Police source says McFarlane overdose was a suicide attempt

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An investigation concluded that former presidential adviser Robert McFarlane attempted suicide, a police source said Tuesday, while authorities said officially only that there was no evidence of foul play in McFarlane's Valium overdose.

"There's not going to be any ruling that it was an attempted suicide. We are satisfied that there was no crime and there's no further legal action to be taken," said Harry Geehreg, a spokesman for the Montgomery County Police in suburban Maryland.

But a source close to the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the police had determined McFarlane's ingestion of 25 to 30 tablets of Valium, a tranquilizer, was an attempt to take his own life.

The source also confirmed that police learned that McFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, had written a note that his wife Jonda carried to the hospital. However, police did not know the contents of the note, the source said.

Geehreg said he knew nothing of the note, and McFarlane's attorney Peter Morgan declined comment on the matter.

The 49-year-old McFarlane, who associates said has recently been in severe pain with a back ailment, was rushed to the hospital Monday morning, shortly before he was to testify before the presidential commission set up to investigate the National Security Council's role in the Iran arms-sale crisis.

He was listed in good condition Tuesday at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland and was visited by his wife, said hospital spokesman Lt. Russ Sanford. He said McFarlane was not receiving telephone calls.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had not tried to contact his former aide, but that the president and first lady Nancy Reagan planned to telephone McFarlane. He said Reagan would likely call McFarlane "when it is appropriate."

Fitzwater said the White House "had no inside information or medical information" to comment on the reported suicide attempt.

Jonda McFarlane, meanwhile, issued a terse statement saying, "Bob and the children and I appreciate enormously the great love and support that we are getting from friends and strangers alike."

McFarlane, who stands alone in his public insistence that Reagan gave prior approval to sending arms to Iran, was to testify behind closed doors Monday before the three-member presidential commission headed by former Sen. John Tower of Texas, said the panel's spokesman, Herbert Hetu.

McFarlane, who associates said has been under great strain because of the Iran-Contra matter, also had a chronic back condition and had been taking Valium to ease it, according to his attorney, Leonard Garment.

McFarlane's secretary at the private Center for Strategic and International Studies here, Carolyn Skullin, said her boss has had "very very bad" back pain in recent weeks, and that he had been forced to remain on his back for as much as two days in a row.

McFarlane resigned his White House post in December 1985 to join the staff of the center and to serve as a consultant to corporations doing business abroad.

Kidnappers work to strike deal for hostages-prisoners exchange

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Moslem kidnappers were reported Tuesday trying to strike a deal with Israel that would free 400 Arab prisoners in exchange for three Americans and an Indian held in Beirut and a captured Israeli airman.

The Christian-run Voice of Lebanon and the Moslem-run Voice of the Nation radio stations quoted "reports from Washington and other capitals" as saying the captors might be working through the Red Cross for an exchange.

In Geneva, the International Committee of the Red Cross denied involvement in any negotiations.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel said his government would be willing to consider a direct request for negotiations, but added that no such request has been made.

Israeli officials say Washington has not asked Israel to meet demands by the kidnap group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, to release 400 prisoners in exchange for the lives of the four educators it holds.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters in Washington, "Our terrorism policy remains the same, and I reiterate once again that we will not ransom hostages nor will we encourage other countries to do so."

A group called the Revolutionary Justice Organization renewed a threat Tuesday to harm hostages if the United States takes military action. "The retaliation will be very cruel," it said in a statement delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency.

It holds American hostages Joseph James Cicippio, 56, of Valley Forge, Pa., acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut; Edward Austin Tracy, 56, a writer who formerly lived in Burlington, Vt.; and Jean-Louis Normandin, 35, a French television engineer.

One hostage did gain his freedom in Beirut on Tuesday. Police said Jack Seikaly, 50, a wealthy Lebanese-American kidnapped four days ago, was freed unharmed after his family paid a "sizeable ransom."

A smiling Seikaly, uncle of Syracuse University basketball star Rony Seikaly, told reporters at his home in Moslem west Beirut: "I'm fine."

He refused to discuss his kidnapping or be photographed.

Lebanon's Italian community appealed in Beirut newspaper ads Tuesday for information on the fate of Italian businessman Alberto Molinari, kidnapped in west Beirut Sept. 11, 1985.

No motive is known for Molinari's abduction. He is among 26 foreigners, including eight Americans, who are missing after being kidnapped in Lebanon.

Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite sought to obtain their release, but he vanished last Jan. 20 and now Waite, too, is missing.

The four teachers now the focus of kidnap news were abducted from the Beirut University College campus on Jan. 24 by gunmen disguised as police.

They are Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City, a lecturer in accounting; Alann Steen, 47, of Boston, a communications instructor; Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho, a visiting professor of mathematics and computer science; and Mithleshwar Singh, 60, a native of India, legal resident alien of the United States and a visiting professor of finance.

Navy official says

Lubbock could tap $50 million

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

Lubbock area businesses could tap into a $50 billion market if local businessmen learn to bid for U.S. Defense Department contracts effectively, a Navy official said at a local federal procurement workshop Tuesday.

Rear Admiral James Whittaker, commander in charge of naval supplies, said the Department of Defense, as a whole, spent $150 billion during fiscal year 1986 for contracted goods and services.

Whittaker, in Lubbock for the seminar sponsored by U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said the Navy, as well as the other armed forces, has been awarding contracts on a competitive basis for the past six years.

He said both the Navy and the contractor benefit from competitively awarded contracts. The Navy gains top quality equipment at a reasonable price, and the contractor receives a lucrative government contract under the system, Whittaker said.

Combest agreed, adding that learning to bid competitively for government contracts was the purpose of the seminar.

"It is American business at its best," the congressman said. "It is competition. This could prove to be extremely lucrative for West Texas businesses."

"I think the chances are extremely good that West Texans can get some of these contracts. This region could become a viable supplier of goods to the Defense Department."

The process of competing for a defense contract is not as easy as it seems, said Brig. Gen. Charles Henry, competition advocate for the U.S. Army.

"There are vast differences between dealing with the military and the commercial sector," Henry

Rodney Markham/The University Daily

said.

All bids are sent to a contracting officer, who works with a specialist dealing with small and disadvantaged business utilization in deciding which company will receive the contract, the general said.

Whittaker said a publication, the Commerce Business Daily, which gives information about contract solicitations and specifications, is the most important printed source of defense contract information.

"This is the key to small business government procurement," the admiral said.

Henry said contracts cannot be obtained through personal contacts with ranking members of the armed services.

"We have created rules and regulations to prevent getting contracts through the so-called good ol' boy network," Henry said.

