TDC jams continue, prisons face closures

By The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — The Texas prison system, open just two days after slipping beneath a population cap, shut down again Wednesday after admitting some 700 inmates from county jails that were jammed from earlier state closings.

It marked the second time in a week and the third time in a month that the nation's second-largest corrections system was forced to close its doors because a 95-percent legal capacity was topped.

The Tuesday midnight headcount, announced Wednesday, showed 38,504 prisoners — 95.38 percent of capacity or 153 inmates over the limit.

The latest closing came after a one-day record 455 inmates were admitted to the state system Tuesday. Although business began Tuesday with a 215-inmate cushion and release of another 124 inmates, the record intake put the system over the top.

At least another 260 inmates were added to the prison rolls Wednesday before the system closed at 5 p.m., while only 74 were released. Those numbers, however, will not be reflected in the total system count until the Wednesday midnight prisoner tally is announced at mid-day today.

"I feel sure we'll be closed Friday," spokesman Charles Brown said. "And I don't know if we'll have any (parole) certificates over the weekend."

Brown said another concern of the crowding crisis was that if the system remained over 95 percent capacity for five consecutive days, state law requires the governor to declare a prison emergency.

Under that emergency, inmates classified as trustees and some other non-violent inmates would be advanced 30 days "good time" toward their parole.

He estimated, however, that only about 50 inmates would become eligible for release under that provision, and it might be necessary to go to the next step in the process — a 60-day good-time advance — to increase an inmate pool and enable the system to get under the 95 percent capacity and reopen.

Those provisions are spelled out in the Prison Management Act of 1983. Passed in response to a federal judge's prison reform mandate, the act is responsible for setting the 95 percent cap on population.

Prison officials were trying to determine if weekend days — when inmates normally are neither admitted or released — count toward the emergency declaration.

Monday is a holiday, and that also could affect the five-day stipulation, Brown said.

Also Wednesday, the state's lawyers filed a 79-page brief with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, asking the court to overturn U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's recent contempt citation.

Justice has ordered the state to carry out prison reforms by April 1 or face fines totaling $24 million a month.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said the legal brief points out that Texas has increased spending on prisons by 100 percent over the past six years.

Spending has risen from $5,690 per prisoner in 1980 to $12,000 for 1987, Mattox said. Total prison spending during that period jumped from $153 million to $460.7 million, the state argued.

The brief, prepared by Assistant Attorney General F. Scott McCown, argues that Justice abused his discretion in several areas of the contempt order he issued on Dec. 31, 1986.

The brief said the state also was trying to comply with orders on single celling of some prisoners, hiring additional guards, and increasing the size of the medical staff.

Oral arguments on the state's appeal are scheduled to be presented to a three-judge panel of the New Orleans court on March 17.

Mattox has said he hopes for a decision before the April 1 deadline set by Justice.

Cavazos emphasizes need to boost Tech's reputation

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Staff Writer

President Lauro Cavazos addressed the Texas Tech Faculty Senate Wednesday, emphasizing the necessity of increasing graduate enrollment and research opportunities at the university.

"We need to emphasize constantly that we are a comprehensive university and not just a university in Lubbock, Texas," Cavazos told members of the senate.

"We are a statewide institution, and we must emphasize our research and teaching ability. We have strong research programs as well as an excellent undergraduate program."

Cavazos, who appeared before the House budget and oversight subcommittee in Austin earlier this week, said he stressed the impact of budget cuts on faculty and students.

Cavazos said he told subcommittee members that Tech has experienced severe faculty losses, which has had a direct impact on students.

Total faculty dropped by 54 members this year compared to last year, resulting in 214 fewer course sections for students to choose from.

Cavazos said the administration is awaiting the presentation to the Legislature of the Select Committee on Higher Education's recommendations for Tech.

"As soon as something of substance is done, we will do something," he said.

Recommendations he anticipates from the select committee include raising the salary of faculty members to a rate comparable to the top 10 universities in the nation. Tech salaries are below the national average, Cavazos said.

Cavazos said the plan to reorganize the governing boards of Texas universities also will be introduced by the select committee. The "superboard" plan leaves the University of Texas and Texas A&M University untouched while restructuring the governing boards of the remaining universities, he said.

"To be frank, I have zero enthusiasm for the plan," Cavazos said.

Associate history professor James Brink introduced a resolution opposing reorganization under any regional plan.

"Despite what the president said, I feel that the university and faculty should be on record as opposing this plan," he said.

Cavazos told the senate he will appear before the NCAA Committee on Infractions in San Diego Sunday to answer allegations of football recruiting violations.

"I always told members of the athletic faculty that if they were caught cheating, they were fired," Cavazos said. "It is now written in the contracts. If it ever happens again, they won't see sundown."

In other action, the Faculty Senate approved a change requested by the Student Senate in the pass/fail requirement. Now, if a student receives an A in a course declared pass/fail, the A will be averaged into the student's grade point average.

Combest offers tax legislation

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

Large oil industry losses would qualify energy producers for tax benefits under legislation announced by U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, at a news conference Wednesday.

The proposal, introduced last week, is an effort to offset losses incurred by energy producers as a result of the windfall profits tax, which is a percentage tax on profits exceeding a set base price for oil, Combest said.

The idea for the legislation is new, and it could avoid opposition from Northeastern congressmen that has hindered previous attempts to bolster the crippled industry, the Lubbock congressman said.

Combest said there is no consensus among energy producers regarding the benefits of an import duty on oil as a means of bolstering the industry.

"This legislation basically takes away all the arguments against an import duty or other ways of inflating the price of oil," he said.

"The situation is often construed as a consumer versus producer problem," Combest said. "If you raise the price of oil, it hurts the consumer."

Larry Combest

"It does not gouge the consumer, because it does not represent an increase in the price of oil," he said.

Under the proposal, the law creating the windfall profits tax would be amended to set up a similar inverse structure for energy production losses, he said.

"It's a mirror reflection of the windfall profits tax," Combest said. "We like to call it an inverse windfall profits tax."

He said the legislation is a fair way to provide equity for the depressed oil industry.

"If you're going to cap it on the top, you've got to cap it on the bottom, too," he said.

The resolution creates a system under which, if the base price is set at $20 a barrel and the selling price is $15 per barrel, the producer would receive a tax credit on the $5 difference, Combest said.

Combest said the tax proposal would reverse the tier system created in the windfall profits tax for energy production losses. The tiers correspond to the size of the oil-producing entity, with larger companies paying higher taxes.

The bill could help reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil by bolstering the domestic industry, Combest said. Oil imports rose to almost 40 percent of the total amount used in 1986, an increase of 24 percent over 1985, he said.

Combest said the proposal would not pay out as much money as has been brought in by the tax. He said the oil industry has paid almost $80 billion to the federal government since implementation of the tax, making the windfall profits tax the largest in the nation's history.

