Discovery puts America back in space

By The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — More than 2½ years after the trauma and tragedy of the Challenger disaster, the shuttle Discovery rocketed into orbit Thursday, carrying five astronauts on a comeback flight that NASA hoped would signal a rebirth of the American manned space program.

Discovery carried the American flag back into orbit Thursday with its five astronauts riding a 700-foot tail of flame from rockets that were meticulously redesigned after the Challenger disaster.

Riding two redesigned booster rockets, the winged spacecraft blasted off launch pad 39B at 10:37 a.m. CDT. Liftoff was delayed 98 minutes while NASA awaited a shift in peculiarly light winds along the Discovery flight path.

The craft was safely in orbit, its crew ticking off a routine system checklist, when NASA officials stood before launch officers to hail the beginning of the four-day mission.

"It's great to be back in space again," said the director of the Kennedy Space Center, Forrest McCartney. "Wow," said NASA administrator James Fletcher. "It's been a long wait."

The tension here was considerable and did not abate until the craft shed its booster rockets on schedule, 2 minutes, 4 seconds after liftoff. It was a faulty booster that led to the Challenger catastrophe.

"Good luck and Godspeed," was the sendoff from Launch Control to Commander Frederick Hauck. As the ship entered orbit, the communicator from Mission Control confirmed, "Performance nominal."

Months of remorse, restructuring and rebuilding ended when the winged spacecraft entered its initial orbit, about 110 miles above Earth, heading for 160 miles.

Trailing a 700-foot geyser of fire, Discovery vaulted from its pad and within seconds rolled into its desired course to orbit. An estimated quarter-million people watched from roads, river banks and other viewing spots in the Kennedy Space Center area.

Space Center in Florida this week to prepare for the first space shuttle flight since the Challenger exploded in January 1986.

The atmosphere was anxious as the shuttle moved successfully through the stage of maximum aerodynamic stress at which Challenger broke apart, dooming its crew of seven on Jan. 28, 1986, just 73 seconds after liftoff.

The flight passed its most critical milestone when its two 149-foot-tall solid fuel booster rockets burned out on schedule and jettisoned toward the Atlantic Ocean.

The failure of a joint in one booster allowed flames to escape and led to the Challenger explosion. The accident triggered hundreds of modifications to the shuttle and a new launch-oversight procedure in which former astronaut Robert Crippen held one-man authority to approve launch.

He did, sending the shuttle toward orbit through partially cloudy skies. Aboard with Navy Capt. Hauck: Air Force Col. Richard Covey; Marine Lt. Col. David C. Hilmers; John M. Lounge; and George D. "Pinky" Nelson.

With the boosters shed, Discovery's three liquid fuel main engines burned for another 6½ minutes to propel Discovery and its crew into orbit.

"Everyone certainly stood tall today," McCartney said as Discovery settled into orbit 184 miles above Earth.

Six hours after liftoff the crew accomplished the main mission of its flight, release of a $100 million satellite that will give NASA almost constant communication with future shuttle missions.

"We sure appreciate your all getting us up in orbit the way we should be," Hauck told Mission Control. "We're looking forward to the next four days. We have a lot to do, and we're going to have a lot of fun doing it."

Liftoff was the first and most important milestone, but more was at stake than simply getting into space. The 2½-year grounding of the shuttle fleet set back the nation's satellite delivery capability, and release of the communications satellite was the No. 1 task of the mission.

On the fifth turn around Earth, mission specialist Lounge flipped switches that released NASA's giant Tracking and Data Relay Satellite from Discovery's cargo bay.

But the most difficult part was getting the giant satellite, with its antennas spanning 50 feet, to its duty station 22,300 miles high. Right on time, triggered by an automatic timer, an attached rocket fired and the satellite began its six-hour journey. Once there, another burn after midnight was to circularize its orbit so it would remain over the same spot on Earth for years to come.

The satellite is a twin of the craft that was destroyed aboard Challenger.

In Washington, President Reagan praised the Discovery launch, saying the shuttle was "headed into orbit and America is back in space." He saluted the bravery of the crew and added, "We ask God to bless this important voyage."

Candidates share shuttle praise, swap mutual attacks

By The Associated Press

George Bush and Michael Dukakis chorused praise for America's triumphant return to space Thursday, then swapped charges over the environment as they resumed daily combat in a hard-fought race for the White House.

Dukakis stood with actor and environmentalist Robert Redford at his side as he attacked Bush as a man whom polluters should love. "Calling George Bush an environmentalist is like calling Dan Quayle a statesman," the Democrat said in a two-sided attack against both members of the Republican ticket.

Bush got off a double-edged attack of his own when he scoffed at Dukakis' claims of being tough on crime. "If you believe that, he's got some bottled water from Boston Harbor he'd like to sell you," the vice president said in a crack about Boston's pollution problems.

Quayle was in Washington getting ready for Wednesday's nationally televised debate with Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen.

Bentsen campaigned in Tennessee, where he had hoped to watch the launch of the space shuttle with a group of schoolchildren. The Texas senator left before the delayed blast-off but said later, "It was a spectacular takeoff. OK, Russians, we're back."

Bush had concluded his speech to a campaign crowd in St. Charles, Mo., when he learned from aides the shuttle had been launched. He returned to the platform to tell cheering supporters, "We're going to keep the edge in space."

The vice president's aides spread the word that he intended to travel to California and welcome the shuttle astronauts back to earth when their journey ends Monday.

Dukakis offered similarly upbeat sentiments in New Jersey, opening his speech on the environment by saying it was a "very successful morning. As all of you know, the space launch was successful. We're very proud of the astronauts."

So much for the nice talk.

Dukakis collected endorsements from several environmental groups and had sure-fire crowd pleaser Redford at his side as he criticized the environmental record compiled by the Reagan administration and pledged to step up the pace of toxic waste cleanup.

He said that in Bush's role as chairman of a task force concerned with government regulation, the vice president had blocked proposals to reduce lead in the air and to clean up toxic wastes. He said that in eight years, the administration has begun cleanup efforts at only 137 of 1,200 toxic waste sites identified as national priorities.

"For the foot-draggers and chronic polluters, I have just one message. You better vote for Mr. Bush, because if I'm elected the game is over — no more sweetheart deals and delayed cleanups and half-baked compromises that we've seen over the past seven and a half years."

Dukakis also tried to blunt the Republicans' attack on polluted Boston Harbor, contending he had fought the Reagan administration "every inch of the way" in trying to clean it up.

But Bush fired back with a string of scathing one-liners.

He scoffed at the Democrat's claims of being tough on crime. Referring to the Massachusetts prison furlough system, he said that when a convicted murderer in Massachusetts gets a telephone call from the governor it's "to ask if he needs any traveler's checks."

Dukakis criticizes rival's record on fighting drugs

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis linked up with running mate Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Thursday night to blast George Bush's record on tackling the nation's drug problem and fighting crime.

Dukakis and Bentsen met with Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, which previously has endorsed the Democratic ticket.

"The Bush record on drugs and crime is a failure," Dukakis said at a news conference. "It's a failure. There is nothing the vice president can do to change that."

