Botha says state of emergency could be withdrawn on Friday

By The Associated Press

CAPE TOWN — President P.W. Botha announced Tuesday that the 195-day-old state of emergency imposed to fight anti-apartheid turmoil in South Africa probably would be lifted Friday.

His announcement was praised by the United States and was given a cautious welcome from some South African liberals. But it provoked expressions of concern from the largest anti-apartheid grouping, the United Democratic Front, that the emergency would be supplanted by repressive legislation.

Botha also made a new offer of statehood for Namibia, proposing an Aug. 1 target date for starting moves toward the territory's independence. He made it conditional on a withdrawal of Cuban troops from neighboring Angola.

Police reported two blacks were killed by security officers. They said police shot a man in the western Transvaal province and a youth died of injuries suffered when police quelled a riot in Potchefstroom, southwest of Johannesburg.

They also reported that two whites were seriously hurt when their car was stoned in the south of the country.

Botha made his announcements to a packed parliamentary chamber in the country's legislative capital.

He claimed the level of violence had dropped sufficiently to enable him to issue a proclamation, "most probably this coming Friday," to lift the state of emergency.

But critics of the system of racial segregation that keeps power in the hands of South Africa's white minority said they could not readily explain the timing of Botha's announcement. They insisted that the level of violence had not dropped.

The emergency, imposed July 21 on 30 urban and rural districts and subsequently lifted from seven, gives police and troops sweeping powers to use guns against rioters and detain suspects indefinitely without trial. It has been widely condemned abroad, and its removal is a primary demand of anti-apartheid activists.

Botha also said Parliament would be asked to review existing laws in case new ones were needed to help "protect lives and property effectively."

The United Democratic Front, a multi-racial coalition of anti-apartheid groups, said lifting the emergency would be an "acknowledgment that the emergency has failed to suppress the desire of our people to be free."

But the organization expressed concern at Botha's mention of new laws, saying: "The government is going to broaden the already Draconian provisions of the Internal Security Act. The effect of this is that a de facto state of emergency will exist throughout our country."

The 70-year-old Afrikaner president offered to implement a U.N. resolution granting independence to Namibia if the Cubans left Angola. Namibia, or South-West Africa, is under South African administration and is a target of guerrillas operating from Angola.

Botha said Namibia's 1 million people "have waited long enough for independence," a delay he claimed "cannot be laid at South Africa's door."

His promise to lift the state of emergency won praise from one of his most implacable foes, Member of Parliament Helen Suzman of the Progressive Federal Party.

Suzman told The Associated Press she was delighted because she assumed it meant the release of detainees.

