Higher ed committee studies three mergers

By TREY BARKER
News Staff Writer

The chairman of the Governor's Select Committee on Higher Education, in an advance copy of what is to be discussed today in a meeting, has recommended the merger of a number of Texas universities.

In his report, Larry Temple, chairman of the committee, called for the merger of Texas Women's University with North Texas State University, University of Houston-Downtown with Texas Southern University and Texas A&I University with Corpus Christi State University.

The select committee was formed in 1985 to explore ways to upgrade the higher education system.

"Up to now we've been gathering information," Temple said in an interview with The Dallas Morning News. "Right now, we're at a point in time that we need to make some decisions. That's why I put in writing what I thought ought to be done."

During recent months the committee has had public hearings and put together a package of recommendations to present to the Texas Legislature in January. Among the proposals are identifying the "role, scope and mission" of each state-supported school, reviewing all doctoral programs for possible elimination of weak or duplicated programs, phasing out associate degrees at four-year universities and changing the method of funding from money received for the number of students to money received for the quality of education.

In the early broad-based proposals, Texas Tech had been among the schools that could be directly affected. Temple had called for the creation of a West Texas university system with Tech as the flagship school. In a phone interview Thursday with Ed Roach, president of West Texas State University, which would have been incorporated into the system, Roach said he had had time only to briefly review his material but has no disagreement over Temple's recommendation to leave WTSU as it is.

Lee Sleeper, director of News and Publications for Sul Ross State University, which also was to be affected by a West Texas system, said he is glad the "early proposals had fallen out of the report completely." He said the deluge of proposals in the summer were put together in order to present the committee with all possible options.

State Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, a member of the select committee, said meetings in Austin today and Thursday are only working sessions to further narrow the possibilities. Subcommittees met Thursday, and the regular committee meeting is scheduled for today. Rudd said he expected the vote by the committee sometime in mid-January.

Wildlife commissioners accept lake lease proposal

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Staff Writer

Texas Parks and Wildlife commissioners voted Nov. 6 to accept a proposed 49-year lease with the city of Lubbock for development of the Lubbock Lake Landmark site.

The final lease should be approved at the March meeting of Texas Parks and Wildlife commissioners, said Lee Osborn, director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

The site, which contains evidence that humans have occupied the area for more than 11,000 years, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1971. In 1977, the site was designated as a national historic landmark and in 1981 it was designated as a state archaeological site. Lubbock Lake Landmark is located north of Fourth Street on Indiana Avenue.

Provisions of the proposal include a 49-year lease for the 300-acre site with an option to renew for another 49 years, Osborn said. The commission will pay the city of Lubbock $1 a year for the lease and will be responsible for developing and maintaining the

Reagan verifies deals with Iran

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Thursday confirmed that he has been involved in 18 months of secret diplomacy with Iran and authorized the transfer of "small amounts" of weapons to that country. But he insisted he was not trying to ransom American hostages in Lebanon or tilt toward Iran in its war with Iraq.

After telling reporters he was being forced to speak out by widespread misinformation about his dealings with Iran, Reagan acknowledged that he sent his former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, on a secret, four-day mission to Iran last spring "to raise the diplomatic level of contacts" with Iranian officials.

"Since then," Reagan said in his hastily arranged national broadcast address, "the dialogue has continued, and step-by-step progress continues to be made."

"Due to the publicity of the past week, the entire initiative is very much at risk today," the president told the nation in an address prepared for broadcast from the Oval Office.

Reagan said it was "utterly false" that the weapons shipments to Iran, at a time when the United States had imposed an embargo on such deliveries, were intended to ransom the Americans held hostage in Lebanon. Nor, he said, had the United States "undercut its allies and secretly violated American policy against trafficking with terrorists."

"The United States has not made concessions to those who hold our people captive in Lebanon — and we will not," Reagan insisted.

In authorizing the transfer of what he called "small amounts of defensive weapons and spare parts for defensive systems to Iran," Reagan said he was trying "to convince Tehran that our negotiators were acting with my authority."

And he said he wanted "to send a signal that the United States was prepared to replace the animosity between us with a new relationship."

The president went on to say that "the most significant step which Iran could take ... would be to use its influence in Lebanon to secure the release of all hostages held there."

"Some progress has already been made," Reagan said. "Since U.S.

government contact began with Iran, there has been no evidence of Iranian government complicity in acts of terrorism against the United States. Hostages have come home, and we welcome the efforts that the government of Iran has taken in the past and is currently undertaking."

In advance of Reagan's speech, congressional Democrats continued to criticize the administration's dealings with Tehran, calling for investigative hearings into the secret contacts.

They said an arms-for-hostages swap would represent a precedent that must be reversed.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Reagan should ask for the resignation of Vice Adm. John Poindexter, his national security adviser.

Poindexter told reporters at the White House, "I have no plans to resign."

Earlier in the day, the State Department said that the United States and Iran are nearing agreement on the return of about $500 million in Iranian funds held by the Federal Reserve Bank since 1981.

At the same time, they rejected the notion — suggested by Iran's ambassador to the United Nations — that there might be a connection between settlement of the funds issue and Iranian help to free American hostages held in Lebanon.

Reagan said there were four reasons for the secret diplomacy: renewal of a relationship with Iran, which has conducted an ardently anti-American policy since the overthrow of the U.S.-backed Shah of Iran in January 1979; bringing "an honorable end" to the 6-year-old Iran-Iraqi war; elimination of state-sponsored terrorism and subversion, and "to effect the safe return of all hostages."

The United States, he said, sought to gain "some degree of access and influence within Iran — as well as Iraq."

"At the same time we undertook this initiative, we made clear that Iran must oppose all forms of international terrorism as a condition of progress in our relationship," Reagan said. "The most significant step which Iran could take, we indicated, would be to use its influence in Lebanon to secure the release of all hostages held there."

New regulations hinder Tech's aid efforts

By TREY BARKER
News Staff Writer

The Higher Education Reauthorization Act, Congress' five-year plan to allocate funds for higher education which was signed by President Reagan Oct. 17, is considered by proponents to be an answer to problems of higher learning.

Opponents to the act see it as an obstacle course for those dependent on federal aid.

The legislative bill enacted every five years authorizes up to $10.2 billion for Pell grants, low interest loans and other secondary education programs. Authorized funds traditionally are not fully allocated, and funding in fiscal year 1980 was the largest amount allotted to higher learning institutions during the Reagan administration.

"They've just about done it to us again," said Ronny Barnes, director of student financial aid at Texas Tech.

Barnes' comments refer to the new regulations under which the Office of Financial Aid must work. Under the new law, everyone applying for any type of aid must apply for every type of aid. That requirement translates into almost 250,000 pieces of paper, applications, forms and letters for the office to work with.

What the new forms mean for students is fewer grants in terms of real dollars and the necessary repayment of most of what aid is received.

While Barnes said he believes the new rules are better in the long run, he does admit that getting over the hump created by the clashing of two sets of rules which are simultaneously in effect will take time. "Since Gramm-Rudman, it's become a three-ring circus," he said.

The budget cuts, along with the new rules and the application of the old rules in certain cases, have turned the office into a shambles, he said.

"Sometimes we can use the new rules and get the students less money, and sometimes we can use the old rules and get the students more money," Barnes said.

It is hard to move quickly when trying to figure out which set of rules a student's application falls under, he said.

According to a College Press Service report, most college lobbyists are happy with the outcome. The consensus of the lobbyists had been a fear of massive funding cuts.

"I can say student financial aid survived the reauthorization process," said Bob Evans, aid director for Penn State University.

