film-trade abbreviation for special effects. Rollie Tyler (Bryan Brown) is an F-X man, one of the best. He's the wizard who provided the thrills for such pictures as "I Dismember Mama." So he's the natural choice to pull off a caper for the Justice Department's Witness Relocation Program.

Government agent Cliff DeYoung and his boss Mason Adams (Charlie Hume of TV's "Lou Grant") enlist Tyler to stage a phony assassination of mobster Jerry Orbach so he can be spirited out of the country. It sounds like an easy job, and the pay is $30,000 tax-free. But after the charade is carried out, the real shooting begins. Tyler becomes the hunted man, to the jeopardy of his actress sweetheart (Diane Venora).

The plot grows complicated and doesn't bear too much scrutiny — bodies disappear at an alarming rate. Still, Robert Mandel's fluid direction and Robert T. Megginson's ingenious script provide one surprise after another, right up to the ironic ending.

Not the least of the contributions comes from the film's own F-X man, John Stears, who provided thrills for "Thunderball" and R2D2 for the "Star Wars" trilogy. Bill Conti contributes a fine score to heighten the excitement.

"F-X" benefits from a solid and largely unfamiliar cast. Brown was a brilliant choice for the beleaguered hero. A strong presence in "Breaker Morant" and the TV miniseries, "The Thorn Birds," the Australian actor shows he can carry a major film in the manner of a Sean Connery or Roy Scheider.

Equally important to the success of "F-X" is Brian Dennehy as the rogue cop who sniffs out the U.S. agents' misdeeds. He is an intelligent actor who never uses his bulk and power to domineer. Dennehy has some nice scenes with Martha Gehman, his computer expert who helps uncover the government plot.

Tech slams NMSU in twinbill

By BRAD WALKER
University Daily Sports Reporter

Texas Tech used New Mexico State pitchers like paper towels Tuesday as the Raiders ripped the Aggies for 16 hits to take an 18-6 victory in the second game of a double-header at the Tech Diamond, completing a three-game series sweep.

The Red Raiders, 14-1 for the season, took the early game in the same fashion, winning 13-4. The two victories stretched Tech's winning streak to a school record nine games. "That's a deal where we oughta be 14-1 but you don't count on it," Tech coach Gary Ashby said. "I feel all right right now."

Shortstop Dave Geck helped Tech continue its first inning scoring streak in the nightcap, leading off with a triple and coming home on a sacrifice fly by Jim Darnell. Mike Humphreys hit a solo home run to put the Raiders ahead 2-0.

Down 3-2 going into the bottom of the third, the Raiders exploded for 14 runs as the Aggies sent five pitchers to the mound.

Vidalés Spencer

Humphreys led off the inning with a ground ball single up the middle. Johnny Vidalés then hit a long fly to center, which Aggie John Voelker dropped, allowing Humphreys to score. Mark Booth and Bradley Zack delivered RBI singles and reached home on a Dan Spencer double.

Kevin Horner entered the game in relief for NMSU, and promptly gave up a two-run home run to Geck. Lundy Martinez relieved Horner, hit three Raiders with pitches and allowed five runs. Spencer and Darnell singled in two runs each to end the rally.

Craig Chapin pitched five innings, striking out four and allowing only one earned run, to gain his third win against no losses.

Vidalés gave Tech all it needed in the opener, hitting a three-run homer in the first inning and adding a grand slam in the fourth.

Geck began the first frame with a double down the third base line. Darnell then tripled and Humphreys walked, setting the stage for Vidalés' first shot.

In the fourth inning, Geck singled with one out before Darnell and Humphreys walked, loading the bases for the senior designated hitter. Vidalés smashed both hits to the left-center field power alley.

Tech had two-run frames in the fifth and sixth to go up 13-4.

Tim Moore picked up his first decision of the year, striking out five in 5½ innings. Moore carried a one-hit shutout into the sixth frame before giving up homers to Scott Crampton and Sam Roberson. John Waite finished the final 1½ innings with no hits.

"We swung the bat better in the last few games. I really was expecting a little more from New Mexico State. They were 8-3 coming in here, but they caught us while we're going good," Ashby said.

Richardson banned from NBA after test

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — New Jersey Nets guard Micheal Ray Richardson was permanently banned from the National Basketball Association Tuesday after testing positive for cocaine, Commissioner David Stern said.

Stern called it "a tragic day for Micheal Ray Richardson, nothing less than the destruction by cocaine of a once-flourishing career."