Combest said businesses would not be able to secure contracts in order to sell goods to the military at highly inflated prices, referring to several such incidents in which it was discovered that several hundred dollars were paid for items such as hammers, nuts or bolts.

"You're not going to get a chance to make any $600 toilet seats," Combest said.

Whittaker said an example of contract possibilities is subcontracting for parts and goods to be used on aircraft carrier task forces.

"Each carrier task force is a floating city that uses a wide variety of goods," the admiral said.

The carrier itself costs a total of $2.5 trillion, the planes carried on board are a $150 billion investment, and each carrier contains up to $1 million worth of inventory for crew consumption, Whittaker said.

He said many of those items could either be directly contracted or subcontracted through prime contractors by West Texas businesses. Prime contractors are the large corporations that build the ships, planes and other hardware that take extremely large capital investments, Whittaker said.

The admiral advised businessmen not to expect to land extremely large contracts immediately but that a number of smaller opportunities are available.

"You're not going to sell us $5 billion worth of merchandise in your first year," Whittaker said.

During fiscal year 1986, the Navy awarded about three million small purchase contracts. Small purchase contracts are defined as those totaling less than $25,000, he said.

Representatives of the Air Force, the Army and the Navy were at the workshop to advise individuals on obtaining contracts. Prime contractors, such as General Dynamics, Bell Helicopter, E-Systems and LTV Aerospace and Defense sent representatives to instruct businessmen on subcontracting.

Combest said the conference was the largest that Whittaker and Henry had spoken before. He said about 400 people registered for the seminar.

Cavazos takes budget to Austin

By TREY BARKER
News Staff Writer

Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos, appearing before a House budget and oversight subcommittee in Austin Monday, submitted preliminary budgets for the university totaling about $200 million for the upcoming biennium.

Cavazos said he and other Tech administrators asked the subcommittee to allocate Tech $98.2 million for the 1988 fiscal year and $104.4 million for the fiscal year 1989.

Five items of major consideration were presented to subcommittee members during the meeting which, Cavazos said, was called for the purpose of gathering budgetary information to be reviewed during the current legislative session.

Cavazos said his presentation focused primarily on an improvement in faculty and staff salaries. Cavazos requested a 9 percent increase in faculty and staff salaries for the 1988 fiscal year and about a 10 percent increase for the 1989 fiscal year.

Cavazos said an increase in faculty salaries would allow the university to continue functioning at the level it has been throughout the years.

"We have 54 fewer faculty members than we did in 1985. That turns into 214 fewer (course) sections," he said.

Cavazos said the lower number of course sections translates into greater overcrowding of classes and less personal relationship between students and professors. He said overcrowding makes it harder for some senior students to enroll in the courses they need for graduation.

While Cavazos said he recognizes the need to save money, he added that it should not be done at the students' expense.

"We tend to shove the costs onto the students," he said.

He said because of this year's budget cuts, there are about 300 fewer students employed by the university. There are almost 400 fewer non-student employees this year than in fiscal 1985.

"When that happens, the local economy hurts," he said.

Cavazos said a smaller faculty and staff leads to many problems related to student services as well as putting a strain on counseling and advising. "That also leaves us short in the financial aid office," he said.

Cavazos said Tech has a smaller financial aid staff than any other school of comparable size in the state.

For the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, Cavazos requested $53.6 million for both the 1988 and 1989 fiscal years.

Cavazos said he cited needed salary increases, recovery for tuition shortfalls, funding for the El Paso ambulatory care education program, the Alzheimer's Disease Center and support for the allied nursing and health program as items included in his TTUHSC budget request.

The Tech Museum, which operated under a budget this year of $575,000, has asked for an increase to almost $750,000 each year for the next two fiscal years.

Cavazos said the meeting was productive. He and other Tech administrators will appear Tuesday before the Senate Finance Committee.

Cavazos said he does not expect the final budget to meet final legislative approval during this regular session.

Bullock: state income tax viable

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock told Senate budget writers Tuesday he is as opposed as anyone to a state income tax but "you might as well talk about it, you might as well think about it."

Bullock said that next year Louisiana, because it has a state income tax, will obtain about a 28 percent increase in revenue by amending its law to coincide with the new federal tax law.

"But in Texas, where are we?" Bullock said. "We don't have that; we don't have a growth tax."

The comptroller appeared before the Senate Finance Committee on his request for an office appropriation of nearly $218.4 million in 1988-89. Unlike for many state agencies, the original Senate bill proposes almost as much as Bullock is requesting.

Bullock said as a result of layoffs and job attrition during Texas' recent financial crisis, his office had lost 470 jobs the last two years.

"The one thing that has really hurt is the training program," he said. "You cannot, or I am told you cannot, take a beginning accountant out of school, throw him out into the field and have that beginning accountant audit one of the Fortune 500 or even one of the larger companies in Texas without a pretty extensive training program, which we did have."

"I know what you're talking about. I know it's got problems," Bullock responded. "I'm just saying, ... first of all there ain't no money anywhere else, folks."

Quit despising thy youth

Without the age-old prestige of such universities as Harvard, Yale and the University of Texas at Austin, Texas Tech couldn't possibly hope to survive as a university with at least some outstanding programs, right? Everyone knows the key to a reputation for academic excellence comes from the date on the cornerstone of the administration building. Tech's young age has been used as a crutch by the administration, President Lauro Cavazos, the state Legislature and the Tech regents to explain the university's deficiencies in faculty, academic programs, alumni support and research grants.

While regents lean on the excuse of Tech's lack of birthdays, UT, at the ripe young age of 103, surpassed Harvard in endowment funds. Harvard celebrated its 300th birthday last October. Previously, Harvard had the top spot in the nation, with more than $3.5 billion in support. They were edged out in August by the UT system, which boasted $3.6 billion in endowment funds.

Imagine that. Age obviously wasn't a factor in UT's endeavor. Instead of viewing the institution's age as a detriment, officials buckled down and came up the big winner in the endowment contest. Tech officials could learn something from the go-getters down in Austin. Just last month, Tech Board of Regents Chairman Wendell Mayes said the university should be proud to come in fourth in the state in acquired research funds since Tech is such a young school. According to the most recent study released by the Coordinating Board, UT, Texas A&M University and the University of Houston placed first, second and third in acquired funds. Tech ranked behind UH at University Park, a 52-year-old university — eight years younger than Tech.

What happened to quality, not quantity? Cavazos has said numerous times that it is difficult for a young university to attract prestigious faculty and offer higher salaries than the older, more established institutions. It is understandable that the market to attract educators to a college campus is a competitive process, but using Tech's age as a crutch instead of emphasizing the university being on the leading edge on technology has only hindered the progress of the school.