Ken Melley, director of government relations for the National Education Association, said in The Higher Education Advocate that the bill is "responsible legislation that ad-resses the needs of students dependent on federal aid programs to finance their college education."

The new rules also call for students to maintain at least a cumulative 2.0 GPA by the end of their sophomore year.

In the past, the good standing rule was in effect, which said acceptable progress toward a degree qualified a student for aid eligibility.

"I do not suspect a substantial number of students will be knocked out of school as a result," Evans said. "While it appears to be a new thing, all it really is is an extra bite. Students have always had to meet certain grade requirements."

Barnes said that because of the shortage of workers, the abundance of work and the strain of working under stiff regulations, many of which haven't been passed yet, Tech aid counselors are operating under a policy of unyielding flexibility.

Doctor likens Chernobyl to nuclear war

By JAY MILLER
News Staff Writer

The effects of exposure to nuclear radiation are not clearly understood, but by examining the condition of nuclear accident victims one can better understand what effects nuclear war could have on human life, Dr. Wes Wallace said in a Thursday night presentation at Texas Tech.

Wallace's presentation in 150 Holden Hall focused on the effects of nuclear radiation on the survivors of April's nuclear reactor meltdown at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union. About 75 people listened and watched as Wallace showed slides and related his observations of the survivors. The lecture was sponsored by the South Plains Alternative Resource Center and West Texans for Peace.

Wallace experienced firsthand the medical effects of a nuclear disaster when he and six other physicians visited the Soviet Union in June. In addition to visiting with Chernobyl victims, the group addressed Soviet medical institutes on medical and peace issues.

Wallace began his presentation by showing a slide of the destruction to the nuclear reactor at Chernobyl. He said the meltdown resulted in the release of between 2 to 10 percent of the reactor's 180-ton fuel core. The fire that immediately followed the blast sent radioactive steam spewing high into the air. After the April 26 explosion, radiation was detected throughout the Soviet Union and eastern Europe.

Wallace said 100,000 people in a 30-kilometer radius of the reactor were evacuated with more than 18,000 being admitted to Soviet hospitals. The hospital which he and the other physicians visited in Moscow had admitted 299 patients exposed to radiation from the Chernobyl blast.

Wallace said many of the survivors experienced severe burns, extreme nausea and vomiting and complete breakdown of their immunity systems. Most of those exposed to the Chernobyl blast suffered complete hair loss as well as other symptoms of radiation exposure.

Wallace said 2,000 to 3,000 people will die in the next two years as a result of cancers developed through exposure to the radiation.

Candy Mathers/The University Daily

Wes Wallace

He said a nuclear war would produce the same effects, but on a much larger scale. Superfires produced by the blast would cause everything within a 12-mile radius to instantly combust. Fallout radiation would produce yet more deaths while those who survived would battle starvation due to massive loss of crops and other food sources. Wallace said cancers and plagues would also run rampant in the post-nuclear world.

"Nuclear war is not survivable," Wallace said. "However, people can make a difference. We can make the government change the direction it is headed by continuing the current arms race."

"It is like we're sitting on a bus traveling downhill headed for a cliff. People can make a difference."

Wallace graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from Tech in 1969 before going on to receive a certificate of theological studies in 1970 from the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif.

Since 1970, Wallace has been actively involved in Physicians for Social Responsibility (PSR), a nationwide group of more than 30,000 physicians working to educate the American public about the medical risks of nuclear war.

Get a grip ...

University Daily

Gov. Mark White's Tuesday lifting of the hiring freeze will hamper the Legislature's efforts to grapple with the state's additional projected budget deficit of $3.5 billion to $5 billion during the next biennium.

The governor's executive order to stop filling vacancies in state agencies was issued last spring in hopes of reducing the budget to meet a projected $2.8 billion deficit by December due to the slumping oil business.

The Associated Press quoted Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, as saying the freeze was lifted because it had become cumbersome.

Since White is on his way out the door after losing to Republican Gov.-elect Bill Clements, I suppose he does not want to mess with such petty things as paperwork, even though the state still is on the brink of a red budget.

The heavy paperwork was due to White allowing agencies to apply for exemptions from the freeze to hire critically needed employees. Although the freeze should not have applied to people directly related to teaching, such as college professors and school teachers (such exemption should not apply to support staffs of educational institutions), the freeze generally was a good idea in helping the state government cut back to meet the projected deficit.

Although White is like a lame duck governor, he should have maintained his dedication to the governor's office and to Texas by not rescinding an executive order which could help the state weather the stormy economic times.

The blood is bad between White and Clements, but White should not have let any dislike of his successor affect his decisions in running the state as efficiently as possible.

According to The AP, Arnold said White would have "lifted the hiring freeze even if he had been re-elected last week." The timing of White's announcement indicates otherwise. If the legislators did such a good job of balancing the budget at the end of the second special session in early October, White should have made his announcement shortly thereafter.

Again, Texas is in the center of a political mudslinging match, and Texans again will come out the losers in the long run.

Voters think women lack ability

Cindy Pandolfo
News
Staff Writer

Results of last week's election reaffirm the fact that West Texans cling tenaciously to their antiquated beliefs that women don't belong in politics.

Democrat Mary Nell Mathis suffered the first blow from conservative West Texans in the May primary when voters voiced strong support for Gerald McCathern. As an accountant and businesswoman, Mathis was as qualified for the congressional seat (if not more so) than McCathern, businessman and farmer.

Wanda Wray, Democratic nominee for Lubbock County criminal district attorney, lost her battle to Republican Travis Ware in the general election. Wray's experience far outweighed her opponent's.

Texas will deny that sex and personality influence voting patterns in the Lone Star State, but election results show otherwise.

Republicans all over Texas claimed victory — that is, all Republican candidates except females.

Yvonne Faulks, candidate for one of the county court-at-law places, is a Republican, yet the strong voter support for Republicans, which yielded many surprises throughout the state, didn't help Faulks.

Democrat Ann Richards held on to her position as state treasurer. Her victory probably could be attributed to the fact that she ran for a position which is traditionally stereotyped as a woman's job.

The Libertarian party also ran many female candidates unsuccessfully. But then, all independent parties usually are unsuccessful in Texas.

Women running on the Democratic or Republican tickets have little hope of winning an election. Women running as Libertarians or other third party candidates have no chance for victory. Texans are as opposed to independent parties as they are to women.

After growing up in Texas, I guess I shouldn't be surprised that women still are thought of with nostalgia. One of these days, Texans will wake up and discover that the good ol' days are gone. Women don't need, nor do they want, to be protected by the "good ol' boys" any longer.

The myths that women are the weaker sex and not as capable as men are just that — myths.

Women are not the weaker sex. There are thousands of examples in everyday life that disprove that theory. Ask any single mother who puts in 16 hours a day between a job and her home if she is the weaker sex. Ask a single mother if she is capable and efficient. Women have been balancing family budgets with incomes that are below the level of poverty for years, and they will tell you that you don't create a billion dollar deficit. You just do without.

American women who helped to pioneer this country were expected to work in the fields right along with their husbands. At sunset the women then went home to perform laborious cooking and cleaning tasks.

Women are intelligent. They are capable.

In other countries women have been recognized for the potential they possess. Indira Gandhi and Corazon Aquino both have proved women can govern with intelligence and success.

Barbara Jordan and Sissy Farenthold served the state of Texas as successful legislators. The door they pried open seems to have been slammed shut again with the results of last week's elections. The pendulum is swinging to the left again, which means past gains made by women may be lost.

I won't give up the battle, though. Maybe, just maybe, Texans will open their minds and discover that women are even better at running this country than men. After all, women couldn't mess it up any worse than men have.