Dukakis accused Bush and the rest of the Reagan administration of being out of touch with state and local law enforcement officials. "Leaders and officials, educators and law enforcement officers at the state and local level cannot conduct this war when they don't know from one year to the next whether they are going to get the kind of support that Congress has already demonstrated in the work that it has done," Dukakis said.

Before introducing Dukakis, CLEAT members held up a placard announcing the group had issued an "all points bulletin" for Bush, saying he is wanted for slashing support for state and local police.

Ron DeLord, CLEAT president, criticized Bush's support for use of the death penalty.

"We are not better off the we were eight years ago," DeLord said. "We are at war, a guerrilla war without any resources and if they put Dan Quayle in charge of this — God help us."

Bentsen lauded Dukakis' record on crime, saying the Massachusetts governor increased the number of officers on the police force.

Graduate student's paper basis for Tech/TI project

By LAURA MERRILL
The University Daily

The doctoral dissertation of a Texas Tech graduate student is the basis for a joint project between Texas Instruments and Tech.

The project involves the automation of visual inspection of semiconductor chips for microscopic defects.

Kathleen Hennessey, assistant professor of the Institute for the Study of Organized Automation, said the project operates under the largest grant at Tech. The $320,000 grant funds the joint operation involving engineers from Texas Instruments in Dallas and Lubbock, Micro Electronic and Computer Technology Company in Austin and Tech.

Kwang-Soo Hahn, whose dissertation is the foundation of the project, said semiconductor chips are checked for defects by human inspection, which is highly unreliable, and that many variables affect the performance of humans, including mood and environment.

Hennessey said chips come off the assembly line at an average rate of three per minute. If defects could be detected before the packaging process, millions of dollars could be saved in time and money, she said.

In addition, defects were discovered at an early stage in manufacturing so the cause of the problem could be pinpointed and equipment repaired to eliminate the extra cost of processing faulty materials. It couldn't hurt customer relations either, Hennessey said.

The first prototype, which is scheduled for completion around Christmas, is likely to be full of bugs and will be a learning tool, she said.

The first demonstration model is scheduled for release in June. The final model has a projected date of December 1989, she said.

Hahn said the project provides Tech an excellent opportunity to earn international recognition for research contributions to manufacturing.

He leads a student team of research assistants who call themselves the "HIT Squad," or the "hang in there" team.

Former U.S. senator endorses Bush, says GOP candidate will create jobs

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

A Republican cabinet member and two former politicians were in Lubbock Thursday campaigning on behalf of presidential candidate George Bush and his Indiana running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle.

Former Texas Sen. John Tower expressed his approval of Bush and Quayle before introducing U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng and former U.S. Secretary of Labor William Brock.

Speaking from behind bales of cotton being used as a podium outside Lov-Cot Warehouses, Tower said Quayle is more than qualified to be vice president.

"That young man has made an enormous good impression. If the Democrats are concerned about experience, why doesn't Dukakis trade places on the ticket with Lloyd Bentsen," Tower said as the crowd chuckled in response.

Tower

Tower also criticized Dukakis for being weak on national defense.

"What curdles my blood is Michael Dukakis being commander in chief of the United States of America," he said.

Anticipating Democratic presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis' visit to Idalou today, the trio tried to drum up GOP support by campaigning for Bush and Quayle.

Brock, who served as secretary of labor in 1985 and as a U.S. trade representative, expressed disapproval for Dukakis.

"Dan Quayle is much more experienced. I can't recall a less experienced candidate in my lifetime than Michael Dukakis," Brock said.

Brock criticized Democrats for charging that the only jobs Republicans have created are low-skilled jobs.

"The jobs that are being created are jobs that require you to think. They're cognitive jobs," he said. "We have the highest percentage of workers in the U.S. that have ever worked."

Lyng, who has served as secretary of agriculture since March 1986, reprimanded Dukakis for a proposal to decrease the national deficit.

"Dukakis said he would cut it out of farm programs," Brock said.

Shuttle, debate launch week

Scott Brumley
Editor

This week marked a monumental turning point in American history — the end of an era.

No, it wasn't the official end of the Reagan era. That doesn't come until January 1989. This week, Thursday to be exact, marked the end of 32 months Americans spent wondering whether the technological marvel known as the space shuttle would fly again.

The shuttle Discovery was launched almost on schedule Thursday morning to the delight of Florida onlookers and television viewers who observed the event on a certain news-oriented cable network.

Actually, saying the shuttle took off almost on schedule is somewhat misleading. The launch date had been moved back several times because of technical problems such as fuel leaks and computer indicator malfunctions.

Despite the myriad of complications, though, Discovery successfully attained orbit and launched the United States back into its space program.

The successful launch of the shuttle also marked the end of another era. That era was the period in which the news media continually referred to the Challenger disaster in 1986 during any discussion of the shuttle program.

The question raised in such reports — and it was a valid one — involved whether the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had upgraded its safeguards adequately to ensure that Discovery would not suffer the same fate as Challenger.

That question, for appearances sake, was answered in a space of minutes Thursday morning.

Attention now will focus on NASA's ability to keep the shuttle program operating on a successful note. For the pride of a nation and that nation's re-entry into a potentially high-dollar industry in space, let us hope the shuttle's success continues.

In other national news, the two contenders for the White House met Sunday for their first face-to-face debate as their respective parties' nominees for president.

George Bush and Michael Dukakis engaged in a debate marked by stinging accusations and insults. Happily, though, the debate did produce some degree of discussion on vital issues.

Bush and Dukakis faced off on taxation, Social Security, child care, abortion and defense.

Each side claimed victory after the melee, but viewers and observers seemed to agree that the debate's results were something closer to a draw.

If there was a real winner, it was either the network news folks who garnered a prime time slot to bestow their political wisdom upon the American people or, perhaps, the American voter who finally got a look at the candidates in light of how they handle themselves in a face-to-face, high pressure situation.

While neither candidate fully explained his positions on any particular issue (time limits within the structure of a televised debate are prohibitive of such explanation), the fact that such issues were raised in the forum gave voters a beneficial insight into some of the criteria under which each nominee should be considered before a final decision is made in November.

If Americans indeed take such considerations to heart in their choice of the next U.S. president, the concept underlying the debate was successful.

On the international scene, the Nobel peace prize was awarded early Thursday to a surprise recipient — the United Nations peacekeeping forces stationed around the world.

The move was in recognition of the advances made possible by the forces' presence, particularly the strides toward peace made in the Middle East (Iran and Iraq quickly come to mind).

While the U.N. peace efforts certainly are noteworthy, there were individuals who were deserving of the prestigious honor.

Three people whose names have been at the forefront of peace efforts are President Reagan, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Reagan and Gorbachev were jointly nominated, and Reagan likely was eliminated from consideration to avoid any influence on the upcoming presidential election.

Why Perez de Cuellar didn't win for his efforts in bringing about a ceasefire in the Iran-Iraq war, one can only guess.

Perhaps the committee responsible for bestowing the award wished to avoid singling out any one person for recent peace accomplishments.

If any group was to receive an award, why couldn't it have been the behind-the-scenes people who actually were responsible for the establishment of the intermediate range Nuclear Forces Treaty?

