Japanese emissary asks Reagan to lift sanctions

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A high-level Japanese emissary asked President Reagan Tuesday to lift trade sanctions against Japan, but Reagan's chief spokesman said action is unlikely before Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's visit next week.

Former Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe said that during a 20-minute meeting with the president, he "mentioned the semiconductor sanctions issue and emphasized that this measure should be lifted as quickly as possible."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, however, said, "It seems unlikely to us that we will be able to make a change in the sanctions before the prime minister's visit."

Nakasone is due in Washington on April 29 and 30 for meetings with the president and other officials and a state dinner. Abe said he handed Reagan a personal letter from the prime minister.

Reagan and Nakasone have become friends in recent years, but recent U.S. trade action has put a strain on the relationship.

The administration last Friday imposed a 100 percent tariff on some Japanese-manufactured lap-top and desk-top computers, some television sets with 18-to-20-inch screens and certain powered hand tools.

Reagan said he was trying "to enforce the principles of free and fair trade."

The U.S. government accused the Japanese of violating an agreement to refrain from selling semiconductors in third countries at prices below cost — a practice called "dumping" — and to open its markets wider to the purchase of U.S.-made semiconductors, also known as computer chips.

Abe told reporters that during his visit with Reagan, "The president said ... that he would like to discuss with the prime minister the broadly based relationship between Japan and the United States, not just trade but the entire breadth of our bilateral relationship."

On the trade issue, Abe said, "it is Japan's responsibility to discharge what is expected of it and I outlined the measures I have formulated before coming to Washington."

He said these were expanded international contributions by Japan, expansion of manufactured and other imports and measures dealing with "individual trade issues."

"I also emphasized that we should approach U.S.-Japan trade issues, not from the confrontation approach, but we should try to solve them through amicable talks," Abe said.

Fitzwater told reporters, "I would say that overall our position is that we have tried to take a deliberate approach" to the sanctions. "We are sympathetic to the disruption that (imposition of sanctions) causes ... so that our precondition is one of looking for solutions."

Fitzwater reiterated administration opposition to an amendment to House trade legislation, sponsored by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that would require the government to automatically retaliate against countries found to have gained excessive trade surpluses through unfair competitive practices.

The spokesman said "we think it (the Gephardt amendment) takes away the flexibility needed to enforce ... trade laws with precision and sensitivity."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole

said he doubts the sanctions against Japan would stop the momentum building in Congress for tough trade legislation.

"I doubt if it will have much impact," Dole, R-Kan., told reporters at the White House after GOP congressional leaders met with Reagan. "I happen to agree with the administration, but I don't think it's going to change any votes."

"It comes a little late," the senator said. "I think this has been brewing ... for two or three years. I think coming now, when we're on the eve of passing legislation in the House and may in ... three months in the Senate, it comes a bit late."

Legislators endorse tax proposal barring state income tariffs

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas House endorsed a proposed constitutional amendment Tuesday that would prohibit personal or corporate state income taxes unless voters give their permission.

Rejecting arguments that lawmakers would be ducking their duty by leaving such a decision to the public, the House voted 106-35 to send the plan to the Senate.

"This would allow the voters to decide," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, sponsor of the measure.

Schlueter said that under the proposal, any income tax plan placed before voters first would have to pass both the House and Senate. That means voters would know precisely what kind of tax they would be paying, what the rates would be and what deductions would be allowed if they approved it, he said.

"This allows the people to find out what is going to be in an income tax before the Legislature passes it in the dark of night — which is the only way (without the constitutional amendment) it would pass if it could pass," Schlueter said.

The proposed constitutional change also would require the Legislature to return to voters if lawmakers wanted to raise the rates after an income tax was approved.

Opponents argued that the Legislature now has the power to enact an income tax if needed, and they said putting the question before voters would be passing the buck.

"I was elected to come up here and make decisions, not pass the ball off to the public every time we face a difficult choice. It's our job and our responsibility to vote for or against a state income tax," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen.

Hinojosa said it is unlikely voters would decide to tax themselves, adding, "They elected us to make those decisions. If they don't like the decisions we make, they can vote us out in the next election."

But Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, said the Legislature often gives voters the final say on major state issues. Last fall, lawmakers chose to allow voters to decide whether Texas should legalize gambling on horse racing with an election scheduled for this November, he noted.

"We have, on selected items, gone to the people and said, 'How do you feel about this issue?' All it would take is a majority vote and a referendum of the people, just like we did on parimutuel gambling," Ceverha said.

Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, noted that before enactment of the state sales tax in 1961, some people urged lawmakers to pass a constitutional ban on that levy.

But the sales tax today is the state's major source of income, and without it state services would suffer, he said, urging lawmakers to defeat the proposed income tax limits and allow a future Legislature to decide if one is needed.

"Let's leave this out of the Constitution, where it certainly doesn't belong. I've got a lot of confidence in future legislators," he said.

