Fourth Paris bomb kills one, injures 51

By The Associated Press

PARIS — A bomb exploded Monday in a crowded waiting room at police headquarters, killing one person and injuring 51 others less than 24 hours after Premier Jacques Chirac announced a crackdown on terrorism.

It was the fourth bombing in Paris in a week. A total of three persons have been killed, and more than 100 have been wounded.

The latest explosion, which demolished the hall where driver's licenses are issued, happened about 1:50 p.m. on the ground floor of the police headquarters building on the Ile de la Cite, close to Notre Dame Cathedral.

"It was a very violent explosion," one police employee said. "Several persons were thrown several yards."

Police said two of the wounded were in serious condition.

The bomb was planted despite strict security precautions, which are supposed to include a search by police of every handbag and briefcase brought into the building.

In Beirut, a French-speaking telephone caller took responsibility for the bombing on behalf of a group called the Committee of Solidarity for Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. That name also was used in claims for last week's bombings.

Monday's caller told a Western news agency: "We will be thankful if you inform (French President Francois) Mitterrand and Chirac that the next operation will be at the Elysee," the presidential palace.

Police said the police headquarters bomb appears to have been similar to those used in three other attacks since Sept. 8. Conflicting claims of responsibility for those bombings were issued in the names of two groups — the Committee of Solidarity for Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners and Partisans of Rights and Freedom. French news reports say investigators believe they may be the same group.

Chirac had been about to announce his conservative government's new anti-terrorist steps Sunday afternoon when a bomb planted in a crowded cafe went off in an underground parking lot, where it had been carried by two policemen and a cafe employee. One of the officers was killed, and the two other men were seriously injured.

As part of the crackdown, France will require visas for the next six months, at least, from visitors who are citizens of any countries except Switzerland and France's 11 fellow members of the European Common Market.

French officials said visas would be required beginning today. For the next 15 days, visitors will be able to apply for visas at airports or border crossings, but after that they must obtain them from a French consulate before leaving home.

In a country already suffering from a decline in American tourism, both the resurgence of terrorism and the new paperwork required of visitors appear likely to deflect even more Americans to other vacation destinations.

Fear has been growing in Paris since Sept. 1, when the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners issued a statement saying it would resume a bombing campaign to gain freedom for Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, who is serving a four-year sentence for possession of fake passports.

On Sept. 5, a detonator connected to a bomb went off as a commuter train entered the Gare de Lyon station, but the detonator failed to set off the explosive.

Last Monday a woman was killed and 18 people were injured when a bomb exploded in a post office at city hall.

On Friday, 40 people were injured when a bomb went off at lunchtime in a cafeteria on the outskirts of the capital. Sunday's bombing, which killed one and injured two, happened along the Champs Elysee.

Lewis blames Senate for budget deadlock

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — For the first time since lawmakers came to Austin on Aug. 6 to attack the budget crisis, Speaker Gib Lewis Monday voiced pessimism and frustration about the lack of progress.

"We're way off. We're far apart," Lewis said of House and Senate conference committee members who continued negotiations.

The speaker, who has been a prime opponent of the tax hike favored by Gov. Mark White and a Senate majority, blamed senators for the lack of success.

"From what I can assess of things, it's the House doing all the giving and no one wanting to make any cuts, and I can't sell that in the House," he said.

"We're trying to act responsible, and all I see is just more spend, spend, tax, tax. We're not going to go for it."

"I'm irritated that there's no more progress being made on the appropriations bill. There's absolutely no ... attempt by the Senate to make any meaningful cuts."

Meanwhile, White remained optimistic about the special session.

"They've got the time to get it done. It will move quickly once they start," he said.

But House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the negotiations take time.

"They're stuck in their ways just like we're stuck in ours," he said of Senate negotiators.

Lewis complained about mixed signals he said he has received from the Senate since the budget-balancing effort began.

"I keep getting somewhat indications of we're going to do this, we're going to do that, but the next day it's a different game plan," he said.

The impasse stems from opposing views on how to attack the budget crunch. The Senate favors approving a tax bill and then making any needed cuts.

The speaker has predicted that a tax bill might be needed to solve the crisis, but he said he won't allow such a measure to be considered before the cuts are made.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, scheduled a Wednesday hearing on the "concept" of a tax hike, but not on a specific tax bill.

"Right now there are enough votes to kill a tax bill" in the House, Schlueter said.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said the House delay in considering a tax bill is hurting. The comment came as a Senate committee considered a bill that would defer for four months state payments into the employee and teacher retirement systems.

"We're beginning to pay the price for inaction on a tax bill," Edwards said. "Had the House been willing to move promptly in August, this bill would not be necessary."

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said Lewis' comments were "unfortunate."

"We would do better to keep working as we are doing, not to point our fingers at each other," he said.

Farabee is on the conference committee seeking a compromise spending cut plan. The House approved cuts of about $740 million. The Senate cuts add up to about $418 million. The major difference is in higher education spending, where the Senate cuts are far smaller.

"I don't think there is a great deal of negotiability there, so we may be headed for a deadlock," Farabee said.