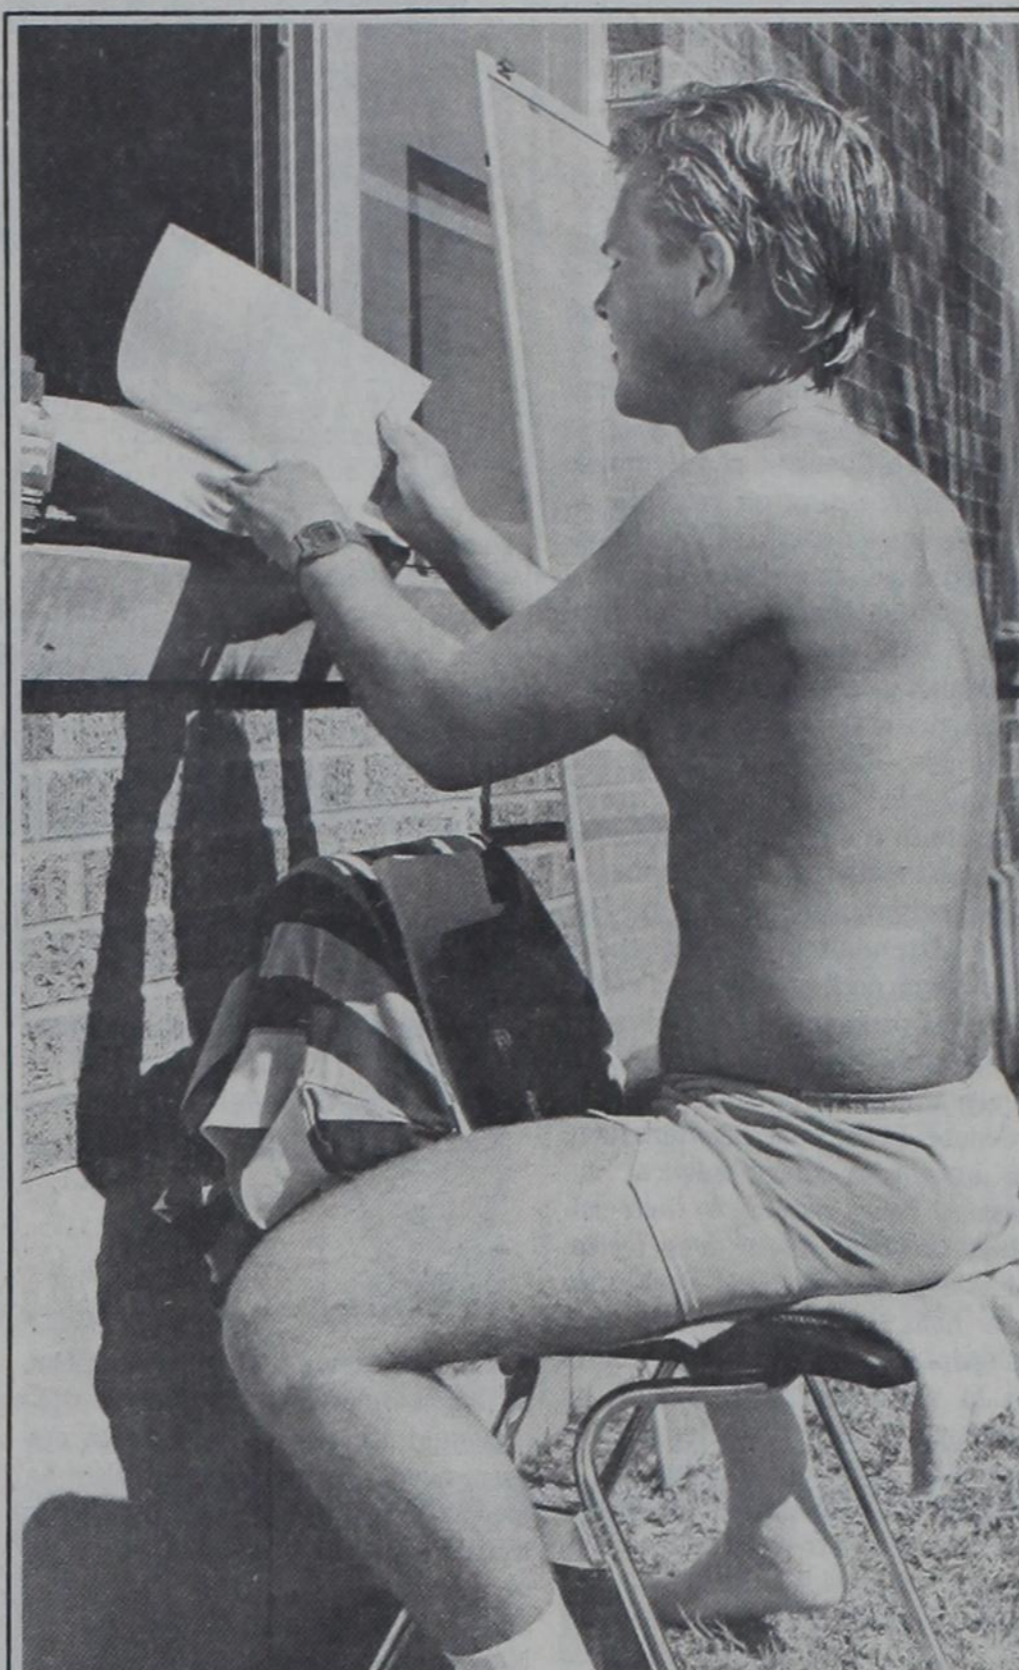

She said the emergency had done nothing to calm the 18-month state of unrest, and warned that "unless an attempt is made to get to the roots of the unrest, we will have an ongoing, endemic state of violence in this country."

In Johannesburg, police said an explosion in the main police station at John Vorster Square injured two officers and South African radio said two civilians also were wounded.

Police refused to say if it was a bomb, but reported the blast went off in a third-story toilet, blowing a hole in an outer wall. It occurred just before noon.

On Monday police stopped a van that they said was carrying seven black guerrillas and killed all seven in the resulting shootout in Guguletu township near Cape Town.

Official reports said the men were sent by the outlawed African National Congress to attack policemen.

Program reveals lax security on Tech campus

By LINDA BURKE
University Daily News Reporter

The Security Deficiency Notification (SDN) program implemented by the University Police Department three months ago has pinpointed several campus buildings for lax security, said Brenda Arkell, crime prevention officer.

With the January and February 1986 figures in, Arkell said it still is difficult to evaluate the success of the program.

"Hopefully there is more awareness and when someone leaves a door open or unlocked, they think twice the next time," she said.

SDN tickets are issued by campus police officers if they find open or unlocked doors, open or unlocked windows or desks, unsecured files, keys or property in plain sight or unsecured equipment in any campus building as they patrol it.

Some of the higher incidences of lax security measures in campus buildings include six deficiencies in the administration building in January and 15 in February.

In the music building, four security deficiencies were reported in January compared to 20 reported in February, Arkell said.

The art building had no security deficiencies reported in January but had seven in February.

The mass communications building had four notices filed in January and 24 in February, she said.

The chemistry building had two deficiencies in January and 40 in February, she said.

"The figure jumped because more officers were patrolling the building to monitor and deter crime because of the crime reported in the building in January," Arkell said.

She said if there is a potential crime problem in any building or if the criminal activity was high, increased police surveillance of a building will result in more deficiencies being found.

Richard Bartsch, biology department chairman, said he has circulated memos to graduate students, staff members and faculty in the department reminding them to lock and secure doors before they leave.

Reports indicate Marcos may have embezzled billions

By The Associated Press

MANILA — The government of Corazon Aquino said Tuesday it has new evidence that ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his family and friends may have plundered up to $10 billion of the nation's wealth.

Former Sen. Jovito Salonga told a news conference that documents found at the presidential palace after Marcos hurriedly abandoned it Feb. 25 link Marcos to purported illegal purchases of property in United States.

Salonga is chairman of a five-member commission Aquino created last week to recover "all ill-gotten wealth" that the Marcos family and its associates allegedly accumulated and secreted under dummy names during Marcos' 20-year rule.

Asked how much money was involved, Salonga replied, "maybe $5 billion to $10 billion." He did not elaborate.

The estimate was the largest yet. The 1985 national budget of the financially strapped Philippines was $3.3 billion.

The nation's foreign debt is $26 billion and, according to the Marcos government, the average per capita income of the 55.5 million Filipinos last year was $136.

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., told a news conference at Manila airport Tuesday he believes the U.S. government "ought to be doing everything we can to facilitate the recovery of these assets" because they were "stolen and swindled from the pockets of the Filipino people."

Solarz, chairman of the House subcommittee on Asian affairs that recently conducted hearings on Marcos' alleged holdings in the United States, said there was "persuasive documentary and direct evidence that the Marcoses control a real estate empire in the New York City area alone of up to $350 million."

Lawyers for the new government obtained a court injunction in New York on Sunday barring sale of five New York properties allegedly owned or controlled by Marcos.