Go Red Raiders

To the editor:
I would like to congratulate the Red Raiders for the winning season thus far.

While watching the World Series, I saw a fan at Shea Stadium hold up a sign which stated "MAKE THE MAGIC WORK." Needless to say, the Mets made the magic work.

There are only two games left for the Raiders this season. Raiders, MAKE THE MAGIC WORK.

Intramural coverage

To the editor:
This is to report a few details about the Intramural Flag-Football Residence Hall Division Championship Game. Recreational Sports failed to mention the team that the Intimidators beat and the two residence halls that were represented in the match-up. You Recreational Sports reporter-types who gathered the info on Sunday's games may as well have saved the sentence-and-a-half for more "Greek" action.

The Gaston Hall "Gamblers" made their first appearance in Jones Stadium and were opposed by the defending residence hall champs, the Carpenter Intimidators. The Intimidators won their second title in a 21-13 victory. The Gamblers were plagued with penalties but were proud to be the first team in Gaston's five-year history to advance to the Championship Game.

We didn't expect to have detailed highlights, but we anticipated to at least see our name in the paper. This might not seem like a major accomplishment, but Gaston is the smallest dorm on campus with less than 100 residents. The success of our football team is very important to us, and we wanted a little recognition.

I am sure that I can speak for the Carpenter team and every other residence hall sports group that we expect the same coverage of our intramural activity as any other group gets.

Smoking dangers

To the editor:
We are writing because we feel something must be done to end the tragic and continuing death toll from cigarettes and to protect the right of the nonsmoker to breathe air unpolluted by dangerous tobacco smoke.

Not many people realize how deadly cigarette smoke is. Yet this year alone it will kill more than 346,000 Americans — almost seven times as many as died in all the years of fighting in Vietnam — and will disable millions more.

Three hundred and forty-six thousand is so large a number it becomes meaningless, unless, you share the suffering and tears of a fellow human being who is needlessly dying. Imagine how the doctor must feel at the bedside of a friend who is helplessly suffocating in an oxygen tent because his lungs are rotted away. Meanwhile it's business as usual for the highly profitable tobacco companies who will spend more today, Nov. 14, 1986, to protect their profits than the U.S. government will spend all year to educate its citizens about the harms of tobacco smoke.

One doesn't have to be a doctor to know breathing tobacco smoke is harmful. If we want to live, we must have pure air to breathe.

As members of the (still now) silent nonsmoking majority at Tech (and nationwide), we are being forced to breathe air saturated with 60 proven or suspect carcinogens every time we enter the library, eat in the UC, or just go to classes.

This smoky air is 95 percent sidestream smoke that is not filtered or inhaled by the smoker. This sidestream smoke has twice the toxic material, or more, of the inhaled or mainstream smoke. A few of the poisons in all cigarette smoke are carbon monoxide, nitrogen dioxide, hydrogen cyanide, hydrocyanic acid, hydrogen sulfide, aldehydes, polonium, and many others.

We appreciate the 500 no smoking signs that were recently ordered by the UC Snack Bar student managers. When the signs arrive we hope the University Center will use them to replace those little silver ash trays. The no smoking signs are a gift from the American Cancer Society.

If you have sucked enough bad air and are ready to make some big changes concerning "the single largest preventable health problem in the USA," then let your Student Association, Dean of Students and City Council know.

We are committed to having a campus smoking policy in effect soon to make Texas Tech a better place not only for the students, but also for the faculty and staff.

For more information on smokers' pollution and what you can do contact ASH, Action on Smoking and Health, the legal arm of the nonsmoking community, in Washington, D.C. ASH is a nonprofit group that provided much of the data used in this letter.

The reality of hell

To the editor:
I think something should be said about David Sprawl's statement concerning hell. He wrote, "The Bible clearly states that hell is real..." This can only be true if he had written, "The English translation of the Bible clearly states..." Hell is a concept evolving from many heathen religions and really does not exist per se.

There are five words in the Hebrew and Greek texts which are all translated as hell in the English text: gehinnom, gehenna, sheol, hades, and tartarus. These words all represent different concepts, each depending upon the cultures which introduced them. Tartarus is a place where the angels which fell with Satan are imprisoned. (2 Pet. 2:4). Mythologically, it is that place where a supernatural being is bound. Sheol is the grave, pit, or otherwise underworld. It is where the dead go and where the worm (maggot?) is. The Septuagint used the word "hades" (named after Pluto's system) for sheol, I suppose for lack of a better Greek term. (There was no equivalent idea of sheol in Greek thought.) The two concepts of sheol and hades are not equivalent, however. Then there is gehinnom (gehenna in Greek), which comes from Geiben Hinnom, meaning Valley of the Son of Hinnom. Long ago, in this valley, children were burned in sacrifice to the pagan god Moloch. I suppose if there were words which could be translated "hell" it would be these, except that even they do not generate the Christian concept of hell.

God promised never again to destroy the earth with water. He will do it with fire. According to the New Testament, the unsaved (and hades) will be thrown into the lake of fire, causing what the writer calls "a second death." (Rev 20:14). According to the Talmud, the School of Shammai held that the souls of the wicked were cast down into the dark caverns of gehinnom to be tormented and finally consumed in the fiery pit. The Talmud notes that some say gehinnom lies above the earth while others believe it lies behind the Mountains of Darkness (in the far west). The flames of God's gehinnom will be eternal. The New Testament says that only Satan will undergo eternal punishment, I suppose because he is immortal. (Rev. 20:10 — I am assuming that the wild beast and false prophet are Satan in different forms — Rev. 12:9, 13:2-6, 11-15.)

You can see how the Christian viewpoint of hell can evolve when these five words are all translated using the one word "hell." Prison and binding concepts come from tartarus. Worms eating and the underground come from sheol. Fire and eternal implications come from gehinnom. And punishment comes from sentence construction. (The writers use the word punishment to describe the result of the wicked going into gehinnom, a punishment.)

Hell therefore is a concept derived by interpretation, and not because it is clearly stated in the Bible. Those choosing to believe that God has everlasting tortures awaiting the wicked have mere opinion. Those choosing to believe that God is more merciful to the humans He created are also justified.

Filipino party president, driver murdered

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — One of President Corazon Aquino's leading leftist supporters was found brutally murdered Thursday, the day she returned from abroad to a capital swept by rumors of coup plots against her.

Police found the mutilated body of Rolando Olalia, president of the Partido ng Bayan (People's Party) and the militant May 1st Movement labor alliance, in a ditch on edge of the capital hours after his family reported him missing. The body of his driver was found two miles away.

Antonio Cuenco, political affairs minister, said the killing "further aggravates" the crisis in Aquino's government, which has been split by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile's criticism of her policies.

During her four-day visit to Japan seeking aid for the crippled economy, Manila was rife with rumors that disaffected military officers linked to Enrile would strike against leftists to provoke a violent response as a pretext to take over the government.

Gen. Fidel Ramos, the armed forces commander, declared the military's loyalty to Aquino. Ramos and Enrile, who also was defense minister under Ferdinand Marcos, led the military-civilian uprising that forced Marcos into exile last February and brought Aquino to power.

Enrile and Ramos said they knew nothing of Olalia's disappearance. A maid who answered the telephone at the defense minister's home after the bodies were found said he was asleep and she refused to wake him.

Aquino said at Manila International Airport that she had gone abroad "with some hesitation" because of the "dark rumors" in Manila.

Daphne Ceniza, a spokeswoman for the People's Party, said it would organize a march today to Camp Aguinaldo, headquarters of the Defense Ministry and armed forces, and hold a rally there to protest the killing and demand Enrile's resignation.