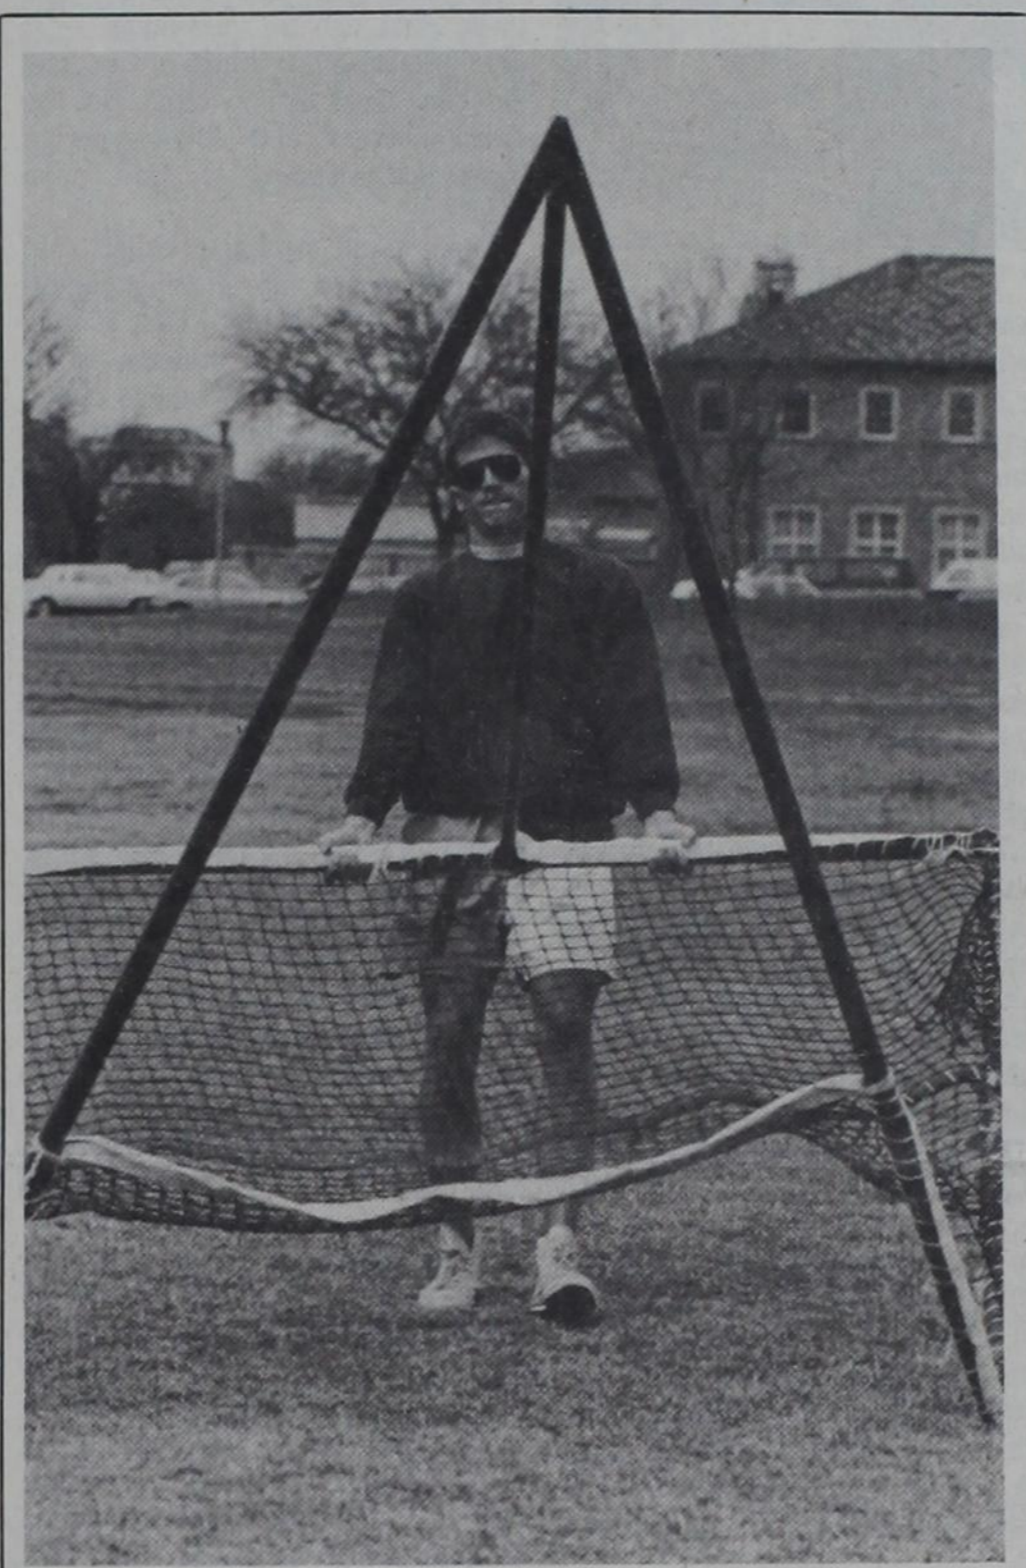

Neither Schlueter nor House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, would predict what will happen to the income tax restriction in the Senate. But Lewis noted that when the House passed a proposal to establish an outright ban on income taxes last year, the Senate didn't even debate the measure.

"You know, we pass it every year here in the House. It's over in the Senate now. It's been over there before and they haven't taken any action on it," he said.

If the Senate would pass the House proposal, the proposed constitutional limitation on income taxes would go before the voters in November.

Schlueter said he considers this plan a compromise when compared to previous amendments that proposed an outright ban.

"I think it's something the Senate can possibly live with. I think it provides a middle ground," he said.

Four counts of robbery

Sophomore faces felony charges

By MICHELLE BLEIBERG
News Staff Writer

Additional criminal charges were filed at the Lubbock County criminal district attorney's office Friday against a Texas Tech student who is accused of robbing several local convenience stores this month.

George Robert Reed, a 24-year-old sophomore English major, has been charged with four counts of aggravated robbery in connection with four separate robberies, the first having taken place April 11 at the Town and Country convenience store at Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue. Reed was arrested April 15 after an early morning armed robbery of the same Town and Country convenience store. The DA's office said Reed also robbed another unidentified store the same day.

Bill Morgan, Lubbock Police Department information officer, said after Lubbock police officers arrested Reed last week that Reed also was a suspect in the three other robberies.

The DA's office said Reed also is charged with an April 12 robbery of the E-Z Mart at 66th Street and Frankford Avenue.

Morgan said Reed was identified as a suspect through physical descriptions given by store clerks and videotape taken by hidden cameras in the stores. LPD officers filed the added charges Friday.

If Reed is found guilty of the aggravated robbery charges, which are classified as first degree felonies, he could face a prison sentence.

Capitol Hill officials warn of arms accord

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Tuesday the Soviet Union is giving "every appearance of wanting to move ahead" on an agreement eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe, but congressional leaders urged the administration to proceed cautiously.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., warned that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's latest proposal "is cosmetically attractive but, at bottom, works against the cohesion and steadfastness of the Atlantic alliance."

Republican leaders of the House and Senate were summoned to the White House and joined Reagan in the Cabinet Room, where Secretary of State George Shultz talked for nearly an hour about his arms discussions in Moscow last week.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said it was too early to tell if there was broad-based support for Gorbachev's proposal, which calls for eliminating shorter-range nuclear missiles as well as medium-range weapons in Europe.

"I know that some senators have already contacted me, wanting to see Shultz, want to go into detail about precisely what happened," Dole said, talking with reporters in the driveway later.

"Everybody, I think, is expressing some reservation, at the same time expressing cautious optimism — whatever that means," Dole added.

Posing for pictures with the lawmakers, Reagan was asked about prospects for an agreement this year. "I'm not going to hazard any guesses," he replied.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater quoted Reagan as telling the group he was "optimistic but realistic" about prospects.

"The Soviets give every appearance of wanting to move ahead on (medium-range missiles)," Reagan said, according to Fitzwater. "But there is a lot of fine print to be worked out. We will watch it very closely."

There are some fears in Europe that elimination of the nuclear weapons would remove the major deterrent to a Soviet invasion with tanks and other conventional forces.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, commander of NATO forces, has recommended that the United States deploy shorter-range missiles in Europe to match the Soviet forces. He also has opposed eliminating the medium-range missiles from Europe.

The shorter-range weapons have a range of 300 to 600 miles, while the medium-range weapons can strike targets up to 3,400 miles away.

Fitzwater noted that Rogers has voiced his objections numerous times, and said, "There are a lot of people on various sides of this issue. Healthy debate is certainly useful on this subject. We have no problem (with it)."