Meanwhile, most members of the Philippines' highest courts resigned Tuesday to give Aquino's week-old government a free hand in revamping the judicial system. The system is composed of Marcos appointees and has been viewed by the public with distrust.

Among those resigning was senior Associate Justice Claudio Teehankee, who swore in Aquino as president hours before Marcos fled for Hawaii.

CIA second in command springs surprise resignation

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Tuesday accepted the resignation of Deputy CIA Director John N. McMahon and quickly named another career intelligence officer to the government's No. 2 spot under top spy William Casey.

A surprise announcement by the White House Tuesday evening said Reagan would nominate Robert M. Gates, the agency's deputy director for intelligence, to replace McMahon.

McMahon, a 34-year veteran of intelligence work, gave no explanation for his resignation other than to say in a letter to Reagan he had "reached a stage where I should move on."

The White House statement saying the president had accepted McMahon's resignation cited "personal reasons" for the deputy's departure, which is to be effective March 29.

The statement said Reagan accepted the resignation "with regret" and praised McMahon's long years of service to the nation.

There was no immediate explanation for the announcement, coming as it did after office hours Tuesday and after reporters had been told there would be no further statements from the White House.

In a letter dated Feb. 24 but not released until the resignation was announced, McMahon told Reagan, "With over 34 years in intelligence, I have reached a stage where I should move on."

McMahon offered praise for Casey, a former Reagan campaign chairman who had not been associated with the intelligence community since World War II and has encountered some opposition within the CIA and on Capitol Hill since assuming the directorship five years ago.

He called Casey "a unique asset" who has brought wisdom, energy and leadership "that has provided our country with an intelligence capability second to none."

McMahon was nominated by Reagan to be deputy director on April 26, 1982 following the resignation of Adm. Bobby Inman, which has created a near-revolt on Capitol Hill. Both Democrats and Republicans were openly wary of Casey and said they had come to rely on Inman, a career intelligence officer to give them a reliable account of what the agency was doing.

Before the promotion, McMahon had held the agency's No. 3 post — executive director.

Sagging oil prices prompt new tax proposal

By LORRAINE BRADY
University Daily News Reporter

A tax on imported oil seems to be a timely solution to help prop up Texas revenues which are sagging because of the falling price of oil, said Mary Nell Mathis, Democratic candidate for the 19th District U.S. Congressional seat.

Mathis, a Lubbock CPA, supports a $5 per barrel tax on imported oil for a six-month period as a means of allowing domestic producers to compete with the staggering drop in world oil prices as well as generating federal revenue that could be applied toward the deficit.

The recent price drop to less than $12 per barrel Tuesday, from a high last year of $31.70 in November, was instigated by Saudi Arabian oil producers to edge out Mexican and Venezuelan competition. Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma oil producers have also suffered from price reductions.

The current price is the lowest it has been since 1978.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock estimated Texas will face a $1.3 billion revenue shortfall over the next 1½ years due to the dropping oil prices. The oil and gas industry is the largest source of revenue for the state.

Gov. Mark White appealed to President Reagan last week to implement an import tax as a means of generating federal revenue and stabilizing the oil industry in Texas. The Reagan administration is opposed to raising taxes and further regulation of private industries.

Trudi Lewis, press secretary for U.S. Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock, said the main factor to be considered before the tax is implemented is how much it will help the producers.

She said Combest thinks the energy industry has been singled out as a means of raising federal revenues in the past, citing the windfall profits tax imposed on oil producers in the late 1970s.

Mathis said a tax on imported oil will enable domestic producers to raise their prices to competitive levels and operate more efficiently. The cost of operating an average Texas oil field is $10 per barrel.

Prices of $12 per barrel and lower is making it uneconomical to operate low-volume oil wells, extract petroleum from Canadian oil sands or pump oil in remote arctic and offshore areas.

A drop below $10 per barrel could result in closing drilling and exploration operations by domestic producers as well as by Mexican and Canadian oil producers.

Saudi Arabian oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani has speculated the price per barrel could drop to $8. Saudi Arabia is the largest oil supplier in the Western world and has driven the price of oil down by increasing production.

The Soviet Union also is suffering from the impact of lower oil prices. Texas Tech economics professor Donald Bumpass said oil production is the prime source of foreign exchange for the Soviets, who export oil to Eastern Bloc countries and Finland.

Saudi Arabian dominance in the oil industry is responsible for the worldwide drop in prices. Bumpass said the Saudis currently produce about 7 million barrels of oil per day, but have the capacity to produce 20 million per day.

The United States currently imports 5 million barrels of oil a day to supplement its domestic production. Mathis estimated that a $5 per barrel tax would generate about $4.5 billion in revenues over a six-month period. She said that would result in an approximate 2 percent reduction of the federal deficit.

"The biggest advantage of an import oil tax is that it appears to be relatively painless to the consumer," Bumpass said.

Bumpass said with the recent drop in world prices that a $5 increase would not be that noticeable to consumers. He said Texas would benefit by recovering revenues it has lost to falling oil prices.

Bumpass said states that do not rely on oil production as a major source of revenue probably will resist the tax, which will result in higher prices for them. He said Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma could impose a tax of their own but that consumers near Mexican borders probably would take advantage of lower prices.

Keeping those senators on tips of their toes

University Daily Staff Writer
Jay Miller

Not to be outdone by the budding thespians in the U.S. House of Representatives, the U.S. Senate last week voted to have the TV camera join them in the Senate chambers beginning June 1. The resolution, although it may have minor drawbacks, should give Americans something helpful: an unfiltered, unpolished look at their government in action.

Last week's 67 to 21 vote cleared the way for gavel-to-gavel television coverage of its floor proceedings on a trial basis between June 1 and July 15.

