Rubber machines

Should prophylactic machines be placed in restrooms on the Texas Tech campus? Despite what The University Daily says, there are some students who feel differently.

However, there are some students who believe it is a good idea to make condoms readily available to the Tech community.

The UD interviewed five people Wednesday who gave their opinions.

On the Scene

The Judy's

The Judy's are here. One of the most popular bands with Lubbock audiences will perform at 10 p.m. today in "the basement" at 2408 Fourth St.

Concert-goers should hear a medley of Judy's favorites. David Bean, lead singer for the Judy's, said he hopes the group will be able to "hang around" after the concert.

The doors will open at 8 p.m. today for dancing. Tickets cost $7 and can be purchased in advance or at the door.

Sports

Moore resurfaces

Almost three years after leaving Texas Tech as well as college football, former head football coach Jerry Moore has resurfaced this season at the University of Arkansas.

Moore, who is more optimistic since he was fired by Tech, is a volunteer coach and works with the offense, primarily the passing game, and special teams.

Tech faces Arkansas and the former Tech coach this weekend.

New vaccine tested, blocks fertilization

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — An experimental contraceptive vaccine has blocked fertility without fail in female and male guinea pigs, researchers report, raising prospects that a similar approach might one day work for women and men.

The vaccine is designed to prevent fertilization, which may make it more widely acceptable than another vaccine already in human testing that stops development of the embryo, other scientists said.

Still, "there are many things about it that would have to be changed or improved to make it a useful method for either agricultural animals or humans," cautioned researcher Paul Primakoff.

Primakoff and colleagues at the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington report the experiment in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

It is the first demonstration of contraception without fail from a vaccine, experts said.

None of the 25 female guinea pigs that got the vaccine before mating had litters, nor did the mates of the six immunized male guinea pigs. Animals that received sham immunizations for comparison purposes remained fertile.

The vaccine's effect was temporary.

Bentsen's JFK comment angers Quayle

By The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle said Wednesday night he has as much experience as John F. Kennedy did when he won the White House and that he is "prepared to lead this country" if necessary. "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy," Democratic rival Lloyd Bentsen shot back in most riveting moment of the prime-time campaign debate.

"That was really uncalled for," the 41-year-old Quayle retorted angrily to his 67-year-old rival. Replied Bentsen: "You're the one that was making the comparison, senator ... and I did not think the comparison was well taken."

The clash over Quayle's readiness for high office was the emotional climax of a high-stakes debate in which the vice presidential candidates also collided over the environment and Social Security. The two men aimed many of their best lines past each other and in the direction of presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

The encounter came with five weeks remaining in a close campaign for the White House and with polls suggesting that Quayle is costing Bush precious support.

Both men used the debate to stress well-rehearsed campaign themes.

Bentsen accused the Republicans of trying to cut Social Security in the past and said they are likely to try again if they win the White House this year. Quayle shot back that the Democrats are trying to "scare the older people of this country."

Bentsen said the Reagan administration had appointed high-level environmental officials who were the equivalent of Bonnie and Clyde. But Quayle brought up Boston Harbor, accusing Dukakis of allowing a major environmental problem to fester a few blocks from his statehouse office.

Republicans looked to the debate to erase doubts about the No. 2 man on the ticket, while Democrats hoped to reinforce them.

"This guy under tremendous fire ... came through with flying colors," Bush told reporters in his hotel suite in Fort Worth. "Now people can see what I've seen all along."

Dukakis offered his evaluation at a rowdy Boston rally with supporters: "The most important qualification for the vice president is that he's ready at a moment's notice to assume the presidency of the United States. Tonight Lloyd Bentsen demonstrated that he was the only one on that stage who's ready."

Texas reaction

Texas politicians divided along party lines over which vice presidential candidate performed better in Wednesday night's debate.

"I think in Texas-type vernacular, Lloyd Bentsen hammered him. I think it's very obvious," said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, a Democrat. "I think the Republican Party and George Bush were sitting in amazement wondering how George Bush made the mistake of picking Quayle as a running mate."