Perhaps the space shuttle should have won a Nobel prize for getting off the ground and taking an entire nation's spirits up with it. Perhaps not.

Have a Nobel-worthy weekend in either case.

Ponder the possible president

Russell Baker
Columnist

Michael Dukakis is president. The competence is intense. Car repairs are done right the first time.

Plumbers, painters, electricians and carpenters who say they will be there tomorrow actually arrive tomorrow. Newspapers stop making errors.

Because of their overall superiority, Detroit automobiles become the biggest-selling item in Japan since raw fish. Faced with ruin, Japan has to sell huge chunks of America back to Americans at incredible discounts.

George Bush is president. Patriotism reaches record-breaking depths. President and Mrs. Bush appear daily at the start of all three networks' breakfast television shows to lead the nation in the Pledge of Allegiance.

After its repainting, the White House is officially renamed the Red, White and Blue House.

Millions of Americans volunteer for duty in the armed services, so many that President Bush offers the overflow to the armed forces of NATO.

Michael Dukakis is president. Common sense breaks out all over Latin America. In Panama, General Noriega suddenly realizes he has been behaving odiously, quits the dictatorship and enters a monastery.

Sandinista leaders consent to elections and, upon being defeated by lovers of Madisonian democracy, quit government to devote themselves to improving the quality of Nicaraguan Little League baseball.

George Bush is president. International communism reels. Latin American Reds, fearing that President Bush will give them the Grenada treatment if they get uppity, abandon politics to become stockbrokers, run fast-food franchises and audition for acting jobs in cigar commercials.

At the thought of going up against Bush, the Russians would like to quake and quail but confine themselves to quaking, for fear that Bush, mistaking quailing for body language designed to make fun of his vice president, may recite the Pledge of Allegiance in Red Square.

Michael Dukakis is president.

Absolutely fascinating jobs break out all over America, paying $52.65 per hour and up.

Millions of people once doomed to spend their lives serving freshly thawed hamburgers for the minimum wage find top-dollar employment teaching CIA spies to tango, conducting autopsies on rare zoological specimens, measuring temperature variations in the Caribbean islands, designing artificial volcanoes for theme parks, and lots more.

George Bush is president. America is wallowing in jobs. The president's plan for creating 30 million new jobs is cut back only because the country lacks 30 million new people to take them.

Under the revised job-creation program, the number of new jobs is matched precisely to the number of new people coming on line.

America is the first country in the universe where a new job is born simultaneously with every newborn citizen.

Michael Dukakis is president. America is waiting to learn his plan for dealing with the federal deficit.

He did not discuss it during the campaign. Some say he had no plan. Others say he had a secret plan, just like Richard Nixon's famous secret plan for ending the Vietnam War.

Now America waits to learn if President Dukakis has a plan for cutting the deficit. If so, it is a very secret plan. Only the president knows it.

George Bush is president. The problem of the federal deficit is being vigorously dealt with.

People clever enough to know what a capital gain is and well heeled enough to get one are enjoying the Bush capital-gains tax reduction. People too dim or unmoneyed to enjoy this lovely tax cut are happy too, however, because President Bush has not raised anybody's taxes, and he never will.

The big increase in the deficit that might result from his costly new child-care program, his commitment to "Star Wars" and his tax cut for the capital-gains set doesn't dare occur.

That's because George Bush is president. If the deficit doesn't shape up, he will recite the Pledge of Allegiance at it. The deficit has read his lips.

Prof underestimates Bush's support

To the editor:

Giving over 60 column inches of prime page two space in your paper for Tech professor Mark Harmon to unleash an assault on George Bush is deserved of a short response from one who helps pay Harmon's salary and your paper's budget — a tuition-paying Tech student.

Harmon starts by claiming that "George Bush is in trouble." This may be true among the liberal professors who burned flags in the '60s, but George Bush is doing just fine among my generation.

In fact, several national polls show Bush trouncing Mike Dukakis by 2-1 margins among college-age voters. I encourage Harmon to drop by a College Republicans meeting sometime. Over 150 Tech students were at the first meeting with a message for Mike to take a hike.

You see, our generation remembers life before Republican leadership — malaise and gas lines, higher and higher taxes and no respect internationally. We remember when Jimmy Carter, Tip O'Neill, Ted Kennedy and Walter Mondale ran Washington — and we get shivers down our spines.

Then we remember when Ronald Reagan and George Bush helped America to help itself. Now, we are a better country, a prouder country.

We care about jobs: Not the kind that the government creates and the taxpayers pay for — but real jobs with real futures. When it comes to jobs, George Bush delivers.

We care about peace: Not a weak and staggering peace built on fear — but a peace built on strength and respect. It takes more than a ride in a tank to understand foreign policy. When it comes to peace, George Bush delivers.

We care about education: We know that it doesn't take money to make teachers or schools good — it takes values and community involvement. When it comes to education, George Bush delivers.

We care about our environment: Acid rain, toxic waste, the ozone. It has been the Republican Party leading the way on real problems that affect and infect our countryside, while Mike Dukakis is busy defending his Boston harbor cleanup delays.

We care about Texas: George Bush chose Texas to live over half his life, to represent Texas in the Congress, to raise his family and build a corporation. Barbara and George Bush buried a 4-year-old daughter under Texas soil. President Bush will surround himself with Texas' best — not the likes of Jim Wright — but quality and ethical Texans like John Tower, Jim Baker and Lauro Cavazos.

We care about crime: We want an end to drug use and are sick of watching our families live in fear. While George Bush is fighting to use the death penalty for drug pushers, Mike Dukakis is hiding from the family of a victim of convicted murderer Willie Horton.

On Tuesday, Nov. 8, I will join with hundreds of thousands of other college students across this country as I cast my ballot for George Bush. Maybe it is time that some professors took a lesson from their students.

Democrats really run student press

To the editor:

Okay. Enough's enough. I have long since accepted the fact that our college press appears to be run mostly by Democrats, and that these same Democrats can't seem to pen an unbiased political viewpoint, but your constant haranguing of GOP presidential candidate George Bush is becoming tiresome.

Having never had the pleasure of hearing you speak, Mr. Brumley, I can only guess at your loquacious talents. If you are indeed a perfect mortal, high above such common mistakes, then perhaps you should be pursuing a profession more theological in nature.

While Bush's oratorical skills have faltered on occasion, there are many redeeming facets of his campaign and there is no need to judge him on this one point. How funny that the most substantive beef the Democrats can come up with is Bush's vernacular faux pas.

Better yet, how about if you take the entire voting public into account and give us an unbiased political article about the upcoming election and the candidates involved. C'mon, just one ...

Social organization eases transition for minority, first-year law students

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Law School Minority Association offers students an opportunity to meet and socialize with other minority law students across the nation.

Ernie Cavazos, a third-year law student and president of the association, said although the group assists minority law students, it is specifically geared for first-year law students who are unfamiliar with Lubbock.

"The main thing is they have somebody to talk to," he said. "We assist and support each other."

Cavazos said the first year in law school is the most difficult of the three years.

"I don't think I would be here if I wasn't in it," he said. "The president really helped me out my first year."