The dissenters in the vote cited two points for their disapproval: camera coverage would encourage more grandstanding and fear that, on camera, many senatorial actions would look undignified or unconstructive.

It seems in the long run that televising floor proceedings will help the Senate's public image. C-Span, the House of Representatives' television network, has been well received and has given the public the opportunity to view its government's proceedings from the comfort of their homes rather than being relegated to a quick peek from the Senate gallery during the family vacation to Washington, D.C.

Granted, most of the House and Senate proceedings are generally about as exciting as televised bass fishing, however, in the past I have spent several hours watching C-Span during crucial Congressional debates and votes.

Viewing Senate proceedings will require a little intelligence on the part of the public. People must realize that most of the work done in the Senate, as with any deliberative body, is done in committees rather than general session. General sessions on C-Span often feature Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill spouting off resolutions, with little or no debate, while a handful of reps sleep in their seats.

The claims that televising proceedings will encourage senatorial grandstanding are unfounded. In fact, the presence of the camera, at least in the House, has encouraged the lawmakers to become more deliberate in their remarks knowing that constituents may be watching.

Televised proceedings also may increase attendance among those senators who consistently miss votes.

Also, the presence of the television camera may bring to an end the ridiculous practice of filibustering in the Senate. In the past, senators have been known to spend several unnecessary hours reading to their colleagues the contents of such irrelevant works as the New York City phone book in an effort to stall passage of a controversial bill. Voters tend to remember foolish acts by politicians, thus the filibuster may be replaced by debate of substance.

Although last week's resolution provides for a short six-week trial period, senators will decide July 29 whether to allow the camera on a permanent basis. If the trial period confirms many of the senators' suspicions that Senate proceedings look uncivilized and unproductive the solution may be to clean up the proceedings rather than hiding them behind the Senate chamber doors out of the public's view.

Increased spending to ward off Soviets

University Daily Staff Writer
Don Williams

Call it paranoia. Call it overkill. But in this instance, call it justified.

Ronald Reagan, never one to cut corners or exercise restraint when he can milk money out of Congress for military spending, is seeking to extend American security southward by asking for additional funding for the Nicaraguan Communist-opposition force, the Contras.

This time, let's hope enough are listening. For the past two years, the majority of Congress has been willing to live with the reality of Soviet proliferation in the Central American country in an effort to limit defense spending where possible.

Although the president has championed the cause of the Contras for quite some time, he has been able to give the group little more than moral support and lip service of late.

Unfortunately, don't look for the situation to change. The concept of Contra support obviously has not gained acceptance, and the chances of Congress changing its collective mind and approving a large increase in aid at the same time appears unlikely.

On Monday, Reagan requested that $100 million be granted to the Contras, more than three times the American expenditure the anti-Communist troops currently are working with. Moreover, the current $27 million in Contra aid which runs out this month is limited to non-lethal, humanitarian use.

The president's proposal calls for a slight increase in that type of aid, but more important, it includes a request for $70 million in direct military assistance.

To help push the proposal through, Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz have pulled a very large crying towel out of the closet and are throwing it along with a heavy guilt trip on the shoulders of Congress.

In addition, Congress should not allow itself to be influenced by the unpopular attitude toward the Contras. No, the rebel group does not even have popular support among the Nicaraguan people. Why should this make a difference? Is the Kremlin embraced with open arms by Soviet citizens?

Also in question are the methods used by the Contras. Supposedly, the rebel force commits human rights violations.

However, we must see that the primary issues are not these but the very real problem of keeping the Soviet factor out of America's backyard when we are able.

Already, the Soviet Union has Cuba as a home away from home in the Caribbean. In an attempt to gain another stronghold, they have pumped $500 million into the Sandinista government. The United States cannot allow another Latin American country to become an extension of the Soviet Union without a challenge. That the USSR will take advantage of such an opportunity is unquestioned.

If Congress allows it, we soon will be stepping out the back door of Texas onto a Red lawn.

Nation running out of presidential candidates

Syndicated Columnist
James Reston

Gov. Mario Cuomo was here not long ago, and in a washup exchange with some reporters, suggested that Secretary of the Treasury James Baker would be a formidable Republican candidate for the Presidency in 1988.

About the same time, the secretary of the interior, Donald Hodel, dismissed Lee Iacocca from one of his jobs as defender of the Statue of Liberty, apparently on the ground that he was not only flirting with this lovely, famous lady, but also flirting with the presidency.

All this is good news. For while it seems a little early, at least some people here and elsewhere, observing the current list of "insiders" as potential presidential candidates, are wondering if there aren't some "outsiders" who should be considered for the job.

My colleague Russell Baker thought some years ago that the presidency was too important to be left merely to the people who ran for it. Maybe, he suggested, there were just as many qualified people "out there," as we say, who were never considered because they were never "mentioned."

So let's mention a few just for fun, beginning with the three Bakers. Cuomo was on to something by mentioning James Baker, though it's not clear that this was helpful to the Democratic Party.

James Baker is not the sort that you'd want to hand your hat to by mistake. He comes from Texas, which has quite a few electoral votes. He presided over the White House as chief of staff until he decided that the White House was more interested in money than in ideas. So he switched to the Treasury.

Now, the problem here is getting the White House and Congress to agree on anything. And looking to the future, the Republicans could do worse than putting together in '88 a ticket of James Baker of Texas, who knows more about the White House than anybody else there, and the former Republican majority leader of the Senate, Howard Baker of Tennessee, who knows more about what goes on backstairs in the Senate than anybody since Lyndon Johnson.

There could be a problem about this Republican Ticket: It's a little south of center, and there might be a fuss about which Baker was to No. 1 and which No. 2. But the possibility of Bakerizing the Republic is at least worth mentioning.

What we need, with respect to the "insiders" who are leading the so-called popularity polls, is something to take our minds off George Bush's problems: something new, something different.