A player who is disqualified is eligible for reinstatement in two years. "However, the reinstatement is not five-day disappearance, the league ruled that it constituted his second violation, although he had twice previously undergone treatment.

Later last month, Richardson failed to appear for a doctor's appointment for treatment for the flu. When he was tested for drugs on that occasion, the results were negative.

Boros new Padres boss

SAN DIEGO — Steve Boros was named manager of the San Diego Padres on Tuesday, a day after Dick Williams quit the job.

Boros, 49, who has been minor

Detroit, the Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati.

He has been a coach with the Kansas City Royals and Montreal Expos and managed in the minor leagues.

SWC players of week

DALLAS — Texas Christian's Jamie Dixon and the University of Texas' Clarissa Davis were named players of the week Monday in Southwest Conference basketball.

Dixon's 35-foot shot at the buzzer gave the Frogs a 55-54 victory over UT-Austin and the SWC lead. TCU's victory ended Texas' eight-game winning streak.

The UT-Austin women's team won three games and retained its top ranking with a 26-0 record. Ms. Davis had 25 points and 7 rebounds against Miami, 24 points and 18 rebounds against SMU and 23 points and 10 rebounds against TCU.

Dixon was honored for the second time in three weeks. Two weeks ago he shared it with SMU's Kevin Lewis.

automatic. In order to be reinstated, it must be approved by both the NBA and the Players Association," Stern said.

Richardson, whom Stern said was tested Monday night, is the second NBA player banned from the league since its drug agreement with the union was instituted in January 1984. John Drew of the Utah Jazz was kicked out of the league last month for a similar infraction.

Early last month, when Richardson tested positive for drug use after a league coordinator of instruction for the Padres, is known as a cool-headed manager. Williams' fiery temper and handling of players often brought confrontations.

Boros last managed in Oakland, where he was fired 44 games into the 1984 season. His Oakland team finished in fourth place in the American League West in 1983 with a 74-88 record.

An infielder during his major league career, Boros played with

Sampson re-emerges after loss of Akeem

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The mixed reception Ralph Sampson received at power forward early in the season have turned to rave reviews now that he's temporarily replaced injured Akeem Olajuwon at center.

Sampson has become the rallying point for the Rockets, who had scratched out a 3-2 record without Olajuwon going into Tuesday night's game against the Utah Jazz.

When Olajuwon was lost Feb. 15 for two to three weeks with a sprained right knee, Coach Bill Fitch returned Sampson to his familiar center position and inserted second-year reserve Jim Petersen at the power forward position.

Both players have adjusted well to their roles.

Sampson said it should be no surprise that he would be able to return to center and take over the scoring and rebounding load.

"That's my normal position," Sampson said. "It took me a couple of games to adjust but now it feels good to get the ball down low and score."

Sampson showed his confidence Saturday when he walked to the Rockets broadcasters in Dallas and wrote "35 points, 20 rebounds" on their score sheet.

Sampson scored 38 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in a 111-104 victory.

"It's easier to be the leader when you're at center," Sampson said. "You're the focal point. You're the last man to get the ball."

So far, Sampson has flourished with the added playing time and extra pressure. He's played 47, 48 and 47 minutes in three of the five games Olajuwon has been sidelined.

Petersen, meanwhile, is also getting more playing time and his confidence is improving with each performance, Coach Bill Fitch said. He scored 19 points and got seven rebounds in Monday night's 115-110 victory over Dallas, including a game-tying jumper with 55 seconds to play.

"It makes things harder on me playing more minutes than I'm used to but I've adjusted," Petersen said. "It's been a total team effort."

Dr. Yost will examine a limited number of people with these type of injuries each week. All the injury clinics are free and open to anyone eligible to enter the Student Recreation Center. Clinics will be held in the classroom located on the north end of the upper level. For further information contact the SRC Office at 742-3351.

Powerful Ponies pound Raider tennis team, 9-0

By MICHAEL CORBETT
University Daily Sports Reporter

The Texas Tech men's tennis team was swept 9-0 Tuesday by the nationally ranked SMU Mustangs in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams on the Lubbock Country Club indoor courts.

The Mustangs, ranked No. 2 in the country, won all six singles and three doubles matches. Tech's best chance for a victory came in the No. 6 singles match in which Luis Segovia, despite suffering a leg injury, took SMU's Brian Devening to three sets before losing 6-7 (6-8), 7-6 (11-9), 7-5.