In addition to assisting each other in trying times, Cavazos said, the organization has second purpose.

"We work with the administration a lot to increase minority enrollment," he said. "We're fortunate Dean (Frank) Newton is supportive of our organization."

Newton praised the organization as a social outlet provided for minority law students.

"They are a very valuable organization to this law school," Newton said. "They assist us in recruiting additional minority students."

On Sept. 15, the minority association attended the 13th annual Hispanic National Bar Convention in Albuquerque, N.M.

Thirty-three freshman students were elected Tuesday to represent classmates on the Freshman Council.

The Freshman Council is a support group that is the representative voice of freshmen in the Student Senate, said Doug English, Student Association external vice president.

English said the council is important because there are no freshman senators in the Student Senate.

"I think they are a vital tool for expressing needs for freshmen," English said.

The size of the council is based on freshman enrollment; one representative is elected for every 250 freshman students.

He said the group assists the senate with projects, input and ideas to the senate.

"In the past couple of years, they've done a really good job," English said.

Kristy Sumner, an arts and sciences senator and a Freshman Council committee member, said the Freshman Council will be working on the Texas Tech United Way campaign and a voter registration drive this semester.

The following freshmen were elected to the 1988 Freshman Council.

Teleconference focuses on risks taken by youth

By JAY COLLIER
The University Daily

A teleconference sponsored by the Hogg Foundation, which researches mental health problems, will focus on the reasons adolescents are more apt to expose themselves to risk-taking activities.

The teleconference, "Risk-taking In Children and Adolescents," which will focus on identification, intervention and prevention of risk-taking behavior, will be from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Oct. 7 in 169 home economics building.

"It will focus mainly on the adolescent age," said Nancy Bell, chairwoman of the department of human development and family studies. "The age group between 15 and 24 is the only age group in which the death rate has increased rather than decreased. More than 75 percent of that total is caused by accidents, suicides and homicides."

Bell said that at the conclusion of the teleconference, a panel composed of U.S. Magistrate J.Q. Warnick Jr., Renee Coke of the Lubbock Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Lubbock Police Chief Tom Nichols and Molly Torrans of the Lubbock Independent School District will discuss presentations and answer questions.

"Our job is to provide feedback from our report to the Hogg Foundation," Bell said. "It is a foundation that has been traditionally concerned with mental health issues. It's both research- and action-oriented."

ATLC provides cure for term paper blues

By GUY LAWRENCE
The University Daily

Students can remedy the term paper blues painlessly through services provided by the staff and facility of the Advanced Technology Learning Center.

Sam Segran, academic computing facility supervisor, said microlabs in the ATLC most commonly are used for word processing.

He said 52 percent of the applications checked out during the 1988 spring semester were for word processing programs. A use study based on application checkout data indicated that 3,494 applications were requested during the 1988 spring term. An application is a computer program that is used for a specific purpose.

A Macintosh SE lab was opened during the first week of the 1988 spring semester. Applications were made available later, however, so the lab has not been used much, Segran said.

The study indicated that 4,065 users used applications provided by the ATLC facility. Each application was used on the average 7.5 times by patrons of the facility, he said.

The study showed that 45,108 hours were spent in ATLC by users requesting applications. Each patron spent an average of 11.1 hours in the ATLC.

According to the study, the Macintosh lab received a majority of the visits with 11,743, followed by the Zenith lab with 9,583, the SE lab with 7,657 and the graphics lab, which houses a Macintosh II and IBM-compatible Zeniths.

ATLC houses an IBM 3081 used by the administration. A VAX 8650 clustered with a VAX 11780 is available for graduate as well as undergraduate work. Labs have 40 terminals to access each of the mainframe computers, he said.

The ATLC also provides short-course instruction to familiarize patrons with available hardware and software.

Although the course is offered frequently at the beginning of the semester, Segran said classes are available through November. Interested persons should contact the reception desk for information. Faculty members also can arrange short courses for classes.

Segran said instructional videos on how to use selected applications are shown in the instructional video rooms at prearranged times.

The teleconference room provides satellite hookups to national symposiums which are available for all students. Some of the symposiums already slated for viewing include photography on Oct. 6 and Nov. 3 and a symposium on artificial intelligence on Nov. 10.

A new feature at the facility is the reference room behind the help desk. The reference room houses manuals on the VAX cluster and the IBM mainframe. In addition to instructional manuals, the reference room also contains periodicals on microcomputing and applicable software.

"We are not stocking the periodicals like the library," Segran said.

"Students may not always find the literature they need, because the staff may be using the literature."

Complex problems can be referred to trained student assistants. Problems that exceed the capabilities of the student assistants can be referred to staff consultants, he said.

Segran said those services are available free to faculty, staff and students. A student must have a valid current student identification to use the facility for word processing applications.

Segran said academic computing systems is one of the largest employers of students in the computing field.

Agriculture professor selected Educator of the Year

By MICHELLE STRICKER
The University Daily

The Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association of Texas has selected a Texas Tech professor as Educator of the Year.

Marvin Cepica, an associate dean and director of academic and student affairs in the College of Agricultural Sciences, was honored with the award and a plaque Aug. 17 at the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Conference in Fort Worth.

"I had hoped to receive an award like this someday," Cepica said. "It came at a very nice time."

Possible recipients of the Educator of the Year Award are nominated each year by the Texas-based Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association in Austin. The field of contenders is narrowed according to each individual's qualifications. Only one educator is honored each year in Texas.

The association looks for different qualifications in individuals, Cepica said. He was cited for three accomplishments when he was selected for the award.

First, Cepica is an individual in higher education who supports and contributes to agricultural science programs on a secondary education level.

Second, he is instrumental in the training of agriculture teachers in Texas.

Finally, he was cited for contributions to agriculture through conferences and research findings.

The thrust of Cepica's work is aimed at working with agriculture teachers and Future Farmers of America members in the state to develop new programs and curriculum.

Shocking album not worth banned status

By CHUK GILL
The University Daily

When you see a nude sculpture on the jacket of an album do you think Shocking! If so, you don't deserve to listen to any of the music on Jane's Addiction's new release "Nothing's Shocking."

"Nothing's Shocking" was banned in seven major record stores because of the sculpture, which was made from body casts of lead singer Perry Farrell's girlfriend, but is that any reason to really ban an album? This is 1988. Why should some people be so offended by just a couple of breasts on a record sleeve? It's not as though we don't see these things every day. They even went as far as to put a sticker on the record stating: "Contains language which may be unsuitable for some listeners." It's time the conservative-Nazi-supremists stopped deciding what is good for us and let us decide on our own.

The Addiction is a band known for its bizarre stage act. Farrell even has been known to urinate on stage, but what this record does is say that nothing the band does is as shocking as what goes on around the world. People see even more shocking themes of death, violence and rape when they turn on the evening news or any TV program.

This album is the second release by Jane's Addiction, and it rips. From the very first song "Up The Beach," you are taken in by the hallucinogenic style of music. Even at the height of their acid rock days, not even the Beatles could make stuff like this. It is totally intoxicating. It is pulverizing paisley. It is Heavy Metal. It is Acid Rock at its best.

