Combest: Iran probe will occupy Congress

By JAY MILLER
News Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said Tuesday he supports the idea of appointing a special prosecutor and forming a broad-based congressional fact-finding committee to examine what he calls a "major gaff" by the Reagan administration.

Combest, speaking before local media representatives in his Lubbock office, said the recent developments in the Iranian arms scandal, which resulted in a transfer of funds to the Contras in Nicaragua, warrant thorough investigation by Congress and the administration. Combest said efforts to search for the facts in this major foreign policy flaw will occupy much of the time of the 100th Congress when it convenes in January.

"I think without a question it (the arms deal and diversion of funds to the Contras) will dominate everything, directly and indirectly related to it, that comes out in the first part of the 100th Congress," Combest said.

"I think the perception of this (Reagan) administration by the public and the majority of the members in Congress is in question, and consequently it will affect everything that this administration does. The administration should do everything possible to return the confidence of the people.

"Regardless of what the outcome of all of the commissions' findings are, we cannot let this country come to a standstill."

Combest added that if the findings of the various commissions looking into the affair warrant widespread house-cleaning among the ranks of the administration, then the administration must do so.

The issue probably will interfere with the normal operations of Congress, which must continue to forge ahead seeking answers to an array of national problems, he said.

"We have too many other things that we (Congress) have to deal with," Combest said. "We have agricultural problems, we have energy problems, we have national security problems and trade problems, and all of those things cannot afford to take a back seat to this fiasco."

Combest said the formation of a congressional select committee for the purpose of taking testimony and examining the evidence would provide consistency in the findings and allow the rest of Congress to deal with other pressing national issues.

Combest said the committee should work with the recently appointed "Tower Commission," headed by former Texas Sen. John Tower and comprised of former National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Edmund Muskie, former Democratic senator from Maine.

Combest said the affair is not and should not become a partisan issue and that a bipartisan congressional committee will give validity to the findings.

"I do think Democratic control of the Senate, just in the public's perception, may give confidence to the findings of a special committee because when a special committee is appointed the majority of that committee will be Democratic, and I think that takes away a potential for biases," Combest said.

While he supported funding for the Contras during the last congressional session, Combest said he feels any cabinet member or administration official who had knowledge of Lt. Col. Oliver North's activities in diverting funds to Nicaraguan Contras should be held accountable.

Combest said he does not know the extent to which Reagan and members of his administration were informed of North's activities but that if Reagan did not know of the transfer, the administration has major problems.

"It is conceivable that North could have acted without the approval of the administration, but it is unlikely; but who did know? We don't know," Combest said.

"There is no excuse for it. What you do is rid yourself of those who created the problem."

He said a special session of Congress is not the answer to solving questions raised by the issue. If Congress was called into special session and a fact-finding committee was formed, it would be dissolved at the end of the year and would have to be reappointed and begin anew when the 100th Congress convenes in January, Combest said.

"This is a wide open book now, and it's going to be investigated to the nth degree," Combest said. "We cannot lose credibility either internally or externally over this matter."

Student voices concerns over tier proposal

By TREY BARKER
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech administration and Larry Temple's Select Committee on Higher Education were among the concerns discussed Tuesday night during a student meeting in the foyer of the Tech library.

The meeting, called by sophomore pre-med major Laura Hill in a letter to the editor published in The University Daily Tuesday, was aimed at pulling students together and informing them about the select committee's proposals and how they would affect Tech.

About 50 students listened as Hill outlined Temple's proposal recommending that Texas legislators restructure the state's colleges and universities to become a four-tiered higher education system.

The verbal jabs Hill delivered against the select committee for the most part were directed toward the tiered system. She told students the system would kill any research that Tech is involved in and would force graduate students to relocate to the University of Texas or Texas A&M University.

During the discussion of the tier proposal, Hill pleaded with students to attend the Student Senate meeting Thursday night and make their views known.

A proposed funding system that would be based on research rather than enrollment also was discussed.

Hill said the tiered system would tie directly into the new funding system and funnel large amounts of money into UT and Texas A&M.

"A recent survey said UT is the wealthiest school in the country," she said.

The main problem Tech has, Hill said, is the unresponsive and dictatorial attitude the administration shows in dealing with student-related problems.

Discussion of the 1984 faculty vote of no confidence in Tech President Lauro Cavazos sparked comments from students.

"When was the last time anyone saw Cavazos in person?" a student in the crowd asked.

Hill said that in addition to Cavazos' not talking with students, she thinks his dealings with the electrical engineering department have been scandalous. She said the department has been in a shake-up for four years.

"The problem has been here since Cavazos arrived," she said.

To show a genuine concern about the current legislative proposals, Hill said, students need to protect their own and unite with the administration until the Temple crisis is over.

A few students spoke up during the meeting, asking Hill why she was pushing the Student Senate to come up with solutions to Tech's problems when no senators were in attendance at the informal gathering. Hill had no response to the question.

Reagan appoints national security adviser

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Under mounting pressure from Congress, President Reagan called Tuesday for appointment of a special counsel to investigate the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels and named a former top-ranking CIA official as his national security adviser.

Besides seeking to invoke a post Watergate-era law providing for probes independent of the executive branch, Reagan urged members of the House and Senate to consolidate under one committee their own probes of the affair.

"If illegal acts were undertaken, those who did so will be brought to justice," the president declared as he also announced that Frank Carlucci, onetime deputy CIA director and deputy secretary of defense, will replace Vice Adm. John Poindexter, who resigned last week as top national security adviser.

The president said he had been informed by Attorney General Edwin Meese earlier Tuesday that reasonable grounds existed to seek appointment of an independent counsel by a three-judge court.

While Reagan was speaking in a rare midday broadcast to the nation, Poindexter made a brief appearance at the site of closed-door hearings by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

According to two sources who declined to be identified by name, Tuesday's witnesses were two "top-level" intelligence officials. One source said the reason for Poindexter's brief appearance was "a request by him to have some more time to get ready before he appears," possibly today.

"What we're trying to do right now is piece together the mosaic of facts," one source said of the Iran-Contra connection. "This was clearly held extremely closely, but a lot of people knew something about it, particularly in the upper reaches of the CIA. What we're trying to figure out is exactly who knew what about the arms and Contras and when they knew it. It's a process of trying to track the internal workings of the intelligence community."

Both sources said the operation run by Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North apparently was outside the normal intelligence chain of command even though that chain already is highly compartmentalized.

"We learned a great deal today," Durenberger said as the committee ended its work for the day. He said he "fully expects" that Poindexter will return.

Republican congressional leaders praised Reagan for moving decisively to end the disarray wrought by the Iranian arms sales disclosures. Democrats, too, applauded his decision to seek an independent counsel. But lawmakers argued about whether investigations now under way, or planned, should be merged under the umbrella of a select committee — as was done in the Watergate period.

TEA official urges profs to fight fund cuts

By HOLLY HATCH
News Staff Writer

Tom Anderson, Texas Education Agency (TEA) deputy commissioner for finance and compliance, said Tuesday that legislators will be paying special attention to teacher appraisals, the career ladder program and the Permanent University Fund (PUF) during the next session of the Legislature.

Anderson spoke to educators in the University Center Coronado Room at the Seventh Annual Conference for Administrators of Community Schools.

The main objective of the Legislature has been to implement much-needed education reform without relying on personal income taxes, Anderson said.

"You have to realize that we began with a $2.86 billion deficit," he said. "We're ending this biennium with a $980 million deficit," he said.

Anderson said that if the price of oil rises to $18 a barrel within coming months, the deficit could decrease to a little more than $3 million.

In reaction to the continuing deficit problem, areas that had been thought of as untouchable may be targeted by legislators for budget reductions, he said.

The PUF, one of the untouchable areas primarily intended to provide funding for the University of Texas and Texas A&M University, escaped harm during the last special session because professional educators came out in strong defense of the fund, Anderson said.

The fund could be raided during the coming special session if educators do not continue their strong support, he said.

Anderson also said the Legislature will consider modifying the career ladder program for teachers.

"We believe those who improve, who strive to do the best in their jobs, are entitled to reward," he said. "But just because the career ladder program may disappear, that doesn't mean the appraisal system will. They are separate things."

Anderson said although the appraisal system needs to be refined, it is based on standardized criteria and research. A problem arises, however, when teachers on different levels of the ladder are expected to be evaluated on the same criteria.

The new school evaluation/credit system also needs refining, Anderson said, but it has worked well during its first trial.

Accreditation teams from the TEA use test scores to determine which schools need to be evaluated.

"This program is not supposed to point the finger at low-achieving campuses, but to help them," he said. "Our teams bring in the newest education studies and research designed to help the school improve its performance."

Other problems the Legislature will consider are the high dropout rates, especially among minority students, and low test scores of many students on evaluative tests, he said.

Anderson said professional educators must take positive action to increase education funding by working through teacher organizations.

Tier plan threatens quality of education

Larry Temple, chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education, must have felt compelled to top H. Ross Perot's dramatic changes in the public schools three years ago. Temple's proposal to create a four-tiered university system has sent waves of discontent throughout the state's academic circles.

Under Temple's plan, the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M would be at the top of the tier, providing comprehensive undergraduate, doctoral and special professional degrees. Eight other universities, including Texas Tech and the University of Houston, would be denoted as Level 2 schools, limited to providing regional undergraduate programs and stripped of their doctoral programs except under special circumstances yet to be determined.