Former state official notices less social responsibility in law field

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

Much of the recent decline in public respect for the professionalism of lawyers stems from a diminished sense of social responsibility among legal professionals, said former Texas Secretary of State Myra McDaniel during a speech Tuesday night.

McDaniel, speaking at the Texas Tech School of Law, said many law students during the 1970s felt obligated to devote a great deal of their professional time to social work. That pattern currently does not seem to be as prevalent, which may be a contributing factor toward the public's unfavorable conception of lawyers, McDaniel said.

The concept of responsibility to society is inherent in the oath taken by lawyers in becoming officers of the court, she said.

McDaniel was appointed secretary of state by former Gov. Mark White and was the first black to serve in that capacity, said Cynthia Morris, vice president of Legal Forum. Morris' group co-sponsored McDaniel's presentation along with the Tech Student Bar Association.

One of the primary social responsibilities a lawyer must fulfill is to protect and preserve societal rights established in the Bill of Rights, McDaniel said.

The former state cabinet member said the majority of practicing attorneys work toward fulfilling their obligation to serve the public, doing so in a number of ways. Some attorneys perform legal work for charitable groups at no charge, and others take cases for indigents and the elderly for free or for a reduced fee, she said.

Many attorneys believe they can best serve society by practicing law in the public sector, McDaniel said, either as a legislator or public official.

She said many public sector jobs in the legal profession are highly specialized, citing the example of attorneys employed by the city of Dallas who work specifically on legal problems associated with the Dallas/Fort Worth airport.

Legal jobs in the public and private sectors have distinct advantages and disadvantages, McDaniel said, adding that lawyers must plan their careers in either area to effectively execute their responsibilities to society.

Lawyers choosing to work in the private sector have a greater chance of securing higher paying jobs than their public sector colleagues, McDaniel said. She said attorneys working for private firms enjoy the advantage of being able to focus attention on a small number of clients.

Disadvantages of public practice include the burden of public attention, comparatively lower pay and a widely held misconception that the only reason a lawyer would work for the state is because of that individual's stupidity or professional incompetence, McDaniel said.

Clements drags feet on filing vacancies

In terms of the Chinese calendar, 1987 is the year of the hare. In terms of how quickly Gov. Bill Clements is filling the Texas Tech Board of Regents vacancies, Texans might think this is the year of the tortoise.

The Tech board has been without three members since Jan. 31. The vacancies are no surprise, since three openings occur every two years. Granted, Clements took office in mid-January with a backlog of 400 appointments left over from Mark White. Also granted, Clements has had to contend with an additional 3,800 appointments to select.

However, the governor seems to have found time to announce appointments for the Great Orange Idol of the South and the equally Great Maroon Idol of the Southeast. He even has taken time to appoint regents for less prestigious, more obscure institutions, such as Texas Southern University, East Texas State University, Stephen F. Austin University and the Texas State University System, which includes such powerhouses as Sul Ross University and Angelo State University.

Besides Tech, Texas Woman's University and North Texas State University are the only two schools needing regents, and NTSU really isn't a point of contention yet because the regents' terms don't end until sometime in May.