We once again are reunited with band members David Navaro playing electric and acoustic guitars, Eric A. on the bass and acoustic guitar, Stephen Perkins on drums and percussion and of course, Farrell providing the voices. The talent of this band much exceeds the musicians' age, because they know exactly what to play to get the maximum effect: good rock 'n' roll that keeps you wondering. Wondering what? you may ask. I don't know; I'm still wondering. All I can say is that the music is great. I mean, it's beautiful.

Let us get in depth now. The song "Ted, Just Admit It..." starts off with a cool, smooth and mellow jazz riff, then turns really funky. This is the song that says "Nothing's Shocking." "Camera's got them images/Camera's got them all/Nothing's shocking.../Showed me everybody/Naked and disfigured/Nothing's shocking.../And then he came/Now sister's not a virgin anymore/Her sex is violent..." It finally builds up to a raging wall of power in the end. Besides the music, I like it because it is just full of sex and violence.

Then there is the jelling "Summertime Rolls." The music just mellows you out from the start, making everything happy. It does build to a slightly more elevated climax but comes down again for the final line in which Farrell sings about his love for his girlfriend, and it's serious. "As serious can be." It's a slow song. It's a love song. It's just beautiful, man.

The music of Jane's Addiction is tight, or rather, it fits together well, but what is most impressive is that Farrell has a surprisingly captivating voice. It sounds unlike any other singer on the music scene.

This record was donated for review by University Records and Tapes at 711 University Ave.

Ageless sounds:

City pays homage to metal high priest

By GUY LAWRENCE
The University Daily

Thousands of Lubbockites were blown away Wednesday by the musical onslaught of newcomers Cinderella and the veteran metallurgist, Judas Priest.

Cinderella promptly blasted the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum's crowd with selections from its two successful albums "Night Songs" and "Long Cold Winter."

Cinderella's current single, "You Don't Know What You Got," rests at 14 on the Billboard charts and undeniably beats any threat of falling prey to the sophomore jinx that usually plagues a group's second album.

The hard-edged, raspy voice of Tom Keifer easily swooned the crowd of more than 4,000 as Eric Brittingham wailed away on his six-string while Jeff LaBar on bass and Fred Coury on drums pounded out heavy beats.

Cinderella enthusiastically played to the audience, showing hunger for recognition from the audience for the two '70ish metal albums released by the Philadelphia-based band.

Cuts such as "Nobody's Fool," "Night Songs" and "Somebody Save Me" were definite crowd-pleasers. Nobody could leave without hearing

"Shake Me," the first single off the first LP, which the band saved for the encore performance.

The true spectacle of the performance was the haunting rendition of "Nobody's Fool." With smoke billowing across the stage, Keifer dramatically crescendoed the opening lines for one of the most memorable performances of the concert.

Just after starting "Push Push," Keifer stopped the band to demand that spectators toward the right of stage stop fighting before the band played on.

Keifer showed his adeptness with the keyboards and guitars with the performance of "You Don't Know What You Got." He aroused the crowd when he expressed his relief at reaching the Lubbock city limits at 5:30 a.m. as the introduction to "Gypsy Road." At one point he summoned the "real" Lubbock stars at which the crowd vigilantly responded with a flickering cascade of butane.

Before leaving the stage, the band promised the appreciative crowd that it would return — sooner than we think.

The stage was set for Judas Priest; the band responded by blasting a metallic barrage of greatest hits with relentless intensity, proving that its brand of aural satisfaction only gets better with age.

The crowd monastically murmured "Priest" to the opening of "Electric Eye" with a blinding light show enhancing the sensual overload.

The crowd showed dauntless faith and ravenous hunger for shrieking sermons of the metal high priest, Rob Halford.

The patriarchs of the electric ax, Glenn Tipton and K.K. Downing, released a twin fury of metal, sometimes trading leads in display of dueling axes while Ian Hill on bass and Dave Holland on percussion faithfully maintained the thunderous beats that could numb spectators even in the rear of the coliseum.

Any presumptions of JP being dried-out, over-the-hill head bangers were washed away immediately as Halford took control of the stage and mesmerized the crowd with an evangelical passion.

Priest delivered searing homilies of its famed catalog of head-banging doctrine, which spans more than 14 years of excessiveness.

The band's finale ended with Halford atop a pedestal sending his final farewells in cannon blasts.

Courtyard comic is 'average Joe'

By TIM WEINHEIMER
The University Daily

Falling somewhere between the style of George Carlin and Bill Cosby, stand-up comedian/entertainer Alex Cole will be performing at 11:30 a.m. Monday in the University Center courtyard.

Cole refers to himself as the "average Joe" storyteller who relates everyday experiences into laugh-a-second material.

His debut at age 16 gained him recognition telling jokes in between rock 'n' roll band sets. During college, he toured with Pure Prairie League and earned 1986 nominations for Entertainer of the Year and Comedian of the Year by the National Association for Campus Activities.

Cole has made appearances regularly at the Improv and the Comedy Cellar in New York and the Comedy Store and the Improv in Los Angeles. Other main showroom engagements include the Desert Inn in Las Vegas and Harrah's in Reno. Cole was named the first Comedian of the Year at the Minnesota Music Awards.

This "average Joe" comedian will tell his story in this second show of the "Courtyard Comedians" series.

Taste of Lubbock to feed Tech RHIM scholarship

By TIM WEINHEIMER
The University Daily

Prepare your taste buds, Texas Tech students, for the Sixth Annual Taste of Lubbock scheduled to take place Oct. 25 at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Everything from simple snacks to the finest cuisine will be offered to the public for sampling.

Not only will delectable entrees and desserts be offered to the public, but a portion of the revenues generated from the event will be donated to a scholarship fund for restaurant, hotel and institutional management (RHIM) majors and the food and nutrition department at Tech.

Judy Campbell, coordinator of Taste of Lubbock, said she expects more than 2,000 people to taste at this year's extravaganza. Lubbock Mayor B.C. "Peck" McMinn said, "If you've never attended, you don't know what you're missing."

"The event serves two purposes," said Campbell. "It is an excellent opportunity for Lubbock restaurants to gain recognition and an excellent opportunity for Lubbock residents to familiarize themselves with the restaurant scene."

With more than 35 restaurants participating in the tasting, Campbell said she thinks that patrons will be offered a good variety of foods. She said there are about 90 members in the Lubbock Restaurant Association out of the more than 200 restaurants in Lubbock County.

Live entertainment will be provided by Crystal Creek, there will be a drawing for a trip for two to Las Vegas on America West Airlines and door prizes will be given away.

Ice sculptor Joe Garipey will display his craft along with several local celebrities who will show off their cooking expertise in the Banana Foster Cookoff.

Tickets cost $12.50 and can be purchased at the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Southern Sea restaurants, Mission Cafe, Malouf's, the Pancake House and the Holiday Inn Civic Center.

Lubbock Symphony Orchestra gears for '88-'89 season opener

By GABRIELLA MINOTTI
The University Daily

The Lubbock Symphony Orchestra opens its season tonight with "The Rites of Spring," a piece never performed in Lubbock or by the orchestra. Wlademar Maliki, a pianist from Poland, will perform Chopin's "Piano Concerto #1."