In this sense, the Republicans have all the face cards. They have not only the Bakers but the Doles. Now here is something the Democrats cannot possibly match or handle: a Republican ticket of Robert Dole, the Senate majority leader, and Elizabeth Dole, his wife, the secretary of Transportation.

These Doles are no pineapples. He could pick up the men's votes and she could pick up the women's votes, and if ever they differed, she would tame his humor and tell him what to do.

As to the "outsiders," considered first the universities that gave us Woodrow Wilson. One possibility is Bartlett A. Giamitti, the outgoing president of Yale, a remarkable man soon to be unemployed.

We come now to consideration of possible candidates from what people insist on calling "the media." After all, this is the age of television, and considering the triumphs of Ronald Reagan, both parties are looking for attractive candidates whose personalities will seem more important than their policies.

They missed their chance with Walter Cronkite, who was everybody's Uncle Dudley, so now they are left with Bill Moyers, who used to be in the White House but prefers policy to publicity; and Dan Rather, who can't afford to be president and would rather be Rather.

There are, of course, the preachers. They have been with us ever since the days of William Jennings Bryan and his "Cross of Gold" speech. But he was a loser, and now the electronic preachers are telling us on Sunday morning that John Calvin was a capitalist and the Lord was a Republican.

Nevertheless the hunt for new candidates goes on, and it might just work, unless of course the Congress repeals the 22nd Amendment to let the president run for a third term. But you don't need to worry about that, for his wife might at last veto it.

To the editor:

With the new seat belt law now in effect, it seems that we don't have a choice. But motorcycle riders do have a choice.

These bold people that ride around without a helmet have the choice of protecting themselves or not. If you don't wear a helmet when riding a motorcycle, you're asking to get hurt; but, that is still your choice. I used to ride a motorcycle, and I know that the wind in your hair feels good, and it might give you a wider eye view.

I always shake my head when I see a motorcycle rider not wearing a helmet. I think to myself, "how stupid," or "I wonder if his obituary will be in the newspaper soon." It makes me mad to know that these people on two wheels don't have any safety restrictions.

I agree with the seat belt law 100 percent. If we as automobile drivers can't have a choice as to whether or not we want to wear our seatbelts, I think the motorcycle riders shouldn't have a choice either. We need a helmet law.

Delta crash avoidable, investigators say

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Federal investigators believe the crew of a Delta Air Lines jet that crashed near the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on Aug. 2 could have aborted the ill-fated landing, but waited too long to try, the Dallas Times Herald reported Tuesday.

Flight 191, en route to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., had clues a storm in its path was severe, according to the newspaper.

The newspaper, in a copyright story, said the internal reports were completed in the past two weeks by leaders of the National Transportation Safety Board teams assigned to assess factors in the crash, in which 137 people were killed.

The reports were the first investigative assessment of the crash, the Times Herald said. The agency's final conclusions about the probable cause will be detailed in the final report, due in April or May, a board spokesman said.

Delta officials said the pilots of the L-1011 jumbo jet had no way of knowing they were flying into the thunderstorm microburst and could not escape once they were in the powerful downdraft of air.

"Nobody could have flown through it," said Doug Twinam, Delta's chief investigator for the accident.

T. Theodore Fujita, a University of Chicago meteorologist who studied the crash with Delta's help, said the type of storm cloud the Delta crew saw is often innocuous and can be "entirely misleading to pilots."

Decreasing oil prices cause job layoffs

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock Corp. announced Tuesday it will lay off 600 employees — or about 5 percent of its labor force of 11,500 — in a "streamlining of the corporation" brought on by declining oil prices.

"The streamlining will be complete by May 1, and all affected employees should know their status no later than that date," the company said in a statement.

Diamond Shamrock has not decided which workers will be laid off, said spokeswoman Ginger Shearburn.

"This is corporate-wide," she said. "It's across the board. We're centralizing staff functions ... from top to bottom."

Diamond Shamrock employs about 800 people in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Violence spreads in Israeli territories

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Violence spread in the occupied territories Tuesday, two days after an Israeli-appointed mayor was murdered, but Prime Minister Shimon Peres vowed to continue easing control over West Bank cities.

Israeli troops fired on a group of young Palestinians in the market place at Nablus, whose mayor was assassinated Sunday, wounding a 22-year-old in the leg, military sources reported. They said the Palestinians had refused to stop for questioning and some began throwing stones.

The marketplace is near the spot where Mayor Zafer al-Masri was shot Sunday while walking to the city hall in Nablus, 30 miles north of Jerusalem.

Police believe Palme assassin had an accomplice

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Authorities said Tuesday that a cab driver saw Olof Palme's assassin leap into a car and speed away with at least one accomplice seconds before police arrived at the scene of the murder.

They offered a reward of $70,000 in hopes of tempting an accomplice to betray the man who shot the 59-year-old prime minister in the back Friday night on a well-lighted street in downtown Stockholm.

"There was at least one person in the (getaway) car," Stockholm Police Chief Sune Sandstrom told The Associated Press. He said police arrived seconds after the assassin's car raced away on the snow-covered street.

A witness to the shooting said earlier that he chased Palme's killer on foot, but lost him.

Police Commissioner Hans Holmer told a news conference about the taxi driver's report. He said the cabbie noted only part of the license number, and police would not describe the vehicle.

"I hope there are people sheltering or who have sheltered this man who are willing to turn him in," Holmer said in announcing the reward.

The commissioner rejected growing public criticism of the way police have handled the investigation.

Critics say Stockholm authorities were too slow in sealing off the murder site and escape routes, and in deploying police patrols. They also said police did not provide enough protection for the prime minister, but Palme often dismissed his bodyguards and had done so earlier Friday.

