North Korea shows president alive on video clip

By The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — North Korea showed its "great leader," President Kim Il Sung, on television Tuesday while ignoring reports in rival South Korea that Kim died or was embroiled in a serious power struggle.

A Defense Ministry spokesman in Seoul acknowledged North Korean news media reports that Kim was alive and added: "We are closely watching whether these developments in the North have resulted from a serious internal power struggle or its (the North's) high-level psychological warfare hiding a sinister plot for military provocation."

An Asian diplomat in Pyongyang, reached by The Associated Press by telephone from Peking, said he saw the 74-year-old Kim at Pyongyang Airport on Tuesday, "and he is in absolutely good health."

The diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, added: "Everything is all right in this country, the situation is absolutely normal. ... There seems to be nothing correct about these reports (of an assassination or power seizure). ... It is absolutely normal, there is nothing wrong. He is absolutely normal, he is in good health."

Questions about Kim were raised Monday when the ministry said North Korean propaganda loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea announced that Kim was killed in a shooting incident.

North Korean embassy officials at various posts abroad denied Kim was dead, but official North Korean media kept silent through Monday.

On Tuesday, Pyongyang's official Korean Central News Agency said Kim had gone to Pyongyang Airport to welcome Mongolian President Jambyn Batmunkh and that cheers for Kim of "Long live the great leader!" burst forth from the thousands of people on hand. The report was monitored in Tokyo.

Japanese television stations showed rare segments from North Korean television of Kim, in a dark overcoat and cap, walking up a gold-bordered red carpet to meet Batmunkh, shaking hands and embracing him.

Earlier Tuesday, the South Korean Defense Ministry said North Korean loudspeakers were blaring that O Jin

U, North Korea's defense minister, had seized power.

The South's defense minister, Lee Ki-baek, said that as of 10:04 a.m. Tuesday, the loudspeakers were playing somber funeral music and saying "The nation's great star has fallen. Let us glorify his great achievements."

That was about the same time first reports were coming from Pyongyang that Kim was at the airport.

Agencies boost home security in Tech ghetto

By PATRICIA REYES
News Staff Writer

The community services department of the city of Lubbock, in cooperation with the crime prevention unit of the Lubbock Police Department, has initiated a home security program to create safer living conditions for occupants of the Overton neighborhood, commonly referred to as the "Tech Ghetto."

Ana Rios of the community services department said $30,000 was obtained from a community development block grant for the purpose of installing such security devices as deadbolt locks, peepholes and smoke detectors in the homes of elderly homeowners and handicapped citizens.

Detective Floyd Price of the police department said the program would affect Texas Tech students indirectly. Although the program is being initiated throughout the city, the first and foremost target area has been the Overton neighborhood, whose inhabitants include a substantial number of Tech students, Price said.

He said the requirements for the service demand that all applicants be homeowners, at least 60 years old and of limited fixed incomes or handicapped. The requirements rule out most, if not all, Tech students, but Price said he feels the program will encourage students to protect their own homes.

"Security begets security," Price said.

Price referred to the program as the perfect way for crime prevention officials to get into the neighborhoods that have the highest crime rate. About half the burglaries that occur in the Overton neighborhood happen to Tech students, he said. With the elderly home security plan in effect, more Tech students will be inclined to secure their own homes, he said.

"More involvement is better security," Price said.

He said that after the security devices have been installed, he will give the neighborhood a complete home security survey. During the survey, Price will try to initiate a "neighborhood watch" type of surveillance, which he said would be a good opportunity for Tech students to become involved in neighborhood security.

Price said LPD offers students crime prevention information and encourages them to get involved in neighborhood watches.

"We want to be able to tell Tech students, 'You're going to a safe area,'" he said.

Reagan will propose trimmed budget

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's proposed budget for the next fiscal year may seek up to a record $54 billion in spending cuts and other savings, a 6 percent increase in defense spending and no new taxes, administration officials said Tuesday.

Those figures, confirmed in part by budget director James C. Miller III and in part by other administration officials, would be included in a budget document designed to pare the federal deficit to $108 billion in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

Miller said "judicious trimming of bloated programs," along with new user fees, sales of federal assets and loan portfolios and some program eliminations would be proposed to meet the $108 billion level, which is the fiscal 1988 target of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

In a speech to the National Electrical Association, Miller said the White House still intends to meet the target, despite recent talk by Democratic congressional leaders of easing it.

One administration source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the Office of Management and Budget headed by Miller is considering resubmitting many of the same proposals it proposed unsuccessfully this year, but with some major modifications and exceptions.

For instance, the administration has abandoned its proposals to eliminate the Small Business Administration and Amtrak subsidies, although will likely recommend large cuts in both programs, the source said.

But so far, the administration isn't making much headway toward coming up with the size of budget savings that will be needed, Miller indicated.

Speaking with reporters after his speech, Miller confirmed that all but two federal agencies — the Education and Energy departments — had submitted preliminary spending requests exceeding White House targets.

He said this was not unusual so early in the budget process, a view echoed by White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Smokeout challenges smokers to quit habit

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

Thursday will be marked by smokers quitting their habit for a day, with the help of friends if necessary, if the American Cancer Society's 10th Annual Great American Smokeout succeeds in its goals.

The Cancer Society has stated that the real goal of the Smokeout is to get smokers to give up cigarettes entirely. This year's smokeout will feature actor Larry Hagman returning as national spokesman.

Lubbock's chapter of the Cancer Society kicked off its Smokeout activities during Saturday's Tech football game by releasing 50,000 balloons.

Amy Boyd, chairman of the Texas Tech Great American Smokeout committee, said several on-campus activities have been planned to coincide with areawide Smokeout functions.

Boyd, a member of the Freshman Council and the Hulen Hall Council, said the Freshman Council will sponsor a booth in the University Center. Volunteers at the booth will distribute stickers, buttons, headless matches and "care packages," which will contain materials to help smokers quit for the day, she said.

The Hulen Hall Council will have a table in the lobby of the dorm promoting an "adopt-a-smoker/dipper" program, Boyd said. She said the Hulen group also will distribute Smokeout materials. The Hulen booth will feature more intensified Smokeout activities, Boyd added.

She said efforts will be made to prevent some of the negative connotations that accompany quitting smoking. "It's more of a positive thing we're trying to do," Boyd said.

"Hopefully there will be more than 4,000 people involved at Tech."

The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center will display a Great American Smokeout presentation in the TTUHSC library, said Kelly Shaw, Lubbock County field representative for the American Cancer Society.

Shaw said about 50 organizations in the Lubbock area will participate in this year's Smokeout.

One of the major projects for the Smokeout will be educational programs being implemented in Lubbock schools and businesses Thursday, Shaw said. The Cancer Society will sponsor speeches and demonstrations of effects of smoking for science classes at Matthews Junior High School. Students will be allowed into the teachers' lounge armed with water guns to extinguish any cigarettes teachers might try to light, Shaw said.

St. Mary of the Plains Hospital will sponsor a free smoking clinic called "Fresh Start," Shaw said. Methodist and Lubbock General hospitals will present educational programs in conjunction with the Cancer Society, she said.