In other singles action, Simon Hurry lost to John Ross in the No. 1 match 6-2, 6-1. David Leatherwood was beaten by Richey Reneberg 6-1, 6-2 in the No. 2 match, Dick Bosse lost to Stephan Kruger 6-2, 6-3 in the No. 3 match, Lamar May lost to Den Bishop 6-3, 6-2 in the No. 4 match and Ted Invie lost to Ed Ross 6-3, 6-2 in the No. 5 singles match.

In doubles, Hurry-Bosse lost to Kruger-Bishop 6-1, 6-2 in the No. 1 match, Leatherwood-May lost to J. Ross-Reneberg 6-3, 6-0 in the No. 2 match and Steve Kordas-Alan Weinand were defeated in the No. 3 match by E. Ross-Mark Styling 6-2, 6-3.

The win improved SMU's season record to 5-2 on the season and 1-0 in Southwest Conference play. Tech dropped to 5-1 on the year and 0-1 in SWC action.

Tech coach Ron Damron said he was disappointed with his team's overall performance. "I think we could have played better against them than we did," he said. "They are the same team we played last year, and they are a great team. The scores were low, and I think we could have done better than we did."

Although the Raiders were not able to pull out a win, Damron said he was happy with the level of singles play from Segovia and Invie.

"Luis (Segovia) and Ted (Invie) played good matches and worked hard in the No. 5 and No. 6 singles spots," he said.

Segovia injured his leg during the second set of his singles match but was able to continue competition.

"We think it was a pulled muscle," said Damron. "Tomorrow we will have him see (Tech trainer) Ken Murray to see exactly what it is. He'll lay off of it for two days and rest and then we'll see what Ken and Luis say about it Friday."

The Raiders will take a break from conference action Friday for a dual match against Arizona in Albuquerque, N.M.

Tech polo clubs second at meet, reach nationals

The Texas Tech men's and women's polo teams have qualified for national competition after placing second Thursday in the regional finals at the Midland Polo Club in Midland.

Teams competing at the regional tournament were Tulane, SMU, Texas A&M, Colorado State and Tech.

The Tech men opened the tournament with a 14-8 victory against A&M. In the final, the Raiders were defeated by Colorado State, 12-2.

The women also defeated A&M in their opening contest with a 12-1 victory. Tech was defeated 11-2 in the finals by Colorado State.

"In the game (against Colorado State) we may have been a little disorganized, but we're going to work hard to work together as a team so we can make a name for ourselves at the nationals," said Erik Wayton of the Tech men's team.

The men will travel to New York for national competition beginning March 15. The women's team will compete at the national level in Los Angeles on the same date.

Tech hosts league-leading Frogs

By KENT BEST
University Daily Associate Sports Editor

It was about this time a year ago that the Texas Tech basketball team was being dubbed a team of destiny.

After losing consecutive games to Texas and TCU in late January, the Red Raiders ran off eight straight victories to clinch the Southwest Conference championship.

The Raiders then proceeded to sweep the post-season tournament field to lay claim to an undisputed conference title.

Now one year later, lo and behold, there's that word again. Destiny. But this time it's the TCU Horned Frogs who are being sized for the Cinderella slipper. In fact, with Saturday's spectacular 55-54 win over Texas, the Froggies already are in the process of trying on the shiny sneakers of the SWC's manifest destiny.

All they need is one more win. And maybe a shoe horn.

This year's Texas Tech basketball team, who will host league-leading TCU at 7:30 tonight in the Coliseum, stands between TCU and at least a share of its first conference championship in 15 years. The Raiders, it seems, hold TCU's destiny in their hands.

Raiders play final home game, hope to derail TCU's title drive

And they're not selling any shoe horns.

Tech, 12-13 for the year and 7-7 in league play, will wrap up its 1986 home schedule against the Horned Frogs, who are 20-5 for the year and 12-2 in SWC action.

The game will mark the last home appearance for Tech seniors Tony Benford, Tobin Doda and Ray Irvin, all of whom will start tonight.

Tech, in a fifth-place tie with the Houston Cougars, is in a position to rain on TCU's parade if the Raiders can pull off an upset tonight.

On the other hand, if TCU beats Tech, the Frogs will clinch at least a share of the conference title and also earn the No. 1 seed for the SWC tournament March 7-9 at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

Consequently, Tech coach Gerald Myers isn't giving TCU any ammunition in his pre-game comments.

"They're a great, balanced team," Myers said. "They have a lot of individuals on that team that could be stars, but they play well together. I think they're definitely a Top 20 team."