Dominador Mamangun, secretary of the National Federation of Labor Unions, said his group would not join the protest for fear of provoking a military crackdown.

His group claims to have 100,000 members and is the largest in the May 1st Movement, which in turn is the nation's largest labor organization.

Anonymous sources say U.S. helps Contra rebels

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The State Department paid for flights this year that penetrated Nicaraguan air space to drop supplies to U.S.-backed Contra rebels, according to government sources.

The sources, insisting on anonymity, said the previously undisclosed flights were made by Vortex Air International, a Miami-based firm that has no planes registered to it in the United States and was established only one year ago.

"We had the responsibility to deliver the supplies to the resistance," Duemling said. "I will not discuss any of the details of the delivery of supplies."

The weapons supply operation came to light Oct. 5 when one of its American-made planes was shot down over southern Nicaragua, killing two Americans, one Nicaraguan and leaving Eugene Hasenfus of Marinette, Wis., the captive of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Hasenfus said the arms supply operation was run by two Cuban-Americans who he believed worked for the CIA. The CIA and the Reagan administration have denied any connection with the Oct. 5 flight.

Repeated calls also were made from the safehouse to AIRMACH, Inc., a Vienna, Va., firm run by former Air Force Lt. Col. Richard B. Gadd. The State Department hired AIRMACH to be a principal air transport company for non-lethal supplies to the rebels.

Classified State Department records obtained by The Associated Press, covering the early phase of the non-lethal aid program, show AIRMACH received a contract in January worth $182,000 for "air charter services."

According to the documents, Vortex received two contracts totaling $87,070 for air delivery and related services. One item on a Feb. 19 contract set aside $7,481 for "contingency," an item not otherwise explained.

Soviet family goes home; children wish to return

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A family of immigrants who returned home this week after 10 years in America because they felt like "eternal immigrants" wants to come back because the teenage boys are unhappy in the Soviet Union, the mother said Thursday.

Faina Gonta said the U.S. Embassy told her that she and her family could leave Saturday on a British Airways flight to London, but they had not yet obtained tickets or been given exit visas.

Gonta said she had nothing against the Soviet Union. Neither the decision to return to the Soviet Union nor the desire to leave again was politically motivated, she said.

"Everything is fine except the children," she said in a telephone interview. "They grew up in the U.S.A. and they want to continue their education in America."

The Gontas, who lived in Jersey City, N.J., arrived here Monday.

Government permission is necessary for the family to leave. Gonta said the request had been relayed to the Obshchestvo Rodina (Motherland Society), which sponsored their return to the Soviet Union.

"They think we're going back to my native city in the Ukraine, but we are going back to the United States and that is final," she said.

A Soviet official visited them at their hotel Thursday, Gonta said, but she would not identify the official or describe the meeting.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner confirmed that the Gontas had been in touch with the mission seeking to return to the United States. His office said later there would be no further comment because of rules about individual privacy.

Gonta and her husband David emigrated 10 years ago with their two children and her mother. They returned Monday and said they had felt like "eternal immigrants."

The official press trumpeted their arrival as part its publicity campaign about emigrants who are unhappy in the United States.

On Tuesday, the newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya quoted Gonta as saying at the airport that her sons Alexander, 19, and Igor, 14, were "beaten and mocked in school."

It also quoted her as saying: "Here are our American passports. We don't need them any more. The nightmare which lasted 10 long years is at last behind us."

Booby trap backfire doesn't deter owner

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man who could lose his leg after his own booby trap blasted him says he'll re-install the trap when he returns from the hospital to deter thieves from breaking into his home.

"Normally I just turn on the light and unhook the booby trap," Julius Jackson says. "I just forgot about it."

That was last week, when the 48-year-old mechanic who had wired his home with guns to stop recurring break-ins became a victim of his own trap.

Now Jackson is hospitalized and has a 50-50 chance of losing his leg, which took the shotgun blast square in the knee. Doctors say they'll have to take a bone implant from his hip to replace part of the knee, then do vein and artery reconstruction if infection can be avoided.

Jackson said he started with one gun wired to hit anyone who walked in the front door of his home. But somebody came through the back door and stole the trap.

Customs agents wearing illegal boots

EL PASO (AP) — Some U.S. Customs Service agents are strutting around in fancy Mexican-made boots that were confiscated at the border because they're made from the skins of endangered species.

Don Sherman, director for the U.S. Customs El Paso district, said issuing seized property to law enforcement officers isn't unusual and that such items can be helpful in investigations. It also helps undercover agents blend in, he said.

But some rank-and-file inspectors are angry that other agents are allowed to use the boots, made from such exotic and endangered animals as sea turtle and crocodile.

"While they're investigating other employees, they themselves are taking license," Thornton said of internal affairs agents, who investigate corruption among Customs employees.

Texas subject to unusual cold weather

The cold front that spattered parts of Texas with freezing rain, sleet and snow Thursday moved into the Gulf of Mexico, leaving behind plenty of cold air that should keep temperatures well below normal, the National Weather Service said.

In Amarillo, where the mercury dipped early Thursday to 11 degrees, skies cleared and the ice melted, although the cold lingered. The chance of sleet or snow still remained.

This is a genuinely cold, bitterly cold arctic air mass and very early for this time of year, considering the average date of the first freeze is Nov. 21, according to the National Weather Service.

Perot says president backs POW effort

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire Ross Perot says President Reagan is behind his latest effort to locate and return U.S. servicemen who may be held against their will in Southeast Asia.

"The president and the vice president asked me to dig into this issue — go all the way to the bottom of it and figure out what the situation was — then come see them and give them my recommendations," Perot said in Thursday's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Perot declined to say whether he might take action on his own to free any remaining POWs or if he was limited to proposing a course of action to the White House.

Tech education students to study Great Britain's school system

By HOLLY HATCH
News Staff Writer

Texas Tech education students can teach for five weeks in Great Britain through a program developed by College of Education Dean Richard Ishler.

Ishler said the program, which is in its third year, is a multi-cultural experience and allows student teachers to experience first-hand the British education system.

As many as 16 students can go on the trip during the last five or six weeks of the spring semester each year, Ishler said.

Students stay in the homes of teachers or other citizens while they teach in community schools, he said. Most students teach on the elementary level, although some work in secondary schools.

Students who wish to attend must have enough credit hours to student teach. They receive six hours of student teaching credit for the five-week stay, he said. Applications are available through Thanksgiving in the student teaching office.

Ishler said the Tech student teaching program in England is run in conjunction with Bemidji University of Minnesota.

"Each of the universities sends a supervisor for a part of the five weeks the students are there," he said.

Supervisors generally oversee the program and make sure there are no problems with the student teachers, he said.

"We try to send a different faculty member every year to serve as our supervisor," he said. "It allows faculty to experience the same kinds of things the students do."

An interest in British education led Ishler to Great Britain during a sabbatical leave from the University of Toledo in 1974. He said that after his stay in the United Kingdom, he became involved with a group of teachers and students from seven other universities who make a trip to Europe each summer to study education overseas.

Ishler said the group led him to begin the Tech student teaching trip to Great Britain. The multiple-university group will sponsor another trip this summer which will include stops in Paris, Switzerland and Italy as well as an optional stay in Athens and a cruise of the Greek Isles.

Ishler said the trip will include lectures on European education from instructors in the areas visited.

"Open education really began in England," he said. "Although only a few schools actually use the pure concept, most still have a version of open education."