Shaw said she hopes 10,000 smokers are adopted during the Smokeout in Lubbock. She said when someone adopts a smoker, that person is responsible for seeing that his or her adopted smoker doesn't light a cigarette for the whole day.

The children of Lubbock have been selected by the local Cancer Society to be the "Honorary Chair Children" for the Smokeout in Lubbock, Shaw said. She added that television personality Dr. "Red" Duke will be Texas' honorary chairman.

"You can't say anything good about smoking," Duke said. "Although the Smokeout is a known as a fun event, it has a very serious purpose."

Duke said 350,000 people die in the United States from diseases associated with cigarette smoking.

A Gallup Survey taken during last year's Smokeout indicated that 23 million people quit smoking or cut down on the number of cigarettes they smoked during the program.

Nationally, the American Cancer Society is battling smoking not only through the Smokeout, but by working in conjunction with the American Medical Association in calling for a ban on cigarette advertising. Despite the Cancer Society's success with the Smokeout, statistics indicate a more difficult task lies in trying to ban smoking advertisements.

A study by Lieberman Research Inc. conducted for the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association showed that, though the public seems to favor restricting the content of cigarette advertisements, banning the advertisements is opposed.

The study indicated that 62 percent of those surveyed believe cigarette advertising in print media should be allowed. The study further showed that 51 percent of the respondents favored allowing cigarette advertising on outdoor billboards.

The American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons will be working on a "Stamp Out Smokeless" campaign to coincide with the Smokeout, said Catherine Litzow, a public relations executive with the association.

Witnesses say two women killed Renault president

By The Associated Press

PARIS — Police said Tuesday they believe two women from the terrorist group Direct Action killed industrialist Georges Besse, who was gunned down on the street outside his home.

The president of the state-owned Renault automobile company was shot about 8 p.m. Monday a few steps from his house in the city's 14th district near the Montparnasse railway station.

Witnesses said the assailants approached Besse, 58, on foot and escaped the same way.

Pamphlets found in a Paris subway station claimed responsibility in the name of Direct Action, a terrorist group of the extreme left that has carried out numerous other attacks, authorities said.

A police spokesman said the printed statements "appeared authentic" and carried the organization's symbol, a five-pointed star. The same spokesman said earlier that the source of the attack "is undoubtedly Direct Action."

Police say that, according to the accounts of seven main witnesses, most of them neighbors, two women were directly involved in the murder.

One did the shooting while the other provided protection, according to the accounts. Police said none of the witnesses could provide detailed descriptions of the women.

Besse was shot moments after his chauffeur dropped him about 50 yards from home. A Renault official said Besse, who took over France's largest auto company since January 1985, never used a personal bodyguard.

Renault said Tuesday that Aime Jardon, the company's assistant director-general, would be in charge until the government appoints a new president.

Besse had been named president of Renault in hopes of turning the struggling company around. He instituted an austerity program that cost about 22,000 jobs and irritated labor.

Direct Action began with purely domestic objectives, fighting what it called the forces oppressing immigrants, the unemployed and the unfortunate. It bombed and occasionally shot up facades of official buildings such as the Labor Ministry, but at the beginning it avoided causing injury.

Police believe it has only a few committed members and about 200 sympathizers.

In 1982, Direct Action split into "domestic" and "international" factions. Several members of the domestic group have been arrested — notably Andre Olivier, who was underground for several years — and police seized large quantities of documentary material on the organization.

Students bear brunt of low faculty attitude

Disenchantment about being at Texas Tech is a growing problem among the university's faculty members. In the classroom and in such gatherings as the Tech Faculty Senate meeting, professors are displaying a poor attitude about being part of the education system. The ultimate victim of such a poor attitude is the Tech student body.

Granted, the Tech faculty members are working under adverse conditions. The tight Texas economy has forced the elimination of a 3 percent salary increase and the cutback of several academic pursuits. The Tech administration has taken a hard line on academic freedoms. The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal continually editorializes that professors enjoy an easy profession since they work only nine hours a week by teaching three classes.

Even so, a faculty member should not be in the business because of money. (Which is not to say that professors should not be paid well.) Professors theoretically should teach because they want to help students learn more about a specific field or about life in general. A love for the academic process should be the main motivating factor of the faculty.

Instead, many Tech faculty members are exhibiting a poor attitude about being at the university. One professor told a class this week that Tech freshmen and sophomores should transfer to other universities because their degrees from Tech would be practically worthless. Some advisers have been recommending that students transfer for the same reason.

Also, during the senate meeting last week, one faculty member quipped, "If the university can't produce, why should we?" The remark was made during discussions about the administration developing a faculty evaluation policy for purposes of tenure, promotions and bonuses.

The senate should be composed of strong professors with a positive attitude about being at the university. Regardless of how bullying the administration has been toward the faculty, professors should not take the childlike attitude of "Well, he doesn't work, so I won't work." The senators should be the guiding force in motivating Tech faculty members to present to students the best possible education.

Instead, faculty members are whining about how negative editorials in The UD have had a poor effect on morale. The poor morale was evident before the editorials were written. Obviously, good faculty members are present at the university. Yet, even they will not take a stand and defend their high academic achievements. No faculty members called or wrote letters to the editor defending themselves after the Oct. 8 editorial charging that the faculty's financial exigency policy would protect Tech deadwood.

What are students to think when they hear professors telling them to leave Tech? Under the idea of self-fulfilling prophecy, if the faculty thinks Tech is an academic abyss, then they will start to produce like professors in such a situation. Worse, Tech students will lose faith in their professors' knowledge and teaching abilities. How can professors who do not perform up to maximum standards require students to meet their full potential?

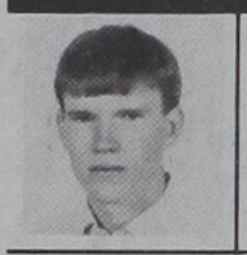

Tech faculty members need to start having a positive attitude about being at the university. They need to renew their dedication to offering students the best possible education despite the economic and administrative problems. They need to start defending themselves publicly so that students will know that professors are prepared to work for and with students.

The "woe is me" attitude among Tech faculty members must cease if the university and its students plan to enter the next decade as one of the outstanding academic institutions in the country.

Tech must reverse poor out-of-state image

Jay Miller
News Staff Writer

The results of a nationwide survey published in Sunday's Dallas Morning News may have reinforced some widespread, erroneous beliefs about higher education in this state. The survey also may have fanned the flames of discontent among many state legislators about the quality of higher education in the Lone Star State.

The Morning News' survey questioned more than 850 chief academic officers across the nation about their perceptions of 10 Texas institutions. Respondents were asked to grade the schools on areas such as academic programs, faculty and student quality and financial outlook. Respondents were asked to assign a numerical grade on each of nine categories and assess an overall grade for each institution. Those numerical grades were compiled by the Morning News and translated into a letter grade, i.e. a 2.6 numerical average translated into a C-plus.

