Leftists plan march of protest

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Cardinal Jaime Sin blamed government failures in land reform Sunday for the deaths of 12 demonstrators, and leftists readied a march by tens of thousands of protesters to express anger over the shootings.

Teodoro Benigno, spokesman for President Corazon Aquino, said it was her 54th birthday Sunday and she spent the day with her family. He said she was "very concerned, as any president should be," about the march, planned for today.

Bayan, the nation's largest leftist organization, said students, peasants, professionals and others would march from several rallying points toward Malacanang presidential palace. Organizers threatened "more decisive action" if troops again opened fire.

The crisis comes right before a Feb. 2 plebiscite on a new constitution, which is regarded as a vote of confidence in Aquino's stewardship.

About 10,000 peasants and supporters of their demands for land reform marched toward Aquino's office Thursday. At Mendiola bridge near the palace, they forced a line of police to retreat. Marines behind the police fired on the protesters, killing 12 and wounding 94.

Both left and right-wing groups condemned the "Mendiola massacre," the bloodiest street clash of Aquino's presidency.

Aquino named a commission to investigate and promised justice for victims and their families.

Sin, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Manila, referred to the killings in his sermon Sunday at Manila cathedral. The cardinal played a key role in bringing Aguino to power last February, and on Sunday he called on her to act urgently on land reform.

Aquino has said land reform is a major goal of her government. She has proceeded slowly on the issue, however, since taking office 11 months ago after a civilian-military uprising ended the 20-year authoritarian presidency of Ferdinand Marcos.

Her administration has said it hopes to eventually grant land titles to about 4 million landless peasants in this country of more than 54 million.

Sin said he was not trying to lay personal blame for the killings.

"We ask the government, in the wake of this tragedy, to turn its urgent attention to the issues of land reform," Sin said.

Report lists hostage release as motive in arms deal

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new draft report being prepared by the Senate Intelligence Committee on the Iran arms-Contra affair says one of President Reagan's chief motivations in approving the arms transfer was the release of U.S. hostages in Beirut, congressional sources said Sunday.

Ever since the U.S. dealings with Iran became public in November, Reagan has maintained that his chief motivation was the re-establishment of ties with the Moslem government of Iran because of the oil-rich nation's strategic location on the Persian Gulf.

But "it is clear that getting the hostages back was one of the main concerns, and was a higher priority than the White House has been willing to admit publicly," said source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The draft is being prepared by the staff of the Democratic-controlled committee and will be circulated to panel members this week, said another source, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

spars with Democrats

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN - The first of many political sparks that will fly this year already have been ignited between Republican Gov. Bill Clements and Democratic officeholders.

It took less than a week.

Week No. 2 of the Clements administration should begin on a harmonious note. The Senate is expected today to approve Clements' nomination of Jack Rains as secretary of state. Rains, a Houston lawyer and businessman, won 6-0 approval last week from the Senate Nominations Committee.

Also on the Senate side today, the Economic Development Committee has scheduled its first hearing on bills, including a proposal on bingo prizes. The Senate Finance Committee will continue its review of 1988-89 budget requests with a look at the Commission on Human Rights and the Texas Indian Commission.

The House, which was divided into committees last week, now is going to work on budget problems. The Appropriations Committee and the Ways and Means Committee have set organizational sessions this week.

The budget work on both sides could lead to further friction between Clements and lawmakers and other state office-holders. The governor touched off the first battle Friday by saying the state agriculture commissioner should be picked by the governor rather than elected by the people.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Democrat, said Saturday he is ready for a fight with a governor he thought was preaching harmony.

"I think this kind of reveals what his administration is going to be based on, which seems to be Silly Putty," Hightower said.

Clements also drew some heat from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, for talking about getting lawmakers to give more budget power to the governor. It's not likely, Hobby said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Conservatives take power in Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) - West German voters returned Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative coalition to power Sunday but reduced their support for his Christian Democratic Party. The anti-NATO Greens made impressive gains.

Computer projections, which have proven highly accurate in the past, showed a significant drop in support for Kohl's party compared with the last national elections four years ago. But projected results showed his coalition with the small Free Democratic Party was in no danger.

The elections were overshadowed by the kidnapping of two West Germans in Beirut, Lebanon. But pollsters said the crisis was not expected to influence voters.

Johannes Rau, who ran for chancellor under the banner of the main opposition Social Democratic Party, conceded defeat on national TV an hour after polls closed at 6 p.m.

Reagan to talk about health insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to talk about catastrophic health insurance in his State of the Union speech for the second straight year but, once again, what he will say remains a mystery even to government health officials.

Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen told a Senate panel Thursday that he did not know whether the president would embrace his proposal to provide catastrophic coverage for the elderly by increasing Medicare premiums about $5 a month.

A department official said Bowen still did not know late Friday whether his proposal — which has won widespread support in Congress — would be made part of the president's speech.