Agreement was being hammered out Monday on state prison spending. Conference committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Temple, said the Texas Department of Corrections will be allowed to keep $33.7 million in money it saved in response to White's call for voluntary reductions earlier this year.

The House had voted to use that money to offset the state deficit, projected at almost $3 billion, but the House conferees now have agreed to leave the money in the TDC budget.

McLendon dies at age 85

By The Associated Press

Broadcaster Gordon B. McLendon, one of the pioneers of modern format radio, was remembered Monday as an innovator who gave the medium a second life in the face of television's onslaught.

McLendon, 85, died at 9:15 p.m. Sunday at his ranch after a lengthy illness, said his son, Bart McLendon.

A Texas Tech alumnus, McLendon was a member of Tech's Mass Communications Hall of Fame. He was inducted into the hall of fame in recognition of his excellence in the broadcast field.

In recent years, McLendon, a multi-millionaire, had spent much of his time on the ranch 25 miles north of Dallas. On Dec. 5, 1985, he was shot in the face with a .38-caliber revolver, which his son said happened when McLendon was cleaning the gun.

At McLendon's request, there will be no funeral, his son said. A memorial service is planned for Saturday at the Cielo Ranch at Lake Dallas.

Survivors include a sister, Marie Wheeler; and four children, Bart McLendon of Dallas, Jan Moss and Kristen McLendon of Newport Beach, Calif., and Anna Gray McLendon of Corpus Christi.

Fingerprints not those of accused rapist, lawyer says

By MICHELLE BLEIBERG
News Staff Writer

The defense attorney for ex-Texas Tech student Timothy Brian Cole may have knocked a hole in the district attorney's case by claiming Monday that fingerprints taken from a rape victim's car did not match Cole's.

Defense attorney Mike Brown pounded the jury in continued testimony Monday with allegations that Cole was not the assailant who kidnapped a Tech freshman March 24, 1985, and raped her just outside Lubbock city limits.

Brown said the fingerprints gathered by Lubbock Police Department officers didn't have enough characteristics to be identified as Cole's. Criminal District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell, frustrated by the ruling, argued that Brown "jumped the gun" in saying the fingerprints didn't match Cole's without hearing the testimony of an identification officer who Darnell subpoenaed to testify.

In morning proceedings, LPD Officer George White testified he was present on April 10, 1985, when Cole was arrested in his home at 1306 Ave. W. He said Cole gave him written consent to search his home and vehicle at the time of the arrest.

White said he confiscated one small pocket knife with a brown handle, Zig Zag papers, one rolled cigarette which was believed to be marijuana and an empty Winston cigarette package. LPD Officer Jamie Herrera testified Thursday he retrieved two Winston brand cigarette butts from the victim's car.

LPD Officer Rosanna Bagby testified that on April 7, 1985, she participated in surveillance as an undercover officer and was instructed to go into Mr. Gatti's in the 1500 block of University Avenue and make herself noticed. She said she was trying to appear to be a Tech student.

Bagby testified she observed a black man fitting Cole's description inside the establishment and said she had the feeling she was being watched. She said she left Mr. Gatti's 10 minutes later, walking north on University Avenue. Bagby testified the man in the restaurant followed her in a brown Buick to 14th Street and called her to the car.

Bagby testified the she conversed with the man for about 10 minutes, at which time he identified himself as "Timothy." Bagby said the man asked her where she lived and if she wanted to "have some beers and party." Bagby said she refused. She testified she did not see a weapon and did not feel threatened.

Bagby identified Cole as the driver of the car after the incident, when Cole became a suspect. She also identified a photo of Cole presented to her by Darnell and identified Cole in the courtroom.

LPD Detective Ronny Goulsby testified he also participated in surveillance of the 1500 block of University Avenue. He said he was trying to monitor any suspicious activities of a black male and gathering information to name a suspect.

Goulsby compiled a chart of five rape cases recently committed in Lubbock, which was presented to the jury by Brown.

Brown said all the cases were similar in the rapist's mode of operation. In all the detailed cases, the victims' cars were driven by the rapist, all the victims were white, a thin-blade pocket knife was used and personal property was stolen.

Darnell said he objected to the use of all five cases and said only three of them had any bearing on the trial.

Darnell dissected Brown's chart of related rape incidents, and Brown admitted that Terry Lee Clark, previously convicted in connection with Tech-related rapes, was in jail at the time of the incident and could not have been the assailant.

Goulsby also testified the victim was consistent and confident in identifying Cole as her assailant. He said the victim identified Cole in a police lineup "as soon as she walked in the door."

Prosecution testimony will continue today in 99th District Court with Judge Thomas Clinton presiding. Darnell said he will be recalling LPD officer Joe Nevarez for further questioning concerning a black jacket that was confiscated from Cole's home the night he was arrested.

California smoking ban would violate rights

Johnna Brown
News Staff Writer

Californians almost always have been the innovators in new ideas. Clothes, cars, language — you name it, California had it or did it first.

