Reagan to stand firm on Star Wars project

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan intends to stand firm on his "Star Wars" plan and urge an 80 percent slash in Soviet nuclear missiles in Asia at his meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev in Iceland, an administration official said Wednesday.

If the Soviet leader agrees to make concessions on the missiles, Reagan and Gorbachev probably will emerge from their session in Reykjavik this weekend with a framework for a treaty to sharply reduce U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe, the official said.

Also, the president and the general secretary are likely to set a date for a full-scale summit meeting in Washington in December, said the official, who demanded anonymity.

But Reagan does not intend to negotiate with Gorbachev about the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, known popularly as Star Wars, and he is not expected to make much headway with the Soviet leader toward reducing long-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons.

The State Department advised the president to seek a compromise with Gorbachev on their views of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, the official said, but Reagan rejected the advice.

The ABM treaty strictly limited U.S. and Soviet radar systems and other defenses against missiles, to lessen chances of nuclear war. Gorbachev asked Reagan in a letter last month to promise to keep the treaty alive for up to 15 years.

The Soviets contend the accord prohibited the testing and deployment on Star Wars nuclear and other futuristic devices in space. Reagan, on the other hand, proposed to Gorbachev in a letter in July that the two countries proceed with anti-missile defenses in 7½ years.

The State Department saw a basis for a compromise between the two positions, but other U.S. agencies persuaded the president that the two stands were in conflict, the official said.

Reagan met with his senior advisers Tuesday at the White House and reaffirmed his intention to ask Gorbachev for better treatment of dissidents and other Soviet citizens.

Secretary of State George Shultz said Wednesday that Reagan would look Gorbachev "in the eye" and warn him that without an improved human rights atmosphere in the Soviet Union, there would be no lasting improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

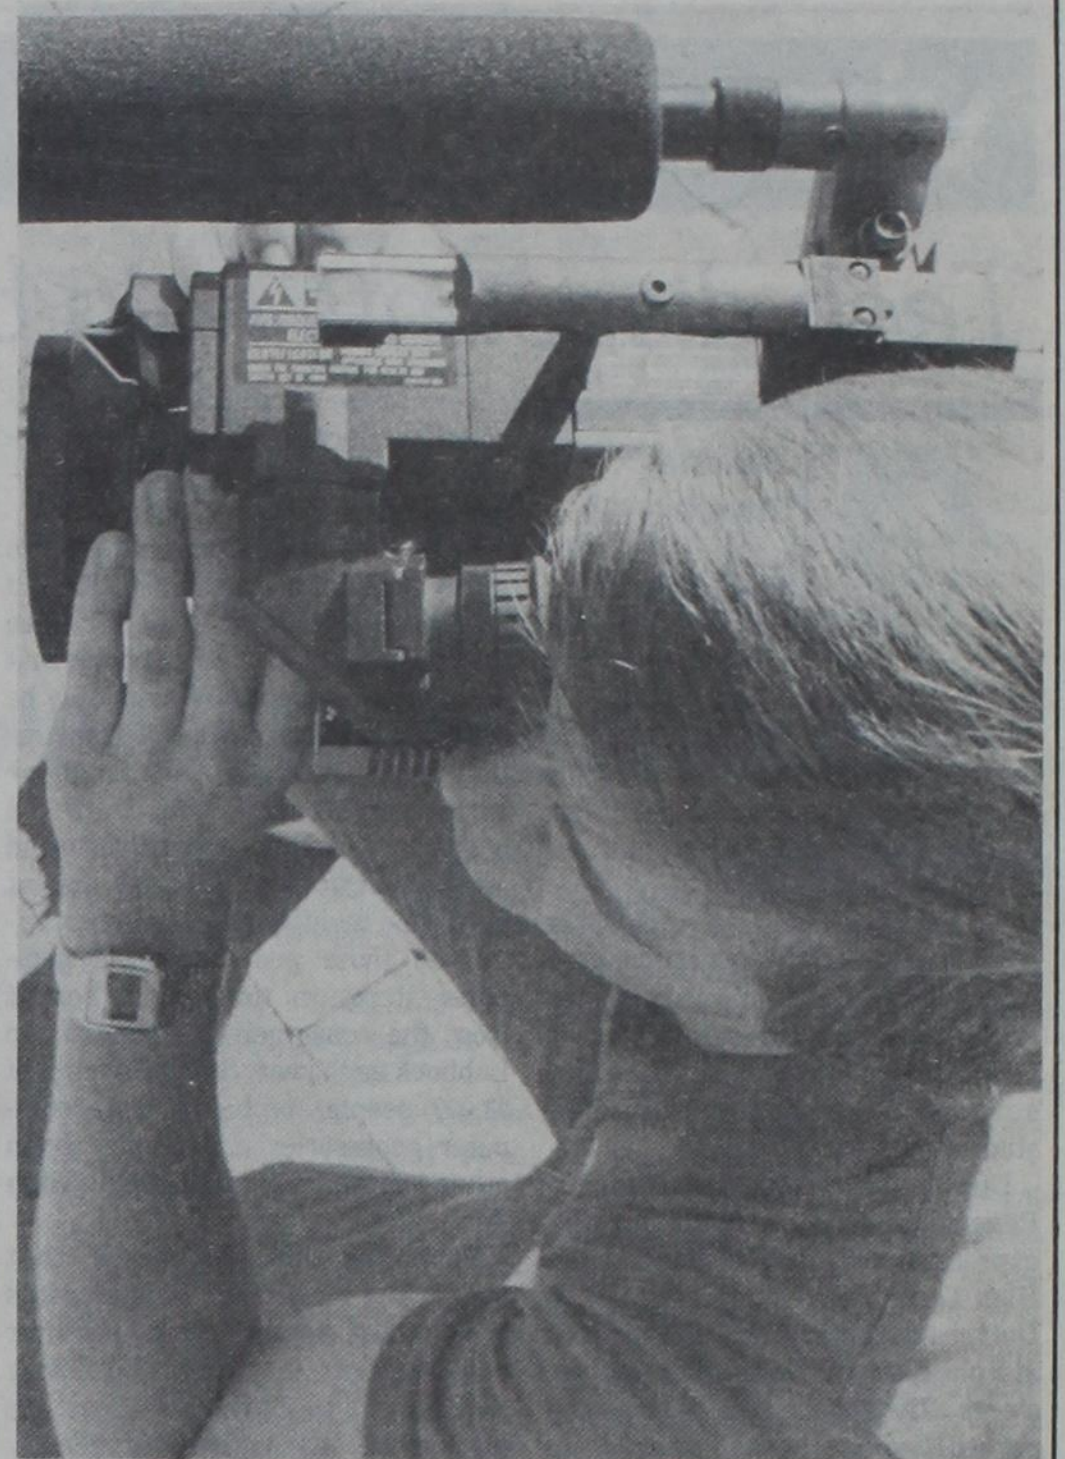

Morris Abram, chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, said the organization had provided the names of 11,000 "refuseniks" denied permission to emigrate and a shorter list of "prisoners of conscience."

Faculty Senate revising exigency plan to meet regents' approval

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Board of Regents will not consider the Faculty Senate's proposed financial exigency policy until academic excellence replaces seniority as the priority to determine layoffs in financial crises, according to Donald Haragan, vice president for academic affairs and research.

Haragan and Tech President Lauro Cavazos were in attendance for Wednesday's Faculty Senate meeting to address faculty senators.

The proposed financial exigency draft, which was approved on Sept. 24, outlines procedures for layoffs when a financial crisis results in a cancellation of contracts of tenured faculty members.

"The policy now states that the layoffs would be determined in order of seniority with exceptions for academic excellence," Haragan said. "The Board of Regents thinks that academic excellence should be the priority rather than the exception."

The policy will be returned to the senate ad hoc committee for revision.

In other business, Cavazos told Faculty Senate members he is concerned about the financial condition of the university.

"The reductions in faculty had other spillbacks on the university," Cavazos said. "Significant numbers of students could not be placed in English and P.E. classes, which resulted in a surprising number of phone calls from frustrated students and parents."