Every year when enrollment figures are released, comments about how Tech's results are satisfactory considering the university's location in West Texas and the institution's young reputation.

The age stigma also has hindered Tech in alumni support efforts. An endowment campaign begun last year is a noble effort and has achieved nearly two-thirds of its $60 million goal, but the sentiment on which the campaign kicked off is upsetting. Cavazos said Tech needed an endowment drive because the university was so young and it didn't have an established endowment fund. Tech's lack of money is not directly related to the school's age, but can perhaps be attributed to unstructured alumni groups, lack of aggressive ex-student correspondence and poor alumni loyalty.

Tech officials should dismiss the school's age as a shortfall in the competitive arena of higher education and concentrate on fighting for what Tech deserves. With an attitude like "the little train that could," this 60-year-old university can convince prospective ex-students, outstanding faculty and those who grant research money that Tech is the place to learn, teach and do research.

Some analogies: A parent's love for a child is constant no matter the age of the child, and a car doesn't run better when it gets older. So why should Tech just sit around for 100 years to reap the "benefits" of being an aged institution? Regents, local legislators and the administration: the money doesn't get any greener and outstanding faculty and students aren't a dime a dozen ... You gotta go after 'em.

Time vs. quality

Education takes longer than four years

Edward Gately
News Staff Writer

College students are taking longer than the expected four-year period to complete their college educations. The results of a study by the U.S. Department of Education, printed in the Jan. 21 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, indicate that more students are taking longer than four years to graduate from college. Four thousand students of the high school class of 1972 took part in the study.

David Marsh, an assistant vice president at Ohio State University, said the number of students finishing in four years at OSU has dropped from 30 to 25 percent in the past 10 years.

The reasons for the trend, as indicated in the study, are increased difficulty in obtaining financial aid, such as grants and loans, and the fact that more students have to hold jobs to make ends meet.

One very important reason is missing from the analysis. There are students out there who enjoy the college experience and are in no hurry to move on.

College is a period unlike any other in a person's life. Much of a person's mental development takes place while he/she is a college student. Many choices are made during this time. College is where a young person becomes an individual who can think and manage on his/her own.

It also gives students an opportunity to choose what they want to do with the rest of their lives. It should not be a rushed choice.

The study also pointed out that "better" students were more likely to complete their college education within four years. Fifty-six percent of the high school students who scored in the top quarter on a Department of Education aptitude test in high school finished in four years.

What is the definition of a good college student? There is much more to being a good college student than good grades. College is not an assembly line designed to prepare students for the business world in a limited amount of time.

Students should make the most of the short time they spend in college. During these years, as a student struggles to keep up with classes and "grades," he/she has the opportunity to meet new people, learn new ideas and exchange views on subjects important in today's society. College also serves as a format for students to express themselves in many ways. A well-rounded education is something that should be approached slowly, not with a hard nose and blinders.

To many companies in the business world, a bachelor's degree is not considered enough to make it with them. Instead of rushing through college only to meet a possible slammed door, students should take time and consider the many possibilities open to them.

LETTERS

Tech should fight

To the editor:

Once again, it appears that the political and financial situation at Texas Tech is in a position to change: that change being from bad to worse.

Recently, the Select Committee on Higher Education has been looking for ways to push education at Tech and in West Texas back 20 years. First, by proposing a tier system for state universities and now by proposing the formation of five regional superboards, the committee's members have made it quite obvious how little they think of Tech. Under both of these proposed systems, the two schools who stand to be least affected by the current state financial difficulties (UT and A&M, by virtue of their untouchable Permanent University Fund) will be the only schools to benefit. Meanwhile, schools such as Tech who truly depend on state aid for their survival are being virtually ignored.

Of course, it is quite easy to ignore someone who never says anything. Throughout this whole state budget fiasco the students and alumni of Tech have behaved like good cattle, just sort of milling about waiting for someone to lead them to the slaughter house. I am yet to read a letter to the editor addressing this issue. Instead, we have for the past week been subjected to a running debate over the best pickup lines for a cantaloupe. If this is any indication of the intellectual depth of the student body here (which I firmly believe is not the case), then it is small wonder that legislators in Austin see Tech as a second-rate school.

Last week, I called the Student Association office to see what they were planning to do about the current situation. The response of, "uh, nothing yet," did little to ease any misgivings I had. When I asked why there have been no letter-writing campaigns, I was told, "We'd look pretty silly yelling Fire! if nothing's burning." If nothing's burning, then where is all the smoke coming from? The time to act is not after the forest has burned down, but rather before the match is even struck.

Reagan must assert himself despite scandal

Frank Plemons
Guest Columnist

President Reagan gave a prime speech in his State of the Union Address a few weeks ago. Overall, Reagan's words had echoes of his earlier speeches from his presidency and his two campaigns for office. However, amidst a mock standing ovation and periodic groans from the Democrats, Reagan maintained the charismatic tone that he has become famous for.

Reagan declined to speak in depth of the Iran-Contra scandal, as well he should not have since it will take over a year for the official investigative report to reach Congress. In the meantime, the American people will hear only technical developments in the case — and whatever the press can and will dig up in the matter.

Until then, Reagan and his administration have much more important issues to deal with. The economy is in so much of a slump that it can be felt in this state. The national unemployment rate may have steadied, but it continues to rise in Texas. The national debt continues to grow. To make his dilemma worse, Reagan now must face a majority of Democrats in both houses of Congress. The 100th Congress no doubt will give Reagan a considerable amount of trouble. He now will have to make compromises on defense spending and foreign military aid.

As Americans, we should be more concerned with what the Reagan administration can do for the economy than what really went wrong with "Contragate" and who is to blame. If the president did have anything to do with scandal, then he should come forward, admit it and apologize to the American people. Therefore, he would leave the White House in a respectable state for the next incoming administration.

Reagan also should gain the cooperation of Congress in order to leave the nation with a strong direction of economic progress before his term of office comes to an end. Such assertive leadership would ensure a sense of hope and promise in the next generation of Americans.

Frank Plemons is a freshman mass communications major from Dallas.

being treated like a second-class institution falls on everyone's shoulders. No one else will do it for you. If the student government lacks the leadership to initiate a letter-writing campaign, then each student must take it upon themselves to write to their district representative and let them know how they feel about the select committee's ideas. The UD could lead the way by publishing a list of names and addresses of each district representative. Further, the alumni association needs to become involved. Both of my roommates are graduates of Tech and have not yet received anything from the alumni association that addresses this issue.