The newest idea coming out of California is a proposal that would prohibit the hiring of smokers for any county jobs in a county 40 miles northeast of San Francisco. If the world's first don't-hire-smokers law is adopted by Contra Costa County supervisors, 724,000 people will lose a partial amount of their constitutional right to privacy.

Not only would county employees be required not to smoke at work, but also in the privacy of their own homes. A ban on hiring smokers would start with a requirement forcing new employees to sign a formal affidavit swearing that they do not smoke.

A non-smoker can sympathize with America's escalating war on smokers, but it is hard to believe an entire county would take it so far!

Backers of the Contra Costa County no-smokers policy said lower worker disability payments are a big plus in approving the smoker ban. If a fireman suffers a heart attack and the cause is smoking, the government shouldn't have to pay for it, supporters claim.

Maybe it is unfair for the government to pay disability for an illness that wasn't its fault. But if such an attitude is taken, no disability should be paid for any illness, unless the illness was caused from work.

Contra Costa County already has strong laws regulating smoking on the job, and many other U.S. cities have laws regarding smoking in public places. Those laws should be enough, because smokers are hurting only themselves if other people are not affected.

Going into a person's home to see if he smoked a cigarette after supper most definitely is an infringement on constitutional rights. As long as his cigarette smoke does not invade another human being's breathing space, he should have the right to smoke in his home.

This non-smoker, as much as cigarette smoke bothers me, believes the county's possible banning of hiring smokers is ridiculous. If the only way people can settle their nerves after a hard day on the job is to go home, relax and smoke a cigarette, it should be their prerogative.

If a governmental body, no matter how small it may be, bans the hiring of competent workers just because they smoke, maybe we should go so far as to just ban cigarettes — period.

Budget cuts instill fear in graduating seniors

Ann McBryde
News Staff Writer

I'm scared. I'm not talking about having the kind of apprehension I had as a child preparing to ride my bike for the first time without training wheels, or even the slight feeling of anxiety I felt while waiting for my first car date to pick me up.

No, this is a feeling of complete and total mortification. Why am I, a seemingly normal person, exhibiting sure signs of a true schizophrenic? Until next May (my proposed date of graduation), I will live every day of my student life with a luminous cloud of dread hanging above my head. My dreams are haunted every night by one statement that, if made by the right person, could ruin my life: "I'm sorry, Miss McBryde, but due to budget cuts all of your classes have been dropped and you will not be able to graduate until next May."

I know I'm not the only one who lives with this nightmare, because I've been a witness to the ordeals several of my friends have endured this semester. For example, I know one girl who was supposed to graduate in December — she even had a job already lined up. At the beginning of the semester she found out that one of her courses had been dropped and, after standing in an hour-long add-drop line, she discovered that all the alternatives available to her were full. Consequently, she will be here for another semester and also will have to wave bye-bye to her job.

I realize that it would be outrageous to ask that everyone be allowed to have an override into a particular class when it is full. I do feel, however, that in the case of a senior who is going to graduate and had a class dropped because of budget cuts, the option of an override into one of the alternative courses always should be open — even if it would mean a slight amount of overcrowding.

My friend explained her situation and asked for an override but was told that was impossible and was sent on her merry way. After she has spent four years of her time — and not to mention astronomical amounts of money — to obtain an education, I would think Tech would be able to do something for her.

Since the class was not one of the ones that could be taken by correspondence, the only option left would be to open up one of the alternative courses. Although probably numbers of students were in the same position as my friend and opening classes to that many people may seem a little farfetched, I still feel that a senior who has a class dropped due to something beyond his control deserves a considerable amount of leniency from the university.

I can only hope that if at all possible, the university will be able to foresee through pre-registration what classes will not fill up and consequently will have to be dropped. Maybe then those people with plans to graduate in that particular semester can be forewarned and can have a head start on trying to work something else out.

Qualifying ERA

To the editor:

I would like to comment on Sharon Conway's letter. Before I do, I would like to state that men and women do, in fact, exist as different types. They are not a figment of our imagination. If they are only imagination, then Sharon's ideas can work. But they do exist, so then it must be reasoned that there is actually something different between men and women or else they would not be called man and woman.

The question is then, "What is the difference?" and "Does this difference affect how women relate with men in jobs, athletics, etc.?" I can accept that if a woman can, in fact, do the same task as a man in any area, then she must be allowed to do it. Likewise with men doing "women things." However, this is not what the women's movement wants ... TODAY!

And now my comments:

1. Surely you are not naive to think that all those women who have kept those "male jobs" have not been fired because they "are doing a fine job?" I have seen many situations where a woman will keep a job because she is a woman and not because she does the job as efficiently as a man. (Other men needing to help her out.)

2. Sounds like you haven't been in the service either, Sharon. Or perhaps you don't remember the types of jobs most women in the service do. True, there are some women pilots, security guards, and otherwise "male roles" that women do have in the service, but their activities while in these roles are not the same as men. Let's face it. When it comes to the actual fighting, women are not equal participants.

3. Dressing and acting like a man does not prevent discrimination, Ms. Conway.

4. Why are coed bathrooms and showers a stupidity in your eyes? After all, it would "prevent discrimination" like dressing and acting like a man, would it not?