Open education involves the use of learning interest centers where children work through problems and exercises while a teacher circulates among them.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Parking lots must be cleared for game

Due to the Texas Tech home football game against SMU Saturday, commuters who park in the Band Lot, C-1 Auditorium-Coliseum lot, and C-2 lot east of Jones Stadium will have to move their vehicles.

All vehicles still parked in these designated spaces at 8 a.m. Saturday will be towed away.

Home economics to host fashion show

The Hi Tech Fashion Group of the College of Home Economics will sponsor a fashion exhibit from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. today in the El Centro lounge of the home economics building.

The exhibit will be presented in celebration of Family Weekend and will include flat patterns and fashion illustrations as well as student-made garments.

Computers simplify BA registration

By ANN McBRYDE
News Staff Writer

After almost two years in the making, a student audit system will be ready for use at the first of the year in the Texas Tech College of Business Administration.

The audit system will allow students to receive information about registration without having to see a counselor, said Louise Luchsinger, director of undergraduate programs. She said the benefit of the system is that it will help expedite students through the advising process who do not want or need to see a counselor.

"Most students are well aware of the courses they have already completed," Luchsinger said. "What most want to know is what they are lacking. Our system is able to tell them just that.

"We are very pleased with the system and hope to have it available for student use by the first of the year."

An individual audit is activated by entering a student's identification number into the system and giving a particular command which calls up a type of course outline on the screen. The system lists mandatory courses needed in business administration lower division, core and major levels.

The audit system is able to distinguish what courses the student is currently registered in, the courses that they have completed and the grade they received. Luchsinger said the most important capability of the system is that it can determine what courses a student is lacking, hours that are being repeated and hours that have transferred.

"Another positive characteristic of the system is that it is able to answer 'what if' questions," she said. "For example, if a student should want to know how many hours and what courses they would be lacking if he switched majors, we could figure it out in a matter of minutes."

A hard copy of an audit provides the course information as well as pass/fail hours taken, business administration and accumulative grade point averages, and business administration and total Tech hours, including transfers and CLEP hours.

Cocaine abuse increases heart attack risk

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

As cocaine increases in popularity with the general public, a proportional rise in life-threatening heart damage accompanies it, according to the president of the American Heart Association in Texas.

Dr. Addison Taylor, president of the Texas affiliate of the association, said the drug can cause damage to the heart which may result in death. Death can occur from even a single dose of cocaine, he added.

"Cocaine can cause irregular heart beats," Taylor said. "These irregularities can lead to cardiac arrest and sudden death."

Taylor, an associate professor of medicine in the hypertension and clinical pharmacology department of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said cocaine is dangerous because its use causes heart attacks in apparently healthy people.

Use of the drug affects nervous system connections to the heart, he said. Cocaine blocks a chemical neurotransmitter called norepinephrine which controls heart muscle contraction, Taylor said, causing blood vessels to constrict and irregularities in heart beat to occur.

Taylor said symptoms of this are a rapid increase in blood pressure and inefficiency in the operation of the heart. He added that people who have heart disease or a history of the disorder in their family are in an increased risk group.

Taylor said obtaining information about a patient's possible cocaine use is important in treating heart problems caused by the drug.

"You become suspicious as a physician when a 25-year-old with no history of heart trouble comes in with symptoms indicating he is having a heart attack," he said.

Many cardiac related deaths recently have been attributed to cocaine, according to Christina Walsh, director of public affairs for the Texas branch of the Heart Association. She said the highly publicized death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias is a prime example of a cocaine-related heart attack death.

Cocaine hydrochloride, the drug's medical name, is an alkaloid obtained from leaves of a South American shrub. It is used medically as a topical anesthetic applied to mucous membranes.

The drug is classified as abused any time it is used for a non-medical purpose.

Aside from cardiac effects of cocaine, use of the drug can result in a condition known as cocaine hydrochloride poisoning, which is characterized by symptoms such as restlessness, hallucinations, profound depression, nausea, irregularities in pulse, fever, convulsions and death from respiratory arrest.

Taylor said it is difficult to combat the growing use of cocaine.

"Awareness is the real issue," he said. "I was very pleased to see that, during the World Series, several sports figures talked about the negative effects of cocaine."

He said the real goal of the Heart Association in battling cocaine-related heart problems is getting the message across that one dose of the drug can kill.

Taylor said cocaine is dangerous because of its flexibility. He said it can be taken intravenously, smoked or inhaled through the nose, a process known as "snorting."

He said cocaine's potency makes it hazardous as well. "The risk of death increases as the dosage increases," he said.

The Heart Association has voiced concerns over the increased use of cocaine by younger people and the possible cardiac dangers it presents. A recent nationwide survey of college students showed that more than half of those responding said it is easy to get, and a third do not see any risk in using it.

Horn professor enjoys graduate school work

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is one of a continuing series of stories featuring Texas Tech's Horn professors. The nationally recognized title has been given to 34 Tech faculty members, 18 of whom currently are in residence. Today's story looks at range and wildlife management professor Eric Bolen. It is compiled from an information sheet provided by Bolen.

Eric Bolen

Eric Bolen, Texas Tech Horn professor of range and wildlife management, said he finds his job of directing the master's program in interdisciplinary studies at the graduate school one of the joys of his job.

Bolen credits the graduate students whose work and publication have brought play-waterfowl relationships to the attention of wildlife scientists in a large part of the world.

"Right now, two of my students are finishing companion studies that will help measure the ways waterfowl diseases spread from lake to lake, and perhaps from region to region," he said.

"My focus has been on the large population of waterfowl using the playa lakes as winter habitat," Bolen said. "In fact, more than one million ducks overwinter on the southern high plains of Texas, and playas thus are the second-most important area for wintering waterfowl in the Central Flyway."

Bolen is working on his second edition of a textbook co-authored with a colleague. The first edition of Wildlife Ecology and Management has won awards and has been adopted by more than 50 universities for study, he said.

Bolen is working on his second edition of a textbook co-authored with a colleague. The first edition of Wildlife Ecology and Management has won awards and has been adopted by more than 50 universities for study, he said. Bolen said recognition is the highlight of his career at Texas Tech. He said he has experienced at least one humorous event as a result of the distinction. He said he recently identified himself with his faculty card to cash a check at the bursar's office.

"When the teller saw 'Horn Professor' after my name, she said, 'Oh, you're in the music department,'" he said. "Anyone aware of my distinct lack of musical talent would have laughed out loud, as I did."

Bolen said he often attends other classes to broaden and expand his understanding of his own field of wildlife ecology.

"Attending someone else's class for a semester is a 'poor man's sabbatical' as well as a means of improving my own teaching," he said.

Tech receives grant to encourage use of seat belts

By JILL JOHNSON
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech health education department received a grant of about $28,000 from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the 1986-87 fiscal year to educate the public on seat belt safety.

John Morehead, project coordinator, said that after he applied for the grant, the Highway Department gave $28,044 to Tech for seat belt education to increase usage for safety precautions.

Morehead said the funds are being used on various projects in Lubbock and the nine surrounding counties. He said education increases seat belt usage in the wake of the recently

The groups took a survey and found a 63 percent usage rate in Lubbock. Surveys in the counties of Lamb, Hale, Floyd, Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, Terry, Lynn and Garza showed even lower percentages, Morehead said.

During Crime Prevention Week a display of seat belt education was set up in the University Center and in the Lubbock Mall of America.

Statistics indicate there are 20 to 25 accidents per day in Lubbock. A Holidays for Safety program planned for Nov. 27 through Jan. 1 will be geared for the holiday season to decrease accidents. Morehead said the goals of the program are to have more people use seat belts, reduce the number of people driving while intoxicated, increase defensive driving and to have an accident free day.