West Texas Parkinson's disease society chartered

By SCOTT FARIS
University Daily News Reporter

The Lubbock-based West Texas Parkinsonism Society will be welcomed into affiliation with the national American Parkinson Disease Association (APDA) Thursday.

Frank Williams, field director for the APDA, will present the Lubbock Society with an official charter as a chapter affiliate at 7 p.m. Thursday in room 4A-100 of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. When raising funds in affiliation with the national organization, the Lub-

The lecture will focus on Collins' perception of American family trends. He has written for the The New York Times as a reporter and columnist for 15 years. Now he tours the country reporting on family topics, such as child care, divorce, step-families, marriage and the elderly. "How to Be a Guilty Parent" is Collins' most recent book and contains illustrations by New York cartoonist Gahan Wilson. Collins also has written personality profiles of celebrities, including producer Steven Spielberg, actor Harrison Ford, astronomer Carl Sagan and actress Jill Clayburgh.

The lecture series is funded by the Frost Foundation and sponsored by the Home Economics Department of Human Development and Family Studies. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Theater fills Hub this weekend

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

"Blazing Theatrical Fireworks" — The New York Times
"A Musical Made in Heaven" — Time magazine
"Broadway's Brassiest Hit" — People magazine

Those are just a few raves describing the Broadway hit "42nd Street," which will be performed Saturday in Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. "42nd Street" is the 1981 Tony award winner by David Merrick, who has produced such hits as "Hello Dolly!," "Gypsy," "Play it Again Sam" and "Oliver!"

The two performances Saturday (at 2 p.m. and 8:15 p.m.) will feature elaborate sets (more than 10 tons worth) and more than 2,000 pieces of wardrobe. It's not often Lubbock hosts a theater production of such a reputation, so "42nd Street" should really be something to see.

Bear with me on this ticket information, 'cause it's kind of complicated: Tickets for Texas Tech students for the 2 p.m. matinee performance cost $14, $12 and $10. Evening performances are $16, $14 and $12 for students. All seats are reserved, and tickets are available at the University Center ticket booth. I guess that wasn't too bad.

I know what you're thinking: "Gee, '42nd Street' only whets my culturally starved appetite. What other sophisticated events are offered in the Lubbock area?"

How about the Tech Ballet's production of "Coppelia"? This classic ballet will be performed Thursday and Friday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater. Showtimes are at 8:15 p.m. Contact Peggy Willis at 742-3361 for more information.

More theater? OK. Check out the hard-to-define "Red Horse Animation" directed by Gary Cupp. The lab production will feature several performers who have had little, if any, stage experience. Steve Paxton will compose original music for the production, and several other artists will be involved in the project.

"Red Horse Animation" opens at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the agriculture engineering building. Tickets cost $1 at the door. We're talkin' bargain.

Here's a quick rundown of the music scene: Fat Dawg's — local jazz band No Compromise ($3.50), Friday; Lee Searcy & the Drugstore Cowboys ($3), Saturday. Barbecue Jam (no cover), Sunday.

To continue, at the Wherehouse — Ron Riley hosts rock 'n' roll jam ($2.25), tonight; Poe's DNA: Situation 2 ($2.25), Thursday; The Tone ($4.25), Friday and Saturday. BYOB is back in effect. No booze allowed in the club until midnight Friday in order to accommodate teens.

That's pretty much it for me.

Mad Mel

"Mad Max" freaks can get their fill this weekend at the University Center Allen Theater. There will be two showings each of "Mad Max," "The Road Warrior" and "Mad Max III: Beyond Thunderdome." Mel Gibson stars in the ever popular trilogy. The movies will be shown at 6 p.m., 8 p.m. and 9:45 p.m., respectively. Tickets cost $1.50 for each movie.

Basinger, Rourke film should be nixed

By The Associated Press

If you can last 9½ minutes at "9½ Weeks" then you probably have a long attention span. It's a misguided movie that does a good job of being boring, but not much of anything else.

This Adrian Lyne ("Flashdance") effort, based on the book by Elizabeth McNeill, stars Kam Basinger as a divorced art dealer (Elizabeth) who sloshes through a bizarre affair with a commodities broker (John).

After John (Mickey Rourke) blinds her, drips ice cubes over her body and strands her, alone, at the top of a Ferris wheel, it's a wonder she'd ever want to be with him again. Ah, but she returns so John can test riding crops on her thighs in front of the sales help in a tack store and by stuffing her mouth with a nauseating progression of foods and liquids.

The eating scene is particularly repulsive, unless you like cough syrup with your Jell-O. If it's supposed to be erotic, it misses by a mile. One need only recall that marvelously sensual moment in "Tom Jones" to know how a really great food scene should be done.

Besides a weak script with the type of dialogue tots mutter at the mall, and love-making scenes that turn off the viewer, there's also the problem of casting Mickey Rourke ("Diner," "Year of the Dragon"), who continually mumbles his lines, as the romantic lead.

John looks like a bum. His hair is punked out, he needs a shave and otherwise totters on the brink of eternal sleazehood. There is nothing remotely sensual about this guy, and it is unbelievable that any woman would spot John on the street, as Elizabeth does, and desire him.

Women's squads pursue spots in NCAA tourney

By The Associated Press

Across America they're playing the NCAA basketball bracket game this week for the women as well as the men as everyone keeps guessing where teams will be matched when the tournament pairings are announced Sunday.

But Andy Landers, coach of second-ranked Georgia (29-1) isn't interested in participating in any guessing games at the moment.

"I told the players that people will try to figure out all kinds of matchups for us in the NCAA tournament in terms of the title game, but to keep it all in perspective," Landers said. "There are just too many good teams out there to look that far ahead."

Others, however, are forecasting an eventual showdown between Georgia and Texas, 28-0, the team the Southeastern Conference champions continue to pursue in the rankings.