Putting the legislation into effect would cost little, Combest said.

Student Senate bids due, elections slated for March

By PATRICIA REYES
News Staff Writer

Texas Tech students interested in seeking a post on the Student Senate must file for candidacy next week in the Dean of Students Office, said Doug Tate, chairman of the senate elections committee.

Candidacy applications will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday in 250 West Hall.

Applications are being taken for three senators-at-large, 44 senators of various colleges, president, vice president for internal affairs, vice president for external affairs and class agent, said Amy Love, internal vice president.

Love said the senate needs applicants for the class agent position, which has not been filled for at least two years. Applicants for class agent must have completed 64 credit hours with at least 32 hours at Tech.

The responsibilities of the class agent include organizing a senior gift donation, correspondence pertaining to the senior class and organizing the first class reunion, which usually is during homecoming of the year following graduation. All candidates for the position must be interviewed by the senate select alumni relations committee before being placed on the ballot, Love said.

Anyone interested in applying for class agent should contact Love immediately after filing for candidacy.

All applicants for student senate must have completed at least 12 hours in residence, be currently full-time students, have a cumulative 2.0 GPA and be enrolled in the college they wish to represent. Senators-at-large may be enrolled in any college. All applicants must bring a class schedule or some other proof of current enrollment, Love said.

All candidates are required to attend one of two candidate seminars offered at 6 p.m. Feb. 24 and Feb. 25 in 205 West Hall. During the seminar, candidates will draw for their place on the ballot.

A candidate forum for all executive candidates is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. March 4 in the University Center courtyard. Candidates will answer questions from the UC Programs ideas and issues committee and from the audience.

Abductors consider exchange

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Newspapers in London and Israel said Wednesday secret talks were going on for a major swap that would free foreign hostages in Lebanon in exchange for 400 Arab prisoners.

Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri said there were no talks yet but that indications were positive.

Berri, head of the mainstream Shiite movement Amal, made the original proposal on Saturday, setting off a frenzy of rumors, reports and speculation on the hostage crisis.

Berri, who also is Lebanon's justice minister, proposed that Israel free 400 Arab prisoners. In return, Amal would return a captured Israeli airman and a Moslem extremist organization would free the four kidnapped educators — three Americans and an Indian — it was threatening to kill.

On Wednesday, the Israeli newspaper Davar said Israel and the United States were negotiating a multinational deal to free all captives held in Lebanon by pro-Syrian and pro-Iranian groups, with Israel freeing 400 Arabs.

Davar, which has close ties to Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres' Labor Party, said the deal involved the Swiss and Syrian governments and the International Committee of the Red Cross. The swap would include releasing the airman captured in October and three Lebanese Jews seized in Beirut last year.

The paper datelined its report from Washington and quoted unidentified American and Israeli sources.

An Israeli Foreign Ministry official refused to confirm or deny the Davar report.

Israeli officials have expressed doubt that Berri could deliver on promises involving organizations not his own.

Berri's militiamen do hold, however, the navigator of an Israeli Phantom fighter-bomber shot down over south Lebanon Oct. 1.

In Washington on Wednesday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater insisted anew that the United States is not involved in talks with Israel about hostages and said, "We have not urged Israel or any other country to be involved in a deal with the hostage takers."

The London Times said Wednesday a "wide-ranging deal" was in the works involving the four educators, the Israeli airman and Arab prisoners.

It said the negotiations followed "months of secret contacts between the Israelis and guerrilla leaders in southern Lebanon" through the Red Cross.

Berri told a news conference in Damascus, the Syrian capital, there have been no secret negotiations for an exchange of captives, but he added, "There are some positive indications that such a swap can be worked out."

Don't deal with fanatics

Scott Brumley

And so it came to pass that various loonies in the Middle East decided to advance their "noble" causes by taking innocent people hostage and demanding that ridiculous measures be taken or the hostages would die.

The scenario has been building and developing for several years. A few years ago, it was a fearful, infrequent occurrence. Now, sadly, it is a plague almost as common as drug-related deaths.

The aforementioned is old news. America hears about it every day from Dan Rather and his journalistic associates. Now, a new twist has developed in this game.

Terrorists are beginning to see realization of their demands, through governmental intervention or anyone with the clout to secure the extravagant conditions of release demanded by these groups, usually associated with Iran or the Palestinian movement.

On Monday, it was announced that Israel, usually inflexible in dealing with terrorists, would consider discussing the release of 400 Arabs being held in prisons there in exchange for release of an Israeli combat flier missing in Lebanon.

This begins to fall under suspicion when it is considered that the release of those same 400 prisoners is a condition of ransom for three American professors and an Indian national. The group holding the four said it would kill them Monday if the 400 Arabs were not released. Monday came and the hostages did not die, nor on Tuesday or Wednesday. In fact, their abductors said the deadline for meeting their demands had been extended indefinitely. A very decisive bunch of guys.

The statement issued by the terrorists responsible for the abductions said the deadline had been extended because of promising actions taken by Israel. This is what is known as a cycle of stupidity.

Hostages are by no means expendable items, and everything possible should be done to secure their release. Everything, that is, within reasonable limits. Where is the reason for releasing 400 people from prison? The whole proposition must have seemed like a tremendous joke to many Israelis.