He said a person hits the windshield of the car when involved in an accident with the force of his or her weight times the speed being driven. He said using seat belts reduces the severity of injuries by 70 percent and fatalities by 50 percent.

"Because of our program, a man who was involved in a bad accident said he lived because of it," Morehead said. "We hear that a lot."

Morehead said he will speak to classes and organizations about topics such as the seat belt law, child restraints or driving in general.

"There is a need for a continued program here in the Lubbock area," Morehead said.

'A Novel Approach' wins as best seller for ATP

Angry exchange

Nina (played by Elizabeth Stricklin) defends Jack (Ray Scott Crawford) from an angry Carolyn (Camille Kimbro) in a scene from the Actor's Trading Post production of "A Novel Approach." The play will run through Saturday and again Nov. 20-22. Curtain is at 8:15 p.m.

Rodney Merkhani/The University Daily

By KRISTI FROELICH
Lifestyles Editor

A writer writing about writers may not seem like too appealing an idea for a comedy, but Brian Robertson's "A Novel Approach" is a best seller.

The play, making its world premiere appearance on the stage at the Actor's Trading Post, is a creatively written piece of brilliance. The comedy is modern, clever, witty and well-written with an appealing plot about the relationship of two "partner novelists" who take a trip to the Taberson Retreat for Artists to work on a new novel.

The story focuses on the relationship of the two men, Jack (played with distinct perfection by Ray Scott Crawford) and Martin (equally well-played by Brent Peterson) and their struggle with their success as commercial novelists versus their desire to be "great writers."

Crawford and Peterson make a perfect stage team. They are terrific working together, and their appeal is similar to that of Jack Klugman/Tony Randall or Walter Mathau/Jack Lemmon in "The Odd Couple." It is one of the most interesting relationships between two men in a long time, and it should be welcomed with open arms and a belly full of laughs.

One of the best scenes in the play is between Peterson and Crawford as they are arguing about Martin's jealousy of Jack's successful solo career. Robertson writes the scene as if it were two lovers arguing about one having an affair and it is well done. The two actors play off of one another with precision.

Also providing an enjoyable performance is favorite community theater standby G.W. Frazier as the crusty old storyteller/handyman, Mr. Lomax. His mannerisms, facial expressions and stories are so hilarious, he kept the audience in stitches constantly Thursday night. He should win in the "best performance with a cattle skull" category at the next awards dinner.

"A Novel Approach" also stars Elizabeth Stricklin as Nina, the poet in love with Jack, Camille Kimbro as Carolyn, the morbid poet turned beautiful publisher's daughter, and Rick Wells as the mysterious wild man/publisher.

Stricklin is effective as Nina, but she had a problem with constantly tripping over her lines, which became quite annoying at times. Kimbro's bizarre death-obsessed poet character was a bit tense and nervous on stage but still rather funny. Wells was interesting but seemed to need to loosen up just a bit.

But as a whole, enough can't be said about the production. Robertson has provided the talented troupe with first-rate material that would be hard to destroy. David Graham's direction is appropriate in that he lets the material speak for itself and uses his actors as the proper sources from which to get a laugh.

The play truly has "A Novel Approach" to comedy, and it's one that definitely works. You'll hate yourself forever if you pass up the chance to see this production. It's well worth the time and money. It's one of the best theatrical pieces I've ever seen.

The play runs through Saturday and again Nov. 20-22. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. Tickets cost $5 and can be reserved by calling 796-2729. The Actor's Trading Post is located at 2201 Ave. H.

Tech sets sights on Mustangs, fifth straight win

By KENT BEST
Sports Editor

For the first time this decade, the Texas Tech football team is favored to beat the SMU Mustangs when the teams square off Saturday afternoon in Jones Stadium.

The Red Raiders beat SMU, 14-0, on a cold, blustery November day in 1980, but Tech was not the pre-game choice of oddsmakers that year. And despite the loss, the Mustangs went on to post their best record in 12 years at 8-4. Included in the Mustangs' revival season was a 46-45 loss to Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl, SMU's first bowl appearance during the same 12-year period.

Since then, Pony Express and all its reincarnations have made life miserable for the Raiders. SMU has beaten Tech 30-6, 34-27 (on the famous Bobby Leach touchdown), 33-7, 31-0 and 9-7 in the years since Tech's last SMU win.

Maybe the oddsmakers think it's time for a change.

Or possibly that Tech, with a record of 6-3, and 4-2 in the Southwest Conference, is considered a team on the way up, while SMU, at 5-4 and 4-2 in the SWC, seems to be headed the other direction.

Either way, both teams need a win Saturday.

Tech, enjoying its most productive season in years, is riding a four-game conference win streak dating back to a 17-7 shocker at Arkansas a month ago, and a postseason bowl invitation could hinge on the outcome of Saturday's contest.

SMU, on the other hand, has lost three straight, including a 61-29 thrashing by Notre Dame last week. Before that, the Mustangs lost close games to Texas A&M (39-35) and Texas (27-24). SMU's biggest win this season was a 27-21 victory over a Baylor team that had only a week before ruined Tech's homecoming, 45-14.

Tech Coach David McWilliams was worried this week about which SMU team would show up at Jones Stadium Saturday — the one that beat Baylor, or those other guys who couldn't keep Notre Dame's offense off the field.

SMU gave up 615 yards of total offense to the Irish last week, the most allowed by a Mustang team since 1969, and SMU is ranked fifth in the conference in total defense. The Ponies are giving up an average of 186 yards rushing and 178 yards passing per game.

Tech, meanwhile, is fifth in the conference in total offense with 174 yards on the ground and 195 yards passing a game.

SMU's main man again this season is tailback Jeff Atkins, who is the league's third-leading rusher with 820 yards and 10 touchdowns so far this year. Atkins missed much of the Notre Dame with an ankle sprain but is considered probable for Tech.

Atkins and the rest of the SMU rushing attack benefit greatly from a huge front line, especially on the favored right side. At right guard, 6-4, 270-pound Rod Mounts is a hefty running buddy for 6-5, 300-pound right tackle Dave Richards.

The Raiders will counter with 6-2, 225-pound Ricky Boysaw at left end, alongside Tech's big man, 6-5, 290-pound defensive tackle, Artis Jackson. Boysaw is quietly having a solid season at his position with 39 tackles, two for losses this season.

Offensively, the Mustangs will depend on junior quarterback Bobby Watters to distract Tech's attention to the run. Watters is the league's fourth-rated quarterback with a passing average of 196 yards a game. Watters also is among the league's leader in interceptions, however, with 13 thus far this season.

The Raiders again will be led by sophomore quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver, the SWC's fifth best quarterback with a 146-yard per game norm. Running backs James Gray (65 yards a game) and Isaac Garnett (51) are viable alternatives for an increasingly balanced Tech offense.

SMU back in hot water with NCAA

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Southern Methodist could be the first to get the "death penalty," a two-year suspension of its football program, if the most recent allegations about cash payments prove true, an NCAA official said Thursday.

The penalty is part of a 1985 sanctions package adopted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

SMU now is serving three years' probation mandated in 1985 because of illegal cash payments to players by boosters and other NCAA violations.

Linebacker David Stanley, who dropped out of SMU in December 1985, told Dallas' WFAA-TV in a report aired Wednesday that he received $750 per month in payments that continued after the NCAA sanctions. Stanley also told the station he was paid $25,000 to sign with the Southwest Conference school in 1983.

Athletic Director Bob Hitch and head coach Bobby Collins denied Stanley's allegations.