Not surprisingly, the survey showed that most of the alien academicians took a fancy to the University of Texas. UT and its $267 million endowment were given an overall rating of B-plus. Unlike many of the students therein, UT did not receive a grade below a B. Some respondents commented that money was the driving force behind the excellence of UT; others just rained praise upon the heads of the UT faculty, administration and student body. More than half the respondents ranked UT among the top 10 percent of the nation's finest universities.

Texas A&M ranked second among the state's institutions with an overall rating of B. The survey indicated student quality in Aggieland was sub-par (C-plus), but otherwise A&M brought home straight B's.

How did Tech rank? Pretty much in the middle of the pack. Tech received straight C's with a C-plus overall ranking. Other schools that were graded about the same included Trinity University, TCU, SMU, Houston and Baylor. But the news could have been worse. Some comments were promising; others seem to indicate the respondent may be brain-dead: "A school for cowboys on the high plains," one enlightened respondent noted about Tech.

Most of the comments on the survey seemed to stereotype Tech because of its West Texas location. The other comments showed a general lack of out-of-state knowledge about our school.

What is frightening about the survey results is that they could be used for ammunition by legislators and members of the Select Committee on Higher Education, who are looking at the feasibility of creating a tiered university system in Texas. Under a tiered system, a few schools would be designated top-level and hence receive the best students and the big bucks. Schools on lower tiers would provide education for the people who were culled or barred from the top-level institutions.

It seems that a tiered system would detract from the current level of competition for quality students between state universities. Talk about apathy. What incentive would universities have to develop first-rate, quality programs if they weren't going to attract first-rate, quality students and more state funding?

Tech President Lauro Cavazos told the Morning News the ranking given to Tech was too low and that this survey, like all surveys, is just somebody's viewpoint. That analysis may be partially true, but labeling the survey as just another newspaper filler will not help to correct many of the inaccuracies put forth by the results.

The survey shows that outside the state, Tech is not well-known. We also know that many Texas legislators do not realize the scope and mission of this university. We should not stand back and just accept this as something that cannot be changed. It's clearly a lack of quality public relations on the part of this university.

Cavazos should not disregard the results as just being from another survey. Instead, the administration should take steps to ensure that the next survey will reflect accurately the true quality of this university.

Poor math TAs

To the editor:

When is the mathematics department going to cease "ripping off" Texas Tech students with incompetent assistant instructors who come to West Texas from Middle East and Asian countries? If the math department is going to permit them to teach, why not educate them with effective teaching methods before they continue to ruin the lives of students?

The math department provides no information to students about who will teach a particular section of math until the day classes begin, and then they have the audacity to prohibit students from changing sections.

If the mathematics department is incapable in educating teachers, let them obtain help from the College of Education. Teacher effectiveness can be learned.

The reality of hell

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the letter by Gary Cevin ("The reality of hell", letters, Nov. 14, 1986). I feel that as Mr. Cevin has stated his opinion in this area, a statement of the opposing viewpoint should, in fact must be, presented as well.

In order to present this letter in a form by which it may readily be compared with the previous letter, I shall deal with each of his points in order.

To begin with, Mr. Cevin states that the English translation of the Bible is not as exact as the "original" language text. He also makes points concerning several of the original Greek and Hebrew words. It is also true that there were a number of things which the Hebrew and Greek languages did not have an exact word for. For example, in the original Hebrew there was not a word for a cluster of grapes. Instead the Hebrews used "grape" to indicate both the singular and, in this case, the plural. Even today, there are languages, such as Spanish and Latin, which have words which cannot be directly translated into English. However, the meaning of the word can be.

This brings me to my next point. Mr. Cevin said that the Christian concept of hell does not exist. If he truly believes that, then I must question if he believes the Bible at all. Since the Bible is supposed to be God's word, the Bible is either completely true or completely false, for inherent reasons. Even allowing for human error in translation, the general context of the Bible does not change.

To refute specifically his argument that hell does not exist as Christians define it, let me use his example of quoting scripture. In Matthew 16:20-31, Jesus tells of a rich man who died and went to hell and of a beggar who went to heaven and of how, as Abraham was leading the beggar to heaven, the rich man cried out in torment. The Bible says the rich man asked Abraham to "...send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this FLAME" (vs. 24, KJV). Furthermore, in Matthew 5:22, part of Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, Jesus says that "...whoever shall say Thou fool, shall be in danger of HELL FIRE." (KJV). James 3:6 refers to "...set on FIRE of HELL" (KJV).

All of these and many more are readily available for those who care to look, and each one, if the Bible used contains references on original language, has one of the Greek or Hebrew words which Mr. Cevin used in his letter. I mention this to show that he and I are referring to the same hell. I, however, accept the fact that the original language lacked in some ways the words and definitions which have come into being to account for this lack.

Finally, in reference to God's mercy, God's Son, Jesus, came and DIED for us and then rose again. This example of God's mercy was apparently ignored by Mr. Cevin because the Bible specifically states that without Jesus' death and resurrection, we would all go to HELL, for all have sinned (Romans 3:23). If sending your own son to die for someone who may not accept your gift of eternal life is not mercy and love, then what is? It is not God's mercy or lack of it that sends people to hell; it is when a person refuses God's mercy that they go to hell, and that is definitely NOT God's fault.

Therefore, Mr. Cevin, by using the Bible as proof, your opinion of hell does not appear to hold water. I also wonder at your seeming defense of the wicked in the last paragraph of your letter. The Bible clearly states, in numerous places, that the wages of sin are death and eternal damnation (Romans 6:23, 2 Thessalonians 1:7-8, John 3:16-17, John 5:24). In fact, John 5:29 refers to the resurrection of life for those who are saved and the resurrection of the damned for those who are not. Where will they be resurrected to but hell?

However, as I believe I have done a fair job of refuting your letter in the space which I have been allowed, I shall end. I am in the Tech phone book if you wish to discuss this further.

Official says Soviets reneged on upgrades

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union most likely has resumed operation of some nuclear plants without making the safety improvements promised in the wake of the Chernobyl accident, Energy Secretary John Herrington said Tuesday.

"Our best estimate is they started Chernobyl up probably too soon to do all the upgrades they said they were going to do," Herrington said after testifying at a Senate hearing. "We are reasonably sure they are operating reactors today without the upgrades they promised."

Herrington called the improvements "major installations" that couldn't have been completed before the Chernobyl facility started up Sept. 29 — five months after a fire and explosion ripped through one of its four reactors and sent a cloud of radiation across the globe.

Herrington also said the United States is having trouble getting information about two reactors the Soviet Union is building near Cienfuegos, Cuba, 180 miles from Key West. He said the Soviets were reluctant to discuss the plants in August at a meeting in Vienna.

The secretary said he suspects the reactors will not be of the same design as the graphite-moderated plant that caught fire at Chernobyl. But he said the United States has no details about the construction of the Cuban plants, their safety systems and who will be operating them.

The energy secretary said uncertainties about the reactors include:

- Containment building. The first reactor under construction does have one, but U.S. experts lack information about the degree of steel reinforcement, the concentration of concrete used and other specifics.

- Fire safety system. Is there one and if so, what kind?