The students, faculty and alumni need to take some form of action, now, before it's too late.

Reagan's proposed tariff on oil bolsters Clements

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — President Reagan has taken a step in the right direction on the oil import tariff question, Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday while promising to seek Reagan's support for a fee later this month.

Clements said he was encouraged by Reagan's order that Department of Energy officials prepare a policy recommendation on imposing a fee on foreign oil brought into the United States.

For the past year, Reagan has opposed tariff proposals from oil industry officials and oil state politicians who say cheap foreign oil is destroying the domestic petroleum industry.

Clements has said he favored an import tariff since oil began its price tumble from $28 per barrel to less than $10 last summer.

"Obviously, the fact that he requested a position paper at least says he has an open mind in this regard, which is a change in his former position," Clements told his weekly news conference.

"About six to eight months ago ... he made it very clear at that time that he was opposed to an oil import fee. I think a step in the right direction is his charging the Department of Energy" with drafting the paper, Clements said.

Clements will attend a meeting of the National Governors Conference in Washington from Feb. 20 to 26, and he said oil prices and an import fee is one topic he hopes to discuss with the president that week.

The governor said he "will be meeting with President Reagan at a White House dinner for the governors and hopefully at a subsequent meeting later in the week. This (oil prices) is one of the things I will certainly discuss with President Reagan."

The governor said he discussed oil prices with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid during a private, 45-minute meeting last week when both attended the inauguration of the governor of Tamaulipas.

Hobby, Lewis question Clements' budget plan

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis said Tuesday that Gov. Bill Clements' proposed budget could hurt the poor while failing to solve the state's fiscal dilemma.

"It's a little short on adding up," Lewis said before meeting with Clements.

Asked if Clements' numbers add up to a solution, Hobby said, "No, they certainly don't. You've seen the (Legislative) Budget Board analysis, I'm sure."

The LBB analysis released Monday said Clements' budget includes cuts in several programs, including Department of Human Services programs for the needy. The governor's proposed $36.9 billion 1988-89 state budget gives DHS $577.2 million less than needed to maintain current services, according to the LBB analysis.

At his Tuesday news conference, Clements said there is room for adjustments in the budget, but he vowed to stand firm on his promise to veto any budget above $36.9 billion.

"The process is just beginning. There will be a lot of give and take and a lot of ideas put on the table. I have given ... a beginning and an end," Clements said.

The Clements plan includes continuation of the current temporary increases in the state sales and gasoline taxes. Hobby and Lewis are talking about more sweeping changes in state taxes.

It adds up to the sort of legislative deadlock that some lawmakers have predicted will mean several summer special sessions to write the budget.

"I don't know if he is going to back off," Lewis said of Clements. "He'll have a chance to examine some of those proposals and see what's realistic and what isn't."

Atlanta beats out Houston for convention

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democratic Party Chairman Paul Kirk announced Tuesday that Atlanta will host the party's 1988 national convention, saying Democrats must "send a message to the nation from the South" and unite that region with others for victory in the next presidential election.

Kirk chose the Georgia capital over Houston, the other finalist in the running for the massive meeting scheduled for July 18-21, 1988, where the party will select a national ticket to try to reverse the Democrats' dismal showings in recent presidential balloting.

"If we're to be a competitive national party, we have to be competitive in the Southern part of this country," Kirk said. "I think people recognize that the capital and hub and heart of the South is Atlanta."

The Democratic decision made it a clean sweep for the South in the 1988 political convention sweepstakes, for the Republicans announced last month that they are going to New Orleans for their Aug. 15-18 convention.

It will be the first national party convention ever conducted in Georgia.

"We guarantee you a successful convention," Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young told Kirk in a telephone call. "We guarantee you that the Democrats will select a winner in 1988."

"Atlanta will be great in '88," read the sign held up by Democratic National Committee staffers here after the decision was announced.

Democrats have won only once in the past five presidential elections. And that victory came the only time the party carried most of the South — with Georgia son and regional favorite Jimmy Carter in 1976. Other than in 1976, the national Democratic ticket has carried only one southern state since 1964. Kirk talked of reaching out to the South, particularly after the party's good showing in the 1986 elections in the region helped win back the Senate from the Republicans.

Atlanta "provides an opportunity to have a site where we can send a message to the nation from the South and uniting that region and others for the Democratic Party," Kirk said. "There is a Democratic base there from which our party can reach to the rest of the nation."

But even Kirk doesn't think the choice guarantees "that where one holds a convention means that one automatically carries that state or region," he said. For example, in 1984, Democrats didn't even come close to carrying California despite their San Francisco convention.

The site choice ultimately was Kirk's alone. But the final act of the process was played out in public Tuesday when the party's site selection committee voted 44-13 in favor of Atlanta over Houston. The vote came after a private breakfast where Kirk told the committee members he wanted the convention in Atlanta.

The choice left a bad taste with some Houston boosters, who rejected Kirk's characterization of Atlanta as the capital of the South.

"I didn't necessarily know that. I always thought Houston was a southern city as well," said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire. "It's my understanding that the chairman's decision was based on ... his feeling that Atlanta would be a better representative of the South.... We were all disappointed."

"In light of overwhelming support for Texas, he pursued his own agenda," said Joe Russo, chairman of the Houston host committee effort, referring to Kirk. "It seems to me that the Democratic National Committee is going to have a lot of difficulty in Texas."

Education secretary says nation's schools stabilized

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Education William Bennett handed out mixed grades Tuesday on his annual state-by-state report card and called the results "a hangover after the binge" of recent school improvements.

Bennett expressed confidence that school reform "is still on the move." But he said an impediment to better schools is "the growth of 'The Blob'" — state and local education bureaucrats whose ranks expand even when enrollments contract.

Many administrators "are doing a very fine job, but do we need them all?" Bennett asked at a news conference. As the "bureaucracy gets bigger and bigger ... it gets harder and harder to run, and accountability tends to get lost," he said.

Bennett released two wall charts comparing school statistics from 1985-86 with 1984-85 and with 1981-82.

"This year, after four years of improvement, we have basically held steady," Bennett said. "In 39 of the 50 states (college entrance) test scores improved over the previous year. But the graduation rate has declined slightly."

He likened the results to "something of a hangover after the binge."

"We have to do better. Our children deserve better," Bennett said. "We must redouble our efforts if we are to attain our goals."

It was the fourth year that the Education Department has produced a chart ranking states by college entrance test scores, graduation rates, teacher salaries, class size and other measures.