Stanley also contended during his interview with WFAA that Texas Tech offered him $50,000 to sign with its program and that University of Texas recruiting coordinator Ken Dabbs threatened his father to try to intimidate the Angleton High School star into signing with UT.

Tech athletic director T. Jones and Dabbs each denied the claims. NCAA Enforcement Director S.

Former Mustang linebacker charges SMU, Tech in pay-for-play allegation

David Berst said Thursday he was told of Stanley's charges Oct. 27, the day WFAA confronted SMU officials.

"If there is a penalty, that will be left to the discretion of the Committee on Infractions," Berst said. "The 'death penalty' can be imposed, but it is not mandatory. There also could be no action."

SMU's current probation ends Aug. 16, 1988, but all SMU sports programs must avoid major violations through August 1990 to avoid the NCAA "death penalty" punishment. The NCAA defines a major penalty as one that results in a year of probation with either TV or postseason penalties.

The last time the NCAA took drastic suspension action was in the early 1970s, when Southwest Louisiana's basketball program was halted for two years because of "repeated, substantial and broad violations," Berst said.

Stanley could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press, which was unable to find a telephone listing for his family in Angleton.

SMU President L. Donald Shields said Thursday he will call a special meeting of the university's board of governors to determine what steps to take. One current SMU football player who asked not to be identified told the SMU Daily Campus he didn't think the allegations were true.

"I don't think David Stanley is a credible person," the player told the student newspaper. "I think he's mad that he has screwed up his own life, and he's trying to bring someone else down with him."

Stanley admitted to WFAA that he is bitter about his early departure from SMU because it cost him a chance at a possible professional football career.

"I hope they get what's coming to them," he said of school officials.

Stanley also said he was hospitalized during his stay at SMU for treatment of a drug problem and that the university paid for the treatment.

Hitch conceded he knew at the time the payment for treatment violated NCAA rules, but he denied giving Stanley money for anything else.

Stanley said it was P.J. "Bootsie" Larsen, a former assistant coach who was fired in August 1985, who paid him the $25,000 and initiated the monthly payments.

Larsen told WFAA, "You're taking the word of a kid."

The former player said that after Larsen left SMU, Hitch's administrative assistant, Henry Lee Parker, continued the payments.

Stanley produced university envelopes that had been hand-addressed to his mother, who said they contained cash. Parker denied the envelope was addressed by him, saying he "had no involvement with the ... family at all."

The station hired a handwriting expert who concluded the writing on the envelopes, some of them postmarked after the NCAA sanctions were imposed, was Parker's.

At SMU, Stanley said Parker made monthly payments of $400 to him and $350 to his mother, Dawn Stanley of Angleton, until Stanley dropped out of school.

Raider women to scrimmage

The Texas Tech women's basketball team will play its second intrasquad scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday in the women's gym on campus.

"We will be trying to incorporate more of our full-court game into this scrimmage," Coach Marsha Sharp said. In a scrimmage last week, the Raiders primarily worked on their half-court game.

"We've had an additional two weeks to practice, and we will be trying to do more complex things, both defensively and offensively," Sharp said.

Tech opens the season Nov. 28 against San Diego State in the Oregon State Big O Tournament.

The squad has been divided into two seven-player teams for the scrimmage, which will include two 20-minute halves under regular game conditions.

Playing for the Black team under assistant coach Linden Weese will be 6-6 post Julia Koncak, 5-11 forward Reena Lynch, 6-0 forward Darla Isaacks, 5-9 guard Lisa Wood, 5-9 guard Janice Davis, 5-10 forward Karen Farst and 5-7 guard LaDale McCallister.

Assistant coach Janet Howey's White team includes 6-3 post Lynn Killough, 6-3 post Stacey Siebert, 6-2 forward Debby Jones, 5-8 guard Lisa Logsdon, 5-7 guard Vicky McKenzie, 5-6 guard Charlotte Jones and 5-10 forward Karen Ratts.

The teams are almost unchanged from the first scrimmage, won by the Black 82-59; however, Logsdon, who had a game-high 24 points, has been moved to the White squad, while Siebert, who scored 10 points and pulled down six rebounds for the White, moves to the Black.

The final scrimmage for the Red Raider women will be at 4 p.m. Nov. 23 at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tech cross country teams to run in NCAA regional

The Texas Tech men's cross country team, fresh off its fifth-place finish at the Southwest Conference championships Nov. 3, will compete in the NCAA District 6 championships at 10:50 a.m. Saturday in Georgetown.

The Red Raider women also will be running, with their 5,000-meter race beginning at 10:20 a.m. Saturday on the Southwestern University golf course. Kim Mudie led Tech to an eighth-place finish at the SWC championships and will head the squad against 25 teams from Texas and Louisiana.

Carlos Ybarra and Len Fedore, the Raiders' one-two punch all season, lead Tech against 32 teams from Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi. The men will run a 10,000-meter (6.2 miles) race. Ybarra placed 15th in the SWC championships with a time of 25:07.81 over a five-mile course, while Fedore took 25th in 26:02.60. Tim Green, Erin Griffin and D.C. Murphy round out the Tech lineup for Saturday.

Running with Mudie for the Raider women will be Sheryl Grochocki, Lisa Zarate, Georgianna Jones, Michelle Theall and Amanda Ramirez.

The top two men's teams and three highest individual finishers will advance to the national meet later in the month.

Golfers end fall play at Lamar

The Texas Tech women's golf team will close out its fall season Sunday through Tuesday at the Seventh Annual Lady Cardinal Invitational hosted by Lamar University.

Daily tee-off time for the 54-hole tourney will be at 9 a.m. It will be played on the par-73 Wildwood Golf Club course in Wildwood.

Other teams entered include defending champion LSU, SMU, TCU, Texas A&M, Memphis State, New Mexico State, North Texas State, Houston Baptist, Oklahoma and South Alabama.

Leading Coach Jay McClure's Red Raiders will be juniors Kay Linda Shive, who has averaged 80 strokes per round in three fall tournaments, and Lisa Franklin-Beck, who has a per-round average of 82 for the three outings.

Rounding out the Tech lineup are sophomore Mona Jennings and freshmen Amy McDougall and Kelly Green.

Rugby club to host rival SMU

The Texas Tech rugby club will meet SMU at 2 p.m. Saturday at the sports club field outside the Student Recreation Center.

The Tech squad, 7-2 for the season, goes into the match off an open weekend after Texas canceled its date at Tech last Saturday.

"We have no love lost at all for the Mustangs," Tech's Bobby Medigovich said. "Neither of the teams cares for being around each other at all. This game is probably the biggest rivalry we have with any of the conference teams, which should give us more incentive to win."

Tradition, Notre Dame against Penn State

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press

Notre Dame is the most hallowed of all college football schools. Not only have the Irish won more national championships (seven) than anyone else since the Associated Press poll began in 1936, but they also have been involved in many memorable games.

Nov. 1, 1913 — The combination of quarterback Gus Dorais and end Knute Rockne popularizes the forward pass as a legitimate offensive weapon in a 35-13 upset of Army.

Nov. 10, 1928 — Rockne, now Notre Dame's coach, makes his famous "Win One for the Gipper" pregame speech and the Irish beat mighty Army 12-6 at New York's Yankee Stadium.

Nov. 2, 1935 — Notre Dame's 18-13 upset of Ohio State in Columbus still is labeled "The Game of the Century" in some quarters.

Nov. 9, 1946 — Notre Dame snaps Army's 25-game winning streak with a 0-0 tie at Yankee Stadium.