Temple's plan is intended to streamline Texas' higher education system by eliminating duplication. Its effect, however, would be to restrict the state in its ability to offer comprehensive, quality educational programs throughout the state.

During the Tech Board of Regents meeting in late November, regents responded to Temple's proposal by drafting a letter defending Tech's mission in West Texas. The letter also requested that Temple revisit the campus to re-evaluate his proposal to classify Tech as a Level 2 school.

Temple probably is being bombarded with such requests for revisits from college and university administrators across the state. Since the committee is scheduled to present its recommendations to the Legislature in January, a revisit to Tech or any other university campus is unlikely.

The Tech administration must take some blame for Temple's recommendation because it has failed to properly explain Tech's mission in educating students and the school's benefits to the state. During the committee's visit to the Tech campus Feb. 13, the Tech administration spent most of the time talking about the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. The Tech administration should have been giving a more comprehensive picture of the university.

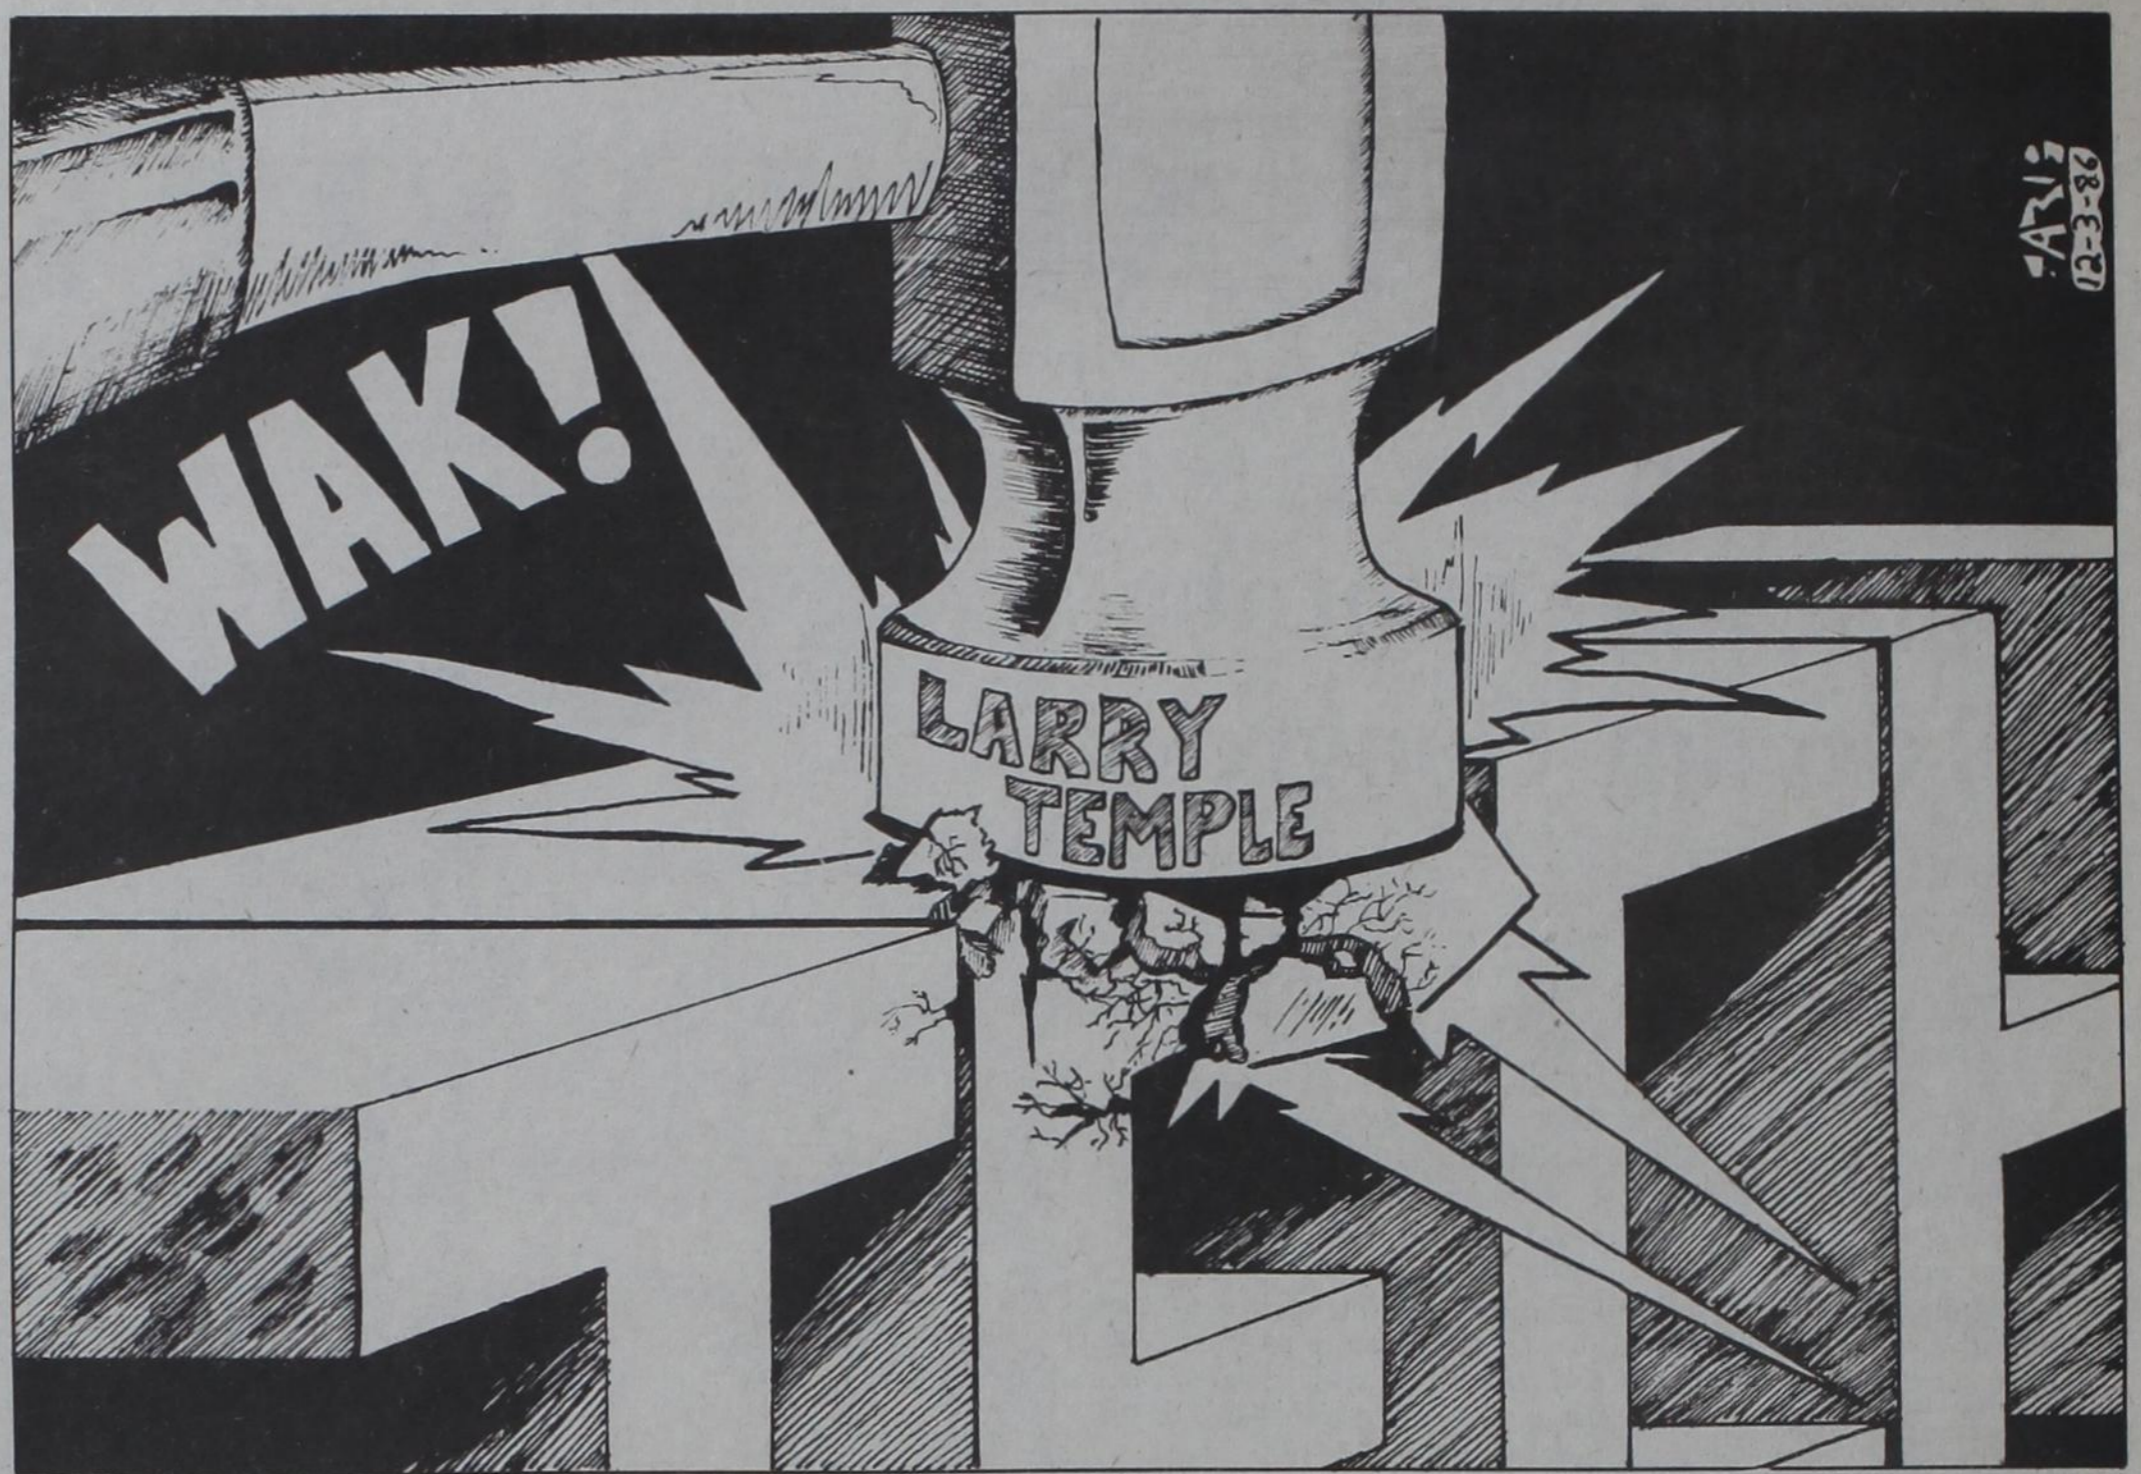

Nevertheless, Temple's proposal does not fulfill the committee's original charge, that being to strengthen and streamline the state's higher education system. Temple has failed to justify how restructuring the state's entire higher education system will improve the the quality of education for young Texans.

In connection with creating a four-tiered university system, Temple also proposed that the state reform its funding procedures of higher education. Instead of the current practice of allotting money to colleges and universities based upon enrollment, Temple suggests that the state base the funding upon academic programs.

Since UT and A&M would be offering the best array of undergraduate, graduate and doctoral programs, obviously those schools would receive the most money. Deciding the monetary value of the various academic programs offered throughout the state would be a difficult task. Furthermore, such a plan would be discriminatory to students who desire to attend another university besides UT and A&M but who would be limited because of the programs not offered.

The Legislature should not approve Temple's proposals, at least concerning tiering the higher education system and reforming the funding procedures. Approval of such dramatic, unproven measures would set higher education back — not propel it into the 21st century.

Peace through faith

To the editor:

Over the years, hearing debates and discussion on nuclear arms, something logical needs to be said about it.

All of our dealings with Russia in this area have had no or short-term implications only. Both our attempts at reducing arms with the SALT Treaty and our attempts at building up arms under Reagan have had no or short-term effects respectively in obtaining progress. Will the mere persuasion for Russia to cut its missiles stop mere wishing and wanting to spread communism? Not necessarily.

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn (in his article "Men Have Forgotten God," Pastoral Renewal Magazine, April 1985, Vol. 8, pp. 116-125.) hits the mark when he states that the West's (and East's) mistake is the blind assumption that the bomb will protect us and make peace instead of stout hearts. One cannot change a man's heart by a buildup of nuclear arms. Nuclear weapons are an external and could never be used as an instrument of true peace.

Before the 17th century in Russia, people lived a life of faith. It was the unifying and shaping force of that nation that permeated and became the very thoughts, lifestyles and personality of the people. They learned and relied on the everlasting God for guidance and direction. In the 17th century and after Peter became czar, it felt its first whiff of secularism. The new czar forced transformations of the economy and emphasized the military over the spiritual life of the people.

When the statism policy did not meet their needs, Marxism and communism entered into the picture in the 19th and 20th century. The present government came about because the people relied on their own wisdom to try to solve problems instead of putting trust in God. In their attempts to solve problems, people get killed and persecuted.