He singled out for praise the states of New Jersey and South Carolina for their wide-ranging school reform efforts, including plans to intervene in "academically bankrupt" districts.

But the wall chart, as it has in the past, drew flak from critics who view it as simplistic, incomplete and possibly misleading.

The National Education Association issued a statement blasting "the Department of Education's wall-chart follies (which) raise more questions than they answer." It noted that federal funds paid only 6.5 percent of public school bills in 1985, down from 7.4 percent three years earlier, and it suggested the cutback may "have flattened out the curve of educational progress."

"The wall charts tell us little about the broad scope of education" and about students who do not take college entrance exams, the union said.

FairTest, a Cambridge, Mass., group often critical of the testing industry, said Bennett's new wall chart should bear the legend, "Warning: Gross misuse of test scores is dangerous to the nation's educational health."

NEWS BRIEFS

Khomeini talks of 'divine cause' in war

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared Tuesday that Iran's long conflict with Iraq is a holy crusade and his fundamentalist regime will make "war until victory."

The 86-year-old Shiite Moslem patriarch delivered his first public speech in nearly three months on the eve of the eighth anniversary of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's fall from power.

There have been rumors that Khomeini is in poor health, but his voice was strong and steady during the 17-minute address broadcast by Tehran radio. His remarks also were reported by the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Khomeini said Iran was battling for a "divine cause" in the war, which began in September 1980 with an invasion by Iraq.

"Families and children are now being killed and this is hard for us and brings pressure to bear," he said. The speech was delivered at a mosque near his home in the Jamaran suburb north of Tehran, the news agency and radio said.

Surgeon general supports condom ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General Everett Koop told a House panel Tuesday that he favors advertising condoms on network television because the national health threat posed by AIDS "overwhelms other considerations."

Koop said such advertising should promote disease prevention rather than sexual activity and that, properly presented, it would provide a valuable health service.

AAA survey reveals Texans' opinions

DALLAS (AP) — A survey of more than 3,000 members of the American Automobile Association of Texas reveals many of the state's drivers would like to see some changes on state roadways, including increasing speed limits.

Respondents also favored an open container law and said they felt truckers should pay their fair share of highway construction costs.

Association spokeswoman Cathy McDonnell said 3,400 people responded to the annual survey mailed last July to 365,000 Texas members' homes.

Failure to pay fees ends in canceled classes

By PATRICIA REYES
News Staff Writer

Texas Tech students who found themselves dropped from class rolls because of failure to pay tuition and fee payments have no one to blame but themselves, said Robert Hall, Tech bursar.

"General university policy establishes due dates that will allow us to have students pay prior to the deadlines established by the state Legislature for tuition and fee payments," Hall said.

The current tuition and fees act allows students to pay their bills in four separate installments. The first payment is due before the first day of classes, the second is due before the first day of the fourth week of classes, the third is due before the first day of the eighth class week, and the fourth and final payment is due before the first day of the 12th class week.

"We try to set the (Tech) due date about a week prior to the state due date," Hall said.

Two registration periods are scheduled for each semester: pre-registration, which usually is scheduled about two months before the semester starts, and walk-on registration occurring a week before the beginning of classes. Those students who register early also are required to pay early.

"University policy calls for cancellation of (registration for) anyone who has pre-registered and has not paid their bill on the Friday prior to walk-on registration," Hall said. About 17,000 students pre-registered for the spring semester, of whom about 1,000 students were dropped, Hall said.

However, of those whose registrations were canceled only about 100 students intended to remain enrolled, Hall said. Those 100 students were forced to register again if they wanted to be enrolled in spring classes, he said.

Hall said serious problems can develop when students fail to register before the 12th class day. On the 12th class day, the university is required by state law to submit the names of all the students who have registered and paid. The state allocates $70 for each credit hour each student is enrolled in at the university.

Hall said the university does not like to drop any student because the university benefits financially from every student enrolled.

"We want them in, because we get that $70 per credit hour to the university," Hall said.

The Tech Board of Regents has set a policy stating that any student who wishes to register after the 12th class day may do so only if he pays the university a reinstatement fee of $70 per credit hour, in addition to regular tuition payments to make up for the state-appropriated funds lost due to the delinquent tuition payment.

Hall said the policy is stated in the university catalog, the class schedule and the students' bill. He added that the bursar's office always is willing to clear up any misunderstandings.

Speaker unveils crime package

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Speaker Gib Lewis Tuesday announced a "War on Crime" package that has a price tag he said Texans are willing to pay, even if it means higher taxes.

"I think we have a commitment to solve a very serious problem in our society. If it requires additional revenue, I'll be the first to stand up and say I'm for that additional revenue," Lewis said at a news conference.

A Texas Civil Liberties Union official who attended the news conference said Lewis' package includes stepping on constitutional rights of criminal defendants. A Texas Conference of Churches official, who also attended the session, said Texans could be wasting money by building more prisons.

Lewis' package, carried by four House members, includes:

- Reducing the availability of "good time" credit earned by inmates.
- Expanding the type of confessions that can be admitted as evidence.

• Allowing criminal prosecution as adults of 13- and 14-year-olds accused of violent crimes, and allowing the introduction of juvenile crime records as evidence.

• Allowing a single trial for several related crimes.

"It is very clear that a price is attached to these proposals. Whatever that may be ... I am convinced citizens want a safer Texas and are willing to pay that price," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

The state faces an April 1 deadline to make court-ordered changes in state prisons. If the deadline is not met, the state could be ordered to pay penalties of $800,000 a day. Senators have approved a bill that make some of the changes.

The Senate sponsor said his bill would cost about $25 million. Lewis said Tuesday House budget-writers have found only $2 million to $3 million to pay for the bill, but he is convinced U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice would take that as a show of "good faith."

Trekkie festivities home-in on Hub happenings

By JILL JOHNSON
Lifestyles Staff Writer

The Lubbock metropolis is coming alive this week with numerous action-packed concerts, shows and movies. This is the week for fans and groupies to don their best duds and hit the town, for a good time surely will be had by all.

"Trekkies" will be thrilled to know that a two-hour "Trek-A-Thon" will blast off at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. tonight at the Holiday Inn-Civic Center. Both shows will feature "Star Trek" bloopers, popular episode excerpts and a special "Star Trek" trivia quiz. Tickets can be purchased at the door for $4 for Texas Tech students, $5 general admission.

For a more sedate time, the University Center again is showing several flicks throughout the week. "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" will begin at 8 p.m. tonight in the Allen Theater. Admission is $2.50 and $1.50 for students with Tech IDs.