Republican Congressman Beau Boulter, Bentsen's opponent for the U.S. Senate, said, "Overall it's got to be helpful to my campaign. No matter how many times he (Bentsen) tries to defend the actions of Mike Dukakis, it isn't going to work."

Boulter said that both men did well on debate points.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements said Quayle's "exuberance, energy and knowledge of the issues won the respect of Texans during the debate."

But Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who spoke at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, said Bentsen, "basically ate Quayle's lunch."

John Sloan, a University of Houston political science professor, said there was no clear winner.

"I think Sen. Quayle did better than expected so that was certainly to his credit, especially when I thought he was asked by far the most difficult questions," Sloan said. "I thought Lloyd Bentsen scored the biggest punch of the fight or struggle, when he stressed that Sen. Quayle was certainly no Sen. Kennedy. I think the effect on the crowd was hush and was probably the dramatic highlight of the encounter."

Hostage return unlikely despite release of Indian

By The Associated Press

WIESBADEN, West Germany — There are no signs that the nine American hostages in Lebanon will be freed soon, despite the release of an Indian captive, a U.S. State Department official said Wednesday.

Doctors said former hostage Mithileshwar Singh was in good spirits but under tremendous stress.

The official said a State Department debriefing team started questioning Singh, an Indian citizen and resident alien of the United States, in hopes of learning about the American hostages.

Singh went to the U.S. Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden early Wednesday, two days after his captors released him in Beirut in what they said was a goodwill gesture. Sixteen foreign hostages are still held in Lebanon.

"One wants to be encouraged that they will be released, but we really don't know," the U.S. official said at the hospital. "There are no indications that others are coming out."

The official, an expert on hostage issues, spoke on condition of strict anonymity at a news conference. Television crews were ordered not to film the comments, and the lights were dimmed.

Of those holding hostages in Lebanon, the State Department official said: "It is our opinion that they are under the influence of Iran, and are part of Hezbollah."

He added later: "There are indications that they (the kidnapers) are backed by Iran, we assume financed by Iran."

A team of 10 to 12 State Department officials flew to Wiesbaden on Wednesday to interview Singh, 60, who was a captive for 20 months.

Singh said after his release that three American educators abducted with him were "OK."

"It's better for me not to make any statements because we don't know what might hurt them," he said.

East side satellite office serves as Democratic link

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

A ribbon-cutting ceremony Wednesday afternoon marked the official opening of an East Lubbock satellite office of the South Plains Democratic Council.

On hand were sheriff's candidate Butch Hargrave, Gerald McCathern, a candidate for the 19th Congressional District, and Floyd Holder, a candidate for state representative in District 83.

Sheila Patterson, daughter of Lubbock Councilman T.J. Patterson, cut the ribbon officially opening the office at 510 E. 23rd St.

Patterson's daughter, who will act as office manager for the council, said the new office will serve as an important link between Democrats in East and West Lubbock.

"This office gives us an opportunity to touch base with this side of town," she said.

Ms. Patterson indicated that the main goal of the satellite office will be to generate involvement in the East Lubbock community.

"All the votes are going to count," she said. "So we need to get our voice out."

Councilman Patterson echoed his daughter's thoughts.

"It's about time to get back involved," he said. "We need to make folks realize how important it is to be involved."

"We need to get them out to vote," she said.

A transportation system designed to assist voters to and from the polls on election day also is in the works.

"We need to show them black folks are not goin' fishin' on election day," Councilman Patterson said. "We must work not only for our cause, but the cause of our state and country."

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, who was present at the ribbon-cutting, will address the issue of education at 7 p.m. today in 6 Holden Hall.

Home economics dean to focus on scholarship needs

By LAURA MERRILL
The University Daily

The new interim dean of the Texas Tech College of Home Economics said his most difficult challenge will be raising revenues to meet scholarship needs of graduate and undergraduate students.