Cavazos said the alarming message conveyed by students was they must go elsewhere because they cannot get the classes they need at Tech.

If Tech is to prevent the loss of additional students, Cavazos said, it is essential to continue its summer school program. However, the four-day week will be continued next summer because of cost savings realized from the program last summer, he said.

Cavazos told senators the Board of Regents has urged him to pool funds to give some faculty members merit raises. "Hopefully we will get it resolved; however, I'm pleased with the funding at the current level," he said.

Cavazos also expressed concern about the upcoming session of the state Legislature in January.

"The battle will begin again the first week in January. The state is predicting enormous budget cut-falls," Cavazos said.

"The question is how will education fare? Legislators must look in a hard and realistic way at education in Texas.

"The state raised taxes to support education. To cut off the end result doesn't make sense."

Cavazos asked for guidance from the faculty on several issues that may arise from the Select Committee on Higher Education's final report. He said he is expecting the committee to consider the creation of a three-tiered university system like the one currently used in California.

California designated several universities as research and graduate institutions to form the top of the tier, Haragan said. The second level is composed of a state university system, and the third tier is composed of junior colleges, he said.

Students are placed in one of the three levels based on high school GPAs and SAT scores, Haragan said, and students can advance to upper tiers if the required GPA is maintained at the lower tier of the system.

"I support the open admission policy at Tech," he said. "I would want every person to have an education, but opportunities are changing."

The select committee commissioned specialists to investigate Texas universities' operations. Cavazos said he was one of five university presidents who attended a meeting to hammer out the differences in research findings and actual day-to-day operations.

Cavazos also requested input from faculty senators on a possible statewide core curriculum program that is under consideration by the state college and university Coordinating Board.

Tech tuition costs remain cheap

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the second story in a three-part series concerning nationwide tuition hikes for colleges and universities. Today's story compares Texas tuition rates to those of other states.

Texas legislators may have upped the tuition and fees bills of university students in fiscal 1985, but the Lone

State-by-state comparison of tuition

Star State still remains among the lowest in tuition and fees costs nationwide.

Eugene Payne, Texas Tech vice president for finance and administration, said the state was ranked 50th (lowest) in the nation in terms of tuition and fees before the 200 percent hike. Texas still is in the bottom 10 in college costs, Payne said.

Texas resident tuition will climb from $4 per credit hour in the 1984-85 school year to $24 per hour by 1996, Payne said. Tuition, now at the $16 per semester hour level, will remain steady until 1990, when it will be upped to $18 per semester hour. Texas students will have to pay $20 per semester hour in 1992 and $22 starting in 1994. Fiscal year 1996 will mark the beginning of a $24 per semester hour tuition bill.

Non-resident tuition was raised from $40 in the 1984-85 school year to $120 per semester hour.

Even with tuition being raised 200 percent from the 1984-85 school year to the 1985-86 school year, Payne said Texas resident students only pay about 13 percent of the state's cost for their education.

"It costs the state about $3,600 per year to educate the typical student," Payne said. "This year, the typical student will be paying $480 per academic year for tuition."

A non-resident will pay $3,600 in tuition each year, which is almost 100 percent of the state's cost, Payne said.

Statistics released by Tech's finance and administration office indicate Texas residents paid a 22 percent increase in tuition from the 1985-86 school year to the 1986-87 school year. Non-residents paid a 1 percent increase.

Resident law students in Texas were forced to pay a 37 percent increase and non-resident law students paid a 1 percent increase for the 1986-87 school year. Medical students were the hardest hit this year with tuition bill increases, with residents paying 72 percent more this year and non-residents paying 89 percent more in tuition.

Payne said that despite tuition increases, higher education in Texas still remains "a very good bargain" for residents.

According to a survey in the Aug. 6 Chronicle of Higher Education, Texas state-supported schools remain among the lowest in terms of tuition costs and fees. Costs ranged from $1,539 per year in resident tuition and fees costs for Mississippi universities to $670 per year for Oklahoma schools.

Tass reports U.S. researcher defects

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The official Soviet news agency Tass reported Wednesday that an American cancer researcher defected to the Soviet Union after being fired from his job because he opposed U.S. foreign policy.

The news agency said Arnold Lockshin, his wife and three children arrived in Moscow Wednesday after being granted political asylum.

Tass said Lockshin was a 47-year-old biochemist and on-ologist who headed the cancer research laboratory at St. Joseph's Hospital in Houston from 1980 until last month.

The man identified as Lockshin, a woman identified as his wife, Lauren, and three children were shown on the Soviet television evening news. Speaking in English, he told TV viewers that he and his wife had opposed the Vietnam War and had fought for social justice in the United States ever since.

Lockshin was quoted as telling Tass he and his wife made a "very difficult" decision to leave the United States after being persecuted for waging "an active struggle against the dangerous aspects of the foreign policy of the Republican administration."

Lockshin was quoted as saying that he had brought with him examples of what he claimed were FBI measures against his family.

He said the family's telephone conversations were tapped, that private mail was opened, that they were followed and that they received provocative phone calls, Tass reported.

Student overdoses on 80 pain relievers

By MICHELLE BLEIBERG

A Texas Tech student overdosed Wednesday night in Clement Hall, reportedly swallowing 80 Advil pain relief tablets, the University Police Department said.

According to police reports, a female resident of Gates Hall went to Clement Hall to see her ex-boyfriend. The freshman business administration major from Bedford told police he had been dating the woman but that their relationship ended about three weeks ago. Police reports indicated the victim went to the man's dorm because she wanted to talk. He told police the conversation ended up in "a big fight."

The ex-boyfriend told police he went to the dorm lobby and later saw the victim walking around "like she didn't know where she was." He said he carried her up to his room and called the police department and an ambulance.

The victim, an English major from Duncanville, was able to walk out of the dorm to the ambulance with the assistance of two EMS paramedics. She was taken to Lubbock General Hospital at 10:25 p.m. Wednesday.

Emergency room personnel said they were unsure late Wednesday night whether the victim would remain overnight or be released after treatment.

Tech discounts help businesses

Johnna Brown
News Staff Writer

Being the typical Texas Tech student, I'm pretty sure of what the typical student complains about concerning the costs of living and being educated in Lubbock.

We complain about the price of textbooks, parking stickers, student service fees and the infamous student ID. Being a Tech student does have its advantages, however, because several area businesses offer students discounts.

During the recent Tech Board of Regents meeting, a board member expressed concern over the fact that High Tech, the computer store in the University Center, can sell computers at a cheaper price than other Lubbock stores. The regent said he was concerned because he had heard computer business owners complain about the Tech store's low prices.

Student IDs not only can get you low-cost computers, but they also can get you cheaper movie tickets, free access to the recreation center, discounts at record stores and free admission to clubs on certain nights — just to name a few.

Being the typical Tech student, I'm really grateful of my student ID and the bargains it brings to me. I realize that businesses around Lubbock that do not offer student discounts may be suffering because of those businesses that do. Even so, all Lubbock businesses should benefit from the university bringing several thousand non-Lubbockites to the city for at least nine months out of the year.

Even those poor, deprived computer stores in town must benefit from the consumers Tech draws to Lubbock each year. Somebody, out of 23,000 people, probably buys computer accessories and service from other companies BESIDES High Tech.

Probably the businesses that benefit the most from Tech students are clothing stores. They do not offer any discounts to students, but they sure make a profit off us (at least the more monetarily endowed students).