In the West, the meaning of life is wrapped up in liberty and man's pursuit of happiness. Rights are unrestricted, except for a few external legal constraints. We can believe, say, and do practically almost anything we want to do. We have the freedom to love and, yes, the freedom to fear, hate and hurt others. The question of why should we constrain ourselves to hurt others by thought, word or deed enters in when things do not work out. Thoughts of a small few of which are racism, feminism, chauvinism, and just the mere judgment of someone who is "different" than the rest of us enters into the picture.

This is what capitalism in society eventually created. When man becomes in charge of his own destiny (in capitalism) and the destiny of others (such as what happens in communism), someone is going to get hurt or shortchanged. Only Christ will bring peace and love to the world. When there is faith, prayer and patience, peace will eventually come.

Human salvation cannot be found in material goods or money alone, nor bombs, guns arguments or human persecution, but by an intimate, loving and caring God and Him only (Hebrews 11). World peace begins first in the heart. It then spreads to the family, then the place of work.

True Swiss opinion

To the editor:

I am the Swiss professor who accompanied the 17 Swiss students who attended classes at Texas Tech in October and stayed with Texan host families in Lubbock in connection with the "Cultural Contact Project," and I was extremely disappointed when I read the article on "Swiss students observe American education, culture."

The article starts with a true sentence, namely that it has been my dream for Swiss students to gain an impression of an American university. When I now read what two of these students dared say, that dream turns into a nightmare. Thus I want to point out the obvious unfair comments Chris Schlumpf and partly Roman Salzmann made.

Salzmann apparently noticed a lack of sincerity, and superficial politeness. But where else in the world could he have enjoyed such hospitality? He was generously allowed to attend classes at Texas Tech, he was the guest of a friendly Texan host family, wherever he went in Texas he was welcomed.

I myself was at Texas Tech 16 years ago as a student and teaching assistant for one year, and I came back six years ago as a visiting professor for one term before coming for a third time just a couple of weeks ago with the 17 students. Texan friendliness and politeness were so profound that I have kept in contact with good and sincere Texan friends for all these years. I have met with more superficial politeness in Europe than in America.

Schlumpf utters his surprise at the "lack of quality at U.S. universities." How can he do this after being at one such university for only three weeks? As a matter of fact, most American universities (Texas Tech included) are well-known for their high quality. Why else do so many scholars from all over the world spend years of postgraduate studies in the USA? Certainly not because of a "lack of quality"!

I want to tell you all that the other 15 students and I were impressed by the openness and sincere friendliness we experienced in Texas as well as by the high quality of the classes at Texas Tech. If anybody says the opposite he is either joking (a bad joke, indeed) or just blind and totally insensitive.

McWilliams and UT

To the editor:

This time last year, when we were searching for our own head football coach, it seemed to me that T. Jones and others who supported David McWilliams for the job had seriously underestimated the anti-University of Texas sentiment in these parts. If you'll remember, we weren't crazy about the idea of having any more former UT types around here than absolutely necessary.

This year, I say, if they steal our coach, let's really hate 'em.

Who among us has not known people from Austin who treat Tech students and alumni — even faculty — with scorn and pity, as if they feel sorry for us because we didn't go to Texas. Honestly. Most of us didn't go there on purpose.

Even though we may have resented T. Jones' cronyism in selecting McWilliams, and even though we may have suspected that McWilliams was a second-rater from UT who wouldn't have made it there, we did the right thing — we changed our minds. We gave the new coach the kind of welcome and support he deserved.

The University of Texas, on the other hand, with all of its wealth, its Nobel laureates, its worldwide academic prestige, its superior athletic teams of all kinds, has proven its real mettle by firing a football coach who won barely 74 percent of his games. They fired a coach who took them to bowl games in only nine of his 10 years, including three times to the Cotton Bowl. They fired a coach whose teams finished among the top 10 in the nation a mere four times.