Don't get me wrong. I feel that a woman must have the freedom to do whatever a woman can do. However, this is not what the women's movement feels. They go beyond that. They also want disacknowledgement of sexual implication involved with female existence. In short, they don't want people to view woman as woman. They deny sexuality. They don't want male and female, two different types having two different characteristics.

What's worse is that the movement is trying to force others to act a certain way and to believe a certain way. They want to remove the traditions and beliefs of others and in calling them illegal, make ways to punish them who do them. The movement has even taken the time to retouch the Bible. They deliberately falsify any line they feel would destroy their concept of woman's role in society. This is not censorship, which merely keeps you from exposure, but rather propaganda, which twists and changes what is written by others to say what they view. 1984, here we go!

It is not equal rights that Ms. Askins comments against, but rather a movement which does not want women to be women.

Gary Cevin

Defending ERA II

To the editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Laura Askins' editorial, "ERA activists carry sex battle too far." (Mon., Sept. 8) Miss Askins claims that some women push too far in the name of equality and that "being equal across the board in every aspect of society is physically not possible."

Askins went into great detail about the jobs that are "male only" positions. Let me ask you this Miss Askins, "Do you think you would have been able to write your editorial if the ERA activists had not fought for equal rights?" I mean it was not very long ago that news reporting was considered a "man's job."

In her editorial, Miss Askins also claimed that women have ridiculed and ruined the military corps. She based this assumption on the fact that women were not in the corps in the past. Did it ever occur to you that women did not have the "equal rights" to join the corps in the past?

Miss Askins also implied in her editorial that women cannot fight as hard for their country as men do. While it is true that women have not been conditioned with the "killer instinct" as men have for generations, we do have the ability to defend our family as well as our country. In fact, during WW II, it was women who kept this country running. They kept the production lines going.

I found it unsettling that Miss Askins chose to only point out one side of the coin. Is she not aware of men that are finding their way into positions that used to be considered "female dominated" (ex.: nursing, secretarial).

Yes Miss Askins, "Years ago, our grandmothers, great-grandmothers, and earlier ancestors deserved more respect and rights than they received." The point of the matter is, that without people out there pushing for equal rights, we would be at a standstill. People must grow and mature not only physically but also mentally.

Criticizing The UD

To the editor:

Has The UD, and the campus as a whole, been taken over by the rabid neo-fascist followers of the evangelical misfit, Jimmy Swaggert? In two weeks of reading The UD it would appear so. In that time we have seen an attempt at character assassination of Gary Trudeau, and the seemingly successful censorship of "Doonesbury." If it is not terrible enough that the outcry over this blatant act of violating the First Amendment has failed to elicit any response from The UD, this week we have been showered with more neo-conservative, Christian-right dogma than it is possible to absorb. Has The UD formally come out and endorsed Pat Robertson, or is this just some preliminary work?

For just a moment, the ERA article and the terrorism article need addressing, as they point to how truly backward and uninformed The UD seems to have become. First, I wholeheartedly agree with Sharon Conway's letter on Sept. 11. Anyone, regardless of race, sex, or creed, has the right to sweat, smell, grunt and earn a wage/salary comparable to those earned by fellow workers.

Secondly, exception must be taken to the statement that men are far more capable and adept at cold-blooded murder. If we learned anything from the Vietnam conflict, it is that the true heroes were those who protested the war and those who refused to go commit these atrocities. The author makes me wonder if she is part of the Republican Platform Committee and how many Sylvester "Can we kill MORE people" Stallone movies she saw before she was indoctrinated.

Rather than use The UD's unethical tactics of correcting someone's opinion, I wish to correct two facts asserted in Johnna Brown's article on terrorism, which is quite ethical. First, contrary to Ms. Brown's assertion, terrorism has not decreased since the bombing of Libya. It has remained the same for that particular time period. These facts were released by the State Dept.

Second, contrary to Ms. Brown's assertion, our country and the Judeo-Christian religions have called on people to die senselessly and commit gross atrocities. Remember Vietnam and Cambodia? Our own media exposed many of the deliberately vile acts committed by our great nation. Remember Northern Ireland, where every day Catholics and Protestants battle in the streets in the name of God? Remember Jerry Falwell, who insisted a world renowned man of the cloth, Desmond Tutu, was a phony? Remember Mr. Falwell's insistence that this should be a Christian nation, formally declared, and we should kill commies everywhere by any means? Remember that Pat Robertson has adopted a similar stance, although far less bellicose?

Finally, I wish to address the add/drop article and the letter of Sept. 11, by Michael Wyatt. While both writers have a right to their opinion, it seems strange that the add/drop article characterizes the "Doonesbury" debacle as petty and her inconvenience as major. It seems that when the Constitutional right of free expression is at stake, versus the normal administrative snafus that occur with any bureaucracy, the latter is petty and the former is a concern of all true Americans.