- Instrumentation. Herrington said Finland has agreed to put a sophisticated system in Soviet reactors.

Launch crews simulate countdown aboard shuttle

By The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Five astronauts boarded a space shuttle Tuesday for the first time since the Challenger disaster, but the mock countdown aboard Atlantis was halted 25 seconds short of the simulated engine firing by problems with computer software.

Several other troubles cropped up that might have halted a real launch, but NASA spokesman Jim Ball said officials considered the test successful because it accomplished its main goal: maintaining launch team sharpness during the long flightless period following the Challenger explosion.

It was primarily a test of the launch crews and not of the shuttle and it met all of its objectives, he said.

Robert Gibson, who commanded the astronaut crew aboard Atlantis, termed it a good test and said "it was a morale booster, even though it was a simulation, and a real morale booster for the launch team. The fact that we had problems made it more realistic."

Gibson said it was "difficult to look at the launch pad and the orbiter without flashbacks (to the Challenger accident). I don't think we'll ever get over it. But I decided a long time ago I'm going to fly again."

He volunteered his crew to take the first trip when flights resume. The crew that boarded Atlantis on Tuesday is the same one that flew the last successful shuttle flight, that of Columbia, which ended just 10 days before Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing the seven crew members.

The three remaining shuttles have been grounded, and will be for at least an additional 15 months while engineers redesign the faulty booster rocket joint that caused the accident.

Most of Tuesday's problems were associated with work around procedures developed because of the condition Atlantis is in, minus many of its components.

Experts say fish oil reduces hardening of arteries

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Fish oil has been shown for the first time to reduce the extent and severity of the arterial deposits that are a leading cause of heart attacks and strokes, a researcher said Tuesday.

Researchers have known that fish oil can lower levels of cholesterol and other harmful substances in the blood and inhibit blood clotting, and they have theorized that it could prevent hardening of the arteries. But this is the first time that theory has been demonstrated, said Harry Davis of the University of Chicago.

At a news conference Tuesday, however, he and other researchers cautioned against taking the fish-oil capsules that are increasingly being promoted by drug companies as a supplement. They said it would be better to eat fish in place of fatty foods.

Davis reported at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association that 16 monkeys fed diets high in fish oil developed far fewer arterial deposits, or "plaques," than 8 monkeys fed a diet high in coconut oil, a saturated fat known to cause hardening of the arteries, or atherosclerosis.

Monkeys fed the coconut oil diet had larger and more severe plaques, and the plaques were found to contain more inflammatory cells that can damage the artery wall and enhance the formation of the deposits, Davis said.

He said the reasons why fish oil had that effect are not known. It lowers blood cholesterol levels, which is believed to be beneficial. It also has various effects on artery walls, the liver and spleen, but researchers do not know which of those are beneficial, he said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Police arrest bouquet bombing suspect

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man identified by police as the tuxedo-clad bomber who delivered a booby-trapped bouquet that injured two women was arrested Tuesday at a country house he reportedly shared with the estranged husband of one of the victims.

Shaun Small, 27, was taken into custody in rural Lake County on a federal warrant charging him with detonation of an explosive device involving personal injury. Bail was set at $100,000.

The bomber allegedly tried to deliver a second flower arrangement to one of the victims' parents a short time after Monday's explosion, but the woman's 78-year-old father turned him away.

Lake County sheriff's Capt. Glen Perkins said Small was arrested without incident when he left a house and got into a car in Clearlake Park, about 75 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Officials at San Francisco General Hospital said they were under instructions from the FBI not to reveal the women's conditions Tuesday. On Monday, the hospital had reported both in fair condition.

Group says anti-gay bias caused killing

KYLE (AP) — A national homosexual rights group says the slaying of an Austin businessman, whose body was found in a burning auto, may be an extreme example of "gay bashing."

But a police investigator said such a motive is only one possibility in the murder of Edward Schiffers, 39.

Schiffers was found dead in the front seat of his burning car at an Interstate 35 rest stop in Kyle last week. His hands were tied behind his back with baling wire, he was partially clothed and he had been struck in the head, police said.

A preliminary autopsy indicated that the cause of death was smoke inhalation.

Jeff Gutierrez, a spokesman for the Gay and Lesbian Service Center of Los Angeles, said the rest stop where Schiffers was killed may have drawn people intent on attacking homosexuals because it was "a notorious meeting place for gays."

Baptist Foundation to evict nightclub

DALLAS (AP) — Baptists and booze have never mixed well, and Club Clearview is another case in point.

After a series of financial deals, the Baptist Foundation of Texas and the popular alcohol-serving nightclub found themselves linked in a tenuous business relationship. But it's one that won't last.

The Dallas-based Baptist Foundation, which recently became the owner of the building that houses Club Clearview, has served eviction papers on the club, which attracts customers ranging from skinhead punks to curious preppies.

Foundation president Lynn Craft said the group's investment policies prohibit involvement with a business that serves alcohol.

"We're not interested in having a club as a tenant," Craft said. "That is why we're evicting them."

COE to present program improving teaching skills

By HOLLY HATCH
News Staff Writer

Texas Tech instructors are apathetic about improving their teaching skills because there is no tradition of faculty development at the university, according to College of Education professor Charles Reavis. To combat the problem, Reavis and other COE faculty will present a program by outstanding professors designed to recognize faculty teaching strengths from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. today in 235 administration/education building in conjunction with National Education Week.

Reavis said faculty members also are apathetic because there is no recognition or reward system for improved teaching.

"When it comes time to get a raise, improvement makes no difference unless your teaching has been absolutely atrocious in the past," he said.

The program is focused on both the developmental and fun aspects of learning new teaching skills, Reavis said.

"This sort of thing is important, and it's special," he said. "That means it can be enjoyable, too."

COE faculty, as well as everyone else, have the tendency to take each other for granted, Reavis said.

"It's human nature to think, 'What does he know? I see him every day,' and ignore people who really have something to offer," he said.

Faculty members and graduate students who attend the program may be able to take some instructional technique directly back into the classroom, Reavis said.

"Part of the program will involve the faculty giving a handout to those attending which they feel has been especially beneficial in the classroom," he said.

The program itself may generate new ideas simply because it is geared to produce a stimulating environment, he said, and faculty will be able to think about their teaching skills with no outside interruptions.

Faculty attending will receive credit for peer observation, a requirement in the College of Education, Reavis said.

"They can come to all or part of the program," he said. "Each section is designed to run about 30 minutes in length."

Reavis said the College of Education must be especially committed to improving teaching skills because teaching is the focus of study in the college.

He said that in the long term, he would like to see another session in the spring that would feature faculty who have not received recognition for their teaching skills.

Horn prof

Kristiansen's research benefits space program

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is one of a continuing series of stories featuring Texas Tech's Horn professors. The nationally recognized title has been given to 34 Tech faculty members, 18 of whom currently are in residence. Today's story looks at electrical engineering professor Magne Kristiansen.

By HOLLY HATCH
News Staff Writer

When he received letters addressed to professor P.W. Horn, Magne Kristiansen said he realized not everyone outside the Texas Tech campus knew who or what a Horn professor was.