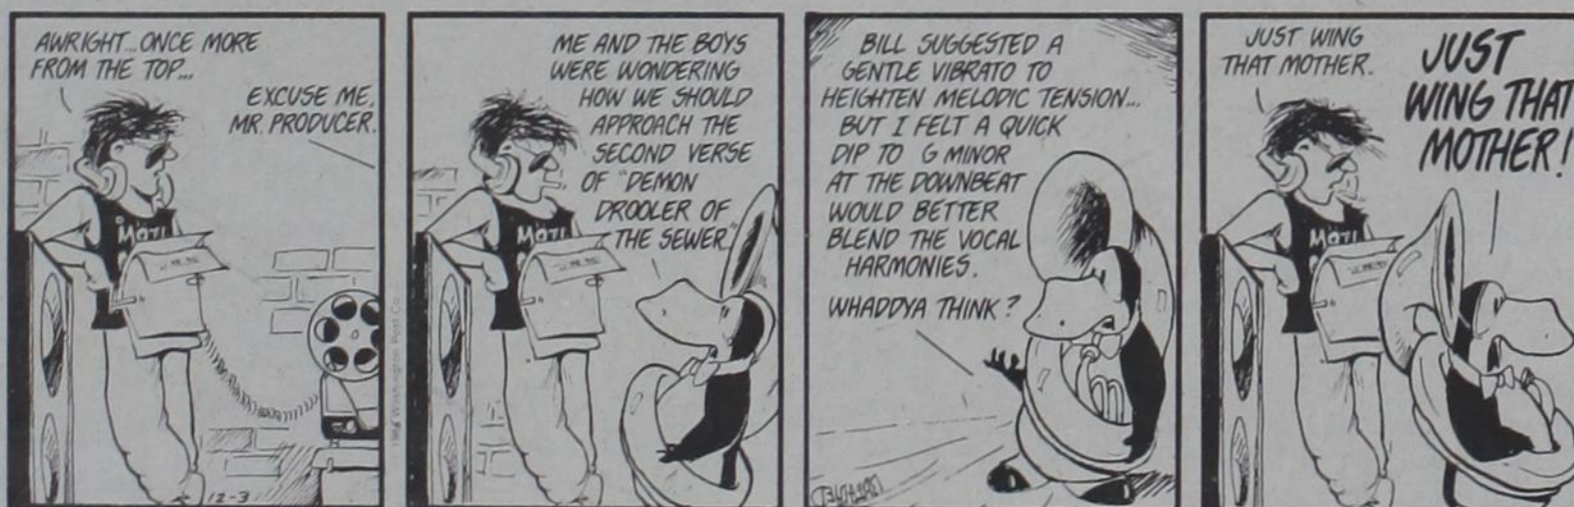

And now they want to rob us, a sister-Southwest Conference School, of our coach. If McWilliams had not come to Tech, had not had a successful year with the players recruited by his predecessor, would he now be a candidate for the Texas job, or just another UT assistant with a "For-Sale" sign in his yard this morning?

If McWilliams has the kind of gumption we hope he has, he'll tell Texas, "Thanks, but no." He'll recognize that Tech gave him an opportunity and the benefit of the doubt and will give him the loyalty that a UT coach can only dream about. In reality, of course, we can't expect that. We'd like to think that our own alumni would be pleased and honored to be asked to return here to coach.

So I say, if you want to go to Austin, McWilliams, go. But go with your eyes open. Know that if you don't go to the Cotton Bowl or challenge for a national championship every year, whoever is in charge down there won't be any kinder to you than they were to Fred Akers.

"Whoa! Watch where that thing lands — we'll probably need it."

Israel denies giving funds to Contra rebels

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli leaders Tuesday denied new assertions that their country siphoned funds from arms deals with Iran to Nicaraguan rebels. Foreign Minister Shimon Peres called the reports "complete falsehood."

Denials from the top three government officials put Israel in apparent conflict with President Reagan, who was quoted in Time magazine as saying a third country channeled money to the rebels from inflated prices Iran paid for U.S. weapons.

Newspapers quoted American officials as saying Reagan meant Israel, which has acknowledged secretly shipping U.S. arms to Iran but has denied handling payments to the Nicaraguan insurgents, known as Contras.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told Parliament during a 45-minute debate: "The Israeli government doesn't maintain contact or ties or supply weapons from here to the rebels in Nicaragua. It has not given approval for any Israeli to assist, supply knowhow or weapons from Israel to the rebels."

He was replying to opposition demands for parliamentary supervision of Israel's extensive arms business.

The U.S. Justice Department informally has told Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government that it will seek to question some Israelis in an investigation of the Iranian arms deal, officials said privately.

They said Israel has promised to cooperate with U.S. investigators, but no formal request had been made.

Israel seeks clarification from Washington on the Reagan remarks published in Time, an Israeli legislator said. He spoke on condition of anonymity and would not elaborate.

The magazine quoted Reagan as saying: "Another country was facilitating those sales of weapons systems. They then were overcharging and were apparently putting the money into bank accounts of the leaders of the Contras. It wasn't us funneling money to them. This was another country."

Other Israeli officials refused to discuss the issue and indicated they were awaiting an explanation of Reagan's remarks. "We're trying to give him a way to quietly step out of it," one said, on condition that his name not be used.

Phone company drops fraud charges at A&M

By The Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Complaints alleging that five Texas A&M football players illegally used long-distance telephone access codes have been dropped by the phone company that made them, officials say.

Robert Wiatt, director of security at Texas A&M, said Star-Tel, based in Bryan-College Station, dropped the charges Monday before arrest warrants for the players were issued.

The five players never have been identified. Three were reported to be starters on the A&M football team.

Ed Stephenson, chief executive officer of Star-Tel, said the board of directors decided the company would establish an amnesty period until Dec. 15, during which violators could reimburse Star-Tel and avoid prosecution.

Stephenson said Texas A&M had applied no pressure on Star-Tel to reverse its earlier decision to file charges.

"This was strictly our decision," he said.

After the amnesty period expires, Stephenson said, "Anyone we catch who violates this — no matter who they are — we will pursue this very vigorously."

He estimated that long-distance carriers in the Bryan-College Station area are losing a total of $50,000 to $75,000 a month through illegal use of access codes.

"It's a problem that's been worsening over this year," Stephenson said.

A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said he planned no disciplinary action against the players "unless they did it again." Sherrill said the players will be treated "just like any other kids" and said the problem isn't unique to A&M.

"I'm glad it worked out," Sherrill said.

"If they did it, they're wrong and have to pay for it. You certainly don't condone it. They're not going to do it again."

Wiatt said he wasn't bothered by Star-Tel's decision to drop the charges. "It's hunky-dory with me. It makes no difference," he said.

Hindus protest massacre with battle against Sikhs

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Mobs of Hindus angered by Sikh terrorism rampaged through the capital Tuesday and battled Sikhs outside their temples. Police reported 1,500 arrests as they struggled to control the 16,000 Hindu rioters.

Bloodied protesters were seen at several confrontations with club-swinging police, but there was no immediate figure on the total number of injured.

The rioting erupted during a general strike called by a Hindu party to express "anger and anguish" over the massacre Sunday of 24 Hindus in Punjab state by assailants described by police as Sikh terrorists.

"The situation is very tense. We can't say what we are going to do," area police chief R. Mohan said Tuesday evening in densely populated old Delhi, where the major sectarian battle erupted at the historic Sisganj Sikh temple.

Police fired shots in the air, burst tear gas shells and made repeated charges with steel-tipped bamboo clubs to break up the melee at the temple.

"They challenged us," temple speakman Hardeep Singh said to explain why 150 Sikhs came out of the shrine with ceremonial swords to confront 8,000 Hindu protesters. He said the Hindus shouted curses and derisive chants.

The street in front of the temple was littered with rocks and broken bricks after the battle and a curfew was declared in the area Tuesday night.

Sikhs and Hindus also battled outside a Sikh temple in east Delhi, and police fought running battles in other areas with Hindu rioters who threw stones, blocked roads and set fires. Eight vehicles and two Sikh houses were set ablaze.

The army was put on alert after a meeting of military and government officials, and police cars with loudspeakers cruised the city's neighborhoods at nightfall warning people to stay inside.

General strikes or other protests were declared in six Indian states Tuesday, but widespread violence developed only in New Delhi, where 7,000 extra police and paramilitary troops were called in.

In Parliament, lawmakers shouted protests for a second day against the terrorist actions of Sikhs who demand an independent nation in Punjab.

GM clause secures workers from Perot

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' biggest challenge in the wake of its $700 million buyout of Electronic Data Systems founder H. Ross Perot will be keeping EDS workers from following the outspoken billionaire, analysts said Tuesday.

Perot resigned as chairman and chief executive officer of EDS and from GM's board of directors Monday. The buyout deal also includes a clause forbidding him from starting a company that would compete with EDS during the next three years and from raiding EDS for top employees for 18 months.

But several industry analysts suggested the clause could be challenged and might prove unenforceable.

"These things tend not to stand up in court when challenged, particularly after a year," said Joseph Phillippi, an analyst with E.F. Hutton Group Inc.

Veteran astronaut resigns from NASA

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Veteran space shuttle commander Joe Engle has resigned from NASA, becoming the 10th experienced astronaut to leave the agency since the Challenger accident grounded America's space shuttle fleet.

Engle, a 54-year-old Air Force colonel, officially left the agency Friday, and NASA announced the resignation on Tuesday.

A NASA spokesman said that Engle was required to retire from the military after completing 30 years of service and then chose also to leave NASA.

A NASA source said that economics may have played a role in Engle's resignation from the space agency. Under a federal rule, he would not be eligible to receive full retirement entitlements from the Air Force if he had accepted a NASA civil service position.

Remaining an astronaut would have resulted in a "considerable" loss of income, the source said. Engle did not answer the phone Tuesday at his home or office.

Study reports increase in hospital costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hospital charges jumped 7.5 percent last year despite cost-containment efforts and a decline in the average stay from 6.6 days to 6.4 days, according to a private study released Tuesday.

The average patient's bill per stay increased from $3,571 in 1984 to $3,840 last year, according to the study by Equicor, a joint venture of Hospital Corporation of America and Equitable Group and Health Insurance Co.

"Greater movement of patients to outpatient treatment facilities, the growing use of home care, new medical technologies and procedures, and increasing hospital efficiency have all contributed to the overall decline in the length of hospital stays," said Joseph Hutts, chief operating officer of Equicor.

"While the decreasing length of stay is having a significant impact on containment of overall health care costs, hospital charges in most states are still sharply increasing," Hutts said in a statement.