In the first meeting between Tech and TCU this year, the Horned Frogs blasted Tech 63-55 in Fort Worth. The Raiders trailed in double digits most of the game before narrowing the margin at the end.

Myers said TCU's zone defense confused his team in the first game.

"We played pretty well in the first half, but they came with a zone defense in the second half, and that caught us off guard," he said. "They had been running a lot of man-to-man, but they knew how to run the zone when they needed it."

Leading scorers for TCU are guard Carl Lott, averaging 14.2 points a game, and guard Carven Holcombe with 13.2 a contest. Benford (13.3) and Sean Gay (11.0) lead the Raiders and are the only Tech players scoring in double figures.

Women battle TCU in pre-Texas tune-up

By BRAD WALKER
University Daily Sports Reporter

You can call this game the little one before the big one; a warmup, if you will. Marsha Sharp's Texas Tech women's basketball team, however, has seen what half-hearted performances can do, and the Red Raiders plan to go full steam ahead into the game at 5 p.m. today at the Lubbock Coliseum with the TCU Horned Frogs.

The Red Raiders are trying to build a full head of steam going into the regular season finale against top-ranked Texas in Austin. Tech, 19-6 for the year and 12-2 in Southwest Conference play, is clinging to a slim half-game lead over the Arkansas Razorbacks. If the two teams finish in a tie for second place, a coin toss will decide the pairings for the SWC tournament.

The Raiders are ranked No. 20 by USA Today and are coming off another lazy victory over SMU, 89-63. Sharp said she's concerned with her team's preparation for TCU.

"This game against TCU is one of those games you have to be real careful with how you approach," Sharp said. "Everybody says TCU shouldn't give us any trouble. But at the same time, they have this one and one more game left this year, so they don't have anything to lose."

TCU is suffering through a dismal season at 5-20 and 1-13 and is headed for last place in the SWC standings. Only the top six teams in the league advance to the SWC women's tourney.

The Lady Frogs are led by junior guards Terri Janak, who is averaging 10.1 points per game (ppg), and Carol Glover, who is hitting at a 13.9 clip and pulling down 5.5 rebounds per game (rpg).

"I expect them to come out loose and play very well," Sharp said. "They played us close in the first half in Fort Worth. They're a good shooting ball club, and they play a good man-to-man defense."

Seniors Franklin, Sharon Cain, Tricia Clay and Janene Berry will be playing in their final home game today against the Lady Frogs. Clay will not start, however, and is listed as questionable for the game due to an ankle injury sustained in Tech's game against SMU.

Debbie Jones (6.5 ppg, 4.4 rpg) will get the nod in place of Clay at the power forward spot, with Julia Koncak (11.8 ppg, 6.3 rpg) at post.

Sharp realizes that each game is crucial as far as post-season play is concerned. "I think the NCAA is saying that the second-place team in our conference will have a chance to get in," she said.

NCAA leader calls recruiting source of ills

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Recruiting is the only thing wrong with college sports, and alumni and boosters must be disassociated from athletic programs, NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said Tuesday.

"The only weakness we have is in the area of recruiting," Byers told a group of sports writers and coaches who attended the NCAA's annual College Football Preview.

"The contest, as I see it, is essentially whether the presidents and chancellors uphold the stewardship of higher education and set the policy for college athletics or whether a minority of unscrupulous coaches and inflated, immature boosters and alumni are going to set the policy."

Byers threw his support behind a

Southwest Conference amendment, proposed and then withdrawn at last month's NCAA convention, which would have limited all recruiting contacts to a school's staff members.

Current rules prohibit what the NCAA terms "representatives of an institution's athletic interests" — i.e., alumni, boosters — from any off-campus recruiting.

Byers called the action of the NCAA Presidents Commission at last June's special convention in pushing through tougher penalties for major rules violations "a good first half."

He said it is "time now to move forward," citing the mood of most NCAA members as "a renaissance of a spirit and a willingness to conduct inter-collegiate athletics in an honorable fashion."

But he said the NCAA needs help from its members in cleaning up violations, which he said will "never reach 100 percent purity."

"The next step is to embrace at least the concept of the Southwest Conference proposal and remove outsiders, boosters, non-staff members from the recruiting process."

Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor University said the SWC legislation will be resubmitted at the 1987 convention after considerable reworking.

"I'm for it in principle," Teaff said, "but, for example, 90 to 95 percent of our players get their summer jobs through alumni. That's just one of the things that has to be clarified."

"I'm for it in principle...but, for example, 90 to 95 percent of our players get their summer jobs through alumni. That's just one of the things that has to be clarified.