"A Horn can be so many things," he said. "Does it mean horn like, 'blow your horn,' or something else? People don't always realize it's a name."

Kristiansen, appointed a Paul Whitfield Horn professor of electrical engineering in 1977, said his research focuses primarily on plasma, an extremely hot ionized gas, and pulse power.

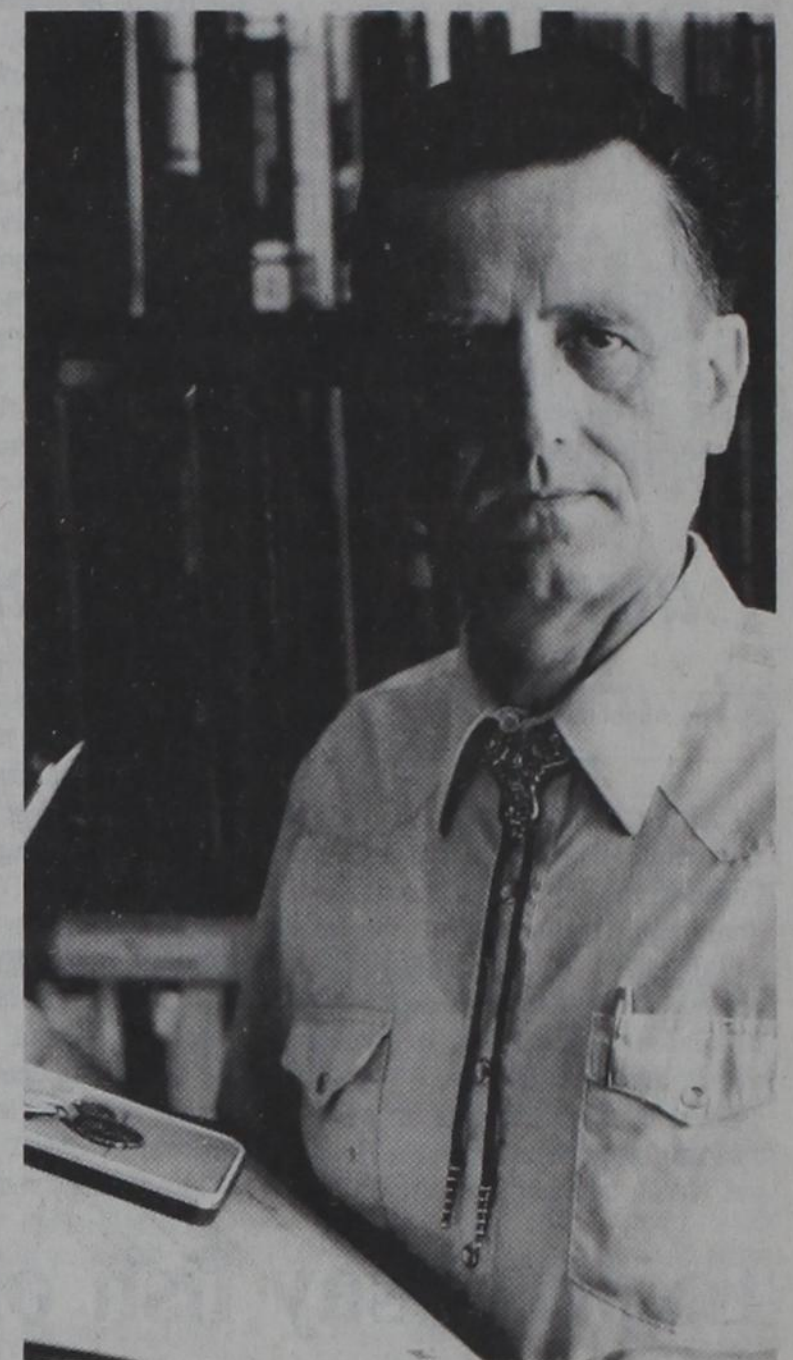

Kristiansen said he and other Tech faculty are involved in research for use of pulse power in the Strategic Defense Initiative and other space programs. Pulse power research receives a substantial amount of funding from the federal government and is a large program at Tech, he said.

Pulse power became a major area of research about 14 years ago, he said, and has both peaceful and military applications. The pulse power itself involves the release of huge amounts of energy in short bursts. He said Tech essentially started pulse power research.

Originally from Norway, Kristiansen came to Tech 20 years ago after attending the University of Texas. The Tech College of Engineering has an international image, he said.

"We have visitors in and out from all over the world," he said.

Aside from his research, work with graduate students and classroom teaching, Kristiansen said he has an extremely heavy travel schedule. He said he has no plans to leave Tech in the future.

Magne Kristiansen

"I have a very nice laboratory with excellent equipment and good graduate students to work with," he said. "You tend to become married to a lab like that."

Tech Pre-Law Society offers opportunities for undergraduates

By JILL JOHNSON
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Pre-Law Society, a campus organization composed of almost 70 members, works to enhance undergraduate students' interest in entering law school.

Through various speakers representing the eight accredited law schools, Tech students have the opportunity to learn about each while deciding upon which to attend.

Patrick Martinez, president of the Pre-Law Society, said the main purpose of the group is for undergraduates to understand the necessary procedures to enter law school. He said students who score very high on the Law School Admissions Test, along with a good grade point average, probably could get accepted into law school without much difficulty.

Law school is a three-year program, and students are accepted from all sorts of majors, Martinez said.

Martinez said he planned the schedule of speakers for the organization after receiving input from students on who they would like to hear.

He said representatives from Baylor University, Southern Methodist University and the University of Texas, along with the Texas Tech School of Law, have lectured to the group.

Martinez said a representative from the University of Houston is scheduled to speak at the Dec. 2 meeting.

Members of the group are becoming involved in mock trials with the law school trial advocacy class. Pre-law members play the part of the jury and deliver case verdicts. Martinez said non-members are able to sit in as jurors, too.

The trials are preparing the entire group for the moot court competition in Houston, scheduled for the spring semester. Tech will compete against schools including Baylor, UT and the University of Houston through mock trials.

Martinez said the organization will have a new agenda for the spring semester as various law professors, attorneys and politicians lecture to the group.

He said students are welcome to attend any of the biweekly meetings and are free to join at any time.

Meetings are conducted on an informal basis, Martinez said, at 7 p.m. every other Tuesday in 105 law school.

The Tech Pre-Law Society is one of 33 chapters of the statewide Pre-Law Society. Texas has eight accredited law schools, and representatives from each school are invited each fall to present their law school before the Tech organization.

For more information on attending or participating in a mock trial, contact Jacquelin Collins, Pre-Law Society adviser, at 742-3717.

For more information regarding meetings or membership, call Martinez at 762-4037 or 742-3791.

Dallas band tries to overcome hurdles to success

By MICHAEL STEPHENS
Lifestyles Staff Writer

Looking at the obstacles they face working toward big name success in the music business, one can't help but feel a little sorry for 4 Reasons Unknown.