There was no overall correlation between changes in costs and length of stay, although in some states higher costs occurred along with longer stays.

Texans break in the new snow on the Capitan Slope during the Thanksgiving holidays at Ruidoso's Ski Apache

Texans rule opening of Ski Apache

Texans dominated the slopes of New Mexico's Sierra Blanca as more than 3,800 skiers celebrated the beginning of the season during the Thanksgiving holidays at Lubbock's winter playground, Ski Apache.

Texas Tech students, along with West Texans, were out in full force to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the resort. The weekend was marked with more snow and more skiers than ever this early in the year at Ruidoso. Sunny weather and more than 22 inches of packed snow covered with powder made conditions excellent for the official opening of the season last Thursday.

"This is our best opening in 10 to 11 years, and it looks like it's going to be one of our best seasons yet," said Tommy Johnson, an avid skier who works at Ski Apache. "With all this snow this early, we're bound to have a great season."

Johnson said more than 1,700 skiers, about 75 percent of them from the West Texas area, broke the resort's first day attendance record. On Friday and Saturday, lift ticket sales doubled the first day's take-in.

An early snowfall in November helped make the season an early one for the resort, which is operated by the Mescalero Apache Indian tribe. The tribe negotiated with the U.S. Forestry Service in 1961 for a 99-year renewable lease of the slope areas on Sierra Blanca. The peak of the mountain is located on the reservation. Skiers have been making their way up the mountain, pulled by tractors, since the 1920s, said Zack Begay, an Apache and a member of the resort's ski patrol.

According to New Mexico natives and Texans who frequent the slopes, Ski Apache will continue to be used as a playground for Lubbockites, El Pasoans and others throughout this ski season. Attendance for the holiday season, from Dec. 25 to Jan. 4, 1987, is expected to almost double the Thanksgiving weekend totals and draw 6,000 to 8,000 skiers.

Expansion of snowmaking capabilities to help with the early opening included machines scattered across the mountain which shoot a fine mist of water from swirling tubes to mix with high pressure air to make snow. Machines are used at night so it is cold enough to produce snow.

Trail and snowmaking improvements are sure to mean more participation by Texans in races scheduled throughout the season. Among other races, Ski Apache hosts the Texas Cup, the biggest race of the season, as well as the Lubbock Cup, sponsored by Tech's Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, and the El Paso Cup.

The Texas Cup, the only state championship competition not conducted in its own state, matches skiers in a head-to-head dual racing format. Bob Martin, racing director for Ski Apache, said anyone with a Texas driver's license can enter the event to be named the fastest skier in the state.

"There are some Texans who can race anyone," Martin said of the skiing ability of natives of the Lone Star State. Texans dominated the slopes Thursday, while many New Mexicans seemed to be more comfortable in the bar.

"How many Texans do you see on the slopes and how many New Mexicans do you see?" said David Rutledge, a 1983 graduate of the Tech law school and fourth-place winner of the Lubbock Cup in 1984.

New Mexico's largest source of income is generated by tourism, which is supported predominately by Texas dollars. Several New Mexicans interviewed by The University Daily said they resented being dependent on the Texas economy to support their own.

"That's the problem with New Mexico; it's full of Texans," said Rutledge, now an assistant district attorney in El Paso. "But if it wasn't for the Texans, New Mexico wouldn't have an economy."

Thomas Woolridge of Albuquerque said his favorite part of skiing is running into Texans.

"The problem with Texans is they think everything within a 10-yard radius is their territory," he said. "That's why we like to crash into them so much. 'Once they get here they're trapped.'"

Although the holiday season is the busiest time of year at Ski Apache, Johnson said spring break is one of the best times to visit Ruidoso.

"The slopes usually aren't as crowded because people who got equipment for Christmas and skied hard during the holidays are burned out by spring and are up to something else," Johnson said.

Tech's only female Horn prof centers research on Spanish novels

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is one of a continuing series of stories featuring Texas Tech's Horn professors. The nationally recognized title has been given to 24 Tech faculty members, 18 of whom currently are in residence. Today's story looks at professor of classical and romance languages Janet Perez.

By HOLLY HATCH
News Staff Writer

Janet Perez somehow finds the time to serve on more than 15 editorial boards, teach Spanish, publish articles, do research and raise teenagers. Her ability to organize time has led her to the forefront of her field and has earned her the title of Paul Whitfield Horn Professor.

Perez, a Texas Tech Spanish professor, said she began her teaching career under trying conditions as a graduate student teaching assistant at the University of Missouri.

"I walked in the first day of class to find myself facing a class of 43 men," Perez said. "Every single one of them had failed the class before, some as many as five times."

"I figured that if I could survive that kind of experience, I could do anything."

Perez said she has concentrated her research on post civil war Spanish novels. She said her interest in the area began when she was named a Fulbright Scholar and spent a year in Spain interviewing more than 40 Spanish novelists.

Perez said she is especially interested in censorship imposed by the Book Service Bureau, an arm of Francisco Franco's totalitarian government. Perez said that during one of her visits to Spain during the Franco era she saw an issue of Time magazine with a blank cover.

"I've always wondered what was on that cover," she said.

Writers of the period would often distribute copies of their work to eight or nine friends in case the book service decided to destroy the manuscripts, she said.

Perez now teaches third- and fourth-year Spanish classes and said she enjoys the work a great deal. Students do not have to have an aptitude for foreign language, she said, but there are those who have special disabilities.

"Language involves the use of muscles. Sometimes a student simply cannot imitate sounds even when they try very hard," she said.

Perez is the only woman Horn professor and the only woman Spanish professor in the foreign language department. The situation is not new to her; she said that at the University of North Carolina, she was the first woman ever to be hired in her department and the first to be given tenure.

In addition to all her other obligations, Perez serves as adjunct associate dean of the Tech graduate school.

"I have an unconscious alter-ego that pushes me," she said.

Frosh Council forms test file accessible to all student body

The Texas Tech Freshman Council will begin collecting old exams from students for a campuswide test file from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. today near the post office in the University Center.

With the establishment of a campuswide test file, students will have an opportunity to check out old tests to study through the Student Association office.

David Fisher, a graduate school senator and head of the Freshman Council, said various sororities and fraternities have such systems but that their test files are not open to all students. Establishing a campuswide test file will benefit the entire student body, he said.

Kim Goforth, a Freshman Council member, said all tests will be housed in the SA office in 230 University Center.

Goforth said any students who are unable to bring old exams to the test gathering today can bring them to the SA office whenever it is convenient.

TTUHSC's job fair

Firms present job opportunities

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Allied Health will sponsor a job fair today to assist health profession students in finding jobs, an official with the school said.

The job fair will begin at 10 a.m. in 2C-103 Health Sciences Center.

Shirley McManigal, assistant dean of the School of Allied Health, said the event will be restricted to seniors in health profession studies. Students who are not seniors are discouraged from attending the job fair because personnel obtaining employment at the event may be expected to go to work immediately after graduation, McManigal said.

Health Care firms from TTUHSC's region and around Texas will participate, she said. Students attending the job fair may meet with representatives from 37 medical service companies, mainly hospitals, clinics and rehabilitation centers, she said.

Students eligible for the event are those studying nursing, occupational therapy, physical therapy, medical technology and speech and hearing pathology, McManigal said. Students in the recreation department studying to be athletic trainers may also attend, she said.

McManigal, chairman of the medical technology department at the School of Allied Health, said some students from the main campus may qualify to participate in the event.

The event will be an excellent opportunity for health profession students to make potential employment contacts, McManigal said. Opportunities for jobs outside the Lubbock area will be available, and the representatives from health care firms will be looking for professionally minded students, she said.

McManigal said she wished to stress that the event is intended primarily for Allied Health students. She said other students who meet qualifications for the job fair are welcome, though.

Information about the event can be obtained by calling Rob Shive, administrator of student services for the School of Allied Health, at 743-3220.

Vaughn shows skill on latest live album

By MISSY COSTELLO
Lifestyles Staff Writer

"Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble ... Stevie Ray Vaughn" ... (the crowd cheers) ... Stevie launches into "Say Whatt," his standard performance opening.

Such is the beginning of Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble's latest offering, "Live Alive." The album contains live cuts from the Montreux Jazz Festival July 16, 1985, at a hometown concert in the Austin Opera House July 17-18, 1986, and at Dallas Starfest July 19, 1986.

The record truly reaches a happy medium in that it captures the essence of a live performance of the band while managing to achieve a polished studio sound.

As usual, Vaughn's guitar performances are par excellence. Hailed as one of the best, if not the best, guitarists of our time, Vaughn again proves himself worthy of the lofty praise.

Anyone who has seen Vaughn play live knows he is no studio performer, and "Live Alive" affirms this.

Vaughn's own "Pride and Joy," which has gotten a fair amount of airplay recently, is well-represented on the album. The Double Trouble version of B. Guy's "Mary Had A Little Lamb" is a clever rendition of the childhood chant. Vaughn's guitar solo in the tune is (of course) adept.

Vaughn and his band lend their Texas blues touches to a version of Stevie Wonder's "Superstitions." The result not only equals, but surpasses, the original. Although they (SRV & DT) basically follow the original melody of the song, it definitely bears their signature sound.