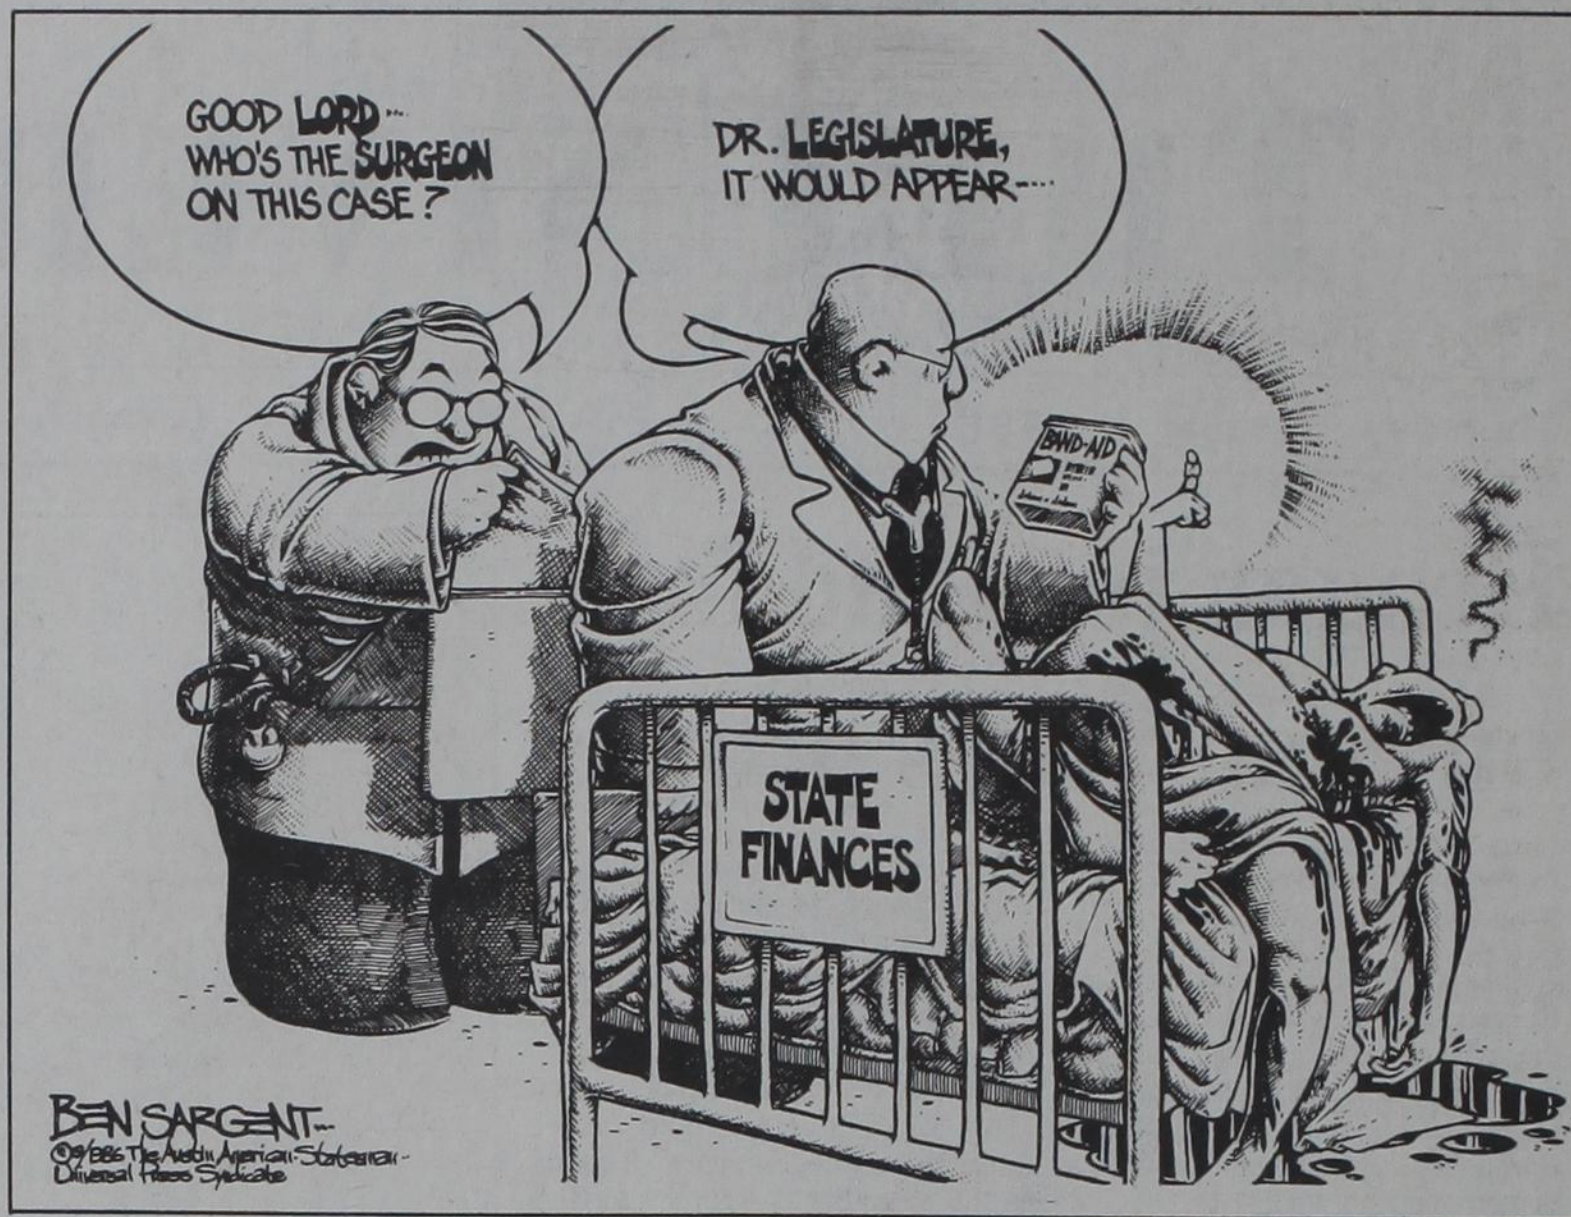

Countless times, I have walked into a women's clothing store in the mall and watched a Tech student buy $60 in fluorescent clothing with a check, a driver's license and a Tech ID. Tech generates several thousand dollars for Lubbock.

Clothing stores, gas stations, clubs and liquor stores — ESPECIALLY the clubs and liquor stores — all profit from the Tech population. Attracting business by offering student or other types of discounts is called free enterprise, which is what America is built upon. If business owners start complaining about other businesses which offer discounts, we might as well regulate prices for everything.

Under such strict, fair regulations, movie tickets always would be five bucks — we wouldn't have dollar nights or be able to purchase tickets for $3.75 at the University Center. Computer prices would be geared toward the business industry; students wouldn't be able to afford an Apple II unless they had stock in the company. Let's not forget the Lubbock nightlife. Most of the clubs in town would go out of business in a month if not for college nights.

So the next time you hear a business owner complain about student discounts and the fact that those discounts are taking away all their business, just explain how poor (or should I say cheap) most Tech students are. And don't forget to explain free enterprise.

Prank callers disrupt help lines

Kristyn Kingston
News Staff Writer

Prank phone calls have become almost a fact of life. Sooner or later, everyone will find themselves being inconvenienced by some childish person who has nothing better to do than to irritate someone else. However, these pranksters have gone beyond bothering individuals in their homes. Now they are harassing local tele-counseling volunteers.

Three help-lines dominate the telephone counseling system in Lubbock. Interchange, operated by and for Tech students, offers counseling, referrals, information about Tech events and the Teletapes. Contact Lubbock is operated by adults from this area and offers counseling and referrals to other adults. Contact Lubbock also houses Contact Teenline, a counseling line that is operated by teenagers for their teen peers.

In each organization, the volunteers receive extensive specialized training.

For example, all Contact volunteers undergo a 53-hour training course before they are even considered for certification in the organization. The counselors are trained not to give advice, but, instead, to talk the caller through the problem and help the caller find the solution that is best for him or her personally. Obviously, this can be a long and tedious process, depending on the complexities of the problem.