The season opens at 8:15 p.m. today in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater at 1501 Sixth St., harmonizing their season with a new twist. Classical and Pops concerts will be separated no longer. Instead, the concerts of the new season will be divided into the classical series and three Sinfonettas. In a Sinfonetta, meaning "little symphony," only 40 members of the 78-member symphony perform.

Classical concerts will be performed on Friday and Saturday nights at the civic center theater, while Sinfonetta performances will be performed Saturday and Sunday afternoons at the Texas Tech Hemmle Recital Hall. Paula Perez of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra said every show is a different and exciting program.

The orchestra was founded in October 1946 by conductor William Harrod, who remained with the orchestra for almost 40 years. The orchestra first was called Lubbock Little Symphony but was renamed Lubbock Symphony Orchestra Inc. in 1949.

The orchestra began with volunteer musicians from the surrounding community and was funded through contributions. As the ticket subscriptions grew, the funds increased and the operating budget flourished, allowing the orchestra to expand.

The orchestra began playing in high school auditoriums and eventually moved to Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. The orchestra recently relocated to the civic center and increased the number of its performances.

In the 1985-86 season, conductor Harrod was replaced by Patrick Flynn. When Flynn resigned for personal reasons, a search was conducted to find a conductor.

In 1987, Turkish native Gurer Aykal came to the rescue. Aykal, the orchestra's new conductor and musical director, has the experience and talent needed. Aykal has been appointed State Artist in Turkey.

The season includes concerts on Sept. 30-Oct. 1, Oct. 21-22, Jan. 27-28, Feb. 24-25, March 31-April 1 and May 5-6. The Sinfonetta season includes concerts on Nov. 5-6, April 22-23 and May 20-21.

Tickets can be purchased for individual concerts or for both series as a reduced-price package. Ticket prices and reservations are available by calling 762-4707.

Deja vu? Raiders hope not versus Aggies

History lays odds against Tech

By JOEL WEST
The University Daily

The last time Texas A&M was 0-3 going into conference play was in 1967, when the Aggies dropped their first four contests.

After being defeated by SMU, Purdue, LSU and Florida State, the Aggies decided to rebound at a most inopportune time for some boys from Lubbock: Texas Tech.

Never mind the fact that A&M has yet to win a game this season. Don't be fooled by A&M's bottom-of-the-conference offense. And pay no mind to the Aggies getting outscored 102-29 in three games.

The Red Raiders, 1-0 in Southwest Conference play and 1-2 overall, will be in for a workout and hoping history doesn't repeat itself when they meet the A&M in its SWC and home opener at 2 p.m. Saturday at Kyle Field in College Station.

Tech, fresh off a 36-6 Jones Stadium league triumph over Baylor, will battle an A&M team that many said would get a shot at the national title.

But the Aggies tackled a schedule that proved to be a little too rough. They not only had to play Top 20 teams such as Nebraska, LSU and Oklahoma State on the field, but they had to answer to the NCAA off the field, the latter of which might be the Aggie's worst defeat. It stripped them of their attempt at a fourth straight SWC championship and Cotton Bowl.

But Tech coach Spike Dykes knows that one thing the NCAA didn't remove is any Aggie intentions of ruining anyone else's quest for cotton. "We are going into shark-infested waters," Dykes said. "I'm sure they've got the train back on track, and with this being their home opener, they'll be mad as the devil."

"Remember, they were the team picked to win (the SWC championship)."

The Red Raiders will have to battle more than the Aggies. Tech has yet to win a road game under Dykes. In fact, the last time the Raiders won on the road was when they beat TCU at Fort Worth in 1986.

The Aggies haven't lost at home since 1984.

The Raiders also must fight their ill syndrome of following up on a big win with a loss.

"The last big game we won, we didn't play well the next week," said Dykes, who evened his record at Tech to 7-7-1 with the Baylor victory. "There were a lot of questions why that happened."

Nearly a year has elapsed since that "last big game" when the Raiders shocked then-No. 16 A&M, 27-21. The next week was a 31-0 Tech blanking by Arkansas.

Along with their bruises, the Aggies have gained experience. A&M did not have to play the Cornhuskers in the Kickoff Classic, but Aggie coach Jackie Sherrill opted for the game — long after the original schedules were made — to push the Aggies into the next football echelon.

After juggling quarterbacks Lance Pavlas and Bucky Richardson, Sherrill appears to have settled on Mississippi transfer Chris Osgood.

The 6-1, 188-pound junior seemed to reroute a misled A&M offense with his 19-of-34, 197-yard, two-touchdown performance against OSU.

Osgood will be handing off to 5-11, 205-pound sophomore running back Darren Lewis, who leads the team in rushing. Lewis' 105-yard average in steps is the league's third best.

Clearing the path for Lewis is 6-4, 265-pound guard Jerry Fontenot, whom Dykes calls "the best lineman I know of in the conference."

Even though the A&M defense hasn't performed to its expected par in all categories, notably rushing, it is second only to Baylor in defending the pass. The Aggies have surrendered but a 139.3 average through the air against high-caliber teams.

A two-headed monster at linebacker, All-America pick senior linebacker John Roper (6-2, 230) and junior Aaron Wallace (6-4, 230) are considered to be all-conference selections. And when you consider Dana Batiste and Adam Bob are on the field too, it's surprising the Aggies have allowed the yardage they have.

Guiding the Raiders will be quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver, who is ranked seventh in the nation in passing efficiency and ninth in total offense. Tolliver had his third-best day as a Raider with a 286-yard performance that boosted him to the top of Tech's career passing leaders.

Three completions against the Aggies will give him the school's completion mark, and 71 yards will bump him from 12th to ninth on the SWC's all-time passing list.

Tech's defense seemed to resurrect itself Saturday, holding the Bears to two net yards rushing. The Raiders sacked Baylor quarterbacks seven times for minus 47 yards.

Defensive end Tom Mathiasmeier and linebacker James Mosley combined for 25 tackles, while safety Donald Harris and linebacker Mike Derryberry coupled for 22 stops.

Fans plan sendoff for Raider gridders

The public is invited to a Red Raider Sendoff at Lubbock International Airport today as the Texas Tech football team departs to play Texas A&M Saturday.

The sendoff will begin at 12:15 p.m. today at Gate 8 with the arrival of the team at the airport.

Aggie-Raider connection source of proud memories for Killian

Curtis Matthews
Sports Writer

Most people who have been Red Raider supporters seldom wind up rooting for the Aggies, let alone working for them.

But Colin Killian, a 1986 Texas Tech graduate and former sports editor of The University Daily, now is a Texas A&M sports news assistant.

His reasoning for the school swapping is simple. "Your loyalties change in a hurry when they're offering you money," Killian jokingly said in a phone interview Wednesday.

Killian never had anticipated wearing a maroon windbreaker, but the job opportunity was one he couldn't pass up.

"I consider myself very fortunate to have this position and to be involved with a program like this," he said. "These people are some of the nicest I've ever met, and the atmosphere surrounding the school is outstanding."