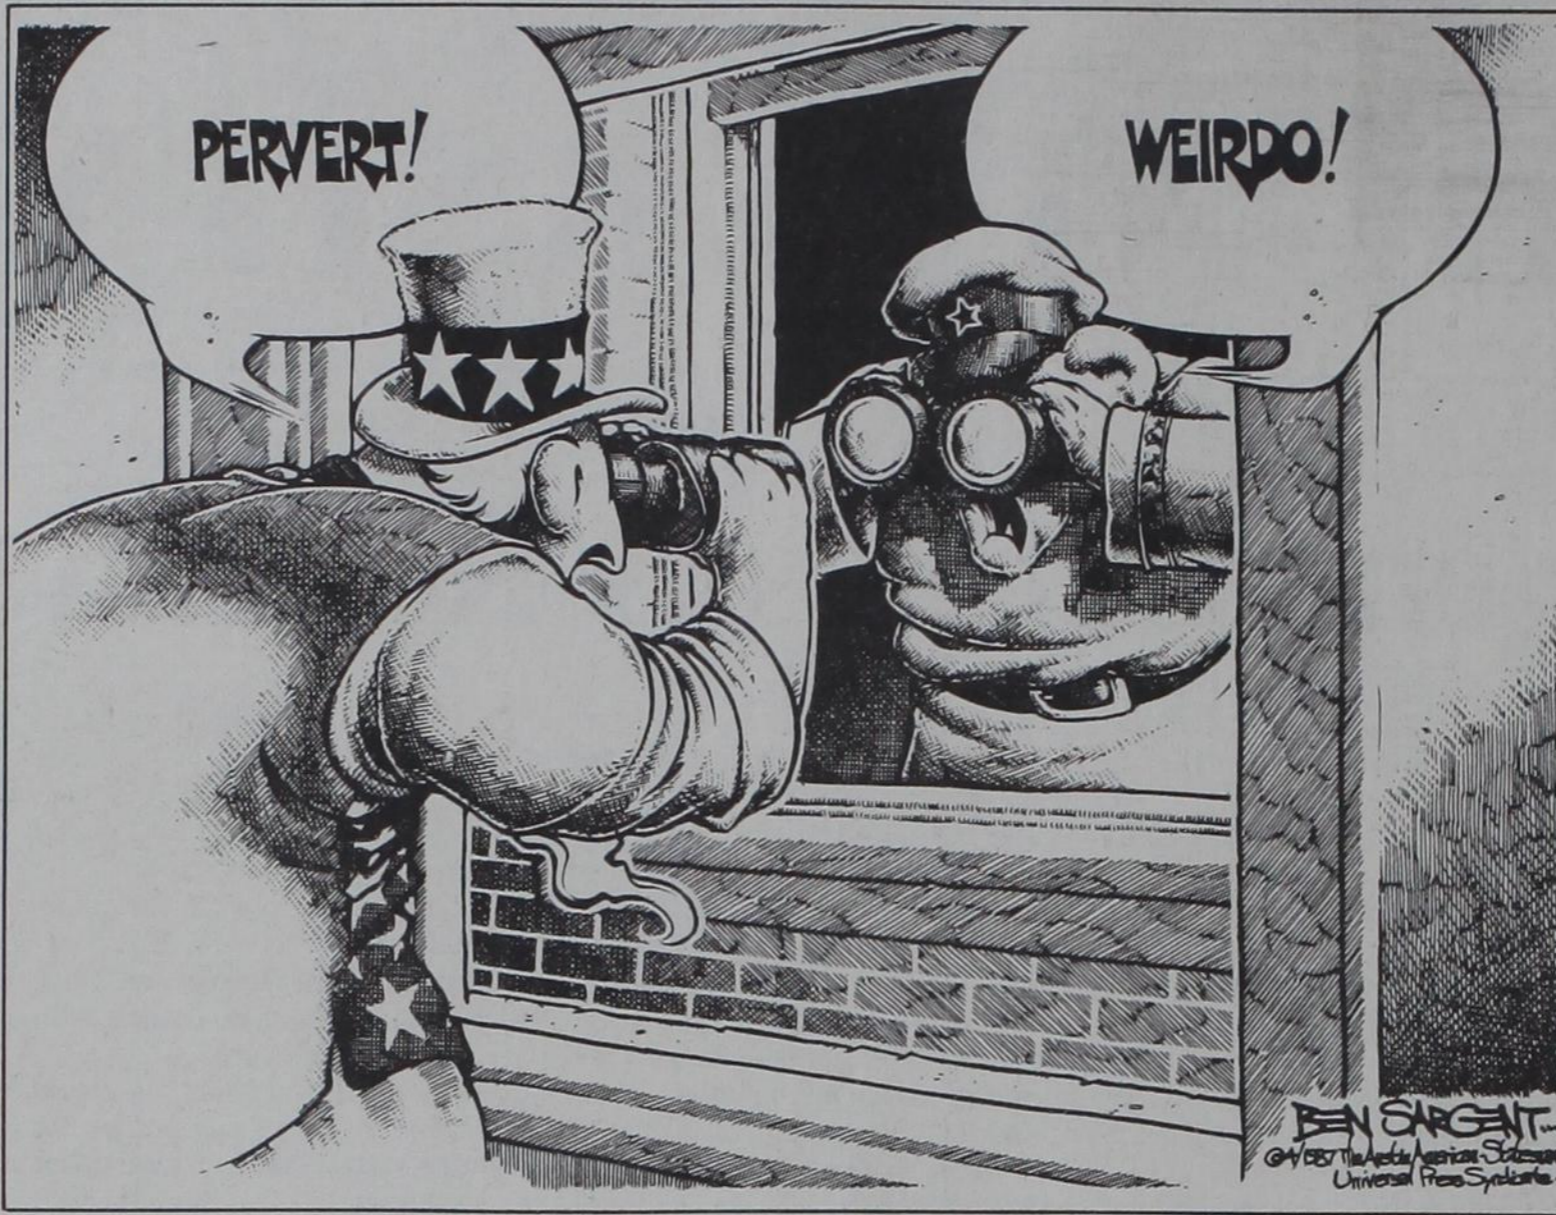

The three Tech regents whose terms have expired are required to continue in their posts until new appointments are made. What level of dedication can be expected of them, however, when they had anticipated that their jobs would be done by now? Furthermore, exiting regent John Birdwell has no desire to be reappointed, and Jean Kahle has a slim to none chance of being reappointed since White selected her last year.

The appointment of regents at universities closer to Austin just continues the impression that West Texas is given a back seat to the needs of those closer to the state capital. Neglecting the needs of the outer reaches of the state is a dangerous practice upon which to build a governorship.

Tech regents are a vital part of the university, establishing a school's direction and setting policies that will have impact on the institution for years to come. The Tech board is not at an acceptable functioning level with three lame-duck regents whose voices are for the most part moot. In effect, Tech has three fewer leaders to bat for the university in Austin, and in Texas' current economic difficulties, Tech needs as many hitters as possible.

Clements has neglected his duties long enough. If he has time to appoint regents for schools with half the enrollment of Tech, then he has time to meet the needs of this university. If he continues in his delays, he may be faced with dealing with an angry Red and Black Idol from the West.

Thieves deserve punishment

Edward Gately
News Staff Writer

Concerning the MCI bust, I thought of a hypothetical situation that could parallel the scam at Texas Tech. John, the name I give my fictitious character, was involved in a situation similar to the MCI scam.

While working at a supermarket at night when all the managers had gone home, John found he could steal cigarettes without getting caught. There was no way to trace the thefts back to him, so he felt pretty confident about his new habit. He was able to smoke as heavy as he wanted without paying a cent to support his habit. As time went along, he even encouraged his friends to stop by and pick up a pack free of charge. John made lots of new friends by letting them take advantage of this "great deal."

As time went along, he did feel a little guilty, but the fact that he could never get caught kept him from putting an end to his nasty habit — stealing, not smoking.

One day, the management began to notice that the amount of cigarettes leaving the shelf did not match the amount the night clerk had rung up on the register. The situation became pretty obvious to management, and one night a manager decided to spend the night hiding in the store to find out how the cigarettes were disappearing.

It didn't take long before the manager saw John take a pack of cigarettes without thinking twice about his actions.

The next morning, the manager, just for laughs, announced that he knew who was stealing the cigarettes and if this person came forward and confessed, he or she would just receive a warning and would be allowed to continue working for the company.

John knew the manager was talking about him and decided to come forward and tell the truth. Little did he know what was really going to happen. As he approached his boss, he heard only two words pass his lips: "You're fired."

There was no restitution period, and there should not have been. John stole and he got what he deserved. No one should be able to commit a crime and walk off free of punishment. Paying for the cigarettes would not have been enough.

A crime is a crime. Thinking you could never get caught is not reason enough to be let off the hook. The Tech students involved in the MCI scam were lucky — maybe too lucky for their own good in the long run.

Press hypocrites fault Gooden

Tom Wicker
Syndicated Columnist

Not since Muhammad Ali lost his boxing title for refusing the draft during the Vietnam War has so much hypocrisy and self-righteousness swamped the press and the airwaves as in the sad case of Dwight Gooden, baseball's boy wonder, who recently tested positive for cocaine use.

I am too old to be part of a drug generation and have no use for stimulants or depressants that can be smoked, sniffed, injected or swallowed in capsule. My indulgence has been alcohol, a far more widely used and equally addictive poison that knows no limits of age or era.

Therefore I have no inclination to condone Gooden's foolish offense. But the tides of condemnation, innuendo, moralism, holy outrage and pious preaching that have surged from his failed urine test make me want to throw up. In a society that provides the world's largest and most avid market for drugs and liquor, let him who is without sin cast the first stone.

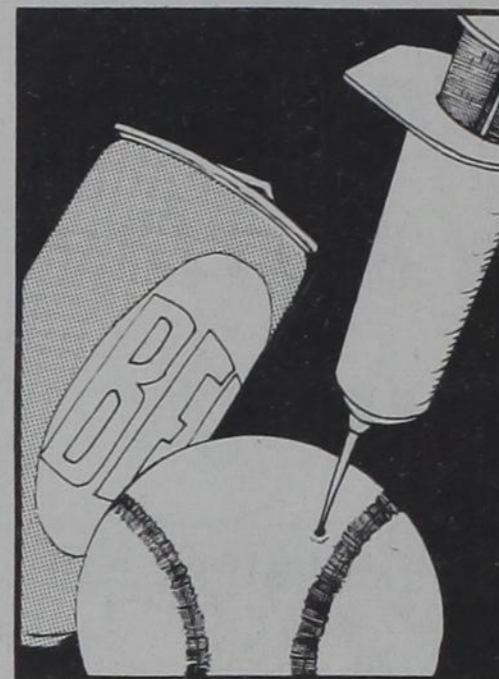

There is no evidence, for example, that Gooden is a cocaine addict, or even a seriously troubled user. His teammates, including those familiar with cocaine, noticed no signs of it. The test he failed was presumptive evidence only that cocaine traces were present. Even if accurate — and these tests can be misleading — it didn't disclose how much of the drug had been used, or how often. But the doom-shouters and finger-pointers have not scrupled to wait upon evidence.