Once a worker becomes involved in a call and begins to make progress in helping the caller, the height of irritation is to be interrupted by a nut who wants to share the intimate details of his sexual fantasies. An even worse aggravation is to feel that you really are helping some poor, troubled guy, only to realize, with horrible suddenness, that he is trying to fulfill his sexual urges while you speak to him. That is your cue to launch into a vivid description of having the odor of cat food invade your sinuses. It's funny how quickly he decides that he needs to end the conversation.

Sex calls seem to be a particular problem for the Teenline. What is wrong with a man when he feels that he must call (and scare) teenage girls to help him work out his private fantasies? Not all the prank calls are sex-related. Some people apparently don't have any problems, so they make up some. It's such a waste to use good training and time on somebody from the Land of Make-Believe.

Although most of the prank calls are from men, the tele-counselors do hear from a few insincere females. They're usually adolescent girls who giggle throughout the whole conversation.

The problems caused by these people take on a more serious light when you realize that they are tying up the lines while someone who really needs help is getting a busy signal. Perhaps the need to make such calls is a real problem in itself that the volunteer could help the prankster solve.

Telephone counselors did not spend their time in training to hear a bunch of nonsense from people who simply cannot find something else to do. Somewhere in this world is something to keep people busy that does not disturb anyone else. When someone finds that he/she has a real problem, then a call to a tele-counseling service is in order. That is the type of call that keeps the volunteers near the phones.

Peace Corps adds to foreign policy

James Reston
Syndicated Columnist

WASHINGTON — The Peace Corps celebrated its 25th anniversary here this month, reminding us that American foreign policy is not all missiles and Stealth bombers but has a gentler side.

It was just a week before he was elected as the 35th President of the United States that John F. Kennedy summoned the youth of America to get this country moving again and dramatized the idea of a volunteer Peace Corps.

"There is not enough money in all America to relieve the misery of the underdeveloped world in a giant and endless soup kitchen," he said. "But there is enough know-how and enough knowledgeable people to help those nations help themselves."

"I therefore propose that our inadequate efforts in this area be supplemented by a Peace Corps of talented young men willing and able to serve their country in this fashion for three years as an alternative to peacetime selective service..."

It was not, of course, a new idea. It had its roots in the biblical injunction, "From those to whom much is given, much is required," and in the missionary tradition of volunteer service among the poor and hungry people of the world.

It is interesting to recall that once the Peace Corps was established, President Kennedy made two conflicting decisions in the first year of his administration.

He sent 500 additional "advisers" to South Vietnam, raising the total to 17,000 in 1963; and he sent 500 new Peace Corps volunteers to work in the fields and villages of eight developing countries.

As Gerard T. Rice, a young volunteer now working at the World Bank, notes in "The Bold Experiment," his excellent history of the Peace Corps: "Vietnam scarred the American psyche, leaving memories of pain and defeat. But Kennedy's other initiative inspired, and continues to inspire, hope and understanding among Americans and the rest of the world. In that sense, the Peace Corps was his most affirmative and enduring legacy."

We hear little of the Peace Corps now, though more than 100,000 young Americans have served in its ranks in this past quarter-century, and almost 10,000 still are in the field.

Was this merely a "bold experiment," serviceable for a time but now a forgotten triumph, irrelevant to the present day?

Much is said these days about the failure of freedom and affluence in the pursuit of happiness, and people of different political persuasions — from Gary Hart to Bill Buckley — turn repeatedly to the remedy of volunteer national service for the waywardness and permissiveness of the so-called Me Generation.

The idea is not new, either. In 1904, William James, in an address to the Universal Peace Conference in Boston, suggested that the government should enlist young men to work among the poor and rejected people of the nation.

Later, in his famous essay on "The Moral Equivalent of War," he added: "The war against war is going to be no holiday excursion or camping party... Our Gilded Youths should be packed off to coal and iron mines, to freight trains, to fishing fleets in December, to dishwashing and clothes-washing, to road-building and tunnel-making, according to their choice, to get the childishness knocked out of them, and to come back into society with healthier sympathies and soberer ideas..."

Well, they were tougher and they wrote better in those days, and James made the mistake of urging that this work be compulsory, but the search for "The Moral Equivalent of War" goes on and the need for volunteer service clearly exists.

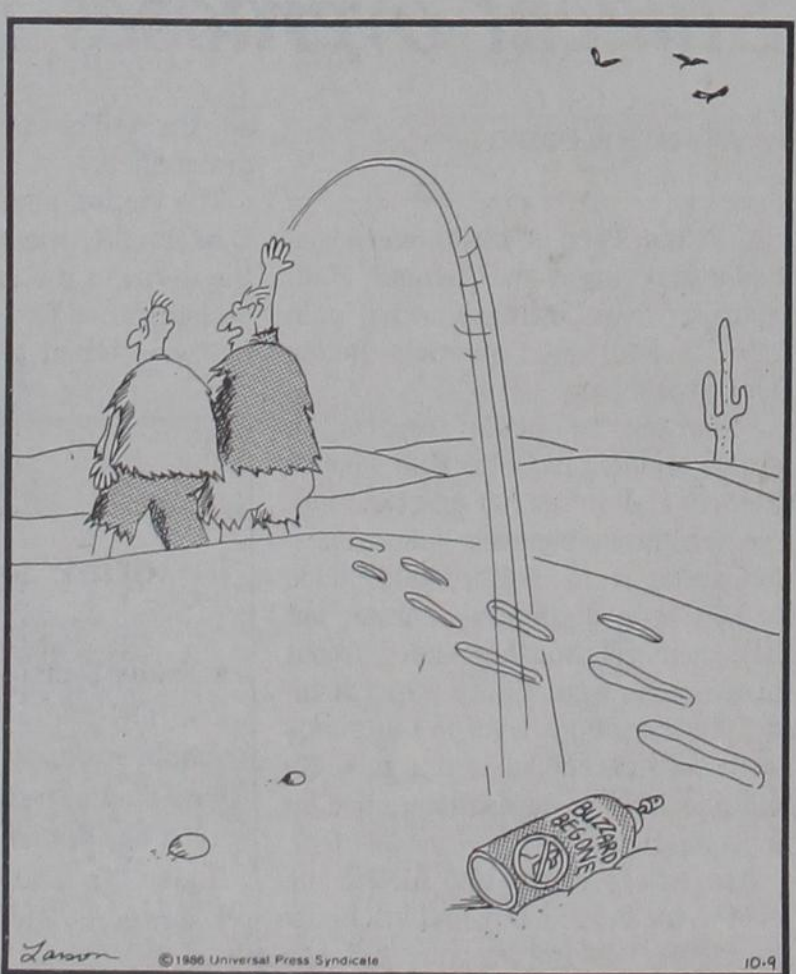

We see it in the plight of our aging population, many of whom cannot afford to be sick. We see it in every city slum and town where the facilities for transportation, housing and recreation are in urgent need of repair.

And we see it most dramatically in the plight of our farms, whose abundant production is driving people off the land and into the overcrowded cities while half the human race goes to bed hungry every night.

Can we do better than this? Apply the idealism and labor and generosity of the Peace Corps to contemporary problems. Many people here think we can, and some of them even work for the government.

What is porno?

To the editor:
Thank you, Spokespersons Coplan, Freedman and Olney, for getting across the words of "society," "millions," and "the majority of Americans." Ooohh, that Demon Pornography!

First Amendment viewpoints aside, I must ask: How can you speak for the entire population of a country? Freedman says no one has been unaffected. Coplan says society does not want pornography. Let me guess — you held a massive phone survey.

Then, we have incredibly ridiculous and naive comments such as Coplan's, to the effect that increased Bible study will reduce not only porn, but AIDS, taxes, and crime and divorce rates. First I laugh, then I think about it, then I laugh a little more.

And Miss Olney, I think some publishers would be defeating their purpose if they attempted to call porn innocent. It's a contradiction in terms, actually. Like "sensible fanatic." As for sex, it, like so much these days, is a game of give and take, thank you. It takes two to tango, and while you're seeing how much you can give, he's seeing how much you can take.