Mr. Wyatt has no right to tell any of the "Doonesbury" protesters what we are thinking. I, for one, do not believe I must embrace evil — that is why I protest this act of the greatest evil, censorship. The New Right is who is truly guilty of using Orwellian terms to hide murder, greed and selfishness. I will not speculate on which of the fundamentalist preachers Mr. Wyatt follows, but I must wonder if he keeps sending in those dollars so these so called men of God can continue the work of Jesus by staying in luxury hotels, buying the finest suits, wearing the most glamorous jewelry.

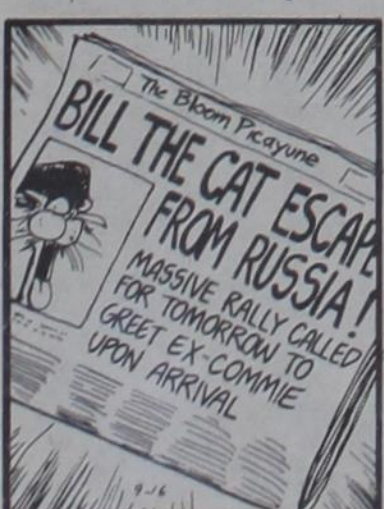

My God is one of tolerance and love, one who teaches that those who will be saved are those who keep His word in their hearts, in spite of whatever goes on around them. Does Mr. Wyatt's? We have the right to our own beliefs — and "Doones" offends only the insecure.

Reagan signs order requiring drug testing

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, unveiling his plan to attack drug abuse in America, ordered the executive branch Monday to set up mandatory tests for federal workers in sensitive jobs.

But Reagan's program drew immediate resistance from the American Civil Liberties Union and labor organizations representing federal employees. And Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of a House civil and constitutional rights panel, maintained that the program violates fundamental individual rights.

During an Oval Office ceremony where he signed the order and put his name on letters to Congress accompanying a series of legislative proposals, Reagan said, "This is the federal government's way of just saying 'no' to drugs."

Reagan's move came one day after he and his wife, Nancy, made a nationally televised broadcast, appealing to people's consciences and their sense of patriotism, for help in purging the scourge of drugs in schools and work places.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett told reporters he feels most schools can wipe out drug problems without resorting to widespread testing of students.

With the formal announcement of his anti-drug-abuse plan, including his endorsement of capital punishment for certain drug-related offenses, the president joined members of Congress who have been scrambling to enact new measures of their own.

Reagan's executive order, requiring mandatory tests for federal workers in sensitive jobs and voluntary screening for the rest of the civilian federal work force, took effect upon his signature.

U.S. changes meeting agenda to put Daniloff first

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Showing increased impatience with the Kremlin, the Reagan administration Monday revamped a U.S.-Soviet summit planning agenda, giving top priority to winning the outright release of Nicholas Daniloff.

White House chief of staff Donald Regan suggested that chances for a summit this year could be endangered unless Daniloff is allowed to come home.

However, Vice President George Bush told reporters later that Daniloff, the American journalist given pretrial release, "fortunately is not rotting away in a KGB jail. And I don't understand this linkage in peoples' minds about the summit" and Daniloff.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze are to confer in Washington on Friday and Saturday at what was to have been a meeting to fix the date and agenda for a summit.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Shultz "will raise the issue as the first item on the agenda."

"I'm sure that preliminary discussions on U.S.-Soviet relations, which may include future meetings, will take place, but whether it will be resolved remains a question," Speakes said. "The change in the agenda is that Daniloff is first."

He left open the possibility the meeting would get bogged down on Daniloff and not make progress on a summit. "We'll start with Daniloff and see where it goes from there," he said.

Pressure is building in Congress for the administration to take tough measures against Moscow until Daniloff is returned.

In a deal announced Friday, Daniloff was released to the custody of the American embassy in Moscow while a Soviet U.N. employee held in New York, Gennadiy Zakharov, was released to the Soviet mission in Manhattan.

Congress continues Rehnquist debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole, the Senate majority leader, said Tuesday that President Reagan "made exactly the right choice" in selecting William H. Rehnquist to be chief justice of the United States and predicted that confirmation would come today by a vote of 75-25.

Dole, a Kansas Republican, offered a spirited defense of Justice Rehnquist as the Senate debated the nomination for a third day.

Graduates find few Texas job options

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's economic slowdown has forced many Texas college graduates to seek employment outside the state, officials say.

RoJean Starke, director for research and post-secondary planning for the Texas State College and University System Coordinating Board, said 1986 graduates responding to an employment survey have painted a bleak picture of job prospects within the state.

Pari-mutuel proposal encounters opposition and support in Lubbock

Some say it may be the answer to Texas' economic woes. Some say it may invite organized crime and corruption into the state. It is pari-mutuel betting, and the only thing that is certain is that the issue is going to be attracting a great deal of attention in the coming months.

The issue already has begun to attract the attention of groups and individuals locally and statewide. People on both sides of the issue have begun to rally their forces in anticipation for a November 1987 state referendum.

To date, the debate has been confined within the walls of the Texas Legislature. Final legislative approval on the measure was given by Texas lawmakers last month during the first special session.

The lone obstacle standing between the bill and Texas voters is Gov. Mark White. Last week White admonished the Legislature for passing a bill which he said will fail to raise money for the state in the current biennium. White has threatened to veto the measure, but he has failed to take action on the bill to date.