The band, which played Lubbock recently and will return to the 14th Street Restaurant and Bar today, won major national exposure through MTV, a channel that has been accused more than once of catering to brainless little teenyboppers. Its sound is being compared constantly to U2, and if the press isn't saying that, it is being called "one of those Texas bands." In other words, since the Basement Tapes, life for Dallas-based 4 Reasons Unknown has not been a bed of roses.

Not to say that everything has been that terrible for them either. Thanks to the Basement Tapes, they have gained national exposure and a record contract with CBS/Epic. According to keyboardist Paul Nugent, the band feels it has been well received by the public during its tour. Dave Stewart of Eurythmics fame is interested in the band and has offered a song for its debut album, tentatively named "The Circle."

"We have the music written and everything ready," Nugent said, "but we won't start the pre-production until we go to Toronto in February."

4 Reasons got started with Basement Tapes when the members decided to ask Lubbockite Steve Moss, who has done videos with Joe "King" Carrasco and with the Nelsons, to direct the clip for them.

"We didn't want to start out as a 'popular local band.' We want to be a big name and hold our own with the 'real' business," Nugent said, "so we decided to do a video. We were taking a necessary step toward making it big."

Then Moss and the band decided to film it at the Fast and Cool Club in Dallas to the tune of $15,000. 4 Reasons chose the track "Visual Effects" as the piece for the clip. Then there were some other hurdles.

"There's one problem coming from this MTV thing. When people hear that you're in a contest on MTV, they expect a lot of Spandex, makeup, etc., and we're just some Texas boys playing music. When we finally started making the thing, we knew there had to be a lot of ingredients involved. We had to pick the right song, look and everything. But we wanted a classy look, instead of T and A or anything like that."

Not at all convinced of its ability to sell, the members of the band, guitarist Mike Clements, bassist Morgan Ferguson, drummer Edward Harvey and Nugent, reluctantly submitted the tape to Warner Brothers for the contest.

"The next thing you know, it's November and we get word that we're finalists and therefore no longer up against hundreds of other bands, but only six. What's more, we were the only Texas band in the finals."

Then came the night of Feb. 9, and the rest, as they say, is history. "Martha Quinn announced we had won the contest," Nugent said, "After that, we really had to get to work."

Nugent is the first to agree that there are some big barriers to cross in the process of realizing their dream. For one thing there is that "Texas thing."

"That phrase, 'Texas-based' has been a problem for some bands from the state in keeping them from the big time. You have to overcome the stigma associated with it just because you're from Texas, whether you sound like it or not. The phrase really doesn't qualify for us anyway. We don't have a rootsy, funky feel to us like that. We sound a lot more European, and I think that will help us to overcome the 'Texas' problem," Nugent said.

No band that has won the Basement Tapes competition has ever gained "stardom," much less the success the members of 4 Reasons would like to accomplish. Nugent admits there also is a jinx to overcome.

"It would be real easy to kick back and ride out this record thing, but not if we want to come out on top," he said. "Even great bands struggle and never get there. We're really fortunate to have this whole record business drop into our laps and we've got to take advantage of it."

Nugent says the band will now go into the studio after trying to "make some friends" with their tour and opening for such names as 'til Tuesday, Mr. Mister and Eric Johnson, but most of all, "We've got to make it all work now. If we don't push ourselves and kick some ass, then we've lost the chance," he said.

So far, 4 Reasons Unknown has won its battles, but now the band is working to win the war.

Holiday event, plays highlight Hub

By MICHAEL STEPHENS
Lifestyles Staff Writer

Holiday cheer is beginning to descend on us all, and after next week, we'll all be so sick of hearing about "tis the season to be jolly" we'll be ready to puke and not want to do anything. Therefore, pre-season partying is very important to your mental well-being. Here's a few of your options.

John Huston's 1948 thriller "Key Largo," starring Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall and Walter Huston, will be shown at the Allen Theater at 8 p.m. today.

"Pretty in Pink," another one of John Hughes' diatribes on the ups and downs of the adolescent condition, appears in the Allen Theater Saturday at 3 p.m., 7 p.m., and 9:30 p.m. Tickets for both features except the matinee are $1.50 for Texas Tech students with an ID and $2.50 to the general public. Charge for Saturday's matinee will be $1. Tickets are available at the University Center ticket booth.

The Lubbock Junior League and more than 100 area merchants are sponsoring their 6th annual Holiday Happening Thursday through Saturday. Of special interest is Friday, when tickets for the seasonal extravaganza are half price for Tech students.

The event features a diversity of live entertainment and fashion shows plus holiday wares on display. For information call

HUB CITY HAPPENINGS

741-8556 or get your tickets, which run for $7 for adults and $4 for children, at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center box office.

The Guys Next Door will play at Chelsea Street Pub Friday and Saturday at 9:30 p.m. There is no cover.

The Tech Lab Theater begins its run of Dale Wasserman's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" on Thursday in the lab theater. The shows begin at 8:15 p.m. It will play through Sunday with a matinee showing being added at 3 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are available at the lab theater box office during office hours. Prices are $2 for Tech students, $5 for others and $4 for the matinee. For further information and reservations call 742-3601.

"A Novel Approach" will continue its run at the Actor's Trading Post this Thursday through Saturday at 8:15 p.m. Ticket prices are $5 and for reservations, call 796-2729.

Finally, I've gotten some response from Cowboys/Comedy Club manager Chris Harmon on how the first two weeks of the new laugh house. According to Harmon, response to the revival of professional comedy in Lubbock was a mark above positive. Last weekend had the distinction of selling out, and "we think that the changeover from from the Comedy Club to Cowboys for one price is been really beneficial as well," Harmon said.

Arkansas-based country artists White Oak will appear at Cowboys today through Saturday. Cover is $1 for men and free for women today, no cover on Thursday and $3 on Friday and Saturday.

Next door at the Comedy Club, Rushion McDonald and Rachel Winfree will provide the laughs Thursday through Saturday. There is a show at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday and shows at 8:30 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Cover is $5.

Movie 'Tai-Pan' proves to be too poor

© New York Times News Service

You have to say this for "Tai-Pan": It's ridiculous — but in a big way. It's two hours of Super Comics: Bearded Brutes! Busty Belles! Bloody Blades! Exotic Settings! Colorful Costumes! A Beheading! A Castration! A Typhoon! The movie is taken from James Clavell's best seller of the same name, part of his million-page saga about Western traders in mid-19th-century China.

We meet Tai-Pan, which means, loosely, the boss trader (Bryan Brown in a rolling Scottish accent), as he is being chased out of Canton by the emperor, who is displeased with foreigners bearing opium. Tai-Pan is so strong that he can demolish a boatful of rough-looking Chinese attackers single-handed, but when it comes to white men, he has trouble one on one. That's the way it used to be.

Anyhow, he gets the British government to take over the island of Hong Kong so he can set up shop. Yes, he's the man to thank for all that duty-free stuff.

Tai-Pan has two virtuous and handsome sons in their 20's, one by his Glasgow wife, the other by a former Chinese concubine. He also has a Chinese mistress about a third his age (Joan Chen, being unbearably cute) who occasionally tries on a Scottish burr and often takes off her clothes. And he has a bitter enemy (John Stanton) who has a pathological son on whom he dotes and a ninny of a daughter for whom Tai-Pan's handsome, virtuous son falls.