This is the week for "Star Trek" fans, as the UC sponsors a "Star Trek" trilogy Friday and Saturday in the Allen Theater. "Star Trek I" will begin at 6 p.m. Friday and 2 p.m. Saturday. "Star Trek II" is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Friday and 4:30 p.m. Saturday. "Star Trek III" will show at 10 p.m. Friday and 10 p.m. Saturday. Students can purchase a pass for $3, good for entrance to all three movies; otherwise, each show costs $1.50.

"Galipoli" will be the Sunday feature at the UC. The film will begin at 8 p.m., and admission is $2.50 or $1.50 for Techsters.

Because of a change in personnel, the Lubbock-based band the Nelsons has not been performing lately. Not to fear; the problem has been solved, and new member and bass player Billy Alford will make his debut with the three original Nelsons Thursday night at Fast and Cool. The show will begin at 10:30 p.m. to promote the club's party train trip to South Padre Island scheduled for spring break. Cover will be $5. It's an event Nelsons fans are sure not to miss.

HUB CITY HAPPENINGS

KJTV-TV 34, FM 99 and South Plains Mall are sponsoring a Joan Rivers Look-Alike Contest at 6 p.m. Friday at the mall. Anyone, male or female, over 18 years of age can enter. Entries can be obtained at any store in the mall, and deadline for applications is Thursday before the mall closes. Judges for the contest will include Miss Lubbock, Kelly D'Angelo and Billy Joe Tolliver. Three finalists will be chosen and flown to Hollywood for an all-expense-paid trip, where they will join other finalists from around the country to view Joan Rivers' show on Feb. 24. It should be a fun time for all to see Rivers clones wandering around the mall.

Eddie Murphy fans can get a glimpse of what they will get to see when Murphy's tour brings him to Lubbock in March by catching "The Golden Child," currently showing at Cinema West. Show times run nightly at 7:30 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. Tickets cost $2.

The Guys Next Door will be performing at the Texas Cafe and Bar Friday and Saturday nights. Show time each night is set for about 9:30 p.m. Call 792-8544 for admission prices.

No Frills Grill has booked the Harry Leeds Band for live performances at 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Cover to see the group is set at $3.

Juss Stilson and Dan Chopin will entertain the crowd at Cowboy's Comedy Club beginning at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and 8:30 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Admission is $5.

Town Draw will host Eddie Beethoven and the Sons of Fun at 10 p.m. Saturday. Cover will be $2, and remember no kids, black leather or dirty clothes after 7 p.m.!

The Wesley Foundation will celebrate Valentine's Day with a dance Friday. The dance will begin at 9 p.m., and tickets cost $3 for singles or $5 a couple.

In addition, the Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a World Hunger Concert at 7 p.m. Sunday in the UC ballroom. Christian singer Morgan Cryar will perform, and Larry Jones, president of Feed the Children, will speak. Tickets can be purchased at the Wesley Foundation, the UC ticket office, Good News Bookstore or Logos Bookstore for $8.

The Tech music department and UC Activities are sponsoring Woody Herman and his Young Thundering Herd in concert at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the UC Allen Theater. Tickets cost $7 for general admission and $6 for all students, and a special group rate of $5 is available for groups of 10 or more.

Canadian musicians head for success

By JEFF IVAN
Lifestyles Contributing Writer

Normally under the heading of Canadian rock 'n' roll bands, the names Rush, Triumph and Loverboy come to mind, but a new band has burst on the scene that definitely deserves some attention: Brighton Rock.

VINYL VIEWS

Formed in 1984 in the Niagara Falls area, the band knew the only way to the top would be with plenty of hard work and practice. The members spent their first four months together locked in a basement, practicing 12 hours a day, six days a week. What they came out with was a fresh brand of melodic rock.

The band was created and is led by 23-year-old Gerald McGhee on vocals and guitarist Greg Fraser. Fraser works out the music with the rest of the band, bassist Stevie Skreebs, drummer Mark Cavarzan and John Rogers on keyboards. The demo tapes are sent to McGhee, who goes into seclusion to put together the finished product.

Brighton Rock's first full-length album, "Young, Wild and Free," was produced by veteran Michael Wagener (Dokken, Metallica), who went out of his way, namely to Toronto, Canada, to produce the band.

McGhee said the band cites the likes of Elvis, Led Zeppelin and Deep Purple as a few of their early influences.

"Our sound is like you have a power pop band with a lot of melodies in the tunes, then you have the vocals which are the total opposite, sort of total aggression," McGhee said in a phone interview Tuesday.

Brighton Rock has just finished a Canadian tour opening for Triumph. The next stop is a mini-headlining tour of the eastern portions of America before hooking up with another major act for a full-scale tour of the United States. Also in the works are tours of Europe with Cinderella and Canada with Iron Maiden.

The first release from the band's debut album is "We Came To Rock." This is a perfect example of what the band sounds like. The song starts out with a gentle melody, then builds to a rocking climax with McGhee's screeching vocals sending a shiver up the listener's spine. The video for the song also shows a little bit of what Brighton Rock is like live. Basically, a live performance is an all-out "let's have as much fun as possible" type of show.

Unlike most new and established rock bands, McGhee's lyrics are not about just having fun and playing around. Instead, he chooses to deal with real issues such as nuclear war, relationships and, well yes, having fun.

Students say 'Amerika' critics all wet

By The College Press Service

Critics have called the upcoming ABC miniseries "Amerika" everything from right-wing propaganda to a threat to arms negotiations with the Soviet Union to a great antidote to the left-wing propaganda and 1985s "The Day After" miniseries, but two Nebraska college students who are in the show said the critics are all wet.

"It's not slanted," insisted Shawn Dawson, a University of Nebraska film studies sophomore who said he "just fell into" a bit part in the movie when the crew came to film in Lincoln and Tecumseh, Neb.

The 14½-hour "Amerika" takes place 10 years after a Soviet takeover of the United States but focuses more on family problems and human character than real political ideology, according to Dawson and Nebraska education major Jeff Mirowski.

Mirowski, who plays an American as well as a Soviet soldier in the show, said "Amerika" deals with "a very human aspect of the Russian side and the American side."

Dawson added, "It really bothers me that people who haven't seen it criticize it."

The criticism has been heavy ever since ABC announced it would run the show. Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, for example, said the program will "pour fuel on the embers of the Cold War."

In recent weeks, Soviet newspapers reportedly have issued almost daily denunciations of the series.

Chrysler canceled its agreement to buy a reported $7 million worth of advertising during the Sunday through Feb. 20 run of the program. Chrysler said after a preview of the show that its patriotic commercials contrasted with the program's tone.