If the bill is signed by White, Texas voters will have an opportunity to vote on the issue in November 1987. If the bill is passed by a majority of Texas voters, counties can schedule elections to decide whether to allow legalized gambling.

Lubbock County stands to be one of the areas most affected by the measure if it clears the necessary political hurdles. The possibility that the county could host one of the state's proposed Class B racing tracks and that betting could be allowed on a specified number of days has placed the county among a select few in the state that actually might host horse racing if the bill is passed.

Tommye Armstrong, racing secretary for Lubbock

Downs, said the track would apply for Class B status if the measure is approved. Lubbock Downs is located southeast of the city on 114th Street.

Armstrong said county passage of pari-mutuel gambling would provide an economic boost for the city and surrounding area.

"If Lubbock County passed pari-mutuel, we would see an immediate need to create 300 to 400 new jobs at Lubbock Downs," Armstrong said. "That in itself is a definite boost."

Statewide studies by independent research firms have shown that Texas would create 9,000 new jobs statewide with the institution of pari-mutuel gambling. State Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated that Texas could net $92.8 million annually from tax revenue generated by gambling.

The Rev. D.L. Lowrie, pastor of First Baptist Church at 2221 Broadway, said the figures are misleading. He said he has seen studies from states that currently allow pari-mutuel gambling that show the states net less than 1 percent of the money generated by legalized gambling.

"Legalized gambling is a parasite," Lowrie said. "It takes money out of the hands of our good, hard-working citizens and puts it in the hands of a select few."

Lowrie added that the Legislature acted "irresponsibly" in approving the bill.

"We're convinced that it is bad legislation," Lowrie said. "The bill that has been approved is vulnerable to the inroads of organized crime, and it in no way answers the problems of the financial crisis the state is currently experiencing."

Lowrie said he hopes White will act responsibly and veto the bill but said that if White signs the measure, there will be a formation of local and state organizations to work for the defeat of the issue in the statewide election and in the "local option" election in Lubbock County, if necessary.

"I have heard people say gambling would bring organized crime into the state, and I really don't know where they are coming from," Armstrong said. "Horse racing is one of the most closely scrutinized industries around. Every track I've ever been to has been run strictly first-class."

"We've been here since 1966, and we've had such little crime out here at Lubbock Downs that most people don't even know that Lubbock has a racetrack," Armstrong said.

Another area in which pari-mutuel gambling has been predicted to provide an economic boost is in the state's horse breeding industry. The Texas Agriculture Department in 1985 said pari-mutuel betting could generate $230 million annually for the state's ailing agriculture industry — primarily horse breeders and farmers producing food for horses.

Texas leads the nation in quarter horse production and is home to more than a million horses (more than 10 percent of the nation's horse population).

Ted Wheelis, a Lubbock County horse breeder, said pari-mutuel gambling would improve the horse breeding industry in the 100-mile radius surrounding Lubbock by more than 60 percent. Wheelis said he estimated that there are about 30 horse breeders in the South Plains area, all of whom sell their horses to out-of-state owners to race in states that allow pari-mutuel wagering.

Wheelis, a 17-year veteran of the horse breeding industry, said, "Pari-mutuel betting is one of those things that is necessary to have a really good horse breeding business."

Wheelis said that even though the figures are "staggering," he does not believe pari-mutuel betting is the sole answer to Texas' economic woes. He said, however, that illegal gambling is being conducted at Texas tracks without any of the money benefiting the state.

"Any weekend in Texas there is horse racing going on," Wheelis said. "And at any one of these Texas tracks, you can bet all the money you want to bet. It's illegal, but it goes on all the time."

Wheelis said that with a strong state commission regulating the state's horse racing industry, Texas could stop the illegal wagering and begin to generate revenue from legalized, regulated gambling.

"Pari-mutuel betting will have to have a strong, state commission," Wheelis said. "It can't survive if it's not run on a high business plane."

But Lowrie says the state has no business exploiting its citizens through legalized gambling. He said compulsive gambling is rampant in states that have approved wagering, and figures from reports by Gamblers Anonymous and the National Council on Compulsive Gambling support his argument.