The Longhorns once again were an overwhelming choice for No. 1 in this week's poll announced Tuesday. Coach Jody Conradt's team, which will go after its 115th straight Southwest Conference victory in the league semifinals on Thursday in Dallas, received 59 of 60 first-place votes and 1,199 points from a nationwide panel of women's coaches.

The Lady Longhorns downed conference rival Texas Tech for the second time this season Sunday, 55-43 in Austin.

Georgia grabbed the remaining first-place vote, 58 second-place votes and a third-place vote for 1,140 points.

The voting was completed before Georgia's 94-72 victory over No. 10 Louisiana State, 25-5, in the Southeastern title game in Athens, Monday night.

Meanwhile, Virginia, 26-2, was victimized by Maryland 92-68 in the Atlantic Coast semifinals and fell from third to sixth. While this week's balloting stopped with that game, Coach Chris Weller's Terrapins, 17-12, did not. They went on to upset No. 16 North Carolina 90-74 in Fayetteville, N.C., Monday night for the league crown and automatic NCAA bid.

Manthei gaining elusive esteem

By BILL SEITZLER
University Daily Contributing Writer

Earning respect in a highly competitive swimming environment such as the Southwest Conference is a tough chore to accomplish, but by posting the nation's sixth best 100-yard butterfly time, Texas Tech's Lee Manthei is gaining that esteem.

The Red Raider swimming team's co-captain hopes not only to turn heads at the Southwest Conference championships March 13-15 in Austin but also at the NCAA championships. The senior needs to shave only 0.42 seconds off his time to be in Indianapolis April 3-5.

"I'm really happy with how I've been swimming so far this year, but I really haven't had a chance to get tapered and shaved before now and I'm sure that will make the difference in getting my time down," Manthei said.

Manthei and his teammates are in their taper period in preparation for the conference championships. His 100-yard butterfly time that ranks sixth in the nation is only the fourth best in the SWC. With that in mind, Manthei knows the SWC meet will be a challenge.

"Chris O'Neil from Texas A&M probably is the favorite in the 100 fly because he was the conference champion last year, setting a new conference record, but I'm really just looking to be in there at the top three or even five," Manthei said.

The Los Alamos, N.M., native also would like to reach the NCAA meet in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events. His time of 46.35 in the 100-yard freestyle is eighth best in the nation this year.

"Lee has a big challenge in the 100 free, but once he qualifies for nationals in the 100 fly, and I know he will, I feel like the 50 and 100 free will fall in place," said Tech swimming coach Ron Holihan.

If Manthei does reach the NCAA nationals, he will become the first swimmer under Holihan to do so. However, Holihan says he won't be the last.

"When Lee reaches the NCAA nationals this year it will be a big plus for our program here at Tech," said Holihan. "Swimming is so mental that when one guy makes it (nationals), then the others realize they can also. I think Lee may break a big barrier for us this year."

Manthei will be looking for something besides good times when he goes to Austin for the SWC meet.

He also will be looking for some fun in his last conference meet.

"Conference meets have always been a highlight of my years at Tech because all the guys seem to swim well and just get together and have a really good time," Manthei said.

When Texas Tech loses Manthei to graduation, the Raiders not only will be losing an exceptional swimmer, but a motivational team leader as well. With his never-ceasing enthusiasm at dual meets and his called after-meet pizza get-togethers, Manthei has become a team favorite.

"He's one of the most motivated swimmers I've ever had. There's times when I have to hold him back, but it's only because he wants to do so much," Holihan said.

Before Manthei's days at Tech are finished, he might just reach the elusive NCAA championships — and improve his national standing in the process.

Minneapolis in line for possible NBA team

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Accompanied by former NBA great George Mikan and Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, two Minneapolis-St. Paul businessmen gave the league a $100,000 check Tuesday as a down payment on a possible expansion franchise to replace the Lakers who left 26 years ago.

Commissioner David Stern, who accepted the check and a preliminary application, said that while the Minnesotans have a strong case, it is not likely the league will expand before the 1987-88 season, and if then, probably by only one franchise.

The Minnesota group, headed by health and racquet club operators Marv Wolfenson and Harvey Ratner, joined Miami, Fla., and Santa Ana, Calif., as franchise-hopefuls that have presented preliminary applications and the $100,000 earnest money. Stern said the league also had received expansion interest from Charlotte, N.C.;

Toronto; St. Louis; Orlando, Fla.; San Diego, and Kansas City.

"We hope we will be No. 1," said Mikan, who played on five NBA championship teams in his seven years with the Minneapolis Lakers from 1948 through 1956, with one year out for an abbreviated retirement.

"There will be an all-out effort in the corporate community and also with the public to show there is support for the NBA in the Twin Cities and Minnesota. If the support is there, and they really want a team, that's the way to let the NBA board of governors know it's for real," Perpich said.

Injury-prone Tech tries to end streak

The Texas Tech men's tennis team will be trying to end a five-match losing streak today when the Raiders host Hardin Simmons at 2 p.m. at the Tech Varsity Courts.

The Raiders, 5-5 for the season, were defeated in all four of their matches last week at the New Mexico Invitational in Albuquerque, losing to Arizona 7-2, New Mexico 6-3, Utah 6-0 and Colorado 5-4.

Tech coach Ron Damron said the Raiders' No. 1 singles player, Simon Hurry, will not compete against Hardin Simmons due to a shoulder and elbow injury. Luis Segovia, Lamar May and Alan Weinand also suffered injuries during the New Mexico tournament, and Damron said he will not make a decision as to whether they will play until today.

"We are pretty beat up right now," said Damron. "Some of the guys have tennis elbow and the flu, so we are just trying to get everyone well for the matches."

Damron said the Raiders had at least one player injured in every match at New Mexico. "We had three guys hurt Saturday (when Tech lost to

New Mexico and Utah) and four hurt on Sunday. Against Colorado we just ran out of people," he said. "When you have key people injured that play both singles and doubles, it's tough."