Delivery service caters to condom customers

By JILL JOHNSON News Staff Writer

Little business and numerous prank phone calls marked the first week of Paul Gloyna's "Protection Connection," a contraceptive delivery service, around the Lubbock and Texas Tech community, the young entrepreneur said Sunday.

"We're not trying to promote premarital sex," said Gloyna, a sophomore finance major from Hale Center. "We're just trying to help out those who don't know much about contraceptives."

Gloyna said that prior to entering the business, he consulted with several doctors about the idea. One doctor told Gloyna that providing condoms is a more effective form of birth control than the Saran Wrap method, which he claimed is a commonly used form of birth control.

Glovna delivers both condoms and sponges upon request. He said he began thinking of starting a contraceptive delivery service in Lubbock after a friend began one at the University of Texas last October. Business at UT proved to be profitable, giving Gloyna the idea that such a service could be successful in Lubbock.

Gloyna said he is marketing the service mainly to college-age groups but also to high school students through fliers and letters to student organizations.

He said profit is not the only motivating factor in starting the service; he expressed concern about the increasing number of pregnancies among young women.

"There is a concern for the growing number of pregnancies among teenagers," he said.

Gloyna said a 79-year-old woman called him saying she has grandchildren in high school and admitting that there is a need for his

1988 spending plans

Lawmakers discuss new budget

New York Times News Service

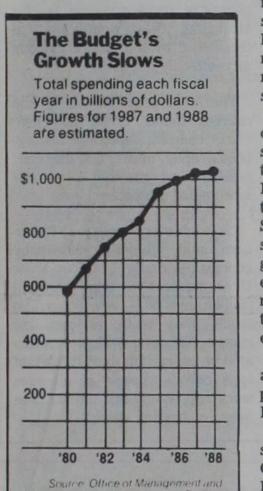

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's 1988 budget falls far short of the manifesto for a "third term" that some of his close advisers once hoped and lobbied for.

James Miller III, the White House budget director, insisted that the new request is "not a carbon copy" of last year's, but it contains little that could be described as the makings of a new agenda for the last two years of the Reagan presidency. The lack of such an agenda had been worrying some of Reagan's intimates, such as Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, even before the eruption of the Iranian arms affair, and it worries them more now.

"I agree that it isn't a carbon copy," said one such adviser, "but I'm afraid that it will be seen as just a badly smudged Xerox. You can't cite many fundamental differences from what went before."

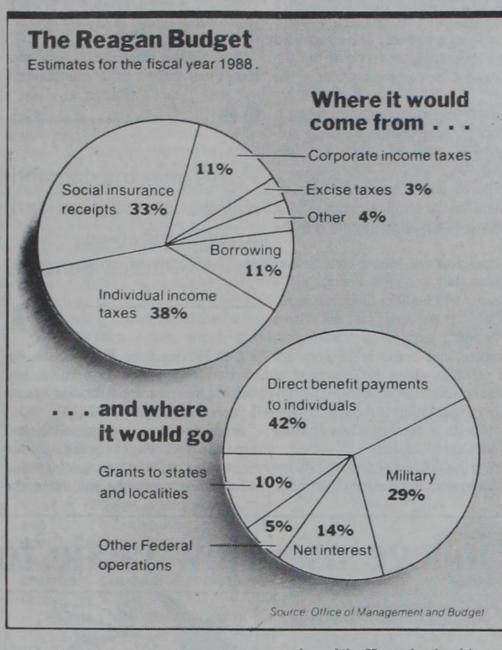

White House officials insisted that changes had been made to take account of the fact that the Senate, as well as the House of Representatives, will be controlled by the Democrats in the 100th Congress, which opened Jan. 6. They cited what they called two important "signals" of the president's willingness to be flexible.

"The standing of the president is always a key element in how his proposals are treated up here," a key Republican lawmaker said.

Rep. William Gray III, the Pennsylvania Democrat who is the Budget Committee chairman, argued that Reagan himself had signaled the need to consider tax increases because of his advocacy of increased user fees, since he took office. That the sale of federal assets and other demonstrates, the official said, "our revenue measures. gress failed to complete action on a single one of the 13 appropriation bills, but the blame was shared by both parties. This time, the Democrats will be under great pressure to produce a coherent alternative to Reagan's budget and not just to deride it, which is one reason why there were few on the Hill pronouncing the new request "dead on arrival."

In the view of both White House officials and congressional leaders, there will be major battles over medical entitlements, student loans and farm subsidies, as well as aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, which actually is more a foreign policy question than a budget question.

The fights will not necessarily take place along strict party lines. Several of the incoming Democratic committee chairmen in the Senate, including John Stennis of Mississippi, who will take over Appropriations, and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who will head Finance, are moderates who could split from their more liberal colleagues if the new majority leader, Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, is unable to maintain party harmony.