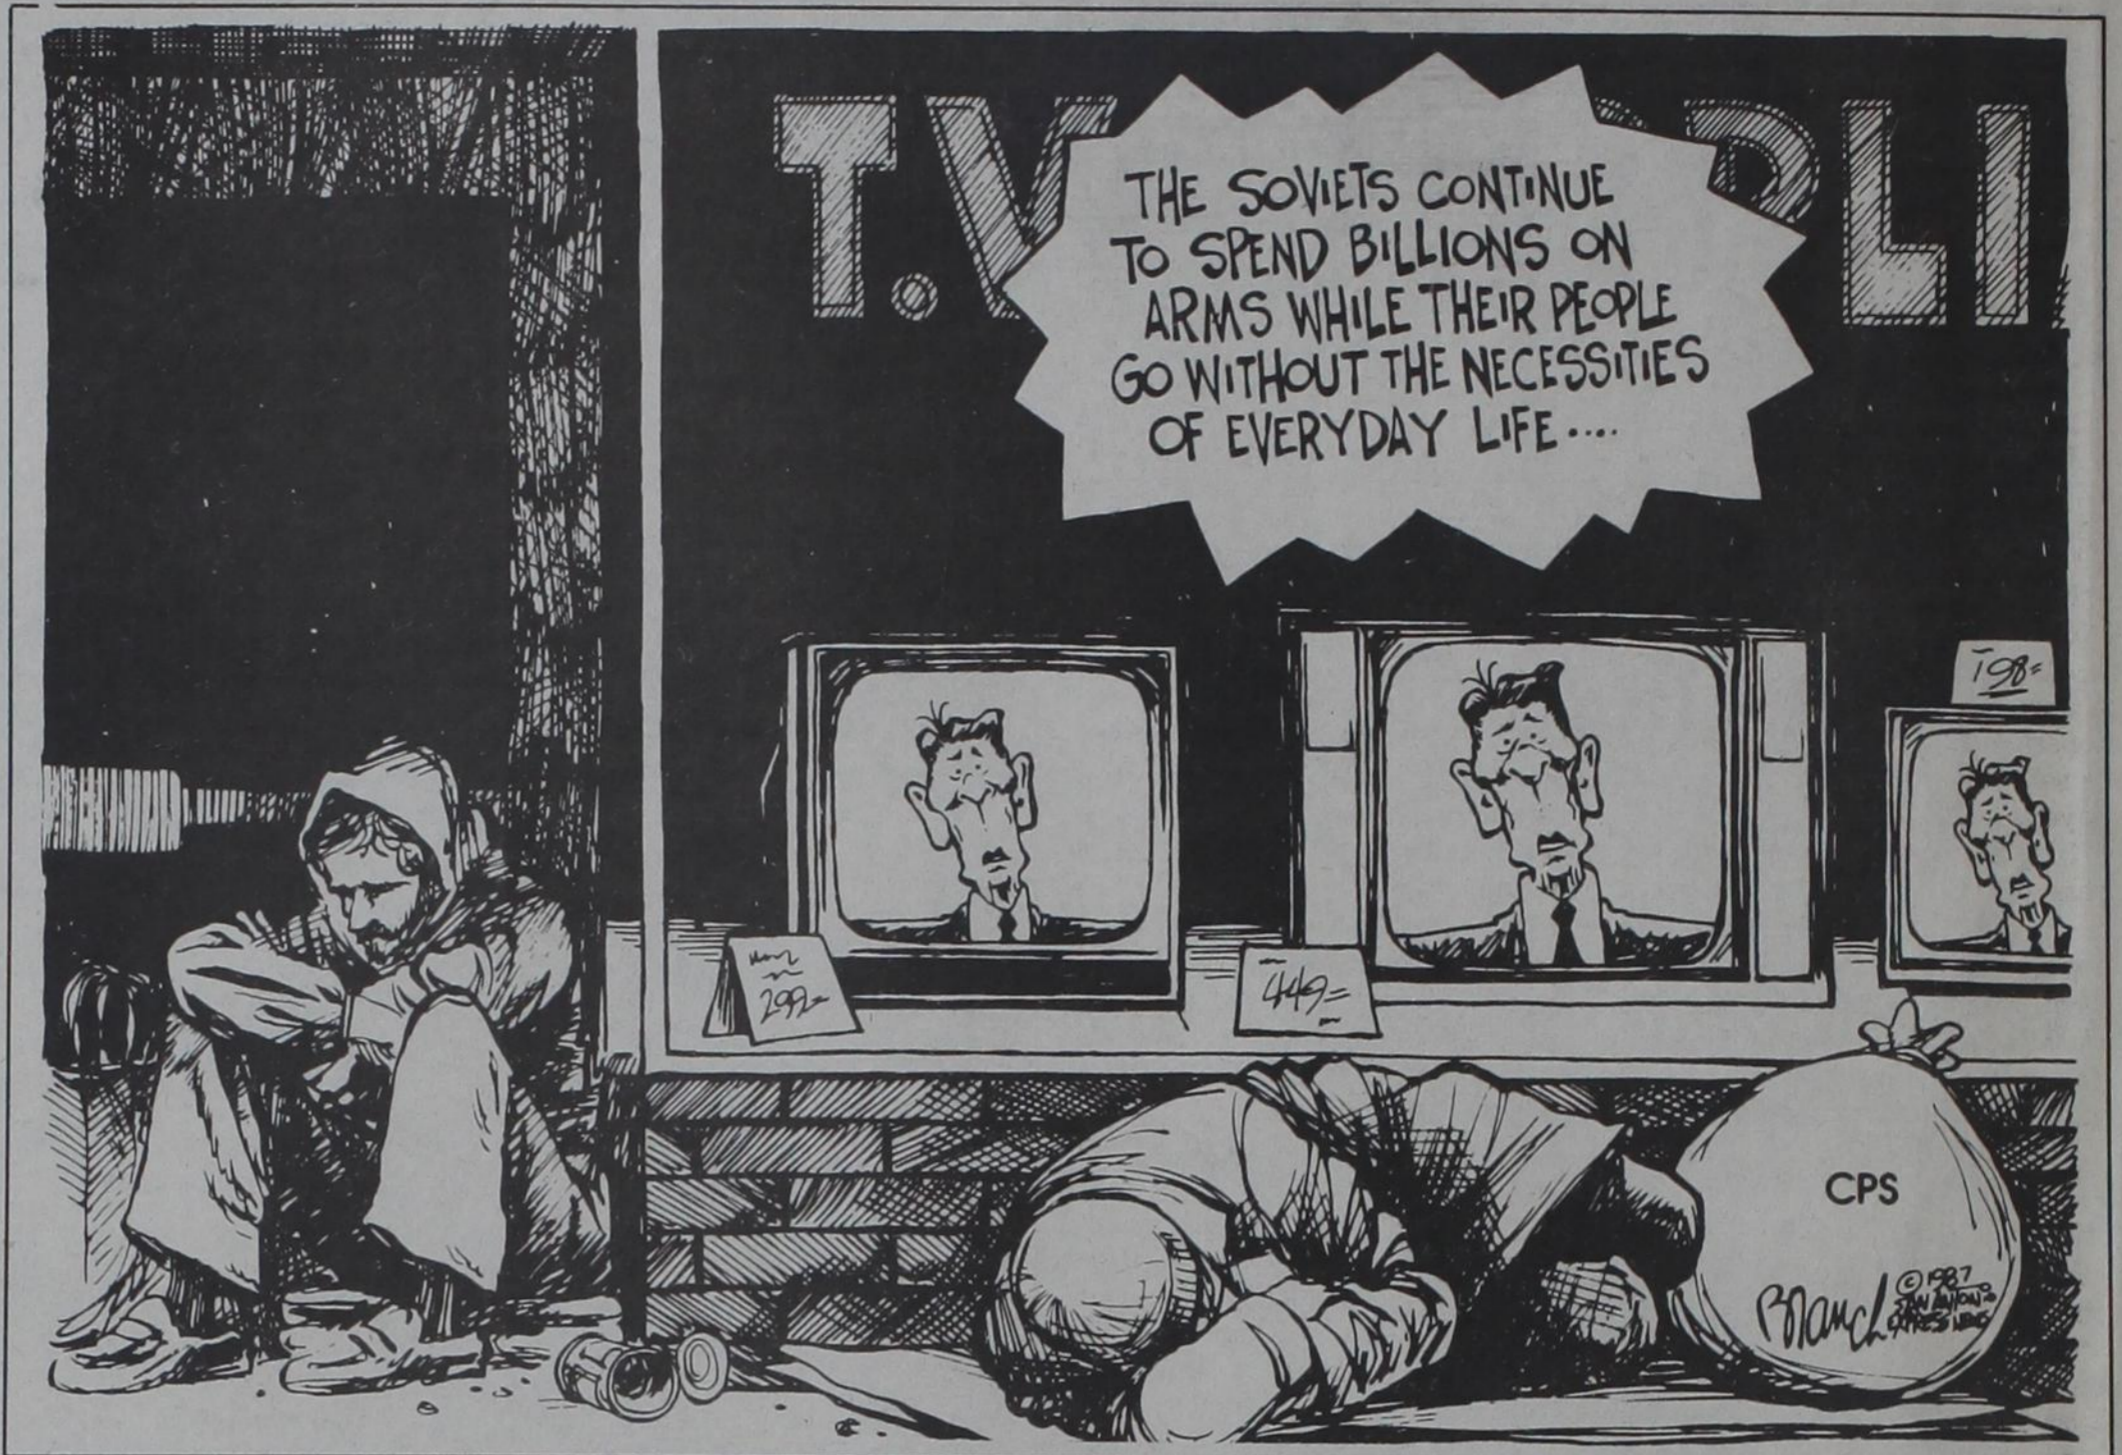

Several hostages are taken in Lebanon just to make a point or are held for a ransom so obscure that it becomes far less memorable than the kidnapping itself. This would seem to defeat the purpose of the act. After all, how can you get what you want if no one can remember what it is?

Consider the ramifications, also, of giving in to terrorists' demands. What gains the release of one hostage usually gets four more taken.

This makes sense when viewed from the hostage taker's perspective. Whenever a buddy winds up in the slammer, or the Revolutionary Movement of the Week needs some more weapons, all it takes to get the buddy out of jail and a few guns to boot is to grab a couple of Americans or any other acceptable Western nationality and send videotapes of them pleading for help to their governments and families.

This gets great media coverage, and if it works once, it's bound to work again.

Hostage-taking by terrorists is a vicious cycle, and giving in to their ridiculous demands does nothing to put an end to it.

Government reactions provoke terrorists

A.M. Rosenthal
Syndicated Columnist

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Next week an airplane will be hijacked and the passengers, many of them American, will be taken hostage.

If not next week, it will happen the week after, or next month or the month after that. But it will happen, for two reasons.

Terrorism, old in warfare, has been developed by nationalist and carefully nurtured religious fanaticism to the point where it is a weapon, not simply of local resistance but of world importance. The terrorists have discovered that it is far more effective to select victims from the nationals of foreign powers rather than concentrate merely on their specific enemies.

Nothing gets them more attention and blackmail power than the horror of an airplane hijacking — not even the kidnappings taking place now in Beirut.

And most of the victim nations have shown they will crack when hostages are taken. The United States cracked to Soviet hostage-taking by trading a Soviet spy for an American newsman and then delivered blackmail arms to Iran, sponsors of the killers of American Marines. Pakistan has yet to put hijackers who were captured five months ago on trial or even tell the world who they are.

Israel cracked by turning over 1,150 prisoners for three Israelis. The Italians let a hunted terrorist escape; the French dealt almost openly in trading with terrorists for their hostages.

Anybody who says this contemptuously is a fool. We all know that were one of our family taken hostage we would want only one thing of our government — rescue. But the surrenderers do lead, bitterly, to more hostage-taking and more pain for more families.

Once more disgusted viewers and harassed governments will say that the press, particularly TV, is ter-rorism's tool and endangering the lives of the hostages. Louder than ever will come demands for some form of regulation — outright censorship, barring reporters and cameras from the scene, or sweeping press self-restriction.

TV producers and correspondents and newspaper people talked it all over at a meeting here organized by the Poynter Institute for Media Studies, which owns The St. Petersburg Times, one of the country's good newspapers.

The question on our minds was whether the long, wearing hijacking coverage in Beirut in 1985 had endangered the lives of the hostages or made freeing the captives more difficult. To his own professional credit, Parker Borg, a State Department anti-terrorism expert at the time, said the answer was no.