Another cover is that of Jimi Hendrix' "Voodoo Chile (Slight Return)," from the "Couldn't Stand the Weather" LP. Vaughn's playing often has been compared to that of Hendrix, so it seems only fitting that he chooses to include one of his songs on the album.

Vaughn's brother Jimmie, of the Fabulous Thunderbirds, joins little brother Stevie Ray in the Austin performance playing the guitar and six-string bass on "Willie the Wimp," "Love Struck Baby," "Look At Little Sister" and "Change It."

Vaughn makes a plea for the end of apartheid at the end of the double album set.

One of the main complaints with many live albums is the sound quality. That is not the case with "Live Alive." It achieves a high sound quality, even at high volume levels, while still managing to retain some of the excitement of a live concert.

The album is a skilled achievement for Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble, and Texas can be proud of one of her native sons.

Hub stages pre-holiday events

By MICHAEL STEPHENS

With one break over and another on the way, you may still be itchin' for something to do. So here's some things to spend that Christmas present money on.

If you want to spend some of that money constructively, crafts from Lubbock and area merchants will be on sale in the University Center courtyard at the Winter Wonderland Arts and Crafts Festival. The event, which has been going since Monday, will raise funds for the UC cultural exchange and fine arts committees. The Wonderland has been successful in the past and is guaranteed to provide plenty of yuletide bargains. It runs from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

There will be live seasonal entertainment at noon during each day of Winter Wonderland. Along with local high school performers, the Tech Jazz Ensemble will perform today at 12:30 p.m. On Thursday, the Collegiate Singers provide the entertainment at 11:30 p.m. and will be followed by the Gail Barber Harp Ensemble at 12:30 p.m. The University Choir will be featured at 12:30 p.m. Friday, followed by the University Singers at 1:30 p.m.

The Madrigal Dinner, now a Tech tradition, will take place Thursday through Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the University Center ballroom. The dinner is a true period piece, with serving wenches and strolling musicians. Tickets cost $9 for Tech students and $12 for the general public.

One of the oldest and finest traditions at Tech, the Carol of Lights, will begin at 7 p.m. Friday. The torchlight procession will begin at the Broadway campus entrance and move to the Science Quadrangle. Performers include the Tech Trombone Ensemble, Brass Ensemble and the University Choir and Singers. Following the performances, the more than 15,000 colored lights that line Memorial Circle will be lit. It is an event steeped in festiveness and tradition, and everyone is encouraged to participate.

Another holiday tradition will arrive at the Texas Tech University Theater this week. Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will begin Thursday and play through Sunday on the main stage. Performances begin at 8:15 p.m., and there is a matinee at 2 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are available between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, and reservations can be made by calling 742-3601. Prices are $2 for Tech students with IDs, $5 for others and $4 for the matinee.

Tchaikovsky's Christmas masterpiece "The Nutcracker" will be performed at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater Friday through Sunday. The event, presented by Civic Lubbock Inc. and Ballet Lubbock, will begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday, at 2:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday. Reserved seat tickets cost $8 for Tech students with IDs and $10 for the general public. General admission is $6 for students and $8 for others. For reservations, call 795-9441.

HUB CITY HAPPENINGS

One of the most popular Christian performers in America, Sandi Patti, will appear in concert Monday at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Patti, who has won two Grammy Awards, will take the stage at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the Love Shop and at the Cornerstone, Sentinel and Logos bookstores. Prices are $10.50 for reserve tickets and $9.50 for general admission.

Tex-Mex rocker Joe "King" Carrasco will play at the Fast and Cool Club at 10:30 p.m. Thursday. You can see his unique brand of "Nuevo Wavo" for $6. Carrasco's shows in Lubbock have been anything but boring, and you can be sure he'll be up to some of his crazy antics (such as playing in the middle of the street) again.

XLR8 will take the stage at the Main Street Saloon Friday and Saturday. You can catch the local rock band at 9 p.m. for a $2 cover.

Fort Worth rock band the Agents will provide the action at the No Frills Grill at 9 p.m. Friday. There is a door charge of $3.

The Guys Next Door will appear at Chelsea Street Pub Friday and Saturday. They will take the stage at 9:30 p.m. There is no cover.

At Jug's, Lubbock's own Larry Johnson will play at noon and Gold Penny will go on at 9 p.m. Friday.

At Cowboys, San Antonio country artists Mesa will play Friday and Saturday. They will be joined by Peg McIntire Saturday. Both shows begin at 9:30 p.m.

Arnaz of 'I Love Lucy' fame dies of lung cancer

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — Desi Arnaz, the Cuban-born singer-bandleader beloved by generations of TV viewers as Lucille Ball's harassed husband Ricky Ricardo on the "I Love Lucy" show, died of lung cancer Tuesday. He was 69.

Arnaz, who was married to Ball for 20 years before their divorce in 1960 and became one of television's most successful producers, died at his Del Mar home in San Diego County just after midnight. Daughter Lucie Arnaz Luckinbill was at his side, reading prayers, publicist Charlie Pomerantz said.

"He was the father of my children and we were always friends, always very friendly and close," Miss Ball said. "I was down there last week. We've talked all the time, through the years. Lucie, our daughter, was with him."

"He died with me — in my arms," his daughter said. "He's out of pain now, and it's nice to know I can turn on the television and see him once in a while."

Dr. Charles Campbell, Arnaz's physician, said his patient had been ill for about a year with lung cancer. "It was from smoking those Cuban cigars; that's the truth," he said.

"I Love Lucy," which Arnaz produced and which also starred William Frawley and Vivian Vance as the Ricardos' neighbors, Fred and Ethel Mertz, was one of television's most successful and longest running shows.

When Ball became pregnant with the couple's son, Desi Arnaz Jr., the entire nation followed her progress, and "Little Ricky" was born in an episode televised the same day that Ball actually gave birth.

Original episodes of the show appeared from 1951 to 1961, and it has been seen in reruns around the world ever since.

Arnaz's Cuban accent and fractured English were constant sources of laughter on "I Love Lucy" and an occasional target of gibes from his wife. His Latin temper often flared at her antics on the show, and he would fire off a burst of nonstop Spanish. Occasionally he would perform a song, complete with conga drums, such as his trademark number, "Ba-ba-loo."

Television pioneer Milton Berle, reached in New York, described Arnaz as an extraordinarily talented television innovator who was "underrated tremendously in our business as a producer and a director."

Through their Desilu company, Arnaz and Ball had produced "I Love Lucy," one of the first series to move its production facilities from New York City to Hollywood.

Arnaz pioneered the three-camera technique, widespread today, in which three cameras simultaneously filmed the "Lucy" show from different angles, with a final program combined later. And instead of going live as did most shows in the 1950s, Arnaz chose to do the "Lucy" shows on film — a decision that was to reap him millions.

Initially, the show's sponsor, Philip Morris, balked at the $22,500 cost per episode of the show, which was four times the cost of a live half-hour. Arnaz agreed to take a $1,000-per-episode pay cut — with the proviso that rights to the show returned to Desilu after one broadcast.

In 1958, Desilu sold 190 episodes of "Lucy" to CBS for $6 million — or $30,000 an episode.

Arnaz sold his Desilu interest to Miss Ball in 1963, three years after the couple divorced. He made a producing comeback in 1967 with "The Mothers-in-Law" television series and made scattered TV appearances in the 1970s.

Tech coach looking like Longhorns' top choice

Don Williams
Associate Sports Editor

The longer the University of Texas head coaching search drags on, the more it appears the Longhorns plan to reel David McWilliams back in. Provided McWilliams, Texas Tech's first-year mentor, cares to return to Austin.

The complexion of the situation, the "feel" for what may be coming, has changed significantly in the past 48 hours.

Certainly, no one was surprised to learn that McWilliams was interviewed for the job Sunday in Lubbock. He had earned the respect of the UT athletic department by being associated with it almost continually since leaving Cleburne High School.

Still, there was no reason for Tech boosters to jump to conclusions and become paranoid in the early days of the search.

There was Miami, Fla., Coach Jimmy Johnson, the Testaverde Tutor, to pawn the job off on. For reinforcement, Johnson is a native Texan, played collegiately at Arkansas and had a son on the Longhorn football team. He said he was not interested, however.

If not Johnson, Tech fans could take comfort in knowing that the candidate list included other big names: Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry, the pilot of a productive Falcon attack that has mastered the Wishbone. Oh, how UT God Darrell Royal loved the Wishbone. Arizona State Coach John Cooper, who has guided the Sun Devils to a 9-1-1 season and a Rose Bowl berth, also had been listed as a possibility in the early line.

Now on Wednesday after the job opened Saturday, it appears Red Raider fans can officially start to worry. Either the status of some other candidate is being well hidden or McWilliams is the front-runner for the job.

UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds has said he interviewed several candidates for the position Sunday and added that discussing their respective interviews was up to the candidates.

As of Tuesday, however, McWilliams still was the only man on the list who had owned up to speaking with Dodds about the position, although an unconfirmed report out of Austin Tuesday night said DeBerry had been contacted.

If several coaches have spoken with Dodds, why is McWilliams the only one who has given public acknowledgement? It is likely that Cooper would have come forward by now, having outwardly expressed interest in becoming the head Longhorn.

If Dodds has spoken with several candidates, then the commonly circulated list that also includes Arizona mentor Larry Smith and Denver Broncos assistant Mike Shanahan appears to be off base or several coaches are keeping their resumes Dodds talks under wraps.