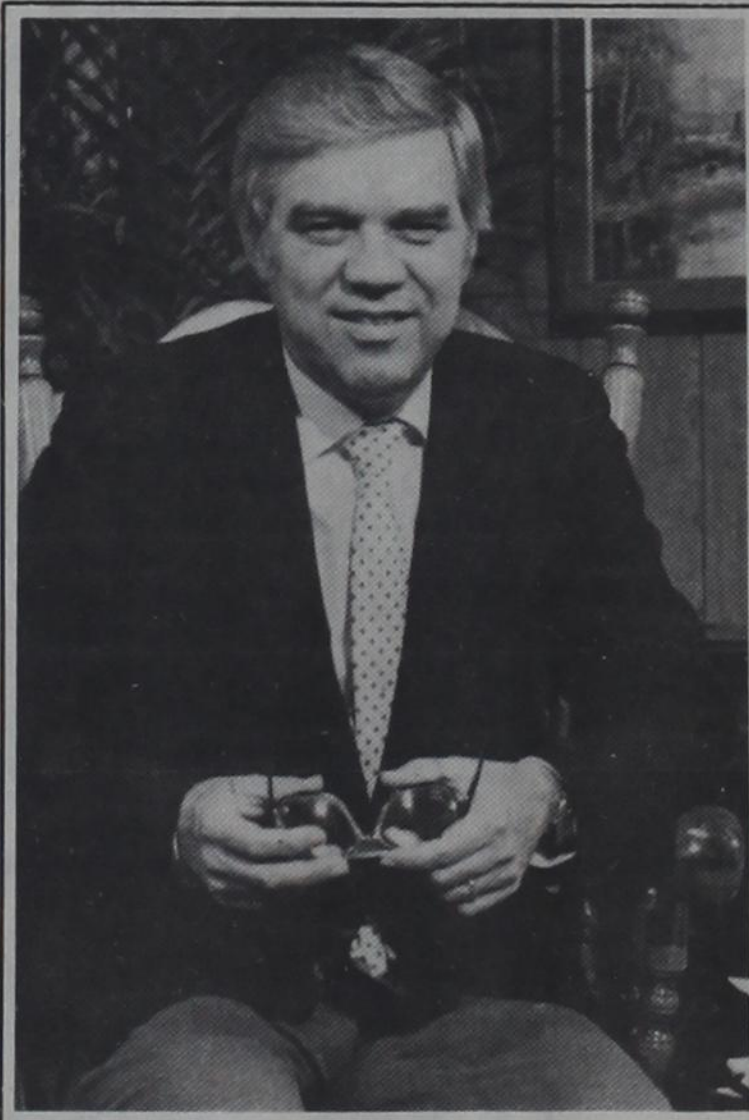

Nationwide, according to the reports, there may be as many as 10 million compulsive gamblers, and both groups say that introducing any new form of gambling increases the number of compulsive gamblers.

The questions surrounding legalized gambling in Texas are complex, and no one interviewed claimed to know the extent to which legalized gambling would affect Lubbock County. While there still are many uncertainties surrounding the issue, one thing is certain: Many people in the Lubbock area have strong arguments both for and against the future of legalized gambling on horse racing in Texas.

'Gatemouth' Brown's guitar magnificence overwhelms audience

By MICHAEL STEPHENS
Lifestyles Staff Writer

Ten o'clock may be bedtime for many people, but for those who went to see guitar great Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, the evening was just getting going.

Brown appeared at the Fast and Cool Club Sunday with his band the Gate Express. He could have given the police a lesson in crowd control through his inimitable style, stage presence and top-notch guitar playing.

Local band the Hub City Rockers (led by former Scratch member Mike Pritchard) opened for "Gatemouth" and had the crowd going strong. The Rockers had a strong brass section and provided some fine guitar for their debut. The band seemed to have trouble with some of the details of their improvisational jam sessions but after warming up had the audience right with them.

Rumor has it that this was their last performance as well as their debut. However, if the crowd's reaction to their performance is any indication to them of their possible success, perhaps they will change their minds. We can only hope.

The Gate Express took the stage about 10 p.m. and warmed up with two great jazz numbers. As they played, it was obvious that Brown had brought along some top musicians to back him up. This was no backup band, for as the evening wore on "Gatemouth" played with the four-piece group and not in front of them.

After the rude audience antics during Brown's performance at Fat Dawg's last February it is surprising that he returned, but "Gatemouth" seemed happy to be in Lubbock and gave the people of the Hub City far more than their money's worth.

Brown demonstrated a stage presence that few performers possess. As he opened each number he had some dedication, one to aspiring musicians (directed at the Hub City Rockers, who responded in full), another to family and friends. As the concert went on, instead of relaxing, the audience got more and more excited until they were exhausted at the end of the evening.

Brown played everything from Count Basie to his own special brand of Texas Swing rhythm and blues. He surprised everyone by getting behind the piano for two numbers as well as playing his fiddle and well-known leather-faced guitar.

The audience obviously was pleased with the whole performance, but two or three songs stood out. "Gatemouth"'s rendition of the Latin rhythm "Specebo," mixed with strains from "Dixie" and demonstrating stunning technique, had everyone transfixed for the full 11 minutes. The number that left everyone astounded was "Gatemouth"'s rendition of "Unchained Melody," which hypnotized the audience in an uncanny way and drew roars from the floor when he played his trademark "Pop Goes the Weasel" before breaking in to a faster version of "Melody."

Whether he was swinging Texas style, playing Duke Ellington or rocking the audience so hard it hurt, "Gatemouth" Brown had them eating out his spell-weaving hands, and he never let them go.

McWilliams finds bright spots in wake of defeat

By BRAD WALKER
Sports Staff Writer

For a man who had just endured the worst Hurricane any Lubbockite has ever seen, David McWilliams looked remarkably well at his weekly press conference Monday.

He showed no bruises, broken bones or any other visible markings often left from 50-point thrashings. His hair was in place, and he even smiled a few times.