But during next week's or next month's hostage-taking, the debate will start all over again. TV does not enjoy all the First Amendment protections — I believe it should — and the pressure will be heavy.

There are things that can be done that would not damage the right of TV to present the news fully and would help prevent it from becoming the most important hostage of all.

Terrorists feed hungrily on chaos and press — TV mob scenes create the hysteria they seek. TV could help by using correspondents but just one or two camera crews, sharing film but not reporting or commentary.

Almost all TV anchormen and producers are skilled, experienced and serious and could hold down top jobs on newspapers; greater praise hath no editor. But sometimes the job of interviewing captors is turned over to TV personalities who are simply entertainers and treat the captors as statesmen: "Do you have a message for President Reagan?"

Neither will it change the fact that the agonizingly drawn-out pain of captives and family has come not from TV cameras and anchorpeople or newspaper reporters but from the faltering will of governments and the men you see waving their rifles and sneering at the world, next week or next month.

We want your opinion...

With the apartheid protests in South Africa and the racial unrest in Forsyth County, Ga., a question needs to be asked. Has racism in the United States decreased since the Civil Rights Act of 1964?

Answers to such a complicated question will be published on Feb. 27 on a special editorial page. Students, faculty and staff interested in expressing their views should submit letters to the editor by 1:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 20. Material which is double-spaced, typed and no longer than two pages will be given preference for publication.

The editor reserves the right to edit material for libel, taste, obscenity and space limitations.

If more material is submitted than can fit on the one page, then the editor will publish those letters which are a representative cross section of the material.

Whatever your views, let's keep them within the bounds of good taste.

Maybe all Hinckley needed was love

Bob Ingebritson
Guest Columnist

I am writing from a room that used to house a person whose name will be written in the history books. The infamous John Hinckley used to live right here, in room 303B of the Honeycomb Apartments. It is a little efficiency apartment on the third floor of this fine complex.

As most of you know, John Hinckley had some serious mental problems, and maybe still does. It's hard to imagine somebody so "ill" that he would go to such an extreme measure and shoot the president of the United States.

I talked to someone who knew John when he lived here. This person said John seemed depressed a lot and was pretty much of a loner. It kind of makes me wonder if he refused love or if nobody reached out to him, even if it was obvious that he was lonely and depressed.

I'm getting to this point: WE ALL NEED LOVE AND THE FEELING OF ACCEPTANCE. There is hardly anything worse in the world than feeling alone and like no one cares for you. I think any of us would suffer some degree of mental illness if that were to be the case in our lives.

Let's reach out to people in need. You know, the people who you might suspect as being cold and distant possibly are the ones who need to be touched by some loving kindness. If you are persistent in your love and remain genuine, eventually you will see this person change and a new personality emerge. Try it. You may be surprised.