You see, more than anything, looking at porn is a matter of taste. There are a few magazines, Playboy at the forefront, which are fairly tasteful (have you ever read an interview in Playboy? Or how about the fine fiction by authors ranging from Arthur C. Clarke to George Plimpton?) while there are a great many which are, indeed, the height of tastelessness.

They usually have titles like Spanking Nuns.

Yeah, there's a lot of vile trash out there. But I feel compelled to ask you girls, where does your definition of porn end? Do you stop at XXX videos, or the current and controversial ads for jeans, or Wyeth's recently discovered nude paintings and sketches?

How far will you go?

Lighten up, Tech

To the editor:

I remember the good old days (last year) when Kirsten Kling and the editorial board of The UD used to berate an apathetic student body almost daily. Where is Kirsten baby when we need her? It seems that this semester every knee-jerk reactionary on campus is writing letters on one subject or another.

We have heard from the born-again self-proclaimed Christians who complain about how heavy the burden of the world's sins is on their shoulders and how they want to save us all from moral deprivation. We have also heard from conservatives spouting nonsense and liberals dignifying it by responding.

Come on, Tech, lighten up, this is reality. The Ayatollah can't become president because he's not a U.S. born citizen. The University Daily is not about to start publishing excerpts from Mein Kampf and the Communist Manifesto. It's just another college newspaper. Perverts are not invading our fair city. There is no Santa Claus.

While I'm at it, I might as well make an editorial suggestion. Instead of wasting valuable space with some pointless cartoon like "Happydale," why not try an advice column geared toward Tech students? Here's your first question. "Dear Laura, Since I've been at school I've been receiving phone calls from breathless women. How do I get them to give me their phone numbers?"

Vietnam veterans

To the editor:

Thank you, Mr. Hanselman, for taking the side of the veterans and survivors of Vietnam. I was beginning to think no one remembered or cared about those who went to Nam, those who came back, those who died and those left behind to pick up the pieces when a father did not come home.

My father, a 21-year career man in the Air Force, told me and my four brothers and sisters (the youngest being six months old) that it was an honor to defend his country and that he would willingly die for his kids and his country in their defense. He left Texas at the end of November 1966, and he died outside Saigon on April 10, 1967. To me and all who knew him, my father was a fallen hero, not a "mindless" entity who had no choice.

Mary A. Martin-Jester

P.S. Though I was left without a father and had three brothers to carry on his name, I felt I could honor him by keeping my maiden name. You could honor him and his fellow servicemen by not disparaging what they fought and died for.

Senate to study possible plane, CIA connection

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff will conduct an inquiry into whether an airplane resupplying Nicaraguan rebels was working in cooperation with the Reagan administration, the panel's chairman said Wednesday.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., revealed the plan not long after the State Department raised the possibility that the U.S. Embassy in Managua may be shut down and accused Nicaragua of refusing U.S. officials consular access to American Eugene Hasenfus, captured when the airplane crashed Sunday in southern Nicaragua.

Lugar divulged the plan for the inquiry by his committee's staff in response to an accusation by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., that "individuals are running around ... conducting their own foreign policy in violation of the law."

In related news, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry announced late Wednesday that it would allow U.S. Embassy officials to question American Eugene Hasenfus, the lone survivor of the crash Sunday of the cargo plane in southern Nicaragua. The ministry also said it would return the bodies of Americans who were killed.

The announcement, which came a day after the State Department threatened to shut down the U.S. Embassy in Nicaragua unless U.S. officials got consular access to Hasenfus, appeared to satisfy American demands.

Acting State Department spokesman Charles Redman had said earlier in the day that the embassy delivered a diplomatic note Tuesday to Nicaraguan officials requesting consular access to Hasenfus and asking for the remains and personal effects of the two Americans who died in the crash.

Asked late Wednesday about the Nicaraguan announcement, Nancy Beck, a State Department spokesman, said she had no comment.

Lugar said the Reagan administration policy toward Nicaragua is effectively in a sort of "limbo" because Congress has not given final approval to $100 million in U.S. aid to the Contras. That money for that aid program is contained in a spending catchall money bill.

The plane was on a mission to resupply Nicaraguan rebels but the Reagan administration has said it had no connection with the U.S. government. Nicaragua has said the plane was on a CIA-sponsored mission.

President Reagan said his administration had known that American citizens and private groups were trying to help anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, but he denied that the plane had any connection to the U.S. government.

"We've been aware that there are private groups and private citizens that have been trying to help the Contras to that extent, but we did not know the exact particulars of what they're doing," Reagan told reporters as he left the White House on a campaign trip.

Asked whether he approved of private efforts aimed against Nicaragua's leftist government, Reagan said, "We're in a free country where private citizens have a great many freedoms."

He added that "some years ago, many of you spoke approvingly of something called the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Spanish Civil War."

The Abraham Lincoln Brigade, actually a battalion, was organized by a group of Americans in the 1930s to fight on the side of Spanish partisans against the fascist Gen. Francisco Franco.

Later, arriving in Raleigh, N.C., for a political speech, Reagan was asked who the men on the airplane were working for and replied, "Not us."

Redman said that while the office was in operation, the Nicaraguan rebels contracted for goods and services, including transport services.

NEWS BRIEFS

Hostage's wife offers to mediate release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The wife of hostage Thomas Sutherland, saying she understands both sides, offered Wednesday to mediate between the Reagan administration and Islamic Jihad for the release of her husband and two other kidnapped Americans.

Jean Sutherland said she believes the timing for negotiations is right because she "senses a clear readiness by the two sides to discuss the demands and conditions" for the release of the captives.

In an Arabic-language statement, Mrs. Sutherland appealed to Islamic Jihad to contact her through a post office box or to call her at her home or at work at the American University of Beirut, where she teaches English. "I am willing to act as a person to offer my good offices because I feel I know and can understand the positions and feelings of both parties," she said in her statement.

"I am willing to do anything I can to facilitate the dialogue which, it does seem to me at this point, both sides are ready to have," she said.

Claiborne loses ground in Senate trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judge Harry Claiborne lost ground in two arenas Wednesday in his fight against removal from office. The Senate voted against allowing him to summon witnesses at his impeachment trial, and a court refused to interfere with that decision.

After 2½ hours of closed-door debate, the Senate rejected Claiborne's attempt to present witnesses who would testify for him before the Senate, which is trying him.

In the federal courthouse at the foot of Capitol Hill, U.S. District Judge Harold Greene was asked by Claiborne's lawyer to overrule the Senate. Greene refused, saying the question was whether he could interfere with a proceeding of the legislative branch, and "the answer clearly is no."

Claiborne's lawyers said after the ruling they would take their case to the U.S. Court of Appeals. It was unclear when the appellate court would rule.

Jury rules against anti-abortion clinic

FORT WORTH (AP) — The nation's anti-abortion clinics that intentionally deceive pregnant women received a clear message from a jury that said their tactics violate Texas' deceptive trade practices law, according to an assistant attorney general.

Jurors voted 11-1 Tuesday that the Pregnancy Problem Center here willfully deceived pregnant women by using advertising that made the center appear to be an abortion facility.

Center director Chuck Pelletier admitted during testimony that women who asked over the telephone if the center performed abortions were told that it did.

Once the women arrived, however, they were shown a graphic anti-abortion film and were questioned about their sex lives, testimony showed. Attempts were made to persuade them against having an abortion.

The trial marks the first time the anti-abortion clinic issue has been challenged in court by a government representative.

"I think this sends a strong message to (anti-abortion) clinics across the country," said Texas Assistant Attorney General Steve Gardner.

Congress passes emergency spending bill

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress enacted an emergency spending bill Wednesday after President Reagan told Democrats their insistence on strategic arms restrictions in long-term legislation was threatening a government shutdown.

With the federal spending authority expiring at midnight, the House, 264 to 151, passed a two-day stopgap bill to forestall a government crisis until Friday. The Senate then approved it by voice vote. It was the second time in as many weeks that Congress has to pass a stopgap spending bill.