Oct. 24, 1953 — Johnny Lattner returns the opening kickoff 80 yards to set up the first touchdown in a 27-14 victory that ends Georgia Tech's 31-game unbeaten streak.

Nov. 16, 1957 — Halfback Dick Lynch scores the game's only touchdown in a 7-0 triumph that snaps Oklahoma's 47-game winning streak, still the longest in college football history.

Nov. 19, 1966 — Notre Dame and Michigan State battle to a 10-10 tie that keeps the Irish No. 1 en route to the national championship.

Jan. 1, 1971 — The Irish down Texas 24-11 in the Cotton Bowl and end the Longhorns' 30-game winning streak.

Oct. 27, 1973 — A 23-14 victory that snaps Southern Cal's 23-game unbeaten streak is the pivotal triumph in Notre Dame's drive to the national championship.

Dec. 31, 1973 — Notre Dame 24, Alabama 23, in the famous Sugar Bowl shootout.

Jan. 2, 1978 — Fifth-ranked Notre Dame rips No. 1 Texas 38-10 in the Cotton Bowl and vaults to the national championship.

Nov. 15, 1986 — Notre Dame Stadium. The unranked Irish are 4-4 but have won three games in a row under first-year Coach Lou Holtz, including last week's 61-29 rout of orado: Oklahoma 28-14.

Tech mauls Seminoles, hunts 'Gators tonight

By LYNDOL LOYD
Sports Staff Writer

Behind a superior hitting game, the Texas Tech volleyball team upset a highly regarded Florida State squad in three straight games, 15-10, 15-12 and 15-12, Thursday night in Tallahassee, Fla.

Tech lifted its season record to 11-12, while the Seminoles, the South Zone's ninth-ranked team, dropped to 21-9.

"We played just great," said Tech Coach Donna Martin. "We played extremely consistent tonight. Everyone was working as a unit to get the game. There were absolutely no mental lapses."

The Red Raider spikers had a field day with the Seminoles, thanks in part to the setting talents of Mary Loescher. "I think this is perhaps the best setting match Mary has had all season," Martin said.

Loescher had 59 assists for a setting percentage of .472.

Allison Hetterich dominated offensively, placing 19 kills for a stellar .600 hitting percentage. Hetterich also was a force at the net, recording four solo blocks during the three-game match.

Becky Boxwell, a junior outside-hitter from Amarillo had 18 kills to her credit, totaling a .516 hitting average. Boxwell helped lead the Raiders defensively as well, producing 12 digs during the match.

With outstanding hitting percentages from Hetterich, Kelly Bronk and Cain, Tech recorded a .380 hitting percentage for the match.

Tech's next match will be against Florida in the Lady Gator Tournament today and Saturday in Gainesville, Fla. The tourney will feature Florida against Tech at 7 p.m. (CST) today and Duke versus Florida State in the first round.

Lady 'Horns returning nucleus

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Lady Longhorns return four key players from last year's unbeaten, national championship women's basketball team.

To that successful nucleus they added last year's top junior college player, one of the most sought-after high school players and the nation's tallest player.

But Coach Jody Conradt, whose Lady Horns coasted to a 34-0 record last season, said Thursday she has not been impressed by what she has seen in practice.

"We're not very good right now," she said as she introduced the players to local reporters.

"To assume that this team is going to take up where last year's team left off is totally unrealistic. I'm not going to say we are without talent, because we certainly do have talent and we certainly do have potential."

The potential is great enough to have earned the Lady 'Horns the top spot in several preseason polls.

The four returning key players from the title team are 5-8 guard Beverly Williams, 6-1 forward Clarissa Davis, 6-2 forward Andrea Lloyd and 5-9 forward-guard Yulonda Wimbish. Davis, a sophomore, scored 56 points and grabbed 32 rebounds in last year's Final Four and was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Williams, a junior, is being counted on to take over for Kamie Ethridge at point guard. Ethridge, a Lubbock Monterey graduate and now a student coach at UT, last year won the Wade Trophy as the nation's top woman college basketball player.

Asked how UT will replace Ethridge, Conradt said, "We don't," but she added she is confident that Williams has the quickness to quarterback the Lady Horns' fast-paced offense and pressing defense.

Top recruits this year include 6-3 center Dorothea Conwell, who led Odessa College to a 73-1 record in two years, and 6-3 freshman center Susan Anderson from Everson, Wash.

Anderson was named national high school player of the year in several polls. Conradt's tallest-ever team is topped by freshman Ellen Bayer of Scottsdale, Ariz., a 6-8 center who Conradt introduced as the tallest female player in the country.

The coach said Bayer has "horrible footwork" now, but predicted she would develop into a dominant force.

The Lady 'Horns face a tough non-conference schedule that includes tournaments with Southern Cal, Old Dominion and Ohio State, and games against Tennessee and Northeast Louisiana.

Conradt said her team is "over-scheduled," but, "It's not going to hurt us to have a loss or two."

After the nonconference schedule, Texas will return to the comfortable confines of the Southwest Conference, where they have won 116 consecutive games, dating to 1978.

The Lady 'Horns also will find comfortable confines if they return to the Final Four, which will be played on their home court.

SWC ROUNDUP

By The Associated Press

TEXAS A&M at ARKANSAS, 2:30 p.m.

In a game that many knew would be crucial to the SWC race even before the season began, the Aggies (7-1, 5-0 SWC) invade War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock for a bout with the Razorbacks. The game will be televised by ABC-TV.

Arkansas (7-2, 4-2) can stay alive in the conference race with a win, while an A&M victory, coupled with a loss by Texas to TCU, would assure the Aggies of no less than a tie for the SWC crown and the Cotton Bowl berth via head-to-head competition (A&M already has defeated Texas Tech and Baylor).

Prior to a 10-6 win by the Aggies in College Station last year, Arkansas had won seven of the previous eight games in the series. UA prevailed 28-0 in Fayetteville in 1984.

Aggies' quarterback Kevin Murray, still a junior, is already fourth in SWC career total offense and fifth in conference history in both pass attempts and pass completions. UA quarterback Greg Thomas continues to average a conference-leading 9.5 yards per pass attempt and has been intercepted just once in his last 113 attempts.

TEXAS at TCU, noon

The Longhorns (4-4, 3-2), still in outside contention for the SWC title, take on the Horned Frogs (3-6, 1-5), who have lost the equivalent of an entire starting backfield to injuries this fall, in a game that will be regionally televised by the Raycom Network.

Texas has won the last 18 games in a row between the two teams. TCU's last win came in 1965.

The Longhorns have made a living out of the passing game this fall behind all-time single-season yardage leader quarterback Bret Stafford, whose 1,760 yards passing eclipsed Todd Dodge's old school record. Texas kicker Jeff Ward has tied Tony Franklin's SWC career record of 56 field goals and is 26 points away from becoming the league's all-time scoring leader.

BAYLOR at RICE, 2 p.m.

The Bears (6-3, 4-2) have guaranteed their third winning season in the last four years and can capture their 16th triumph in the last 22 games if they can overcome the host Owls at Rice Stadium. Rice (2-6, 1-5) is rested after an open date, and many agree that Coach Jerry Berndt's squad has played better football than its past scores indicate.

Baylor has won the last four games in the series. The Owls have a solid one-two punch in quarterbacks Mark Comalander and Quentis Roper. They have combined for 1,890 yards of total offense for an average of 236.3 yards per game. Baylor quarterback Cody Carlson tops the SWC in that category, however, averaging 277 yards per game.

The Bears are first in the conference in total offense (449.9 yards a game), total defense (256.2 yards a game) and rushing defense (93.1 yards a game).