LETTERS

Support baseball

To the editor:

I'd like to address this letter to all the sports fans here at Texas Tech. I know that the Super Bowl just concluded, and basketball is just now getting into mid-season form, but there is another sport upon us. BASEBALL!!! That's right, college baseball, anyway, right here at Texas Tech. The Red Raiders kicked off their season on Feb. 7 against New Mexico.

Now the reason for this letter is to ask your support for the Raiders. A good crowd is always nice. Now in the past few years the attendance at the ballpark has been poor at best. We are definitely in the bottom three as far as attendance is concerned in the conference. Heck, even Rice outdraws us.

Now I know what you're saying: "Well, if you get a winning team, we would come out." As far as I'm concerned, that is a poor excuse for two reasons. The first is that we did have a winning team last year, setting the team record for most wins in a season with 35. Second, it shouldn't matter if they are a winning team. This is your team, and you should support it win or lose. Many times when we play at home it seems like we're playing at a neutral site instead.

A good crowd for a game is about 150! Now come on, we can do better than that. A ticket costs one, maybe two dollars for students, which is pretty cheap. The weather is getting to be a little warmer, so let's get out, yell, scream, enjoy the game and create a decent home-field advantage. Your support will be recognized by the players and make them feel a little more confident here at home. Pretty soon, teams coming to Tech will have more than a couple of dust storms to worry about.

There is a new coach, a new attitude and basically a new confidence on the team. So let's start early supporting the Raiders.

Lawyer says McFarlane treated unfairly in U.S.-Iran situation

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert McFarlane, the former presidential aide who is recovering from a drug overdose, has been picked on unfairly because he's the only key figure cooperating in the investigations of the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, his lawyer said Wednesday.

"He's the only game in town for the press to write about and some members of Congress to complain about," attorney Leonard Garment said, noting that his client — unlike other important players — volunteered to testify on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

President Reagan, meanwhile, is "very concerned and upset for Bud," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, using the nickname of the former national security adviser who, police sources said, tried to commit suicide Monday.

Reagan telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, White House officials said.

McFarlane, 49, remained hospitalized at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland on Wednesday, two days after he swallowed between 25 and 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium.

McFarlane was listed in good condition, said Lt. Russ Sanford, a hospital spokesman. Sanford refused to say what type of treatment doctors were giving McFarlane.

"He's feeling OK," said Garment, who did not know how long the retired Marine lieutenant colonel would remain in the hospital. "I just hope he gets well as soon as possible."

Garment said he was angry because McFarlane's testimony before several congressional panels investigating the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the possible diversion of profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels has been scrutinized intensely for holes and discrepancies.

"Everyone is picking on what he said," Garment said in an interview. "I think it's unfair because the discrepancies are not really discrepancies," but simply one side of the story because most of the central participants have refused to answer questions.

Two of the people reported to be principals in the deal to sell U.S. arms to Iran — Lt. Col. Oliver North, a former National Security Council aide, and Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the ex-NSC chief — invoked their constitutional right to remain silent when called to testify on Capitol Hill.

Moreover, Reagan refused to order Poindexter, who succeeded McFarlane at the NSC, or North to appear before a three-member presidential commission investigating the Iran-Contra case, Fitzwater said.

Report shows nuclear plant security lapse

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An Oregon congressman quizzed Energy Secretary John Herrington Wednesday about security at federal military installations, citing a recently declassified report detailing security lapses at the Pantex nuclear weapons plant near Amarillo.

Security breaches included sex in guard houses and theft of weapons components, which spurred the Energy Department to close the Pantex facility for five days in 1985, according to transcripts of a secret House energy subcommittee hearing released Tuesday.

The declassified testimony detailed the simulated theft of bomb parts containing plutonium. The phony theft was planned by federal inspectors who were aided by a plant employee and a silencer-equipped pistol that was smuggled into Pantex as a security test.

"I am not convinced that adequate security precautions are being taken at the network of defense installations in this country," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who is a member of the energy and power subcommittee.

"What we have heard at our hearings raises serious questions, including questions about drug use at the installations," Wyden said.

Much of the Pantex plant, about 20 miles east of Amarillo, is a complex of bunkers surrounded by a chain-link fence and patrolled by guards with dogs and automatic weapons.

Security problems at the plant were uncovered during a surprise inspection in October 1985 and prompted a review of the entire security system, according to the testimony and comments from congressional sources who reviewed the classified inspection report.

At a subcommittee hearing Wednesday, Wyden asked Herrington what the Energy Department was doing about security, citing a section in the DOE budget for 1987 and 1988 entitled "Human Reliability Program" which he said was responsible for drug activity.

"There was nothing being spent on that program for those years," Wyden said. "That certainly doesn't show an aggressive approach to dealing with the program, and given that these are exceptionally sensitive areas, some of the fundamentals of security are being ignored."

Herrington said he was unfamiliar with the specific case but that the department had tightened security in all nuclear facilities in the past year.

Reagan meets with arms sale investigation board

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan answered questions from an investigatory board about the Iran arms-sale affair Wednesday, as the White House defended Reagan's refusal to order two key figures in the case to testify.

For the second time in 17 days, Reagan met in the Oval Office with members of the review board headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. He appointed the panel Nov. 26 to investigate the activities of the National Security Council staff, including the secret sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

At the request of the board, Reagan granted a one-week extension, until Feb. 26, for the panel to submit its final report. The report originally was due Jan. 29, but the board was granted an earlier delay until Feb. 19.

Reporting on Reagan's 70-minute session with the board, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "Today's meeting reviewed the National Security Council process and the development and execution of the Iran policy and the president's role. The president answered all of the board's questions."

Fitzwater said the board asked for more time to submit its findings in order "to comprehensively deal with all the information it has obtained."

Herbert Hetu, the board's spokesman, said more time was sought because of "a recent acquisition of new material."

He would not elaborate, except to say the request was not the result of the meeting with Reagan, the board's review of Reagan's notes or the hospitalization of former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who took an overdose of the tranquilizer Valium on Monday.

The meeting came one day after the White House revealed that Reagan had turned down a request from Tower that he order former aides John Poindexter and Oliver North to appear before the board and answer questions.

Tower had asked Reagan to issue the order in his role as commander-in-chief of the armed forces. Poindexter, who quit as Reagan's national security adviser because of the Iran-Contra affair, is a Navy vice admiral on active duty; North, who was fired in the affair, is a lieutenant colonel in the Marines.

Fitzwater said that ordering the men to testify would violate their constitutional rights against self-incrimination, and a similar guarantee provided by the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which covers servicemen.