There is no evidence, either, that cocaine caused his pitching performance to fall off last year. It may have; but plenty of athletes follow superb seasons, like Gooden's 24 victories for the Mets in 1985, with merely good ones, such as his 17 in 1986. Nor is there proof that some troublesome off-field incidents involving him were drug-related; they may have been, but, as with his pitching, accusations ought to be based on facts, not assumptions.

As for the charge that this athlete "failed" or "let down" his fans, that's merely true. But whether because he thought he could pass it or because he wanted to be caught, he volunteered for the test he failed. And the greater question — how he conducts himself over a career and in his longer life — cannot be answered by a single drug test. If Dwight Gooden now overcomes whatever problem he may have and conducts himself sensibly and honorably in the years ahead, he will be a better example to his fellow human beings than many of those in baseball and its press boxes who as eagerly condemn as they once praised him.

Beer is an alcoholic beverage; alcohol is a drug; and baseball is heavily supported by beer — both the beer sold at the park and often spilled or poured all over unsuspecting people in the lower stands by rowdies from above and the beer hawked like so much popcorn on broadcasts of the games. How many baseball men who religiously deplore drugs profit from beer sales and beer-sponsored broadcasts? How many who write about baseball, or who watch it on the field or the tube, down two martinis before lunch, or dinner, or both?

Babe Ruth and any number of the sport's greatest players — as any competent history of the game discloses — were hard drinkers and roisterers. They're in the Hall of Fame, voted there by writers not known to be models of temperance. At almost any Old Timers Game, some revered former centerfielder or second baseman will be lionized despite the fact that he played many a game with a hangover or booze on his breath. Grover Cleveland Alexander, who sometimes slept it off in the dugout, was respectfully portrayed in the movies by a future president.

Dwight Gooden, some say, should be a "role model" for youth. Why? Athletes are only human beings, gifted at throwing or catching or running, or — in football and boxing — hitting other people.

Dwight Gooden's huge salary and his failure to be a miracle pitcher for two years in a row may have had something to do with the anger and hypocrisy that greeted his failed drug test. If so, his worst crime was to gain too much money and glory, too soon.

LETTERS

Get the facts right on Reagan

To the editor:

This letter is written in response to a recent letter by C.J. Smith (Tuesday, April 7). I have no idea what he thought he was writing, but I wish he knew a few simple facts.

I could tell by reading the first sentence of his letter that he knew very little about the subject he was proposing to write about. "It is fairly obvious that scandal has once again struck Washington." This is merely an opinion which must be substantiated with cold facts, not emotional whimpering. I also would like a definition of "greatest scandals" as well as another example of one besides the already much over-used and over-hyped one of Watergate.

The fact that the president went behind the backs of Congress is an irrelevant matter. The president is the chief executive of the United States. In recent years, Congress has usurped the power of weak presidents. The covert action of White House insiders seemed logical to them at the time, and most of all, vital to stemming Communism. Also, if I had a family member being held hostage, I would certainly want the government to do everything possible to get him/her free.

When Smith refers to Reagan's senility, he is merely stating another opinion. I seriously doubt that he has given Mr. Reagan a psychiatric exam recently.

Reagan has been one of the most popular presidents in history. He has obviously done something right his first term to be re-elected. As for the Grenada affair, does the economy really take precedence over liberty?

Finally, as for "increased national pride" and "flag waving," these can only be construed as good things. I am extremely proud to be an American, as well as a Republican. Recall national pride during the Carter administration and how little the press attacked him. This can only be used as proof that the press has abused Reagan. If Smith has nothing better to do and no more patriotism than to write slashing letters against the president, then I have little regard for his opinions.

Federal agents capture LaRouche headquarters

By The Associated Press

LEESBURG, Va. — Federal agents, acting under orders of a federal bankruptcy judge, seized the headquarters of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche Tuesday and took control of three companies tied to him.

U.S. marshals and FBI agents also seized control of many of the LaRouche companies' offices around the country, including those in Houston; Quincy, Mass.; Washington, D.C.; and Palisades Park, N.J., U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson said at a news conference.

A rare maneuver under federal involuntary bankruptcy laws, the move was aimed at collecting part of the more than $21 million in contempt-of-court fines levied against LaRouche-related groups by a federal judge in Boston.

Questioned about whether action would be taken against LaRouche himself, Hudson replied: "I'm going to decline to comment on that at this time." LaRouche left the country last December, and investigators say they believe he is in West Germany.

The government filed petitions seeking to place the companies in involuntary bankruptcy under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy code. The companies publish and distribute material for the LaRouche organization and conduct fund-raising activities.

A U.S. bankruptcy judge in Alexandria, Va., signed an order under seal after a closed hearing on Monday that directed the seizure of assets and property and the appointment of interim trustees for each company.

Hudson said the LaRouche companies have 20 days to respond and to seek a hearing in federal bankruptcy court. He said individuals who want to collect debts from the LaRouche companies can ask the court to join the government as creditors.

"Why has my office decided to pursue this somewhat extraordinary remedy?" Hudson said. "In our view, this is the only vehicle we have to make sure that these citizens are properly paid and that the United States' debts are properly collected."

Three private Virginia attorneys were named interim trustees to control the corporations.

The court order said the three corporations are directed by LaRouche himself and funnel money back and forth between other related corporations. Hudson said they had refused to pay debts.

The trustees have power to continue the companies' activities and direct the money to the government, and to shut down any illegal or unnecessary operations and fire employees.

"Various components of the LaRouche organization are attempting to liquidate real property assets," said the order.

Armed marshals moved shortly before 7 a.m. EDT on offices at three locations around Leesburg, a town 45 miles from Washington, D.C. where LaRouche's headquarters is located.

A locksmith accompanying the marshals removed the locks on exterior and interior doors and replaced them, giving the government control over the leased offices while marshals conducted an inventory of assets.

LaRouche spokesman Warren Hammerman called the move an "unconstitutional action pre-empting normal judicial practices" and charged it was politically motivated.

NEWS BRIEFS

Accused Nazi returned to Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Karl Linnas, who lost his eight-year battle against deportation from the United States, was delivered to the Soviet Union Tuesday, where he may face a firing squad on charges of killing thousands of prisoners in a Nazi death camp.