On the other hand, Killian probably still finds himself humming Tech's fight song every once in a while.

"I may be working for A&M, but I spent almost six years of my life at Tech, so there will always be a place in my heart for them," he said.

Killian's duties are primarily to assist with football as well as women's track, tennis and golf. He said he also will help with basketball and baseball.

There once was a time when Killian's future team drastically changed his haircut.

The week before the 1984 Tech-A&M game, Killian and UD Editor Gilbert Dunkley wrote columns saying they would shave their heads, leaving a Double T on top, if Tech could beat the Aggies for the third consecutive season.

Tech whipped A&M 30-12, and the following Monday the football players had their sheep shears ready.

"I guess it became a pretty big deal," Killian said. "A couple of TV stations showed up. I'd wanted to do something out of the ordinary to stir up the team."

"I still remember visiting the locker room right after the game and all the players were laughing and rubbing my head. If that had anything to do with motivating them, it was worth looking funny for a while."

In 1983, the matchup with the Aggies provided another memory for Killian.

He was working the game in Lubbock as a spotter for a local radio station. He was sent to the A&M locker room before the game. That's where the Aggies first got a good look at their future sports news assistant.

"I didn't realize why everyone was glaring at me," Killian said. "Billy Pickard, their head trainer, started screaming at me and had me thrown out of the locker room."

The reason? Killian was wearing a Tech golf shirt.

"Boy, did that give me something to boast about for a while," Killian said. "I'd not only been into an A&M locker room, I'd been thrown out of one."

The Texas Longhorns are in dire need of industrial-strength glue to plug holes in their meager secondary.

Texas relinquished a school record 402 yards passing in its opener with BYU. Last Saturday, the Longhorn secondary again fell asleep, giving up 419 yards passing to UNT — dubiously surpassing Texas' own school record.

Freshman Willie Mack Garza will start at left corner this week, replacing Bubba Jacques, who replaced Fred Stromile. Neither Jacques nor Stromile are injured.

The 1988 Arkansas (ground) Hogs have been busy tearing the cobwebs out of the passing chapters in their playbook.

Arkansas already has accumulated 635 yards through the air. The Razorbacks are on pace to break the 2,000-yard mark for only the third time in the school's history.

Everyone's been caught mystified with the aerial changes, including starting split end Tim Horton.

Horton's preseason goal was to catch 15 passes for the season. Already he has grabbed 10 for 197 yards.

TCU's running game is clicking again. The Frogs are fourth in the NCAA this week with a 320.3 average per game.

Halfback Tony Darthard, halfback/quarterback/flanker Scott Ankrum and fullback Scott Bednarski all rank among the Southwest Conference's top seven in individual rushing.

Texas quarterback Shannon Kelley might not be able to complete another corner-of-the-end zone touchdown pass to split end Keith Cash this weekend against Rice.

Cash's only two receptions of the season were for scores against North Texas last Saturday. One of those was the questionable game-winner with 45 seconds remaining.

Cash suffered a slight shoulder separation in the UNT contest and is listed as questionable for Saturday.

Media across the state have been lauding the efforts of the Texas rushing defense. After all, Texas has allowed only 81 yards average on the ground, they claim.

Big deal.

Wouldn't you be busy throwing the ball against a team that is last in the SWC against the pass?

The best news for Rice this weekend is that the Owls are healthy.

Netters take opener from WT

The Texas Tech men's tennis team opened its 1988 season Thursday by routing West Texas State 8-1 at the Amarillo Tennis Center in Amarillo.

The Red Raiders won all six singles matches. Tech coach Ron Damron was pleased with the team's performance overall, particularly the play of freshmen Fabio Walker, Michael Slauson and Charles Bailey.

In singles play, Tech's William Dopson defeated Jonas Brannhult 6-1, 6-2; Walker beat David Olesen 6-1, 6-2; Nathan Ritchey beat Ander Nilsson 6-2, 6-2; John Sullivan defeated Karl Falkland 6-0, 6-2; Slauson defeated Mike King 6-3, 7-6, and Steve Kordas bested Chris Roach 6-0, 6-3.

In doubles action, the Raider's No. 1 tandem Dopson/Walker beat Brannhult/Olesen 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, and Tech's No. 3 position of Slauson/Bailey defeated Roach/King 6-2, 6-3. The Buffaloes No. 2 doubles team took the team's only win.

SAY NO! TO DRUGS

Bowes puts fresh netters on court at ACU tourney

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

Coach Mickey Bowes finally will get to put his new recruits to the test today when a young Texas Tech women's tennis team opens the 1988 season in the West Texas Collegiate Invitational hosted by Abilene Christian University.

Five new players constitute this year's squad, including four freshmen. The squad loses two All-Southwest Conference selections of a year ago, leaving only three returnees.

But Bowes said recruiting has been good to the Red Raiders. "It had to be," he said. Freshmen Mallory Grantham and Amy Ryan both were ranked in the state last year as high school seniors. Ryan won the Class 4-A state title three years in a row and was state runner-up once.

"I think we're going to be stronger in singles and weaker in doubles," Bowes said. "I told the team that I hope we could win three games up there (in Abilene). I don't know which ones. But that's our goal."

The tournament begins at 9:30 a.m. today with two single-flight matches and two double-flight matches. Play will continue at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with the final two singles matches and one doubles match.

In singles play, freshmen Grantham and Ryan will compete in the first flight for Tech. Senior Jamie McCaffery and freshman Karen Biggerstaff are in flight two, and junior and sophomore Rebeca Nevarez and Tanya Hamilton are in flight three.

In doubles, Grantham/Hamilton are in flight one while Ryan/Biggerstaff will play flight two and Nevarez and Samantha Isaac make up flight three.

Tech golfers may extend strong showings to three

By CURTIS MATTHEWS
The University Daily

Backed by a pair of consecutive strong finishes, the Texas Tech men's golf team will compete today through Sunday in the 20th annual Falcon Invitational in Colorado Springs.

The 54-hole tournament will be played on the Air Force Academy's 6,966-yard, par-72 Eisenhower "Blue" course.

Tech will tee off at 9:58 a.m. today. Team scoring for the tourney will consist of the lowest four individual tallies each day.

Mike Winfrey, the squad's top and most consistent player this year, is the only Tech player who competed in last year's tournament. In 1987, Winfrey placed sixth out of 132 individuals.

Dale Akridge, who sat out last year after being a team leader in 1986, will be the other top contender for the Raiders.

"Mike Winfrey and Dale Akridge have started their seasons great," Tech coach Tommy Wilson said. "Mike has the ability to turn heads and raise eyebrows in Tech's direction."

Junior transfer Kevin Youngblood and freshmen Chance Blythe and Jason Foster also will compete.

Wilson said the team will have to make adjustments for its third tournament of the year. Tech already has turned in strong performances at tournaments in Arkansas and New Mexico.

"What my guys have to do is understand that the air up there will carry the ball 10 percent further than normal, and adjust for it," Wilson said.

The tee-off hole is at an elevation of 6,800 feet.

Scott searching for 'first five athletes'

The Texas Tech women's cross country team will test its racing flats for the second time this season at 10:45 a.m. Saturday in the Wayland Cross Country Invitational in Plainview.