NEWS BRIEFS

House OKs inmate release resolution

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House, moving quickly to try to ease prison crowding, approved a resolution Wednesday that sponsors said would rush up to 500 non-violent prison inmates to halfway houses around the state.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, said the resolution would allow the Board of Pardons and Paroles to speed up spending money set aside for halfway-house placements of inmates who are within three to six months of release.

"It will provide substantial help to the current situation regarding crowding in the prisons," Ceverha said.

Supreme Court to rehear liability case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday withdrew its October decision that said bar and restaurant owners could be held liable for damage caused when a drunken patron becomes a drunken driver.

The high court granted a motion for rehearing filed by attorneys for El Chico restaurants, which was sued as a result of a 1983 Houston traffic death caused by a driver who had been drinking at an El Chico "happy hour."

Supreme Court justices, who had ruled in October without hearing arguments, Wednesday set April 1 as the date for oral arguments in the so-called "dram shop" case.

In its brief, attorneys for the restaurant said there is no "public outcry" for dram shop liability in Texas.

Mexico places restrictions on diet clinics

DALLAS (AP) — Diet clinics just over the border in Mexico were shut down briefly because of health worries about the pills they dispensed but since have reopened under severe restrictions, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

Mexican authorities advised the U.S. Food and Drug Administration Tuesday they were shutting down the clinics in Nuevo Laredo and Juarez, but they revised that statement Wednesday to say the clinics had reopened, FDA spokesman Donald Heaton said.

Heaton said no deaths have been proved to result from use of the diet pills, but he said they can aggravate high blood pressure, heart disease and mental problems such as schizophrenia.

Do you know where your paper is?

Yes.

Let's be real. Compare the equipment she's using to yours. If you were both trying to tunnel through a mountain, she'd have a bulldozer and you'd have a shrimp fork.

Don't despair. Your problem is already half-solved. For a limited time, you can buy an Apple® Macintosh® Plus or a Macintosh 512K Enhanced computer with Microsoft Works® — for less money. Which is wonderful.

You get a Macintosh, with its speed, ease of use, and graphics capability. Plus, you get a software program that lets you use all this Macintosh power in all your subjects.

Microsoft Works is not just one program, it's four integrated programs: word processing, data-base management, spreadsheet with charting, and communications.

Meaning you can put charts in your history essays. Spreadsheets in your economics papers. Call Dow Jones News/Retrieval at 2:00 A.M. to get the facts for your journalism story due at 8:00 A.M.

So if you're taking more than one subject this semester, you should check out Macintosh and Microsoft Works.

Agri-Techsans cultivate ag sciences study

By ANN McBRIDE
News Staff Writer

Although increasing enrollment is a priority among all the colleges at Texas Tech, few colleges are able to equal the recruiting efforts of a College of Agriculture student group called Agri-Techsans.

The Agri-Techsans group was started in the spring of 1981 and currently has 25 members, said Lea Weinheimer, Agri-Techsan student

The purpose of the group is to promote Tech and inform high school and junior college students about the programs in the College of Agricultural Sciences, Weinheimer said. The group also assists the dean of the College of Agriculture's office in planning and organizing events on campus.

The Agri-Techsans try to create a smooth transition for high school and junior college students into college life at Tech, Weinheimer said.

In conjunction with the Office of New Student Relations, the group takes a number of recruiting trips known as "out-and-backs" to Lubbock and surrounding area high schools and junior colleges.

During the trips, the group has opportunities to brief potential students on what will be available to them at Tech as well as in the College of Agriculture.

Besides the various recruiting trips, the Agri-Techsans also attend and set up a booth at the national Future Farmers of America convention as well as state and area FFA conventions, Weinheimer said.

In order to become an Agri-Techsan, one must be nominated by a faculty member in the college. The student must meet GPA requirements and interviews with a selection committee composed of faculty members.

"They all share a similar characteristic: the desire and enthusiasm needed to renovate and improve the agriculture industry by recruiting good students for the college," Weinheimer said.

Missionary details lives of Salvadoran refugees

By TREY STRECKER
News Staff Writer

Margaret Viers, a missionary for the Christian Volunteer Ministries, spoke to about 35 people about her work in an El Salvador refugee camp Tuesday night in the Mahon Library Community Room.

The majority of Viers' audience consisted of members of the local group South Plains Clergy and Laity Concerned. Viers focused on her task of helping Salvadoran teachers, many of whom have only third-grade educations, better instruct their students.

"The students copy words from the blackboard, like their teachers used to. The children are not really learning, and getting books in Spanish is a priority," Viers said.

Viers showed slides of the Salvadoran children's drawings. The crayon sketches depicted planes, guns and soldiers. The 1,200 refugees of the camp, in which Viers was stationed for six months, are the wives and children of guerrillas. The refugees fled from areas that were bombed by the Salvadoran army in 1984 and 1985, Viers said.

Viers said two or three small families live together in tiny rooms in a large aluminum shelter located in the camp.

The refugees' diet is based on tortillas, corn and beans prepared in a communal kitchen, she said. In order for a refugee to obtain a food ration, he or she must serve on a work crew doing tasks such as farming, cooking or other chores, Viers said.

Government-sponsored resettlement is decreasing the population of the camp and sending people back to the region from which they were driven. But the Salvadoran army controls access to the area, Viers said, and the people do not like the military control.

Police security trap leads to misdemeanor charges

By MICHELLE BLEIBERG
News Staff Writer

The Lubbock Police Department filed charges with the criminal district attorney's office Wednesday against a suspect who is believed to have made hundreds of harassing phone calls throughout Lubbock since 1982, said Bill Morgan, LPD public information officer.

The suspect, a 37-year-old white male, was tracked down by a security trap, which traced the calls and established the suspect's location, Morgan said.

The common characteristics of the harassing phone calls were sexual suggestions and overtones, Morgan said, and the caller would threaten to break the legs of the victim's family members or friends. The caller knew the names of the victims he called and the names of the victim's family members, but Morgan said police believe the phone calls were made at random by use of a city directory.

LPD would receive up to three complaints a day from victims of the harassing phone calls.

The odds of a Tech student being a victim of the harassing phone calls from the suspect were one in eight, Morgan said. He said many people did not report the harassing phone calls because they were afraid, embarrassed or just ignored the calls.

Harassment is a class B misdemeanor that is punishable by a fine not to exceed $1,000 and/or a jail term not to exceed 180 days.

Nelsons' sound evolving with new bassist

By JILL JOHNSON
Lifestyles Staff Writer

By looking at the most recent publicity shot of the Nelsons, one gets the feeling that the Lubbock-based band has taken a new direction, but the question is whether the change is simply one of sight or one of sound.

The answer is that the group has been moving toward both a new sound and a new image, helped with the addition of bassist Billy Alford, the newest member of the band.

The four-member group is taking a new direction with the enlistment of Alford, who replaced Dennis Jones last month. Alford has been playing professionally for more than 10 years and is bringing somewhat of a new dimension to the group.