The 67-year-old Linnas was flown from New York to Czechoslovakia and handed over to the Soviets. The official Soviet news agency Tass said he was put on a flight and taken to Tallinn, capital of his native Estonia.

A handcuffed Linnas struggled with U.S. officials Monday night when he was put aboard a Czechoslovak airliner at Kennedy International Airport. He shouted that police were carrying out a "murder and kidnapping" by sending him to the Soviet Union, where he has been sentenced to death.

When the plane landed in Prague Tuesday, he was transferred to a Soviet plane for the flight to Soviet Estonia on the Baltic Sea.

Linnas directed a Nazi concentration camp in the Estonian city of Tartu during the early years of World War II.

Car bomb increases terrorism death toll

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A car bomb at rush hour created an inferno at the main bus terminal Tuesday that officials said killed up to 150 people, bringing the death toll from terrorism in five days to almost 300.

A Health Ministry official said about 200 people were injured and that some might die of burns or other wounds.

Many of the victims burned to death or were killed by smoke inhalation in six parked buses that were engulfed in flames, police and witnesses said.

The bombing was the third attack since Friday on this island south of India, where Tamil insurgents have waged a four-year war against the majority Sinhalese for an independent nation. Tamils killed at least 142 people in northeastern Sri Lanka Friday and Monday.

Witnesses said many of the injured at the bus terminal had severe burns. Rescue work was hampered by heavy rain.

Council sanctions computer sale to Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's National Security Council has approved the sale of a $900,000 computer system to Iran, industry and administration officials said Tuesday.

The approval represents the first major U.S. transaction involving Iran since disclosures in late 1986 that the administration had been secretly selling arms to Iran.

Analysts suggested the move underscored a growing sensitivity on the part of the Reagan administration to problems faced by U.S. manufacturers of high-technology goods as they seek to compete in overseas markets.

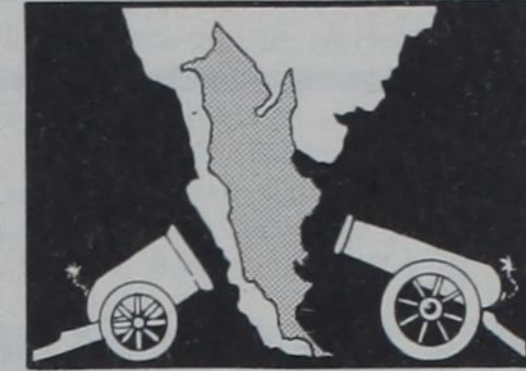

Administration officials said the council ruled late last week in favor of Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Secretary of State George Shultz — and against Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Argentine soldiers end amnesty issue fight

By The Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — About 250 soldiers peacefully ended a six-hour mutiny Tuesday in the northern city of Salta after hundreds of civilians gathered outside the base to protest the uprising, officials reported.

Gov. Roberto Romero of the Salta province said late Tuesday: "The military conflict initiated by engineers' company C5 is totally over."

Col. Ricardo Rodriguez Coronel said the rebel leader, Maj. Jorge Duran, turned himself in. He did not say whether Duran was arrested. It was the third army revolt in a week. The restive soldiers oppose the army's leadership and demand amnesty for officers accused of torture and killing during the "dirty war" against leftists conducted by military governments in the late 1970s.

The government said Tuesday that 19 top officers had quit or been fired since revolts at two other army camps, but President Raul Alfonsin denied the purge was part of a deal with the rebels.

Romero told the Rivadavia radio network earlier in the day the 250 officers and men of engineer company C5 revolted over the amnesty issue and the civilian president's choice of Gen. Jose Dante Caridi as new army commander.

The soldiers at Salta were in sympathy with an infantry brigade in Tucuman, where another uprising had been reported Tuesday, he said.

Col. Nestor Cassina of the Fifth Infantry Brigade in Tucuman requested retirement Tuesday and his application was accepted, the government news agency Telam reported.

Immigration wants AIDS tests part of legalization

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — The Immigration and Naturalization Service wants illegal aliens screened for AIDS when they apply for legalization and those who test positive barred from the country, an INS official said Tuesday.

Aliens who apply for legalization under the new immigration law's amnesty provisions must submit to a blood test for sexually transmitted diseases, but an AIDS test is not now part of those regulations, said

William Zimmer, director of the INS regional processing center in Dallas.

He said the INS wants federal public health authorities to declare AIDS a loathsome, contagious and dangerous disease so those who apply for legalization could be tested for the incurable disease and banned if they have it.

The issue is under consideration at INS headquarters in Washington and is being discussed with the Department of Health and Human Services, Zimmer said. His Dallas office is one of four INS regional processing centers in the country.

"We feel in the INS that AIDS should be part of the dangerous and contagious diseases, but we're having difficulty with the help of the surgeon general's office in designating it as a dangerous disease," Zimmer said.

Federal regulations exclude aliens from entering the United States on seven grounds, five of them involving health, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Public Health Service said Tuesday.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is not now on that list, but changes are being considered in that area, said the spokeswoman, Ellen Casselberry.

INS spokesman Duke Austin in Washington said the INS as an agency won't take a position on the testing requirements for AIDS until the Public Health Service rules on whether it is an inadmissible disease.

"It's not our responsibility to make that decision. They're the ones evaluating it," he said. "It's their provision of the law. We certainly don't want to legalize people with AIDS."

Quota system in effect for new prison admissions

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — A new method for admitting inmates to the state's crowded prisons should end the open-and-shut cycle that has nagged the Texas Department of Corrections for months, an aide to Gov. Bill Clements said.

Sheriffs have been assigned specific days for bringing prisoners to the Department of Correction's Diagnostic Unit in Huntsville under the plan, said Rider Scott, Clements' special counsel.

Sheriffs are under an informal understanding that they will transport the same number of inmates each week under the system, Scott told the Dallas Times Herald.

Although the plan should stop repeated closings of state prisons, Scott said more prison capacity still is needed because of an anticipated higher crime rate later this year and new laws restricting release of violent inmates.

Under the new plan, each day's intake will be limited to 150 new prisoners, and admissions will be spread evenly throughout the week, Scott said.

Each day, the Board of Pardons and Paroles and TDC will have to generate an equal number of automatic or mandatory releases, paroles and pre-parole releases, Scott said. Throughout last week, the prison remained below its required capacity, after adding the net of each day's admissions and releases to the existing prison population.

On Monday, the system opened for its sixth consecutive weekday, admitting 55 new inmates and releasing 179, prison officials said. The prison system is usually closed on weekends to new admissions.

Engineer talks on career success

By EDWARD GATELY
News Staff Writer

Adapting to change and being creative are the keys to a successful career in engineering, said Allen Wright, manager of automation applications at Intellex Inc., during a Tuesday lecture in the Lankford Lab of the electrical engineering annex.

Wright's presentation was the fourth and last installment of the Halliburton Distinguished Lecture Series, which has been funded by the Halliburton Foundation Inc. throughout the spring semester.