The Red Raiders will compete on a 5,000-meter course in the Running Water Draw Park.

The Raiders will be led by veteran senior Kim Mudie and sophomore Margie Bernal. Joining the pair are sophomores Beckie Clements, Cyd Doherty, Rebecca Melber and Marchelle Dixon and freshmen Shannon Atchley, Janine Dupont, Heather Hahn, Minda Stober, Monica Vigil and Stephanie Ware.

"Our main concern is to build a foundation, to see who our first five (athletes) will be," Scott said. "That's the team we'll work on towards the (Southwest) Conference race."

Lady golfers play SWC teams at UNM

The Texas Tech women's golf team continues second-round action today at the 10th annual Dick McGuire Invitational. The three-day tournament at the University of New Mexico South course in Albuquerque, N.M., will conclude Saturday.

The team is relatively young, with four sophomores and one junior. Amy McDougall, Tech's lone upperclassman, leads the Red Raiders along with Laura Kleinmann.

Other Southwest Conference schools joining Tech in the 54-hole event are SMU, Texas and TCU. Florida returns after winning the tournament last year.

Tech ruggers look to get over .500 mark

In hopes of bouncing back from its first defeat of the year last week, the Texas Tech rugby club will host Fort Still in a contest at 2 p.m. Saturday on the Student Recreation Center rugby field.

Bears, Cougars set for shootout

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Here is a look at this weekend's games involving Southwest Conference football teams:

HOUSTON at BAYLOR
Noon, Raycom Sports Telecast
Baylor returns to Baylor Stadium after three consecutive road games, and the Bears anticipate the nation's leading passing attack (460 yards per game) in coach Jack Pardee's Cougars.

Baylor took a one-game lead in the overall series at 10-9-1 with last year's 30-18 triumph at the Astrodome while Houston holds a 6-5-1 advantage in SWC contests between the two. The Bears have won the last three games in the series and are 4-1-1 against the Cougars over the last six meetings.

Grant Teaff is 99-82-5 (17 years) as the current "dean" of SWC head coaches. Pardee, a Texas A&M graduate, has a 6-6-1 collegiate record.

Houston has scoring capability from all areas of the field behind national receiving leader Jason Phillips (26 catches for 353 yards in two games). The senior also is tied for eighth with TCU's Stanley Washington on the SWC career pass receiving list with 125 catches in just 13 games.

Teaff's Bears have blocked two kicks and are holding opponents to 185.8 yards per game defensively with strong showings from linebackers James Francis and Gary Hays, among others. Houston has forced 12 turnovers in two games.

TCU at ARKANSAS
Both the Horned Frogs and Razorbacks are starting their conference schedules with the Fayetteville game, which was won last year by Arkansas 20-10 in Fort Worth.

In fact, the Hogs have taken 27 of the last 29 meetings in the series. Arkansas leads the all-time series in the series and has a 40-20-2 advantage in SWC games.

Coach Jim Wacker of TCU is 22-35-2 (six years) at TCU and 1-4 against Arkansas. Coach Ken Hatfield of the Razorbacks stands 38-13-1 (five years) at UA and 3-1 against TCU.

The Razorbacks have the second-longest streak of consecutive passes attempted without an interception (79) in SWC history since the second quarter of their 1987 regular-season finale at Hawaii in 1987.

TCU relies on senior quarterbacks Scott Ankrum and David Rascoe and junior runningback Tony Darthard (57 carries for 332 yards). Rested from an open date, the Hogs are paced defensively by All-America candidate defensive tackle Wayne Martin (20 tackles, six quarterback sacks). TCU free safety Falanda Newton and defensive Mitchell Benson head the Frogs' defensive unit.

TEXAS at RICE
Texas, which has won or shared more SWC championships (22) than any school in the league, meets the host Owls, who are looking for their seventh SWC title and their first since 1957 under coach Jess Neely.

Texas leads the overall series 53-20-1 and holds a 51-19-1 advantage in SWC encounters with the Owls. Rice last downed UT 20-17 on Oct. 23, 1965, in a legendary coaching clash between Neely and Texas' Darrell Royal in Austin. The Owls' last victory over Texas at Rice Stadium was a 7-0 conquest in 1960.

David McWilliams is 9-6 (two seasons) at Texas. Jerry Berndt is 6-18 (three seasons) with the Owls.

Texas captured a 45-26 shootout last fall when the teams met, but the score was not indicative of the closeness of the contest.

Texas has one of the SWC's "super stoppers" in linebacker Britt Hager (311 career tackles, 27 times pressured passers) and a front four which averages 255 pounds per player. Rice features linebacker Jeff Hood and cornerback William McClay, both seniors, who are facing Texas for the fourth time.

Tech opens SWC play at A&M

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

After a winless showing last week in the Red Raider Classic, the Texas Tech volleyball team opens the Southwest Conference season today at Texas A&M in College Station.

The Red Raiders, 8-10, meet the Aggies, 6-5, who are ranked sixth in the NCAA South Regional Poll after coming off a West Coast road trip. Lady Aggie Lara Rupf is out for the season after tearing ligaments in

Freshman outside hitter Gracie Santana and middle blocker Susan Kelly McGuire continue to lead the Tech squad with five all-tournament selections between them. Santana is the leading hitter with an average of 2.88 kills per game and a .179 hitting percentage. She also is second in digs with 153 and second in service aces with 27.

McGuire is fourth in the team in hitting with a .130 percentage yet leads in total blocks with 79 for an average of .69 blocks per game.

McGuire also leads the team in service aces with 32.

A&M leads Tech in virtually every statistic except blocking. Leading hitter for the Lady Aggies is Cheri Steensma with 157 kills.

Flo-Jo says more gold headed her way

By The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Flo Jo and Jackie are gold medalists-in-law again.

Florence Griffith Joyner fulfilled predictions of "something unbelievable" Thursday, breaking the 200-meter world record twice in two hours at the Seoul Olympics.

"Two world records, two gold medals and I'm not finished," Griffith Joyner said.

She and record-smashing sister-in-law Jackie Joyner-Kersey highlighted a day at the Games that belonged to the women: The U.S. team won the basketball gold medal that the men couldn't.

The American women beat Yugoslavia 77-70 for the basketball gold, and that was some consolation for the men's 82-76 loss to the Soviets the night before. The U.S. men beat Australia 78-49 for the bronze.

The United States' can-do boxers, meanwhile, had Americans wondering if this could be another Montreal.

The U.S. boxing team was called America's worst Olympic boxing team. But U.S. boxers already are assured of eight medals and they'll be going for six golds this weekend, one more than Montreal.

At the track, it was a bad day for East German Heike Drechsler, beaten first in the long jump by Joyner-Kersey, whose brother Al is married to Griffith Joyner, then in the 200 by Flo Jo herself. In the process, Griffith Joyner also broke the 200 world record Drechsler shared with another East German, Marita Koch.

Griffith Joyner is the first American woman to hold a 200-meter record since Wilma Rudolph in 1960, and the old mark of 21.71 first was set by Koch nine years ago.