The dominant, underlying issue, however, will be the budget deficit. Reagan's trillion-dollar proposal envisions a deficit of $107.8 billion, just below the $108 billion ceiling set by asks for a line-item veto again, or a the budget balancing law. ### College uses new tactic to lure seniors

By The College Press Service

While college efforts to shore up enrollment by pursuing "nontraditional students" older than age 24 have helped forestall the longpredicted national enrollment decline, at least one campus is preparing to recruit even older people for its classes.

Lakeland College is about to build a retirement community on its campus, thinking it also can convince the senior citizens who live there to sign up for courses.

Lakeland President James Catanzaro said he is looking for a 'compatible" developer to build retirement condominiums on 150 heavily forested acres of the campus.

"We have 450 undeveloped acres, and of that we'd like to devote 150 to a retirement village for retired teachers and other like-minded professionals," Catanzaro said. 'You'd have maybe 200 to 300 (senior) people with so much to offer: life experience, history, personal recollections. It would provide something I feel is very important: intergenerational learning."

The Lakeland project apparently is unique, said Wesley Stubbs of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), which advises colleges and universities on finding alternative sources

Stubbs said she has heard of sales and lease-backs of college properties and services-for profit plans, but not of a project like Lakeland's.

Marina Buhler-Miko of the Higher Education Strategic Planning Institute Washington, D.C., agreed. She said schools should "segment their markets. (Keeping classrooms full of students) isn't just marketing and promotions. It's strategy."

To Catanzaro, it's a question of "why not?"

"It makes perfectly good sense,"

he said. "It's a continuation of what we're doing: marketing courses to the 35- to 55-year-old age group. There must be many, many more people interested in continuing education."

Catanzaro said retired people often complain that "they see only other old people. They miss the energy of younger people. In this situation, they would not be threatened by the college campus as youth-only territory."

The president envisions the retirees taking credit and noncredit courses, especially history, photography, music, art, exercise, health and maybe even the newfangled computer classes.

"I teach every quarter," Catanzaro said, "mostly philosophy courses. Recently I got to know three students - they were all women over 60 - who offered so much. They really enriched the classes. This plan will provide the kind of interaction most important to a college: people of all ages working, studying, having fun together, sharing ideas."

Country vocalists must muster sincerity in songs

By The College Press Service

For singers, country music is the toughest style to master. The melodies are no problem, but to invest yourself in unspeakable cornball fantasies about the most ordinary, everyday topics is extraordinarily difficult.

In the best country music, there's a tension between the singers' sincerity and the distance they keep from the shmaltz they wear on their sleeves. They don't really expect us to swallow all their hard-luck tales, even though we expect them to sound credible.

Unlike the blues, where singers invest so much of themselves that the listening experience resembles a shared confessional, country singers use the distance from their material to charm the audience.

When Bob Dylan, the master of innuendo, sings a line such as "You can have your cake and eat it too" in "Lay Lady Lay," he's winking at us. The words are transparent. We can hear right through them, but his delivery forces us to appreciate the feeling behind the cliche. A quick list of British approaches to the style helps explain just how important country is to rock 'n' roll.

The Beatles, for instance, sported a country cut on almost every album. Titles such as "Act Naturally" and "What Goes On" were given to Ringo for comic relief. The Rolling Stones put as much into "Country Honk" as they did into Robert Johnson's "Love in Vain."

On his country album, "Almost Blue," Elvis Costello curbs his typically snarling attacks to emphasize the melodrama of lines such as "I couldn't stop my tears from falling on the courtroom floor." Plainly ironic sentiments like that don't need any dressing up. Why flatten the exaggerations?

As words without music, of course, country songs usually look bland and two-dimensional. They're soap operas without qualifying twang, jokes without punch lines. So the delivery of the words becomes all-important. Singers must impose their personalities on all the other instruments.

The current country revival is finding able talent in all kinds of settings, from the luminescent harmony of the Judds to the rambling guitar style of Steve Earle. Two recent country records by T-Bone Burnett and Dwight Yoakum epitomize the less-is-more humility that masters such as Hank Williams personified.

T-Bone Burnett, who last year produced Elvis Costello's astonishing "King of America" album and Peter Case's album of acoustic rock, sings songs of heartache and disillusion with such a lackadaisical air that the record's low profile becomes part of its charm.

Costello's "King of America" mixes musical metaphors. It's country music used to mock American values with a compelling sarcasm. Burnett prefers the plain and simple. He sings of the love we all spend too much time grieving about and the regrets that overwhelm us beyond all rational

The songs on "T-Bone Burnett" won't shake you up or turn your head inside out or radically alter the way you look at the world. But give them a chance, and they'll start to sound like the nose on the face of your emotions, the dry jokes that don't depend so much on their punch lines.

Most of the settings are simple and capacious. There's acoustic guitar with acoustic bass, drumless rhythms that seem to hang in the air.