Mirowski, though, said "the patriotic feeling runs high" in the series and in viewers watching it.

"I think all the controversy was intentional; invented somehow, somewhere down the line" to draw attention to the series, he said.

Both Mirowski and Dawson said their political views remain pretty much the same as before they read the screenplay by Donald Wrye and saw the world premiere in Tecumseh.

Dawson said he remains "against nuclear spending."

Tech, Baylor vie for second place tonight

By DON WILLIAMS
Associate Sports Editor

Gerald Myers hopes his 50-point-a-game defense shows up instead of the 50-point-a-half corps when his Texas Tech Red Raiders host the Baylor Bears in a crucial Southwest Conference clash tonight in the Municipal Coliseum.

It was the 50-point only defense that led Tech to a 56-50 win over Baylor the last time the two teams met on Jan. 14 in Waco.

But it was the half-century-at-half corps that helped the Raiders to a 50-41 intermission deficit Saturday at Arkansas in a 93-75 Razorback win.

Sole possession of second place in the SWC is on the line when the Raiders and Bears tip off at 7:30 p.m. Either team could have taken the second spot for itself Saturday, but Baylor lost to Texas in Austin while Tech was being attacked by the Hogs.

Both teams stand 7-4 in SWC play, a full three games behind league-leading TCU at 10-1.

Tonight's matchup kicks off a two-game home stand, which concludes with a 2 p.m. Sunday game against Texas A&M.

To hold the Bears to 50 points again, the Raiders must do what they did defensively in Waco: drastically cut into the scoring averages of Baylor scoring machines Darryl Middleton and Michael Williams.

Middleton, a 6-9 junior post, currently is averaging 19.4 points and 7.8 rebounds per game but Tech center Kent Wojciechowski held him to 13 points in the first meeting. The 6-2 Williams scores at a 19.2 clip and canned 17 points in the first round game.

"They're both good all-around players," Myers said earlier this week. "Anytime you get two guys who can score like that, you've got a pretty good situation going into a game. We'd like to have one guy that we could say, 'We're going to get 20 out of him every night.' Baylor's got that in their first two boys."

Tech leading scorer Sean Gay (15.1) likely will draw the defensive assignment against Williams.

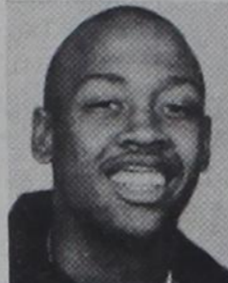

Rounding out the Bears starting unit will be forwards Frank Williams and Robert McLemore, who contribute 5.7 and 6.3 points per game, respectively, and guard Mark Buchanan, who carries an 8.5 average.

Myers, who called the Bears "the most improved in the conference this year over a year ago," does not expect Baylor to be intimidated by what could be Tech's third consecutive sellout crowd.

"They've been the second best road team in the conference behind TCU and the only team to beat TCU," he said. "And anytime you play a team for the second time, it's difficult for both teams, particularly if you won the first game. It's tough to beat a good team twice.

"I hope our guys are mature enough and smart enough to realize that when you go around two times and are trying to beat a team for the second time — regardless of whether you're home or not — it's hard to do."

Blue-chipper undecided as signing period begins

By KENT BEST
Sports Editor

Texas Tech had verbal commitments from 21 high school prospects going into today's national signing period, but first-year Tech Coach Spike Dykes said he still was awaiting a decision by blue-chip Celina running back Anthony Lynn.

Lynn, a 6-2, 200-pounder with 4.6 speed, is considering Baylor and Texas in addition to Tech. But Dykes said Tech's chances are good.

"It looks good on him," Dykes said late Tuesday afternoon. "He's a heck of a runner. But recruiting is a funny thing. You start out with 150 guys and you eliminate some, and some of them eliminate you." If Dykes can land Lynn, it will take some of the sting out of losing a pair of last-minute defectors. Port Arthur Austin quarterback Kenny Ford and all-state defensive lineman Brandon Houston of Abernathy are expected to sign letters of intent with Oklahoma today after expressing interest in Tech.

Tech Commitments

Tech women seek sweep of BU

By CHRIS HOOTEN
Sports Staff Writer

With hopes of a Southwest Conference championship gone and chances of finishing second quickly deteriorating, the Texas Tech women's basketball team will try to take a step toward finishing third when it battles Baylor today at the Municipal Coliseum. The game will tip off at 5 p.m.

After a disappointing overtime loss Saturday at Arkansas, the Raiders find themselves in fourth place in the conference, sporting a 6-5 league record, 13-9 overall.

Baylor enters the contest seventh in the SWC with a record of 4-7 and 7-14 overall. The Bears have gradually improved since the Raiders beat them in the first round of conference action, 69-59 Jan. 14 in Waco.

points against us in Waco, and that will be a big key."

In addition to her game-high point total, Davis, a 6-0 freshman forward averaging 18 points per game, had eight rebounds in the losing effort.

Debbie Fannon, a 6-2 junior averaging 6.5 points per game, will join Davis at the other forward slot.

Bonnie Henson, a 5-4 sophomore, and 5-9 junior Kristen Wiginton will open at the guards for Baylor, while 6-2 junior Kim Barnes will start at the post position. Henson is scoring a norm of 11.4 points, and Barnes is averaging five boards an outing.

Vicky McKenzie and Lisa Logsdon will start at the guard spots for Tech. Logsdon continues to lead the Raiders in scoring with a 14.7 points per game average in conference action.

Logsdon is only 21 points away from a career scoring total of 1,000 points. When she breaks the mark, Logsdon will become the seventh person in Tech women's basketball history to reach the 1,000-point plateau.

SRC Bicycle Activities Set for Spring

With spring right around the corner, bicycle riding will become more popular with the warm weather. The Student Recreation Center has scheduled two bicycle repair clinics, an indoor bicycle training clinic and five all terrain-mountain bike races.

The bicycle repair clinics consists of two workshops. The first one is "How to Fix a Flat." The class will be today at 5:30 p.m. and will teach participants how to repair a flat at home or on the road. People may bring their own wheel or use a provided one. To register call 742-3352. The second workshop is "Know Your Bike." The class will be Feb. 18 at 5:30 p.m. and will discuss how to figure gears and perform simple maintenance procedures. To register call 742-2949 or 742-3352.

An indoor bicycle training class will be Thursday at 5:30 p.m. Participants will learn what their training heart rate is and how to use it to their advantage. The class will explain indoor machines and people may bring their own bike if they want to try rollers or turbo trainers. Call 742-2949 or 742-3352 to register.