"A new member means somewhat altered chemistry," said Donnie Allison, lead singer for the group, "but as for taking a new direction, for the most part we are trying to just let that happen."

Even though Alford has been with the band a short amount of time, Allison feels Alford's input is working out well and said having him as a member is really fun.

"We're trying to let that fourth input be just that, one-fourth," Allison commented on Alford's joining the band.

The Nelsons gained a great deal of publicity and popularity when they won the MTV Basement Tapes competition in 1983. Soon after, the album

"Bag Your Face" was released. It was reported then that the group had moved to Dallas to pursue its musical career. Allison said the band never left Lubbock, however, and that he does not know where the false information came from.

Allison said the group enjoys playing in town but tries not to perform too much in Lubbock because people get tired of hearing the same music pretty fast. "But it's always nice to come home and play," he said.

The Nelsons have been taking a break from performing to work on preparations for an upcoming recording session and to gear up for the show they will be participating in at South Padre throughout March, Allison said.

The band will be at the coast the entire month of March to perform for shows during various colleges spring breaks. The group played in Padre last March, and Allison said it was "a lot of fun."

Fans who have noticed the short absence of Nelsons performances in town will be able to check out the group in concert tonight before the members hit the beach as they promote the "Party Train to South Padre" at Fast and Cool. The show will begin at 10:30 p.m., and cover charge will be $5.

The group will begin recording sessions next month, working on several songs for consideration that they hope will result in songs for an upcoming album, Allison said. As for filming any new videos, Allison said the band members have discussed it with their manager and decided that as new songs develop they will discuss basic conceptual ideas. He said that right now, they are concentrating on music.

Box office longshots garner eight Oscar nominations

By The Associated Press

BEVERLY Hills, Calif. — "Platoon," a searing Vietnam drama that no studio would touch, and "A Room with a View," a period romance regarded as a longshot, scored eight nominations apiece Wednesday to lead the 59th annual Oscar race.

Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" and two surprises, the outer-space sequel "Aliens" and "The Mission," a church-vs.-state story of colonial Brazil, were runners-up with seven apiece.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 4,000-plus voters made these nominations for best picture of 1986: "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "The Mission," "Platoon" and "A Room with a View," a gentle story of Britons at leisure in Florence, Italy, and the English countryside.

Besides best picture, "Platoon" garnered nominations for director, editing, sound, cinematography and screenplay, and two nominations for best supporting actor.

It represented sweet vindication for writer-director Oliver Stone, who spent 10 frustrating years trying to find backing for the film of his memories as an infantryman in Vietnam. The independently made film, distributed by Orion Pictures, is No. 1 at the box office this week.

Stone also was nominated for the screenplay for "Salvador," a film about a journalist in war-torn El Salvador, co-written with Richard Boyle, which hasn't seen wide distribution yet.

The nominations also featured Paul Newman, who has qualified six times before with nary a win; longtime jazz great Dexter Gordon in his acting debut; and hearing-impaired Marlee Matlin in a nearly mute performance.

Newman was nominated for best actor for his repeat as Fast Eddie Felson in "The Color of Money," a sequel to "The Hustler" of 25 years ago. Also named were last year's winner, William Hurt, as Matlin's teacher in "Children of a Lesser God," Gordon for "Round Midnight," James Woods for "Salvador" and Bob Hoskins for "Mona Lisa."

Previous Oscar winners Jane Fonda in "The Morning After" and Sissy Spacek in "Crimes of the Heart" were nominees for best actress, along with Matlin for "Children of a Lesser God," Kathleen Turner for "Peggy Sue Got Married" and Sigourney Weaver for "Aliens."

For best supporting actor, the nominees were Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe for "Platoon," Michael Caine for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Denholm Elliott for "A Room with a View," and Dennis Hopper for "Hoosiers." All are first-time actor nominees except Caine, who has been named three times in the best actor category.

For best supporting actress, the nominees were Tess Harper for

"Crimes of the Heart," Piper Laurie for "Children of a Lesser God," Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio for "The Color of Money," Maggie Smith for "A Room with a View," and Dianne Wiest for "Hannah and Her Sisters."

Nominees for director corresponded to best picture, with one exception: David Lynch for "Blue Velvet," who was chosen instead of Randa Haines of "Children of a Lesser God." The other nominees were Woody Allen for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Roland Joffe for "The Mission," Oliver Stone for "Platoon," and James Ivory for "A Room with a View."

The 59th awards will be presented at the Los Angeles Music Center on an ABC telecast March 30.

Playboy looks for top 10 party playmates

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Officials at Mercer University, already blushing over the "party school" accolade bestowed on the Baptist institution by Playboy magazine, are hoping its students won't take up Playboy's latest offer.

Playboy announced last month that Mercer, which doesn't allow drinking on campus, made the No. 9 spot on its list of top party colleges.

Last week, the men's magazine said it would seek models for its annual back-to-school issue this October from the top 10.

"I think we have a fine population of bright young women, and I would not anticipate what their response would be," Emily Myers, vice president for university relations and development, said Saturday. "We would hope they would choose not to be interested."

Isaacks, Raiders hammer Bears

By CHRIS HOOTEN
Sports Staff Writer

It was one of those games that was as lopsided as the final score indicated.

Behind 14 points from forward Darla Isaacks and a tenacious team defensive effort, the Texas Tech women's basketball team bombed Baylor 68-41 Wednesday at the Municipal Coliseum.

The win moved the Red Raiders to 7-5 in Southwest Conference action and 14-9 for the season. Baylor slipped to 4-8 in league play and 7-15 overall.

Tech used a scrapping full-court press most of the contest forcing the Bears into 15 turnovers. Baylor's 41 points was the lowest point total against the Raiders this season.

"I think our press helped us early to get them out of the offensive flow," Tech Coach Marsha Sharp said. "It took a lot of time off the (30-second shot) clock, so when they got into an offensive set they didn't have much time to score."

After taking a 29-22 lead at the half, the Raiders opened the second half with a Bear-breaking 16-2 scoring run.

Tech post Julia Koncak started the scoring for the Raiders in the final half scoring four unanswered points. The first basket was a three-foot jumper making the score 31-22 at the 19:31 mark.

On Tech's next possession, Koncak was fouled in the act of shooting and proceeded to can both free throws giving the Raiders an 11 point lead. Isaacks hit an 18-foot jump shot to make the score 35-22 with 17:03 remaining.

Baylor guard Bonnie Henson finally scored for the Bears with 16:30 remaining cutting the lead to 11 points but Henson's shot was only a small delay in the Raiders' run.

With 15:26 left, Tech guard Vickie McKenzie nailed a 17-foot set shot to make it 37-24. Isaacks scored on the next two trips for the Raiders and at the 14:50 mark Tech held a 41-24 lead.

Guard Lisa Logsdon scored on an 18-foot jumper and reserve post Lynn Killough hit a jumper from 10 feet out to make the score 45-24 with 13:33 remaining.