Mind you, the first-year head coach who had just suffered his worst and first loss was not pleased with the outcome of the Miami-Texas Tech game Saturday. But he probably swallowed it much easier than Vince Lombardi would have.

"When you get beat that way (61-11), you're not happy," McWilliams said. "But you have to find some positive things. I thought we competed. At the end of the game we still played hard; we never gave up."

As for the rest of the handful of bright spots during the game, McWilliams was particularly pleased with the offensive line.

"Our pass protection was excellent," McWilliams added. "We had only three sacks on us, and two of those came with our second team in there. I think that gives our offense a great deal of confidence."

The positives end there, however, and the negatives come by the truckload.

"Early in the game we got behind because of fundamentals — missed tackles and busted assignments — and that always costs you against a great team," McWilliams said.

"The kicking game hurt us. You can sometimes overcome one blocked punt, but it's hard to overcome two. We got a lot of work on the kick returns," he said with a laugh, "but we didn't get the results I would like."

McWilliams was unhappy at the difference in the Red Raiders' and Hurricanes' respective field positions. Tech's best starting point came on the last drive of the game at its own 44, after a Miami fumble.

RAIDER NOTES: McWilliams announced Monday that six Red Raiders have been put on scholarship. They are senior defensive tackle Ferlis Ellis, junior linebackers Monty Melcher and Tim Singley, junior rover Bart Reager, junior quarterback Scott Toman and sophomore defensive end Terry Lynch. Senior quarterback Monte McGuire, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Sunday, is expected to be out four to six weeks. McGuire will wear a cast for 2½ to three weeks.

Miami: Vice isn't only problem

Kent Best
Sports Editor

The Texas Tech football team journeyed halfway across the United States to get beat by 50 points. I went halfway across the country to watch. Pretty funny, huh.

Not that the trip wasn't worth it. I even learned some things on my 24-hour, all-expenses-paid trip to beautiful downtown Miami (thank you, Vanna White).

Actually, Miami isn't very beautiful. That's the first thing I learned. Miami Beach is beautiful. Miami is just old.

I also learned that Miami is not a city. It's a foreign country. There undoubtedly are some Americans living in Miami, but most of the English-speaking people I bumped into seemed to be just visiting.

"Hi, can you please tell me how to get to the Orange Bowl?"

"Sorry, just visiting."

That's the sort of thing I learned in Miami.

I also learned that the national colors of Miami are, you guessed it, orange and green.

Everything from hotels to buses to people's homes are done up in some of the most obnoxious shades of orange and green you can imagine. Orange by itself is OK. Green isn't too bad, either. Put the two together and you've got obnoxious.

Then there was the Orange (haven't I seen this place on TV?) Bowl. What a letdown. The famed stadium once was considered one of the finest facilities around. I'm sure the gladiators liked it.

The place is old. And smelly. The Orange Bowl may still be a showplace, but somebody forgot to take out the garbage.

Then there was the guy at the airport.

"Hi," I say, "you from Miami?"

"Yes."

"I'm from Texas. Been here to cover the game," I say.

"What game is that?"

"Tech and Miami. They played last night."

"I thought the Dolphins always played on Sundays?"

"Uh, yeah." So much for that conversation.

Boarding the plane, however, a thought struck me. Maybe Tech didn't play the University of Miami last night. Maybe that was the Dolphins out there beating the stuffin's out of our heroes.

"Nah," I said to myself. "The Dolphins aren't that good."

Harriers finish second, third at Wayland

The Texas Tech men's and women's cross country teams finished second and third, respectively, in their first outings of the season Monday at the Wayland Baptist Invitational in Plainview.

Tech's Kim Mudie finished second in the women's division, running the two-mile course in 12:34, while Red Raider Carlos Ybarra was fourth in the men's four-mile race with a time of 19:54.

New Mexico Highlands (28 points) took women's team honors, followed by Angelo State (50), Tech (72), Lubbock Christian (99) and Wayland Baptist (101).

South Plains College (25 points) won the men's division, with Tech (78) and New Mexico Highlands (82) the next highest finishers.

QUESTION #3.

WHAT EXACTLY IS AT&T'S "REACH OUT AMERICA"?

- A long distance calling plan that lets you make an hour's worth of calls to any other state in America for just $10.15 a month.
- A 90-minute special starring "Up With People."
- A great deal, because the second hour costs even less.
- If you'd read the chapter on Manifest Destiny, you'd know.
- Too good to pass up, because it lets you save 15% off AT&T's already discounted evening rates.

If you can guess the answers to this quiz, you could save on your long distance phone bill, with AT&T's "Reach Out America" long distance calling plan. If you live off campus, it lets you make a full hour's worth of calls to any other state in America—including Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands—for just $10.15 a month.

All you have to do is call weekends, 11pm Friday until 5pm Sunday, and every night from 11pm to 8am. Save 15% off our already discounted evening rates by calling between 5pm and 11pm Sunday through Friday. The money you could save will be easy to get used to.

To find more about "Reach Out America" or to order the service, call toll free today at 1 800 CALL ATT, that is 1 800 225-5288, Ext. 147.