After speaking with Dodds Tuesday night, UT Sports Information Director Bill Little told The UD that Dodds denied reports that McWilliams already had been offered the position.

There still is hope, Raider fans. Tech's T. Jones said Monday that he was perhaps a stronger McWilliams supporter than some influential Longhorns. Several top choices — DeBerry, Cooper and only Dodds knows who else — remain in the running mathematically, so to speak. And McWilliams, if given the chance, could look temptation in the eye and turn away.

For a man who has proven himself in one season, the success of two programs hangs in the balance.

Kentucky's Miller bombs Raiders, 66-60

By KENT BEST
Sports Editor

Kentucky turned 20 Texas Tech turnovers into 21 points and freshman guard Derrick Miller hit a pair of three-pointers down the stretch as the 13th-ranked Wildcats upended the Red Raiders 66-60 in a non-conference clash Tuesday night at Rupp Arena in Lexington, Ky.

Kentucky lifted its record to 2-0 for the year, while Tech, which will face Kansas State Thursday night in Lubbock, fell to 1-1.

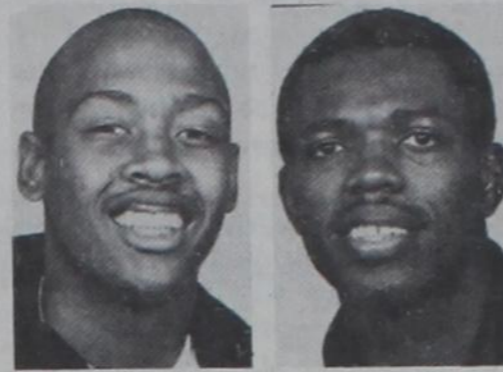

After trailing 32-22 at the half, Tech whittled Kentucky's lead to four at 47-43 on senior guard Mike Nelson's 12-footer with 7:47 remaining in the game.

Miller found the bottom of the net with his first three-pointer on the Wildcats' next trip down court, however, and Kentucky's lead was back to seven.

Sophomore forward Irving Thomas hit one of two free throws with 6:45 left to give the Wildcats an eight-point advantage, but Tech guard Sean Gay countered with a soft jumper in the paint to cut the lead to six.

Miller had found his range, however, and with 5:31 to go, he gunned in his second three-point bomb. Two minutes later, Miller hit from 16 feet to give Kentucky a 60-49 edge.

Gay Nelson

Tech's Wendell Owens and Greg Crowe cut the lead to 63-57 and freshman guard Jerry Mason's 20-foot three-pointer with 14 seconds to go cut the margin to 63-60.

Kentucky's Ed Davender, who led all scorers with 23 points, chipped in a pair of free throws to salt the game away, however, as time ran out on the Raider rally. Thomas added 11 points for the Wildcats.

Gay paced Tech's effort with 18 points, and senior guard Mike Nelson added 10 points for the Raiders. Owens finished with nine points, and Chism, who fouled out with 6:30 left in the game, finished with six.

With a Rupp Arena crowd of 21,805 looking on, the Wildcats jumped out to a 15-4 lead with just seven minutes gone in the first half.

An unfortunate trend for the Raiders was set early on when starting center Kent Wojciechowski picked up back-to-back fouls less than two minutes into the game.

By the 14:58 mark, Tech's 7-foot senior had been given his third foul and was replaced by redshirt freshman forward Kenny Keller.

Tech charged back, however, and when Chism followed up Owens' three-point miss with a bucket underneath, the Raiders were on their way to an 8-0 run.

Gay canned a 12-footer a minute later and added a pair from the free throw line to pull Tech within five at 15-10.

The Wildcats, who started hot, suddenly went ice cold. Freshman guard Rex Chapman, who went 0-for-4 from three-point range for the night, missed his first long-range bomb at the 10:32 mark and Rob Lock followed with a missed 12-footer as Tech inched closer.

Chism nailed a 12-footer with 8:53 to play in the half and Kentucky's lead was cut to three.

Chism picked up his third foul just seconds later, however, and was replaced by Nelson. Nelson responded with an 18-footer to whittle the Wildcats' lead to two at 16-14.

Tech reserve forward Wes Lowe missed the front end of a one-and-one, however, and Chapman gunned in an 18-footer to post Kentucky to a 18-14 advantage.

It was the Raiders' turn to get chilly as Kentucky put together a 10-1 run. The Wildcats' lead eventually bulged to 11 with 3:40 remaining in the half.

The Wildcats, who chalked up three baskets on backcourt steals, held Tech to just four points in the final three minutes of the first half and held the 10-point advantage at intermission.

Keller and Tech reserve center Rodney Henderson were bright spots for the Raiders as Keller pulled down a team-high eight rebounds and Henderson added five rebounds and four points subbing for Wojciechowski.

UT's Dodds denies reports of McWilliams' hiring

By KENT BEST
Sports Editor

University of Texas Sports Information Director Bill Little told The UD late Tuesday that UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds denies reports that Texas Tech Coach David McWilliams has been offered the head football coach's position at the Austin school.

Little issued Dodds' denial after television reports in both Lubbock and Austin said McWilliams had been offered the job and that the first-year Tech coach would accept sometime this week.

Reached earlier Tuesday, Little said that an Austin television reporter, Drew Speier of KTVV-TV, had reported that he believed McWilliams would be hired by the University of Texas.

"That was totally his own finding," Little said at that time. "There has been no statement released by the University and nothing is official."

Citing unnamed sources, reports on local television newscasts Tuesday claimed that McWilliams had been offered the UT job and would likely accept the offer at some point this week.

A Dallas Morning News story Tuesday morning also reported that two unnamed sources had said that a decision already has been made to hire McWilliams.

McWilliams, who was unavailable for comment Tuesday night, is believed to be on a week-long recruiting trip. In a press conference Monday, McWilliams said that although he met with Dodds Sunday, a job offer was not made at that time.

Texas Athletics Club Chairman Tom Morgan, who is a member of UT's 21-member search committee formed to find a replacement for ousted coach Fred Akers, told The UD Tuesday that he was unaware of any decisions being made regarding McWilliams.

"I don't know anything about that," Morgan said when asked about the reports of McWilliams' hiring. "Mr. Dodds is in charge of the search. I'm just waiting until they bring back a recommendation."

Dodds, who is the man ultimately responsible for hiring Akers' successor, is believed to be in close consultation with longtime Longhorn coach Darrell Royal, who also is a member of the search committee. McWilliams, who was an assistant coach at Texas for 16 years, both played and coached under Royal.

Morgan, who said he is not directly involved in the formulation of a six-point list of criteria the school would use in hiring a new coach.

"Coach McWilliams is a viable candidate for the job," Morgan said. "I have to tell you, David would fit our criteria. I like him very much."

Bear player hit with suspension

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chicago Bears linebacker Otis Wilson was suspended for one game without pay "as a result of his flagrant forearm blow to the jaw" of Pittsburgh wide receiver Louis Lipps last Sunday, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced Tuesday.

Rozelle, who earlier Tuesday upheld the two-game suspension of Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin for his body slam of Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon two weeks ago, said the game Wilson must sit out will be Dec. 7 against Tampa Bay. If Wilson decides to appeal, Rozelle said he will arrange a hearing promptly after receiving written notification.

Bears spokesman Jim Carr said Wilson learned of the suspension Tuesday afternoon and hadn't informed the club whether he would appeal.

"Specifically, the (videotape) review revealed that Lipps, after being in motion and following a handoff to a Pittsburgh running back, turned and headed toward Wilson as a potential blocker," Rozelle's statement read. "Wilson cocked his left arm and delivered a forearm blow to Lipps' jaw, knocking him down. It was the initial contact between the two players."

Lipps suffered a concussion and was forced to leave the game.

The statement said "though Wilson's action went undetected by the game officials and no penalty was assessed, there is no justification for this type of dangerous action in the NFL."

Wilson said Monday that he felt there was nothing wrong with his hit. "What I saw was legal," Wilson said after viewing footage of the play. "He came out to block me and I happened to catch him under the chin because he ducked. If he hadn't ducked, I'd have caught him on the chest."

Both Wilson and Bears' Coach Mike Ditka were furious over comments by NBC announcer Charlie Jones, who was broadcasting the game.

When the incident occurred, Jones asked for a replay and then said, "Oh, no, come on, what is happening in the National Football League?"

"After what happened last week, he (Wilson) ought to be thrown out of the ball game ... immediately. That should cost him two weeks, at least."

Jones was referring to Martin's late hit on McMahon.

"I'm going to talk to my attorney and have him write them a letter. Defamation of character," Wilson said.

Ditka called it "a travesty what the announcer did. His job is to report and not to pass judgment."

Pass-happy Giants bury myth in win over Frisco

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Phil Simms buried one myth about the New York Giants just in time for their biggest game of the year Sunday against the Washington Redskins.

Simms' 388 yards passing in a 21-17 victory Monday night over the San Francisco 49ers wiped out any notion that the Giants can be stopped simply by ganging up on running back Joe Morris.

The 49ers tried it and it didn't work after halftime, when they had the Giants down 17-0 on a field goal and two touchdowns by wide receiver Jerry Rice.