Wright, who graduated from Oregon State with a master's degree in mechanical engineering, talked about changes and risks in the field of engineering in a speech titled, "Evolution of Careers: Change, Challenge and Balance." He also discussed many qualifications needed to make it in today's world of changing technology.

Changes in technology have had negative effects on engineers in the past, but there are many ways to overcome and benefit from changes instead of falling behind, Wright said. There have been many technological changes in the tools engineers use in the creative process, he said. Wright cited calculators and computers as examples of products that have gone through drastic changes in recent years.

In 1971, when Wright graduated from college, calculators and computers were in the early stage of development. As newer, more powerful products were introduced, many engineers had difficulty adjusting to the new technology, he said.

Changes in the environment of the workplace are occurring as American engineering businesses begin to follow in the footsteps of Japan, Wright said.

"Companies are moving away from unstructured research and into team efforts working swiftly for one goal," he said.

Successful engineers have to predict instantaneous changes of technology and project structure and either take advantage or fall behind, he said. Engineers who stay behind will suffer the consequences, he said.

Wright said he once heard a liberal arts student say it's OK to look at the past, but do not stare at it.

"Engineers must look toward the future," he said.

Engineers must understand people and realize that they are working for the benefit of society, Wright said.

"Listening to people's needs and working to achieve the highest quality for the lowest cost are the goals of the successful engineer," he said.

Education groups to vote on organizational merger

By LAURA ASKINS
News Staff Writer

Members of three organizations in the Texas Tech College of Education will vote Thursday on a proposal to consolidate the separate general education groups into one organization for education majors.

One of the organizations considering the merger is the Dean's Hosts and Hostesses, an organization assisting the dean of the COE with functions in the college.

The COE Student Council is another group that will vote on the decision of the consolidation. Among other service functions, the Student Council sponsors education week and the Tech Faculty Member of the Month award.

If the proposal passes, the groups will merge under the title of the largest group, Texas Student Education Association (TSEA). TSEA, a professional organization for all education majors, is affiliated on the state and national level with the Texas State Teachers Association and the National Education Association.

Texas A&M University, the University of Texas, Stephen F. Austin University and Angelo State University are among the schools in the state that have made TSEA the one general organization designed for all education majors, said Mackie Bobo, director of external relations in the Tech COE.

The smaller education organizations designed for specific degrees will remain the same. Bobo said.

Hot spring and summer defines fashion forecast

By MISSY COSTELLO
Lifestyles Staff Writer

Even though Mother Nature seems to be disagreeing lately, according to the calendar spring has sprung and with the changing of the weather comes yet another fashion season.

According to Leslie Moss, a buyer for Skibell's, the outlook for women's spring fashions is "really soft, in colorization and in looks. Traditionally, spring gets brighter, but it's softer this year."

Natural fibers are essentials in spring fashion, and 100 percent cotton and linens will appear in everything from sportswear to dresses. According to Moss, knits also will be important in spring dressing.

"Knits that are not body tight, but body conscious" will be featured in women's sportswear, Moss said. Such knits are both easy to wear and travel easily, with a minimum of wrinkles.

Charlotte Carroll, manager of Steven Craig on Broadway, also said knits are a prerequisite for spring fashion.

"Knits are the hottest thing we've got," Carroll said. "They're so much easier to wear."

Both women agreed that pastel colors will be dominant in clothing this season, though Carroll added that "orange is a big color."

Popularity of the "Out of Africa" look of last summer continues this season. Carroll said the look is not one of animal prints, but rather "really simple." She illustrated a "safari look" as a khaki outfit accented with a belt or scarf in an animal print.

Last week, Marilyn Scarth, the Southwest representative for the Putamayo collection of women's clothing, was in Lubbock to set up a boutique for her line at Skibell's.

The Putamayo line has existed about 10 years. It is named for the Putamayo River in South America. The founder and designer of the line, an artist and art collector, began importing sweaters hand crafted in the Putamayo River area for sale in his New York antique shop. Requests for other hand-crafted garments of natural fibers increased. Unable to find clothing that suited his needs, he began designing his own collection of women's wear, and Putamayo was born.

The line for this season has a "romantic, rustic feeling," Scarth said. "It's a French country, romantic look."

The spring collection includes mix and match patterns with a "Southwest look." The fabrics are 100 percent cotton, and the styles include flowing long skirts and petticoats. This look for spring is perfect to accessorize with big hats and huraches. Patterns as well as textures can be mixed to create an individual look.

Accessories for spring, according to Scarth, include not only hats, but sashes to be worn as belts or in the hair. Colorful shawls also are important accessories, to be worn around the neck or at the waist.

Valerie Collier, buyer/sales manager for the junior department at Dillard's, cited scarves, big necklaces, earrings and big belts as "hot" fashion additions for spring.

Collier said dresses for the season have a "more sophisticated look, or a soft romantic look."

Spring will see "lots of woven sundresses and tank dresses in plaids, small prints and solids," Collier said. "Also, lots of lace trim, eyelet and petticoats." Eyelet will appear in "shirts, tops and dresses. It's not only a trend, but a total look."

Moss said the spring fashion season offers a wide variety of looks that can be interpreted to create an individual look.

"Spring and summer has as much to offer people as anything," she said. She said a variety of styles are available that "everyone can extract and get their feeling from."

"The key to dressing is to spend money on things you're going to wear and be comfortable in. Every piece should be considered an investment. Everything should count."

Weekend includes arts and kites

By JILL JOHNSON
Lifestyles Staff Writer

Last week students mourned the loss of Club Manhattan and the Red Raider club, but the past is put to pasture as the new club in town, Mezcals, quickly moves into the hearts of many. As Mom would say, life has a funny way of working out.

A new club isn't the only thing the Hub has going for it this week. Oh no, we're not talking quasi-fun, but first-class fun happening in our very own city.

The University Center routinely sponsors a film every Wednesday night, but this week's show is no ordinary one. "Oliver," an adaptation of Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist, is the feature film this week. The show will begin at 8 p.m. in the Allen Theater, and admission is $2.50 general admission and $1.50 for Texas Tech students.

In addition to "Oliver," the UC will show "Cooley High" at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Allen Theater. Tickets cost $2.50 or $1.50 with a Tech ID. People can receive a 50-cent discount off regular admission at the door both nights by bringing a can of food. All cans will go to the South Plains Food Bank.

Main Street Saloon has a musical myriad lined up for the week as Hanger Wylie and the Tornadoes take the stage at 7 p.m. today, and admission is $4. Eddie Beethoven and the Sons of Fun will perform Friday and Saturday night, and cover is $4.

It's a party, it's a party, party weekend. If this sounds familiar to the ear tuned to Tex-Mex style music, fans will be thrilled to know that native Texan Joe "King" Carrasco Y Las Coronas will be performing at 10:15 p.m. Thursday at the Fast and Cool Club. Cover is $6.