The "All Terrain-Mountain Bike Races" will be Sunday at noon by the north entrance of the Student Rec Center. The course is about two miles and is on the Tech campus.

Entry forms are due in the Rec Sports Office by Friday at 5 p.m. or 11-11:45 a.m. the day of the race. All riders must check-in by 11:45 even if they pre-registered.

Divisions are: Tech students, faculty and staff novice, one lap; Tech students, faculty and staff "A", two laps; women, one lap; open novice, one lap; and open "A", two laps. A person may race in more than one race class if eligible. Hardshell helmets are required.

Physically Fit Program Entries Due

Friday is the last day to register for the Physically Fit Techsans Program. A person determines how many points he can attain through aerobic activities and he will receive a T-shirt if the goal is reached.

A $4.50 registration fee is required. Get three or more of your friends or co-workers together and enter as a group. If 75 percent of the group makes their goal, they will receive an award.

Forms are available in the Rec Sports Office.

Dr. Yost's Injury Clinic Continues

Dr. Robert Yost, orthopedic surgeon and head of the sports medicine program at the Texas Tech Health Science Center, will begin his weekly injury clinic at 7 p.m. today in Room 201 of the Student Recreation Center.

The purpose of the weekly clinic is to educate students concerning athletic-type injuries. Also, Dr. Yost will examine and make recommendations to people with athletic or recreational injuries.

All injury clinics are free and open to anyone eligible to enter the SRC.

Valentine's Day Fun Run Scheduled

Enter the Valentine's Day Race, which is approximately two miles, as a couple on Saturday at 10 a.m. by the Student Recreation Center.

Prizes will be compliments of Orlando's Restaurants. These awards include: dinner for two for the co-rec team which has the fastest combined time; dinner for two for the co-rec team which is closest to their total predicted time; and a post race drawing will be held for two Orlando's pizza certificates and two $5 gift certificates for the SRC Sports Shop.

A person does not need a partner to run. Individuals are encouraged to participate.

A $5 fee will be charged for a t-shirt, however, it is not required to run. Shirts will be sold on race day if available.

Entries are due in the SRC Office by 5 p.m. Feb. 13.

Wallyball Meeting for Teams Slated

Teams entered in the intramural wallyball tournament are reminded of the wallyball participants meeting tonight at 5 in the SRC Classroom.

All teams need to be represented. Tournament brackets will be available. Teams are made up of three people and play a modified volleyball game on a racquetball court.

For additional information please call Rec Sports at 742-3351.

All Teams' Basketball Playoffs Set

Basketball teams are reminded to check with the Rec Sports Office on Monday for playoff information.

All teams will participate in the playoffs regardless of status.

Softball League Entries Available

Copies of the leagues for slowpitch softball will be available in the Rec Sports Office on Monday.

Entries will be accepted for softball on Feb. 24-26 in Room 203 of the SRC.

Aquatic Center Activities Begin

The Aquatic Center has the following events scheduled:

The Lifeguard Training Class will teach the training, knowledge and skills necessary to become a good lifeguard. Class will be Feb. 23-March 11 from 7-10 p.m. and costs $22.50.

The Stroke Mechanics and Flip Turn Clinic will give tips on how to improve your strokes and teach the correct way to flip turn. Class is slated for Feb. 21 from 11 a.m. until noon.

The Saturday Morning Long Course will be Saturday and Feb. 28 from 10:30 until noon. The pool is set for 50 meters and open to lap swimmers.

Entries for Chess Tourney Extended

The intramural chess tournament will be Saturday in Room 207 of the University Center.

Entries will be taken until Thursday in the Rec Sports Office.

The tourney will be Swiss style with four rounds being played. It is open to all students, faculty and staff of the university.

You need not be an expert to enter. Come and meet some new opponents.

Entries for Spring Softball Due

Instant schedules for men, women, co-rec, campus community and campus community co-rec divisions will be available in the Rec Sports Office on Monday.

Entries are due Feb. 24-26 in Room 203 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. A $25 forfeit fee is required for each team.

Teams are encouraged to come to a short rules clinic Feb. 26 from 5-6 p.m. in the SRC Classroom because of the new rules for this year.

Clinics for prospective softball umpires will begin Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. in the SRC Classroom. Schedules for the rest of the clinics may be obtained in the Rec Sports Office. First-year umpires will receive $5.25 per game while veterans will receive a slightly higher rate.

For more information come by the Rec Sports Office or contact Denise Kopriva at 742-3351.

Outdoor Trips Tailored To Fit Budget

The Outdoor Shop has a full schedule planned for the spring semester with eight trips.

Wayne Taylor, outdoor coordinator for Recreational Sports, said the group for each trip has the opportunity to share in the planning, decision making and of course, the fun for the outing. Inexperienced students should not hesitate to sign up.

Rafting in Boquillas Canyon will be Feb. 20-22 in Big Bend National Park. The awesome 1000-1500 foot walls in the canyon provides ample sightseeing. The trip costs $50 which includes transportation, equipment and instruction.

Sand surfing at White Sands, New Mexico should prove to be a new and exciting experience. The trip is set for March 6-8 with a cost of $30 which includes transportation, equipment and instruction.

For a different atmosphere during spring break, try snow skiing in Utah. The ski resort has the deepest powder available at three different mountains while staying in Salt Lake City. This trip, which costs only $250, includes transportation, a four-day lift pass and five nights at a motel. A $100 non-refundable deposit reserves your space.

"The slopes are less than an hour away from the lodge," he said. "Utah has the best powder and it's better than Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming."

Rockclimbing and cycling in the Texas hill country is a two-fold adventure trip. People can learn to climb on the largest granite mountain in Enchanted Rock State Park and they will cycle through the quaint German community of Fredricksburg from April 16-19. The cost is $30 which includes transportation and equipment.

Explore the New Cave in Carlsbad, New Mexico on April 26 for $15.

"The cave has not been commercialized with walkways and lights," he said. "Participants bring flashlights."

"The tour includes sights that still remain unexplained to this day. Another event is a total blackout in a special part of the cave so people can experience total darkness."

For a daring experience, canoe in the lower canyons of Big Bend National Park for 94 miles in class three and four water which is considered hazardous. The trip is on May 17-25 and costs $125 which covers equipment, transportation and instruction.

For a summer treat, backpack in the Grand Canyon May 26-30. The popular spot provides breathtaking views of one of America's greatest national parks.

"These trips are set up with the student's budget in mind," Taylor said. "We've arranged the opportunity for outdoor experiences at reasonable prices."

To sign up for any trip, come by the Outdoor Shop any afternoon Monday through Friday or call 742-2949.