The short-term measure would continue current spending policies while lawmakers struggle to complete action on the veto-threatened long-term measure. It was the second emergency stopgap bill since the 1987 fiscal year began Oct. 1.

However, administration officials said Reagan would be advised to veto even the brief extension because of a provision allowing the rehiring of air traffic controllers fired in 1981, said Ed Dale, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget.

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as Reagan was returning to Washington from a political outing in the South, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president would definitely veto the measure if the provision on rehiring controllers was retained.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said another stopgap bill might be required in the case of a veto.

Reagan on Wednesday rejected an offer by Democrats to delay their arms confrontation until after the president's summit in Iceland this weekend with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"Now, hours before my meeting with General Secretary Gorbachev, the House Democrats are trying to tie my hands with restrictive language on foreign policy issues," he said.

"I can be looking across the table in Iceland in a couple of days at a man who could be sitting there thinking if they had their way he doesn't have to negotiate with me. He'd just wait for Congress to get him what he wanted," the president said during a speech in Atlanta, where he was campaigning for Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga.

Reagan said House Democrats "should stop playing politics and jeopardizing the success of our Icelandic talks."

Among other things, House Democratic leaders are trying to derail administration plans to violate limits in the unratified SALT II treaty.

Opponents argue nuclear dump will damage state

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — A federal proposal that includes Deaf Smith County as a possible site for a nuclear waste dump could threaten other parts of Texas if wastes are moved across the state, opponents to the plan warned Wednesday.

"We don't want the repository. We want to protect Texas from the (Department of Energy's) takeover attempt," said Angela Lamb, Amarillo District Supervisor for the Texas Department of Agriculture.

"Please, don't waste Texas," Lamb told members of the Texas House Subcommittee on Hazardous Materials Transportation.

Deaf Smith County in West Texas is one of three finalists the federal government has chosen as a possible site for the high-level nuclear waste repository.

If the Texas site about 35 miles southwest of Amarillo and 17 miles north of Hereford is chosen, highly radioactive wastes would be transported to the site and buried underground, according to the state agriculture department.

The energy department was told about the hearing Wednesday in Houston but sent no representatives, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said. About 50 people attended the hearing.

State Rep. Al Luna of Houston, chairman of the subcommittee, said he was concerned about a preliminary plan to ship nuclear wastes through the Port of Houston and across the state because of the possibility of accidents.

"I think we share the concerns of people in the Panhandle that this is a bad program, a bad plan," he said. "We would like to see it killed as soon as possible."

Opponents to the proposal talked about the threat the nuke dump poses to surrounding farm land and the Ogallala Aquifer.

Bill Cleavinger, president of Texas Sugarbeet Growers, said he doesn't understand why the federal government would want to locate the site so close to a water supply.

"Water is a very, very precious item to us," the Wildorado resident said.

If the aquifer was contaminated by radiation, the area would become a "desert," he said.

Cleavinger also said there may be a stigma attached to food grown or processed near a nuclear waste dump.

Pinochet juggles Chilean army

By The Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet dismissed the army member of Chile's military junta and retired nine generals Wednesday in a shake-up of senior army ranks.

The changes appeared to underline

Pinochet's determination not to relax his 13-year-old military government.

Pinochet, the 70-year-old army commander, named one of his most loyal aides, Lt. Gen. Humberto Gordon, director of the secret police agency, to represent the army on the four-member junta effective Dec. 11.

Gordon will replace Lt. Gen. Julio Canessa.

Darling accepts job at Mississippi State

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Staff Writer

John Darling, former Texas Tech vice president for academic affairs and research, will leave the university at the end of the semester to accept the position of provost at Mississippi State University.

Mississippi State, located in Starkville, is a land grant university. Like Texas A&M, the institution is the agricultural and engineering college for the state.

During the summer of 1985, Darling was nominated for the post of president at Mississippi State and was one of two finalists for the position, he said.

As provost, Darling will be responsible for eight colleges in addition to the registrar's office, continuing education, the computer center, the faculty development center and the university library.

Mississippi State is a smaller institution than Tech, with an enrollment of 12,000 students.

Darling resigned from the vice presidential post on July 22, 1985, in the midst of a tenure dispute between Tech administrators and faculty members. He cited policy disagreements and a lack of support by faculty members for Tech President Lauro Cavazos as his reasons for leaving the position. Cavazos said he asked for Darling's resignation.

Darling's new post will be a promotion, but he said he has mixed emotions about leaving Tech.

"Every institution goes through a crisis. We went through one," Darling said. "It needs to die now."

Darling accepted a position in the College of Business Administration at Tech as a marketing professor after vacating the vice presidential post.

Darling said he asked the president of Mississippi State to allow him to teach at least one class each semester when he assumes the provost position in January. The post is equivalent to a senior vice president and is the number two position at Mississippi State, Darling said.

Rodeo queen eyes career in law

By ANN McBRYDE
News Staff Writer

Although accounting is her major and law school is a definite possibility in her future, senior Kim Wedeking still takes time to don her boots and hat to perform her duties as Miss Rodeo Texas Tech, a position she won last October.

For the past year Wedeking has performed her duties as the reigning rodeo queen by attending one national that it would probably be just as much fun," she said.

Wedeking grew up in Stamford on her father's quarter horse ranch and began riding horses at a young age.

"My dad owns about 60 head of horses, so I was definitely influenced by this environment when I was growing up," Wedeking said. "I love horses and I love to work cattle."

She has been riding horses all her life, but her specialty is barrel racing.

"Since I don't rope or goat tie, barrel racing kind of became my thing," said Wedeking.

Besides being active as Miss Rodeo, Wedeking is involved in the Tech Pre-Law Society, Accounting Society and the Rodeo Association. She is a member of the West Texas Barrel Racing Association.

Wedeking will end her reign as Miss Rodeo Texas Tech at the 1986-87 pageant Oct. 18. The pageant will begin at 8 a.m. in the Tech livestock arena.

Wedeking said pageant participants will be judged in three phases: interview modeling, horsemanship and working cow-horse patterns. The final phase involves riding an unfamiliar horse in a designated pattern.

She said it is important for participants to be able to ride and handle a horse well and to "be themselves" during the interview phase.

The new queen will be announced and crowned during the Saturday night performance of the Tech intercollegiate rodeo Oct. 25. The winner will receive a crown, a buckle and several gift certificates donated by local merchants.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

COE to sponsor event for United Way

The Texas Tech College of Education will sponsor a "M*A*S*H Bash" benefiting the campus United Way campaign from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Saturday at the Slaton airport. Admission is a potluck dish. There will be an auction conducted by Jack Afill and Associates. Items to be auctioned include goods such as perfume, two Coors beer limited prints and services such as babysitting and dinner parties.

Former Lubbock Chamber of Commerce President J.C. Chambers will speak at the event which is open to all faculty, staff and students. The Slaton airport is located on FM 400 and those attending are requested to dress in costume or casual.

Tech professor honored by West Point

Texas Tech engineering professor Thomas Trost has been honored with the Commander's Award for Public Service by the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., for his service as a visiting professor during the 1985-86 academic year.

Trost was selected for the position after a national search by the academy. During the year, Trost taught electrical engineering courses and proposed changes in the academy's electrical engineering laboratory program.

Smithsonian Institution offers lectures

The Smithsonian Institution will give seminars and lectures on subjects ranging from fashion to space exploration to fossils through Monday. Events will be at the Texas Tech museum. Tickets can be purchased at the door beginning a half hour before each event. For more information, contact the West Texas Museum Association at 742-2443.

UT officials inquire about hazing in student's death

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Questioning of more than 100 people has begun as University of Texas officials opened a preliminary investigation into the drinking death of a fraternity pledge.

Mark Seeberger, 18, of Dallas was found dead in his dormitory room

Sept. 18. Authorities said he died of alcohol poisoning after drinking about 18 ounces of rum.

News reports and court records subsequently said that Seeberger, a pledge of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, had been on a fraternity "ride" the night before his death. During the ride, he allegedly was handcuffed and told to drink.