Fast and Cool will be packing them in another night this week when Brighton Rock takes the stage at 10:15 p.m. Sunday. The rock group is based in Canada, and this will be its premiere appearance in the area. The club, which usually allows only those 21 years and older in for concerts, will be open to anyone over 18 for the special performance. Cover is $3.

The ninth annual Lubbock Arts Festival is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Among the festivities, the Ink Spots will give perform at 7 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m. in the theater, and admission is free. The group is well-known for its original version of the song "Glow Worm." Susan Anton will be in Lubbock for the festival, giving two performances at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the civic center theater. Admission is free.

Boycott will be giving it a go on stage at the No Frills Grill from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday, and cover is $3.

Any Tech senior graduating in May or August can take part in the annual Senior Dinner, scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the UC ballroom. Tech President Larry Cavazos and Ex-Students director and faculty member Bill Dean will speak, and tickets can be picked up at the Ex-Students Association.

Spring has arrived, and with it blows the wild and blustering wind around the city. People can take advantage of the torpedo wind this weekend, do something constructive yet enjoyable and go fly a kite. Lubbock's seventh annual Kite Fly and Frisbee® Fling is scheduled for all day Sunday half a mile east of University Avenue off Loop 289.

Kite events will include longest flying kite, highest flying and most unusual kite. A Charlie Brown award will be given to the youngest person to enter and fly in any kite event. The Frisbee® Fling consists of flying disc and canine events. Registration for all events is free and begins at 10 a.m. The first event will begin at 1 p.m.

SMU players cooperating with FBI after alleged threats of bodily harm

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Four former Southern Methodist football players are cooperating with FBI agents who are investigating allegations that a New York sports agent threatened to hurt one of the players, Newsday reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said former SMU players Jerry Ball, Ronald Morris, Jeff Atkins and Terence Mann have been questioned about the activities of sports agent Norby Walters and his associate Lloyd Bloom.

The FBI is investigating allegations that Bloom threatened to break Morris' hands if he dropped Walters and Bloom as his agents to sign with a different sports agency.

Walters and Bloom are executives of World Sports and Entertainment Inc., whose clients have included musicians Miles Davis, Luther Van-dress and Janet Jackson. The firm began representing athletes about two years ago.

Walters and his firm have filed lawsuits against several top college athletes, charging them with breach of contract. Documents in the court cases indicate that NCAA rules may have been violated when Walters gave the players money while they still were eligible to play in college.

In a telephone interview with Newsday from his home in Beaumont, Ball said Morris told him he had been threatened by Bloom.

"On two occasions, Ron told me that Bloom said he was going to break Ron's hands," Ball said. "Then he (Morris) said, 'Well, I'm going to have a tape made. When he (Bloom) calls back, I'm going to get him to threaten me again,' and he (Bloom) did. And the reason he did was because Ron signed with (sports agent) Sherwood Blount."

Walters declined to comment on the report Tuesday. Bloom was out of his office and could not be reached.

In February, the NCAA banned SMU from playing football next season because of illegal payments to athletes. Because of other restrictions placed on the program, the school decided to also skip the 1988 season.

Hunt first SWC win

Tech netters face Baylor today

By CURTIS MATTHEWS
Sports Staff Writer

The Red Raider men's tennis team ends its Southwest Conference dual match season today with a makeup game against Baylor in Corpus Christi.

Tech, 10-20 this spring with a SWC record of 0-7, will face the Bears in a match that was postponed March 29 in Waco due to inclement weather.

Following the match with Baylor, Tech will begin competition in the SWC tournament that starts Thursday and runs through Sunday in Corpus Christi.

The Raiders will be facing a tournament field that includes three of the top 11 ranked teams in the nation. Texas is ranked fifth in the country, while SMU is ranked sixth. TCU is the country's No. 11 team, and Texas A&M is ranked No. 24.

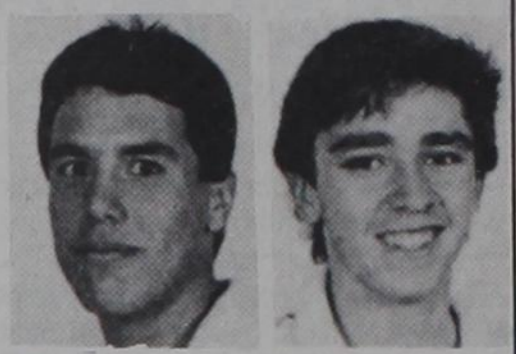

Tech's tentative lineup for the Baylor match and the SWC tourney will feature Luis Segovia at No. 1 singles and Eric Grace at the No. 2 spot. Jerome Lopez and Steve Kordas will take the third and fourth spots, respectively. Rick Denham and Sandeep Patel will round out the roster.

In doubles, Tech Coach Ron Damron recently has finished a major renovation. Grace will combine with Lopez to fill the top Tech combination, and Segovia and Kordas will take the No. 2 seed. Denham and Patel are slated to play in the third Tech spot.

The Raiders will continue to be without the services of Dick Bosse during the tournament. Bosse, the team's top singles and doubles player throughout the season, will miss the remainder of the season after being forced to sit out the past five matches due to illness.

The men's netters are coming off an 8-1 loss to Rice on Thursday at the Athletic Training Center. In the loss the Raiders road-tested their new doubles lineup for the first time this season. Although all three squads lost, two of the three matches were pushed to a third set.

Damron said he was pleased with the play of all three doubles duos and also singled out the play of Lopez (Tech's only winner against the Owls), Segovia and Kordas.

Tech will be looking to improve on last year's tournament showing, in which the Raiders failed to win a first-round match.

The conference tournament format, which is based on individual season performances, will consist of players being seeded according to their regular season finish at their customary spots in the lineup.

Green's 73 leads Tech at SWC tourney

SUGAR LAND (Special) — Texas Tech women's golfer Kelly Green shot a one-over-par 73 Tuesday in the second round of the Southwest Conference Championships at Sweetwater Country Club, but the Red Raider linksters lost six strokes as a team and remained in last place at the five-team tournament with a 634 score.

Tech will continue play for the SWC title at 8 a.m. today in the final round of action. The league tourney will conclude the season for the women golfers.

After two rounds, the Texas Lady Longhorns were in sole possession of first place with a 591 team score, while SMU was in second with a 607 mark.

TCU and Texas A&M filled the third and fourth spots with 619 and 628 scores, respectively.

In the individual medalist competition, Kate Golden and Jenny Germs, both of Texas, were leading the pack with identical 147 two-day totals. Texas' Lisa Depaulo and Sue Ginter, the defending tourney champion, had 148 and 149 scores, respectively.

Freshman Amy McDougall continued to lead the Raiders Tuesday, matching her first-round score of 77 for a two-day total of 154.

Mona Jennings shot a second-round 79 for a 161 score, while Kay Linda Shive carded a 83 Tuesday for a 164 total.