Isaacks led the Raiders in scoring with 14 followed by Koncak and reserve post Stacey Seibert who chipped in 10 points each. Koncak added five rebounds while Seibert grabbed four before fouling out with 25 seconds remaining.

"I thought we all came out and adjusted well to their offense," Isaacks said. "We moved the ball real well and the better you move the ball the better shots you'll get."

Lisa Wood, a reserve guard who has been sliding further down Sharp's bench, came off the pine to score nine points while adding four rebounds.

"I think that's the best Wood has played for us, particularly in the second half (of conference play)," Sharp said. "It may be the best she has played all year."

Logsdon scored nine points, leaving her 12 shy of the 1,000-point mark for her career. McKenzie, Killough, reserve guard Janice Davis and reserve forward Reena Lynch scored four points apiece. Lynch ripped down a game-high six rebounds.

Baylor post Maggie Davis, who scored 30 points against the Raiders earlier this year in Waco, was held to only four for the game while adding a meager three rebounds.

"Our point people did a good job helping against her (Davis)," Sharp said. "Koncak did a good job of not letting her turn the baseline and score."

Lynn picks Tech; Dykes pleased with class of '87

By KENT BEST
Sports Editor

Twenty-two high school prospects signed national letters of intent to play football at Texas Tech during national signing day Wednesday and with the late addition of Celina running back Anthony Lynn, Tech solidified what first-year coach Spike Dykes claims is a strong prep recruiting class.

"We were looking for secondary people and runners," Dykes said. "After that we wanted wide receivers and quarterbacks. Certainly we lost some good players, but the guys we got are all quality football players."

Lynn, who picked Tech over Nebraska, Texas, Texas A&M and Baylor, rushed for 5,506 yards and 68 touchdowns while at Celina. The 6-2, 200-pounder drew wide notice two years ago after rushing for 1,941 yards as a junior. Lynn missed three games last year with a chipped ankle bone but still ran for 1,100 yards.

"He's a heck of a runner," Dykes said. "He's the kind of player we're looking for. He's got the whole thing: the size, the speed, the good hands. We feel like we've got a real gem in Anthony Lynn."

Lynn said the chance to play as a freshman influenced his decision to come to Tech.

"I like the coaches and I feel real comfortable out there," Lynn said Wednesday afternoon. "I also felt like I had an opportunity to play at Tech ... I'm sort of impatient. I'd rather play than sit around."

Besides the high school players, Tech signed Darnell Pratt, a linebacker transfer from Cisco Junior College, Jeff Pickett, an offensive lineman who transferred from Oklahoma, and Jon Hummel, a linebacker transfer from SMU.

In all, Tech signed four quarterbacks, three receivers, five running backs, six linemen, four linebackers and three defensive backs.

John Williams, a defensive back from Houston Yates who originally had committed to Tech, signed with Wisconsin early Wednesday.

Texas Tech forward Dewayne Chism puts up a short jumper against Baylor's Michael Hobbs during action Wednesday night at the Coliseum. The Bears downed Tech 65-62 in double overtime to claim sole possession of second place in the Southwest Conference.

Raiders falter

Bears, missed free throws sink Tech in overtime

By DON WILLIAMS
Associate Sports Editor

Wes Lowe stepped to the free throw line with 7,890 fans dropping the bottom out of the decibel meter with as much silence as they could muster.

The 6-10 freshman was looking to oblige by dropping the bottom out of the bucket.

Lowe lofted up the freebie with three seconds left in the second overtime, a little too strong, and the ball clanked off the back of the rim. More silence from the crowd, bedlam Baylor bench.

"I was just trying to concentrate on hitting it, to put everything out of my mind and concentrate on the free throw," Lowe said.

After a timeout, Lowe, trying to duplicate his first effort by glancing the ball off the back of the rim, went too long again as it banked in off the backboard.

"I was trying to put it off the back of the rim for the rebound, maybe get a rebound and another foul," he said. "I just put a little too much on it."

That was the way it went at the charity stripe for Texas Tech in a 65-62 double overtime loss to Baylor Wednesday night in the Municipal Coliseum.

Baylor, which gained sole possession of second place in the Southwest Conference, escaped to an 8-4 record and outlasted the Raiders, who had mustered a furious second half rally to scramble back into a game they trailed 33-17 at halftime.

With the loss, Tech dropped out of a second-place tie with the Bears and fell to 7-5 in SWC play and 12-11 overall, despite getting a career-high 26 points from sophomore guard Sean Gay.

The Raiders' old nemesis — missed free throws — came back to haunt Tech when the game was on the line. Beginning with 3:17 left in regulation, Raiders paraded to the line 13 times and came away with only four points. The nine misses included the front end of two one-and-one bonus situations, and two misses by Greg Crowe with three seconds left in regulation and the score knotted at 49-49.

"I was pleased with the way our guys came back in the game. They had an uphill battle and got back in it to make it a one- or two-point game," Tech Coach Gerald Myers said. "We missed a lot of opportunities late in the game, and I think some of those missed free throws were because of fatigue."

The heartstopping-finish scenario looked unlikely, however, when the Bears carried a 16-point lead in at intermission. While a livid Myers was coming unraveled at official Gerald Boudreaux midway through the first half — he stormed onto the court to draw a technical foul with 3:26 left — Baylor was unraveling the Raiders with a 20-3 run that turned a 12-12 game into a 32-15 Bears' lead with 1:36 left in the first half.

Tech shot a miserable 28 percent from the floor for the half, while Baylor was getting 13 points from guard Michael Williams, who wound up with 18.

"We had a hard time getting started in the first half and Baylor played great defense at the start of the game," Myers said.

But the Raiders turned the tables with some pressure defense of their own early in the second half and finally reconciled the deficit when Wendell Owens converted a layup with 10:14 left to even the score at 41-41.

The Raiders moved within 39-37 on a Crowe layin, a three-point bomb from Gay and two Owens free throws, before Bears' post Darryl Middleton, who scored 17 points, hit two free throws to make the score 41-37.

No more than two points separated the two teams the rest of regulation play. A follow shot by Mike Nelson drew Tech even at 49-49 with 2:07 left, before Crowe's two misses after he rebounded a Nelson miss and was fouled by Robert McLemore.

The Raiders jumped to a 54-49 lead with 2:46 left in the first overtime when Gay swished a three-point field goal from the left corner and Mike Nelson whipped a pass from the key to a wide open Kent Wojciechoski underneath for a layup.

But Baylor battled back with a 13-footer from Michael Williams, a follow shot by a falling down Michael Hobbs and a three-pointer from Mark Buchanan with 34 seconds left that knotted the score at 56-56.

The two teams fought to 61-61, before Darryl Middleton put Baylor ahead for good with 48 seconds left when he hit a 5-foot turning jumper.