Damron said part of the reason for the many injuries is the fact that the Raiders have played several matches in a short period of time. At New Mexico the Raiders played four matches in three days.

"We have a tough schedule this year," said Damron. "We've played a third of our schedule already, and we have a lot of matches coming up soon."

Beginning Monday, Tech will compete in dual matches for three straight days.

—MICHAEL CORBETT

Resurgent women netters meet HSU

Rarely has coach Mickey Bowes been in a position where he could say with a straight face that the Texas Tech women's tennis team will be experimenting during a match.

However, the Red Raiders are coming off of a 7-2 win over Rice and stand 2-1 in the Southwest Conference. They are on such a roll that Bowes has gone so far as to call the team the best he's had at Tech.

But before the Raiders get caught up in that newfound confidence, they must take care of the business at hand. That business is with the 1-6 Hardin-Simmons Cowgirls at 2:30 p.m. today at Hillcrest Country Club. Tech is not expecting to lose.

"We should beat Hardin-Simmons," Bowes said. "I never look to shut out someone; it doesn't mean anything to me. I just want to play all eight players.

"We're going to implement two plays and we'll use them in all three doubles teams. We'll chart them to see how they work. If we can execute we will use it against Texas and Houston."

The match with the Cowgirls begins a month long string of non-conference action for the Raiders, whose next SWC match is against the Longhorns March 29. Bowes said the ensuing weeks should benefit his squad.

"The next month is very important to us. I have to play two conference teams a trip, so I've tried to spread them out so our kids can point for them. I prefer this way rather than to hold them all to the end, and this works for us."

Bowes continues to stress improved singles play and said he has been impressed lately with Cathy Carlson and Julie Hrebec.

Fitness Swim Check Available

Is your swim workout improving your cardiovascular system? At 7:30 p.m. today, we will bring out the watches to time any interested swimmers. We'll record the times so you can return next month to see your improvement. Meet by the I.D. desk at the Aquatic Center.

Women Indoor Soccer Offered

Intramural indoor soccer entries for women are due March 11-13. An effort is being made to get a women's league started. If you are interested in playing but do not know enough women to form a team, attend the meeting today at 5:15 p.m. An attempt will be made to form some teams. For more information call 742-3351.

Swim Meet Entries Due

Entries for the Intramural Swim Meet are due by 5 p.m. Thursday in the Rec Sports Office or the Aquatic Center. The swim meet will be March 11 at 5:30 p.m. You may enter as an individual or as a team. Team divisions are men, women and co-rec. Get your friends together for a fun evening at the pool. Swimming events include:

- 100 yard medley relay
- 100 yard freestyle
- 50 yard backstroke
- 50 yard breast stroke
- 1 meter diving (2 dives)
- 50 yard freestyle
- 100 yard backstroke
- 100 yard individual medley
- 200 yard freestyle
- 50 yard butterfly
- 100 yard breast stroke
- 100 yard freestyle relay

Basketball Tourney Planned

Basketball season is not over yet! It's time to start planning for the annual Bookstore Basketball Tournament, co-sponsored by the Tech Bookstore and Recreational Sports. Entry forms may be obtained in the Rec Sports Office and are due March 27 by 5 p.m.

The men's and women's divisions are open to all students, faculty and staff eligible to enter the Student Recreational Center. Teams can be any combination of enrolled students, faculty and staff. Only one basketball letter winner or varsity member allowed per team. A maximum of ten players are allowed per team. First place winners of each division will receive embossed nylon jackets while second place teams will receive golf shirts. Third placers will receive trophies. For additional information come by the Rec Sports Office or call Denise Kopriva at 742-3351.

Fitness Testing Set

The second set of fitness testing will be Thursday at 12-1:15 p.m. and 6:45-7:50 p.m.; and Friday 3:30-4:45 p.m. Both are in the lower level Multipurpose Room. Testing includes percent body fat, cardiovascular step test, flexibility test, sit ups and blood pressure. Come and see how you compare to the norms. Keep your scores and return to see if your workout needs improvement. Please wear a short-sleeved shirt and shorts (no leotights). The entire testing takes 10-15 minutes. You may choose any or all of the tests.

Softball Season Begins

This Sunday starts intramural softball for 330 men's, women's and co-rec teams. League schedules are ready and should be picked up in Room 201 of the Student Rec Center. Teams will play one week prior to Spring Break and finish the season after the break. All-University playoffs are set for the last week in April.

Spring Into Action Sale

The Student Rec Center is having a Spring Sale on March 11 and 12 from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the north entry area of the building. Racquetball racquets, Penn balls, goggles, shorts and running suits will be on sale. Speedo swim suits and Jams will be discounted 10 percent. Kaepa High Tops will be a low $38. This is a one time sale with many items 20-40 percent off. Checks, Mastercard and Visa are welcome.

Indoor Soccer Entries Due

Entries for indoor soccer should be turned in to the Rec Sports Office March 11-13. Entries must be submitted during this designated time. A team consists of five players, one of whom is the goalie. All games are played in the Rec Center on Court 5. A listing of available leagues is available in the Rec Sports Office.

Basketball Playoffs Underway

Intramural basketball playoffs began Monday and will continue through next Wednesday. Divisional finals will begin March 10 in the open, club, residence hall and Greek divisions. IEIEE and the Saddle Tramps lead the club sector. Real Deal, Komana Wan-Leu, Steel Breeze, Lynxers, Weymouth BB and Blue Magic lead the charge for open title. The Phi Delt A and Delta Chi A teams are the top seeds in the Greek division. In women's action, Gunner's Gophers and Kappa Alpha Theta are the top challengers. All University action begins Tuesday evening at 7:20 p.m. with the open winner taking on the residence hall winner, followed by the Greek+Club winner game at 8:30 p.m.