The "cast of thousands" is all dressed up and there's no end of posing, strutting, milling and glowering. There's also a lot of scenery, shot in China, Macao and Hong Kong by the reliable Jack Cardiff. As for the acting, the screenplay does not make that easy. The lines often seem to have been cribbed from an English-language primer: "I am proud to be British, but I am also proud to be Chinese." "This is not the Mary Sinclair I know." Only Norman Rodway as a dissolute but good-natured artist manages to bring a bit of life to his role.

IM BRIEFS

2 Mile Turkey Trot Run Scheduled

Entries are due Thursday for the intramural Turkey Trot, a cross country two mile run, set for Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Mae Simmons Park. A cross country meet counts the first five people who finish the race on a team with their total finish numbers being added together. The team with the least amount of points will win. Turkeys will be awarded to the first teams in the men, women and co-rec divisions. The top individual man and woman will receive intramural award T-shirts. Turkey Trot T-shirts are $5.25. No fee will be charged to run in the race. The minimum number on a team is five people—three men and two women. Entries and maps of the course are available in the Rec Sports Office.

Tech Bench Press Contest Arranged

The bench press championships for Texas Tech are Friday at 6 p.m. in the Student Recreation Center. Lance Johnson, 1986 A.A.U. Mr. Texas, will give a training and diet seminar. Entry fee is $8. Admission fee is $5. Admission price covers both events. The seminar is free for competitors. All proceeds will benefit the Double T Powerlifting and Bodybuilding Club. For more information, contact Rec Sports at 742-3351. Help send Tech's best to compete against the nation's best.

Aerobic Instructor Auditions Set

Applications for aerobics instructor are in the Rec Sports Office. Deadline to apply is Nov. 25. All applicants will be required to audition Dec. 1 and 2. Qualifications include: knowledge of basic exercise physiology, quality routines, CPR certification and past teaching experience or demonstration of teaching ability.

Dr. Yost's Injury Clinic Planned

Dr. Robert Yost continues the weekly injury clinic in Room 202 of the Student Recreation Center at 7 p.m. today. Yost will examine students and staff with athletic-type injuries free. Yost is an orthopedic surgeon and director of the sports medicine program at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center. For additional information, call 742-3351.

Intramural Swim Meet Entries Due

The intramural swim meet is Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the Aquatic Center. Entries for men, woman or co-rec divisions are available in the Rec Sports Office or the Aquatic Center. Enter as an individual or as a team. A person may swim for only one team. Points will be scored separately for each division. T-shirts will be awarded to the first place teams in each division. Ribbons will be awarded to first place individuals. The meet is open to eligible Tech students, faculty and staff.

What's Your Racquet Night Slated

The Outdoor Program and the Aquatic Center have planned "What's Your Racquet" Night at the SRC from 8-11 p.m. as an alternative to off-campus entertainment. Entries are due Friday by 5 p.m. in the Rec Sports Office. Events include badminton, squash and pickleball tournaments with men and women's divisions. The racquetball tournament will have men, women and co-rec divisions. Enjoy free refreshments while you play or watch.

Floor Hockey Tournament Starts

Recreational Sports presents the 1986 floor hockey tournament Saturday after the Tech game in the Women's Gym from 4-10 p.m. The event is open to all students, faculty and staff with men and women's divisions. Entries are due by 5 p.m. Thursday in the Rec Sports Office, Room 202 of the SRC. This tourney should introduce a sport to students. Its purpose is to provide enjoyment for both the participant and the spectator. Each team will have six players which includes a goalie. All equipment will be provided except one softball glove for each team. The game consists of three periods of five minutes each with running time. Penalties will be issued for bringing the tip of the stick above a person's waist either in front or in back of the person. Other penalties will be discussed before the game is played. All players should wear rubber-sole shoes. This game will tend to get aggressive, but misconduct of an unsportsmanlike manner will not be tolerated. Volleyball Playoffs Winding Down

The men's and women's volleyball playoffs are winding down as some teams are already in to quarter final play.

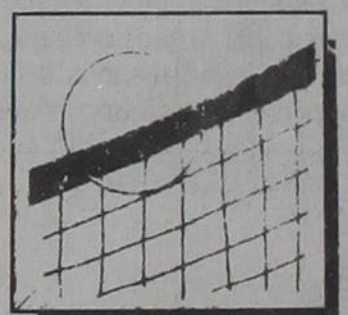

The women's tournament is down to the final eight teams. The Hustling Gang will take on the Kappa Kappa Gamma team and the Tri Dells will play the Horn Netters. Other games include Delta Gamma against Zoomba Warriors and the Ruggers will take on Fury. The women's all-university match will be played at 8 p.m. today.

The men's campus community playoffs finished Friday with Overdose defeating the Nads 14-12, 14-8, in semifinal play. The Ento Club easily overcame 10 Men with Probes 15-0, 15-4, to advance to the finals. In the final match, the Ento Club had no problems defeating Overdose 14-1, 15-7.

In the men's Greek action, eight teams are competing for the final two places in their bracket to advance to the All-University bracket. Favored teams are Phi Delt 'A', Sig Ep 'A', Sigma Chi 'A' and Pike 'A'.

In the men's open-residence hall bracket, eight teams are fighting for the other two slots in the All-University bracket. Cocolos, Ulti's, Emanons and the Scramblers are favored teams.

The men's semifinal matches are tonight at 6, followed by the women's all-university match at 8 p.m. and the men's game is at 9 p.m. All matches will be played at the Student Recreation Center.

Boston ace claims MVP honors

By The Associated Press

Clemens

KATY — Roger Clemens, who won 24 games in his first full season with the Boston Red Sox, capped a dream year Tuesday by becoming the first starting pitcher in 15 years to win the American League's Most Valuable Player Award.

The 24-year-old right-hander captured 19 of 28 first place votes for 339 points in easily outdistancing Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees and Boston teammate Jim Rice in the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"I thought I did have a pretty good chance even though I was a starting pitcher," said Clemens at his home in Katy, near Houston. He conceded, though, that the news still was a bit of a shock.

"I was going to come home tonight and see on TV if I finished second or third, but Debbie (his wife) wanted me to stay around the house."

He learned of the award by telephone, and immediately called his wife, who was at an obstetrician's office. She is expecting the couple's first child in five days.

"I hope by winning this award I have put an exclamation mark in the minds of voters about starting pitchers winning it. If I was voting, I'd vote for my teammate Jim Rice. But I felt one of us should win it."

The media descended upon the Clemens home for the second time in a week — he won the Cy Young award last Wednesday — and the scene was chaotic with utility crews working on the new home and a cleaning service using vacuums in the background.

"Now all we need is a few zoo animals around and everything will be perfect," Clemens said.

The awards, he said, would be displayed in the family room, where he already has his high school, college and pro uniforms ready to hang.

Mattingly, the 1985 MVP, had five first place votes and 258 points as he failed in a bid to become the first to win the award in consecutive years since the Yankees' Roger Maris in 1960-61.