Morris ran backwards more than he ran forward the whole game, except for one key play, and finished with a meager 14 yards on 13 carries.

However, Simms took advantage of the 49ers' preoccupation with Morris, shooting San Francisco's air defense full of holes as he rallied the Giants to their sixth straight victory.

The victory clinched a playoff spot for the resourceful Giants, who are tied with Washington at 11-2, and boosted their confidence going into the game against the Redskins for first place in the NFC East.

Simms wanted more than victory against the 49ers, though, and he got it.

He wanted to end any doubts about his ability to keep the team moving with passes, and in a dazzling 10-minute span of the third quarter he did just that, throwing two touchdown passes and setting up another with a 49-yarder to Stacy Robinson.

"Coming into the game I said to our offensive coordinator, Ron Erhardt, 'Let's go out and throw the ball at these guys. I mean, let's just drop back and call every pass that you've drawn up and throw them all.' That's what I wanted to do," Simms said.

He didn't get his wish until the second half.

"Right now, I'm glad we got behind 17-0, because we had to throw it," said Simms, who completed 27 of 38 passes.

The only bright spots for the 49ers, now 7-5-1 and 1½ games behind the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC West, were the performances of Rice and returning halfback Wendell Tyler.

Rice caught an 11-yard TD pass from Joe Montana and ran one yard to score on an end-around play. He caught nine passes for 84 yards, and increased his season TD total to 15, tying a team record set last year by fullback Roger Craig. He also set a team record for receiving yardage in a season with 1,367 yards.

Pardee named new Houston Cougar boss

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jack Pardee, who coached the Chicago Bears and Washington Redskins in the National Football League, was hired as coach by the University of Houston Tuesday with the task of lifting the school's sagging football program.

The 50-year-old Pardee, whose college coaching experience is limited to one year as an assistant, succeeds

Bill Yeoman, who retired from coaching after 25 years to take a post in the university administration.

Pardee was left without a job when the United States Football League suspended operations for a year. He was to have coached the New Jersey Generals after their merger with the Houston Gamblers.

Interim Athletic Director Michael Johnson said Pardee was given a four-year contract that pays $100,000 annually.

"We need someone to build the program back," Johnson said. "We're in a slump."

Pardee takes over a team that won only one of 11 games this season and lost all eight Southwest Conference games. The team also played under the shadow of allegations that some Cougar players were paid and had academic records altered.

Pardee said school officials briefed him on an NCAA investigation into the allegations.

"The impression I have gotten is that no violation should be catastrophic in any category," he said. "I certainly hope there will be no sanctions that directly affect what we are doing now."

"I hope to have a winner — very, very quickly," Pardee continued. "They've demonstrated here that they can win."

Pardee said his goal is for his athletes to get an education, play football and have a good time.

Astros elect not to renew announcer Elston's pact

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Gene Elston, the play-by-play broadcaster for the Houston Astros since the National League baseball team was formed in 1962, was fired by the club Tuesday.

The Astros, in a statement released by General Manager Dick Wagner, said they would not renew Elston's contract but would offer him another spot in the organization.

"Gene has been a part of the history and tradition of Astros baseball," Wagner said. "We sincerely appreciate his contributions over the years and hope he will choose to continue his affiliation with the organization."

Elston said the non-broadcast job with the Astros was not attractive but he had until mid-January to tell them of his decision.

"It's their choice," Elston said. "They just canned me. I didn't have any inkling of it. I just got the news. They gave me absolutely no reason at all," he added. "The only thing they said was my work was unsatisfactory. I asked them to elaborate. Dick Wagner said he didn't want to do that and get into nitpicking."

Elston said during most of his 25-year tenure with the club, he never had a contract. Then about 1981, he was given a year-to-year pact, then a three-year deal that was extended through the most recent season.

"My agreement was to talk by the end of October, but this is the first time I talked to them," he said of Tuesday's discussion.

Elston said he would consider play-by-play offers from other teams.

"I'm going to just wait to see if anybody is interested," he said. "I don't think my career is over."

Elston has broadcast baseball for 45 years.

SPORTS

Rankings rankle Big D residents

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Sports fans in Dallas may think Big D is preeminent when it comes to sports, maybe the best anywhere. Just ask the guy yelling at his TV on Sunday afternoons or the guy behind the beer can at Grapevine Lake.

But it appears that not everyone knows what Dallas knows. Now comes a new Rand McNally publication called "Sports Places Rated: Ranking America's Best Places to Enjoy Sports."

It says Dallas is not No. 1. In fact, it's not even in the top 10.

According to Rand McNally and the author, Richard Whittingham, Dallas is No. 13 as a sports town.

Dallas isn't even No. 1 in Texas, Rand McNally says. Houston is, ranking ninth nationally.

"Rand McNally should stick to their specialty, printing population figures and maps," says Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys. "It's kind of a, kind of a — well, kind of a useless study."

Rand McNally disagrees. In a bright blue, 202-page book that is the fourth in a series of "Places Rated" books, the publishing company ranks 113 cities in several categories: professional sports, college sports, sports events and facilities, sports environment, and recreational sports.

In each category it sets various criteria for awarding points. The more points a city gets, the higher the ranking.

For instance, a city gets 100 points if it has a National Football League franchise, another 4 points if the team has won a Super Bowl in the past five years, 4 points for playing in the Super Bowl, and 4 for making the playoffs.

In the pro football breakdown, Dallas comes in tied for seventh with Chicago.

Newark-Jersey City comes in first in the pro category because four professional teams play there — the New Jersey Devils, the New Jersey Nets, the New York Giants and the New York Jets.

Newark-Jersey City is followed by Los Angeles, Anaheim-Santa Ana, San Francisco, Miami and Washington.

Overall, as a sports city, Chicago finishes in third place. Schramm is mystified.

"They have a football team that has done well one year, a hockey team that never has done anything, a basketball team that hasn't done anything, and two baseball teams that haven't done much," he says.

Dallas' No. 2 professional pride and joy, the Dallas Mavericks, do not make even a blip on the Rand McNally radar. The list of the top 10 pro basketball towns ignores Dallas, a fact that Norm Sonju, the Mavericks' vice president and general manager, finds amusing, especially considering that the likes of Boston and Philadelphia make the top 10.

"Look at where they play in Boston," Sonju says. "They have an old, filthy arena where there are big pillars you have to look around. In Philadelphia, the arena is in an area of town where you don't feel safe walking when you leave."

Even at that, Dallas pulls its best ranking — No. 5 — in the area of sports events and facilities (and third in the subcategory of stadiums and arenas), mainly because it has so many places to play games and because it attracts such touring events as the Virginia Slims Tennis and the Byron Nelson golf tournaments.

An area of particular embarrassment to Dallas is the category of college sports, where the Big D comes out a Big 0. It is not in the Top 10 in football or basketball (men's or women's), while Houston ranks third, seventh and second respectively.

Kappas, Cocolos Win Volleyball Titles

The men and women's 1986 volleyball season came to an end with two interesting points.

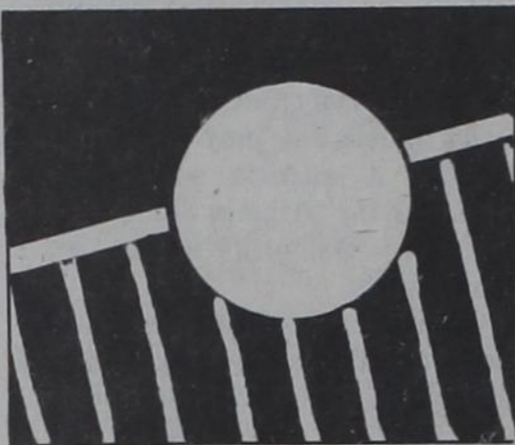

In women's play, Kappa Kappa Gamma advanced to the semifinals to play the Tri Deltas. In a match played closer than the score unveils, the Kappas won 5-15, 13-11, 14-9. In the other half of the bracket, Delta Gamma advanced to play Fury who came out on top 13-11, 13-15, 12-9. In the final match, the Kappas managed to maintain control over Fury throughout the match to win in two games 15-11, 15-13.

Top scorers for the Kappas were Kerri Richardson with 10 points while her sister, Keva scored six points. Maria Leach scored five points. For the Fury team, Terry Jones and Diana Sumney made six points each. Dina Uribe scored five points and Amy Blackwood scored four points.

In the men's bracket, the Cocolos were paired with the Phi Delt 'A' team in semifinal play. These same two teams played each other last year except the match was in the All-University game instead of the semifinals. In the other semifinal match, the Emanons took on the Sigma Chi 'A' team. The Phi Delta team gave the Cocolos a run for their money only to fall 15-4, 9-13, 15-5.

Sigma Chi forfeited so the Emanons advanced to the All-University match.

For the best two out of three games in the All-University match, the Cocolos took the title for the second consecutive year. Throughout the entire match both teams kept close scores. The game was an extremely defense-oriented. The Cocolos won 11-15, 15-8, 15-12. David Bauchert was the leading scorer for the Emanons with nine points, followed by John Litchie and Mike Denardo with seven points each. Mitch Bradshaw followed close behind with six points.

For the Cocolos, the scoring was evenly distributed as Jim Arkell lead with nine points, Guillermo Martinez and Ariel Melendez each scored eight points. Jim Pruitt had seven points.