Ronald Brown, UT vice president for student affairs, said students were being questioned "to determine if hazing in any way contributed to Mr. Seeberger's death, if hazing takes place regularly in this organization and to determine the fraternity's policy and practice with regard to alcohol."

A number of university officials began meeting with students Tuesday, presenting them with letters requesting that they be interviewed. Brown said letters were prepared for 104 pledges, Phi Kappa Psi members and "a number of other persons."

"We want to get some general impressions, and we'll probably have to call some of them back for more detailed statements," he said.

Electronics expert says office bug poorly hidden

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — So far, it appears the bugging of Bill Clements' campaign strategist's office was a risky operation in which the bug itself was poorly hidden, a security expert said.

"The question is, of course, why? From the little that is known, this operation seems to be very, very high-risk versus the potential gain," said Ken Bates, an expert in electronic countersurveillance.

A matchbook-sized radio transmitter was discovered Sunday behind a picture in the office of Austin political consultant Karl Rove, top strategist for Clements' GOP gubernatorial bid.

After examining a photograph of the transmitter provided by a news reporter, Bates said Tuesday the device was of a design that likely required periodic servicing.

He also said it "was not very cleverly hidden" and probably was monitored by an eavesdropper within a few hundred yards of Rove's office.

Bates was a nine-year veteran of the Austin Police Department before he joined the Austin-based Factual Investigations.

The FBI and Texas Department of Public Safety continued their investigation Wednesday, but officials of both agencies had little to say when asked about any progress being made.

"The investigation will continue,"

said David Wells, spokesman for the DPS.

Byron Sage, agent in charge of the Austin FBI office, said the "political aspects of the investigation will not dictate who is interviewed" by authorities.

The use of such listening devices without authorized court orders or without the knowledge of those whose conversations are being monitored is a felony under both state and federal law, DPS officials said.

Lifestyles writer might as well face it; she's addicted to 'Love Connection'

Missy Costello
Lifestyles
Staff Writer

I was a "Love Connection" addict. Yes, it's hard for me to admit, but for an entire year my world revolved around the 11:30 p.m. hour for my daily hit of Chuck Woolery.

The man. The mystique. The show. The Rolex. The idiocy of it all. Ah, the fond memories that Chuck and I have. I hummed the theme song in my sleep. I was cranky for days if (horrors!) I missed my daily dosage. Yes, sadly enough, I had been stricken with Chuckomania (not to be confused with Vannamanian, a sickness of the same televisionesque genre).

I set aside a sacred hour from my day to watch Chuck stride across his purple-and-red-heart-decorated stage, unbutton his navy sports coat, hike up the legs of his pants (gotta avoid those unsightly wrinkles), and carefully sit down. With that gold Rolex anchored on his wrist. Without marring that perfect crease in his pants.

And now came the contestants. And we got to hear EVERYTHING that happened on their dates. God bless America.

I found myself fidgeting whenever Chuck called for a commercial break. "Will this couple make a love connection?" I wondered. Those "two minutes and two seconds" seemed to last an eon as I waited for Chuck's perfect visage to return to my screen.

At last, at last. On with the show. Who could forget Bill (originally from Omaha, Neb.), who treated his date (video pick number one) to a candlelit dinner on the beach? Just like Chuck says, romance IS still alive.

How about Sabrina and Gerard, whose date consisted of nude hot tubbing? They did say, after all, that "nothing happened," and I have no choice but to believe that. Never mind that she called herself "the goddess of love." Never mind that he listed "skin diving" as one of his hobbies. Would the venerable Chuck allow pathological liars to be on his show? Huh, I think not.

Let's not forget the two couples who became engaged on the show. Boy, won't they have something to tell their children? "Yes, Mommy and Daddy were hard up for dates, and so they went on TV with Chuck Woolery and flaunted their datelessness in front of an entire nation." Neat. Even scarier is the thought that one of these video matches might dare to reproduce. OOOH. Makes your teeth itch, doesn't it?

I don't really know what possessed me to watch Chuck and the gang, but I do. I'm trying to overcome this obsession with the man behind the golden Rolex. Really I am. I suppose in time it will fade. But in the meantime, I'll see you in two and two.

Singer Richie still amazed by success

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — "Outrageous." Lionel Richie's favorite word. It's also the title of his new world tour and the best way to describe his meteoric music career and massive record sales. The singer-songwriter has passed Paul McCartney, Stevie Wonder and Cole Porter for the most consecutive years of having a No. 1 song on the charts and is tied with Irving Berlin at nine.

A record-setting 10th year appears certain with "Dancing on the Ceiling," the title track of his new top-selling album.

But to the soft-spoken man who was once an accounting and economics major from Tuskegee, Ala., success always is something of a surprise.

"I can never get used to the idea of an album or a song going all the way to the top. That's still like Christmas to me. I go out and celebrate," Richie said in an interview before starting his 60-city American tour.

"But I don't take anything for granted. To me, the more you win, the more people expect you to become jaded about the situation. But I treat each album like it's the first album I've ever done and I set such a high standard for myself."

"Dancing on the Ceiling" was due out last December, yet didn't surface until mid-summer. Rumors circulated that Richie had writer's block.

"I wish it was something that simple," he said. "I started the album right up through the 'We Are the World' project. But you cannot get involved with a program like that and walk away unaffected."

"I had written another album and I was all ready to put it out and was quite proud of it until my consciousness was raised by what was happening in the world. So I stopped the album and said, 'I don't want to do those songs.'"

The end result was the new album, which features such upbeat ballads as "Love Will Conquer All" and the reggae-inspired "Se La."

"I had to go back and discover how to express love songs in a different way," Richie said. "The basic angle of 'Se La' is 'what if,' like what if the world was full of love and people living happily together. I'm basically saying we have the power to be that way."

Astros win; Red Sox even series

Boston hammers Angels, 9-2

Scott, 'Stros outlast Mets, 1-0

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Dwight Evans' fifth-inning popup fell for a tie-breaking double and the Boston Red Sox won the battle of bad hops, blunders and bizarre plays to beat the California Angels 9-2 Wednesday to even the American League playoffs at one game apiece.

Every ball seemed like an adventure in Fenway Park's late afternoon sun and the swirling wind, and Evans' lucky double in the fifth put them ahead 3-2. The Red Sox broke the game open with three runs in the seventh, helped by three errors, and three more runs in the eighth, capped by Jim Rice's two-run homer, to gain a split at home in the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

Game 3 was scheduled for Friday night in Anaheim.

The Red Sox bunched seven hits in the first two innings, including a leadoff triple by Wade Boggs and a following double by Marty Barrett, who had three hits, but managed only a 2-0 lead. Then, as the shadows crept across the infield, the Angels began creeping back into the game and they eventually tied it in the fifth on Wally Joyner's home run, the first ever by a rookie in a playoff game.

But in the bottom of the fifth, with two outs and Bill Buckner on first base, Don Baylor drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch from starter and loser Kirk McCaskill that barely missed outside.

Evans, hitless in the series, followed with a high pop fly behind second base. Shortstop Dick Schofield and second baseman Bobby Grich converged on it, both taking turns looking at the ball and each other. At the last moment, Grich lunged backwards for the ball, but it dropped for a two-base hit that allowed Buckner to score.

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Mike Scott prevailed in the heralded Shootout at the K Corral with Dwight Gooden, equaling a playoff record with 14 strikeouts and throwing a five-hitter as the Houston Astros defeated the New York Mets 1-0 Wednesday night in the first game of the 1986 National League playoffs.

Glenn Davis' home run leading off the second inning was all Scott needed. The Astros pitcher led the major leagues this year in strikeouts with 306.

Gooden, the major-league strikeout leader the past two seasons, gave up seven hits and struck out five in seven innings while working in and out of trouble as the Astros wasted numerous scoring chances.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series tonight will match Houston righthander Nolan Ryan, 12-8, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, against lefthander Bob Ojeda, 18-5.