Rice, the league's 1978 MVP, was third with the other four first place votes and 241 points in the balloting by two writers in each of the 14 league cities.

Coming back from right shoulder surgery that cut short his rookie season in 1985, Clemens began a fabulous season by winning his first game, 7-2, in Chicago on April 11. He went on to pitch the Red Sox to their first pennant since 1975 and only their fourth in 68 years.

He became the Boston stopper. The Red Sox did not lose more than four games in a row all season. Clemens followed 14 losses with a victory.

His other accomplishments included:

- Setting a major league record by striking out 20 batters in a game against the Seattle Mariners in Fenway Park on April 29.
- Going 14-0 at the start of the season.
- Winning the only games as Boston went 3-10 on the road, but clung to the AL East lead immediately after the All-Star Game in mid-July.
- With a 24-4 record, leading the majorities in victories and topping the AL with a 2.48 earned run average.

- Struck out 238 batters in the season, second only to Seattle's Mark Langston with 245.
- Became only the third AL pitcher to win the Cy Young Award unanimously, joining Detroit's Denny McLain, 1968, and New York's Ron Guidry, 1978.

To win the award, Clemens, a No. 1 draft pick signed a couple of weeks after he pitched Texas to the College World Series championship in 1983, overcame criticism that the MVP award should go to an everyday player rather than a pitcher.

In addition to his 19 first place votes, he received five seconds, two thirds, one fourth and one sixth. He, Mattingly and Rice were the only players listed on all ballots. Each writer lists 10 players with 14 points for each first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc. The vote was taken prior to postseason play.

Vida Blue of the Oakland A's in 1971 was the last starting pitcher to win both the MVP and the Cy Young the same year.

Since the start of the MVP award in 1931, only six other pitchers have won both honors the same season — Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1963, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals and McLain of the Tigers, both in 1968, Rollie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981 and Willie Hernandez of the Tigers in 1984. Fingers and Hernandez were relievers.

Mattingly had another outstanding season as the Yankees finished second in the AL East. He batted .352, runnerup to Boston's Wade Boggs'. .357, set a New York record with 238 hits, had 31 homers and drove in 113 runs.

The Texas Tech women's golf team stayed in 10th place out of 11 squads to finish at 1,008 Tuesday in the Lady Cardinal Invitational women's golf tournament, played at Wildwood Golf Club near Beaumont.

Southwest Conference rival SMU edged defending champion LSU to take the three-day, 54-hole event with a showing of 923.

In medalist play, Audrey Bendick of Oklahoma took top honors with a 74-79-70—223 effort, while SMU's Jamie DeWeese and Lamar's Allyson Saunders finished at 227 to tie for second place honors.

The Red Raiders were troubled by inconsistent play. Sophomore Mona Jennings had the best round for the Raiders Tuesday with a 78 on the par 73 Wildwood golf course, but because of an 88 and 91 during the previous rounds of play, she finished only fourth best for Tech.

Tech's top finishers for the tourney were Kay Linda Shive and Lisa Franklin-Beck, both with three-day totals of 250.

SMU's Reese suspended for second straight game

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Southern Methodist officials said Tuesday that tight end Albert Reese will be suspended for a second game following more allegations that he received illegal benefits from a booster.

Reese

In another development, Mustang Club board member Frank Roby said he is resigning because of frustration over the "air of mystery" surrounding the workings of the SMU athletic department.

The Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday that Reese's utility bills were paid by a company with ties to George Owen, a Dallas developer.

SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch said the decision to suspend Reese was difficult because the Saturday game against Arkansas would have been his last collegiate performance.

Reese was suspended from last Saturday's game against Texas Tech because of allegations that Owen supplied him with a rent-free apartment. Owen denies the charge.

Reese, the Mustangs' starting tight end, said he was deeply disappointed.

"I'm paying for the apartment, and I have a hard time understanding why I am not being allowed to play this weekend," he said in a written statement. "But I understand SMU's position, support their decision and look forward to the investigation of this issue to be completed."

Razorbacks garner SWC weekly honors

By The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Arkansas linebacker Rickey Williams and noseguard Tony Cherico were a little out of character against Texas A&M.

Normally, Williams puts big numbers on the tackle chart when the Razorbacks are playing a running team. Against the Aggies, who threw 35 passes, Williams made eight unassisted tackles and was in on 10 others.

Cherico usually spends time in the opponent's backfield. On Saturday, every time quarterback Kevin Murray dropped back to pass, Cherico dropped back the other way to protect.

Against Murray, who has made a ton of big plays throwing, Arkansas often rushed only two and Murray was forced to throw short. He completed 21 passes, but only two of 20 yards or more, and Arkansas knocked off the Aggies 14-10.

For their performances, Williams and Cherico were named Defensive Players of the Week in the Southwest Conference. The Offense

Player of the Week is Arkansas quarterback Greg Thomas, who completed 11 of 14 passes for 112 yards and ran 10 yards for the Razorbacks' second touchdown.

UA defensive coordinator Fred Goldsmith said Williams was in on the tackle on many of the short passes.

Cherico made six unassisted tackles, helped on four others and broke up two passes.

"He really kept them from throwing underneath with his drops," Goldsmith said. "Without a noseguard of his capabilities, we would not have been able to execute the game plan."

Goldsmith had used the two-man rush against Brigham Young when he and Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield were at the Air Force Academy.

"When you have a passer who has real good mobility that can get away from the pressure, you don't want to pressure him too hard," Goldsmith said.

Goldsmith said they decided to use the defense often after looking at the big plays Murray made against Arkansas last year.

Landry says big plays needed to beat Washington

By The Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday his offense will need a San Francisco 49ers-like explosion to beat the Washington Redskins this weekend.

But with one exception — the NFL Cowboys will have to score more than the six points the 49ers managed Monday night against Washington.

The Redskins defeated San Francisco 14-6 despite a 441-yard passing performance by 49ers quarterback Joe Montana.

Landry said Dallas will need big plays on offense to overcome the Redskins on their home turf in Sunday's showdown in the NFC's Eastern Division.

"That's what beats them," he said.

"Big plays."

Problem is, the Redskins' defense is making life tough for a lot of offenses, he said, using the San Francisco game as an example.

"Washington seems to have returned their healthy people," he said. "Everybody seems to be back now. They're a very tough, competitive team. With a defense that stays on the field out there and gives up 500 yards and you only score six points against them, they must have something going for them."

Dallas, 7-4, trails Washington and the New York Giants, both 9-2, in the Eastern Division.

Sherrard leads the NFC with a

Landry said Dallas will rely on running back Tony Dorsett and rookie wide receiver Mike Sherrard for the big plays.

Dorsett has been bothered by an injured knee since the third game of the season. But Landry said the fourth-leading rusher in NFL history has rebounded.

"Tony's starting to come back now," Landry said. "The Raider game (two weeks ago) was the turning point. Now he knows he can have a little pain and still run well."

"He and Mike Sherrard are the ones who could make the big plays," Landry said.

Sherrard leads the NFC with a

23.1-yards-per-catch average.