The shutout was the first in the NL playoffs since Rick Sutcliffe and Warren Brusstar of Chicago combined to beat San Diego 13-0 in Game 1 of the 1984 series. The last individual shutout by an NL pitcher was Bob Forsch for St. Louis, 7-0 in Game 1 of the 1982 playoffs against Atlanta.

Danny Jackson of Kansas City pitched a 2-0 shutout in Game 5 of last year's American League playoffs against Toronto.

Scott became only the third NL pitcher to strike out 10 or more in a playoff game, the most recent being John Candelaria, who also struck out 14 against Cincinnati on Oct. 7, 1975, while with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Detroit's Joe Coleman in 1972 and Baltimore's Mike Boddicker in 1983 also struck out 14.

Sooners dream of perfect game

By The Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — The question posed to several Oklahoma football players was simple: If you could have a dream game when you play the University of Texas on Saturday, what would it be?

The answers ranged from realistic to ridiculous, but all carried a common denominator — just before waking up, they'd like to make sure Oklahoma wins the game.

Saturday
2 p.m.

"I'd like to catch over 100 yards passing and score at least a couple of touchdowns against them," said split end Derrick Shepard, an Odessa native playing in his final game against the Longhorns. "And get the win," he said.

Sonny Brown, senior defensive back from Alice, said a shutout would sit well. "Individually, I'd like to play the best game I ever have. Maybe make an interception or two, lots of tackles, no mistakes."

Center Travis Simpson, who played high school football in Norman, said pride is at stake for more reasons than the normal Red River Rivalry.

"For me, being a hometown boy, a dream game would be to play the best game I've ever played," he said. "To grade about 95 percent, to show everybody that Oklahoma can do the job, to prove to everybody that what happened in Miami (a 28-16 loss) is that we had an off day.

Defensive end Troy Johnson of Houston said he'd like to see Texas held to negative yardage. It happened in the second half of last year's game as the Longhorns gained just 70 yards in total offense for the day.

"And I'd like to be in the quarterback's face all day," Johnson said.

Offensive guard Mark Hutson, like his mate Simpson, would like to see the offensive line roll.

"I would like to go out and for us to shut them out and beat 'em by three or four touchdowns," Hutson said. "I'd like to look back and be able to say we dominated the game on the offensive front."

If that were to happen, players such as halfback Patrick Collins would benefit. Collins already has had a dream game, scoring the game-winning touchdown a year ago on a 45-yard run.

"If I could go out and average five or six yards every time I touch the ball and have a good game on the punt and kick returns, that would be a game I would remember," said the Tulsa native.

Tight end Keith Jackson, from Little Rock, Ark., has caught four passes in four games and still is hoping for his dream game.

"I'd like to catch two touchdown passes and catch five passes for 140 yards to top my best game, which I had last year against Missouri," he said.

Raiders gird for hard-nosed Hog defense

By DON WILLIAMS
Associate Sports Editor

If the performance of the Texas Tech offense has seemed somewhat disappointing so far, it can be forgiven. Not many teams move the ball consistently against defenses like those of Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M — three of the Raiders' first five opponents.

But there is no rest for the weary. Saturday in Fayetteville, the Raiders will face an Arkansas defensive unit that may be as good as any of the above, according to Tech offensive line coach Clovis Hale.

"Even though they may not be quite as physical as Baylor and A&M, they're quicker; they're probably a harder-working defense," Hale said after practice Wednesday. "Their production has been probably the best in the conference and one of the best in the nation up to this point."

Hale's assessment is, indeed, supported statistically. The Razorbacks

Hale

Cherico

— 12th in the country in total defense — are leading the Southwest Conference in stopping the pass and are seventh in the nation in that category, giving up 119.5 yards per game.

And although Arkansas is only fourth in the SWC against the run, the Hog "D" has been as mean as any in money territory. The Razorbacks have surrendered only one rushing touchdown — three fewer than any other SWC team — in four games, and gave up only three scores on the ground all last season.

The Hogs have scarcely missed a beat this year, although they have had to replace eight defensive starters and several of the conference's top defensive players from a year ago, including defensive end Ravin Caldwell, linebackers David Bazzel and Nick Miller and defensive backs Greg Lasker and Kevin Wyatt.

Hale said he is not surprised, however, by the quick development of a unit that he called "probably the most productive defense in Division I football the last two or three years."

"Even last year, they were able to play a lot of young people," Hale said. "Even though they lost a lot of starters, (their replacements) had a tremendous amount of playing time last season and you can really see a lot of veteran play in their defense."

If the Raiders are to inflate Arkansas' current defensive numbers, Hale's movers up front must neutralize the heart of the Hog defense, All-SWC nose guard Tony Cherico, an undersized (6-0, 239) junior.

"He's not only a real quick football player," Hale said. "He's what I consider an outstanding technician. He doesn't spend much time with blocks, and he gets to the ball well."

Like almost any other offensive line coach, Hale said he realizes containing Cherico is more than a one-man job.

"We're gonna be double-teaming, or what we call slip-blocking, and zone blocking a great deal, because I just hate to put one person on him one-on-one and expect that one individual to handle him," Hale said.

Hale said the offensive line has done a good job of pass protection but must be more effective in run blocking Saturday than it was against the Aggies, against whom the Raiders managed only 94 yards on the ground.

"We're stressing that even more this week, because when you're throwing as much we are, sometimes you overlook the running game," he said.

Women netters open at 'Husker Invite

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will begin play today and will continue through Saturday at the 'Husker Invitational at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln. Team points will not be kept, but individual champions will be recognized in each flight of singles and doubles play.

Teams that will participate, in addition to Nebraska and Tech, include Iowa, Illinois, Colorado, Utah, Minnesota and Wichita State.

Annemarie Walson will play the No. 1 singles spot for the Red Raiders, with Cathy Carlson slated for the No. 2 slot. Julie Hrebec will play No. 3, followed by Eva Ziegler in No. 4, Barbara Fitterer at No. 5 and Lisa Roberts will be in the No. 6 position.

Doubles' play will see Walson and Paula Brigance team up in the No. 1 flight competition, while Carlson and Hrebec will play in the No. 2 group. Ziegler and Roberts will be in the No. 3 flight, with Fitterer and Shannon Cizek in the No. 4 flight.

TENNIS

"We will be really tough in the No. 3 through No. 6 spots in singles," Tech coach Mickey Bowes said. "Our first two doubles teams will be tough, with the No. 3 team improving as the season progresses."

Tech spikers challenge top-ranked Aztecs

By LYNOL LOYD
Sports Staff Writer

The Texas Tech volleyball team will play its first home game of the year against one of the best volleyball squads in the country when the Red Raiders take on the top-ranked San Diego State Aztecs at 7 p.m. today at the Student Recreation Center.

Admission is free for all full-time Tech students.

The Aztecs come into the match with a 23-1 record, having suffered their only loss of the season Saturday to No. 5-ranked University of Pacific. Earlier in the week, San Diego put away No. 2-ranked San Jose State and No. 10-ranked Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

Boxwell

Tech, meanwhile, enters tonight's match after five rough weeks on the road. Tech owns a 6-4 season record after suffering a Southwest Conference loss to Texas A&M at College Station last weekend.

San Diego State will be minus the services of injured All-America setter Liane Sato, who is considered the leader of the Aztecs' hard-hitting offensive attack. Freshman Melissa Stokes is slated to replace Sato.

Fortunately for the Aztecs, they still have sophomore middle blocker Kris Morton. In 63 games Morton has accumulated 265 kills and a .409 hitting percentage and is the Aztecs' leading blocker. Morton has a total of 87 blocks, 36 solo and 51 assists.

As far as the Red Raiders are concerned, key players will be their two seniors, Sharon Cain and Allison Heterich. Sophomore Susan Kelly, who has 47 blocks on the season, also could be a force.

Tech coach Donna Martin said she believes the Raiders can pull off the upset.

"I think we have a good chance to upset them since we are finally getting to play at home," said Tech outside hitter Becky Boxwell. "Everyone seems to be really fired up for the match."