Stephen Jorgensen said he plans to continue building on the strong programs already in progress within the College of Home Economics. His main goal, however, is to continue the development of sponsor donations that aid students financially.

Special events are being planned to bring well-known people in the field of home economics to Tech in order to help raise money for scholarships. Recruiting top students to the university is another priority, Jorgensen said. Outstanding students are attracted through scholarships.

Quality students also are attracted by quality programs. Jorgensen said faculty and staff members are responsible for making students aware of the quality programs offered by the college.

Jorgensen has a doctorate in family studies from the University of Minnesota. His major accomplishments are in the areas of marital structure and process, fertility regulation and family planning for high risk groups and adolescent sexuality, contraception and pregnancy.

Jorgensen's accomplishments include 25 publications in research journals, 35 papers and presentations at national and international research meetings and a major text on marriage and the family.

He is a member of the editorial board for a new research publication series entitled Advances in Adolescent Development. He also serves as editor of the Home Economics Research Journal.

Jorgensen's interest in family studies stems from a position as a teaching assistant at the University of Minnesota. He had planned to pursue a career in sociology with emphasis on social change in third world countries.

The University of Minnesota has one of the strongest family studies programs in the nation, Jorgensen said crediting his exposure to home economics as a major contributor for changing the direction of study.

Jorgensen said his selection as interim dean was based on six years experience as an administrator in the College of Home Economics.

"I have been actively involved in many areas of research and graduate studies, and I know as much as anybody about the operation of the college," he said. "As a whole, I have a broader perspective of the many different major programs and faculty that spans all the way from clothing and textiles to home economics education and to family financial planning."

"We are all over the map in the variety of programs we offer, all of which are tied together by a focus on the family," he said.

Jorgensen said Interim President Elizabeth Haley has been a strong role model. Her appointment as interim president is evidence that her accomplishments have not gone unnoticed.

Agencies falsely claim they erase people's bad credit

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

Texas Tech students and consumers should beware of credit repair agencies that propose to erase bad credit histories from credit files for a fee, a credit bureau chief says.

Hadley Phillips, president of the Retail Merchants Association in Lubbock, said credit clinics cannot erase a consumer's bad credit.

"There's nothing one of these repair clinics can do that the consumer can't do for himself," Phillips said.

Robert Reyna, an assistant in the Texas attorney general's office, suggests that students who have difficulty paying a bill need to call or go to the business and agree on a payment plan.

Reyna indicated that in addition to registering with the Texas secretary of state, a credit bureau in Texas also must post a $10,000 bond to operate lawfully.

The attorney general's office in Lubbock closed an agency in Abilene this year that was charging consumers almost $700 to erase individual bad credit files.

Robert Nebb, an investigator in the attorney general's office in Lubbock, said the most such agencies do is send numerous letters to credit bureaus requesting that bad credit be removed from a person's file.

One way Reyna's office keeps the agencies out of Lubbock is by monitoring advertising.

"The word credit is usually in there," Nebb said.

Reyna said the Lubbock office has a handle on the situation now.

He explained that credit clinics evolved about two years ago when people were being affected by the economy.

'Moo-sical' experience:

Judy's re-enter Hub club scene

By GABRIELLA MINOTTI
The University Daily

Look out, Lubbock's favorite band the Judy's will perform today at 10 p.m. in "the basement," 2408 Fourth Street.

The group also will appear at "the basement's" Dallas location.

David Bean, lead singer of the Judy's, in a phone interview with The University Daily Wednesday, said the group enjoyed playing in Dallas in late July and is looking forward to performing in Lubbock's new "basement."

"I get excited whenever we travel," Bean said.

Bean said the group usually does not get to "hang around" after a concert, but hopes to do so while in Lubbock.

"I think there is whole new crowd out there that we need to meet," he said.

The Judy's music has been described in many different ways, Bean said, although he calls it "pop with a twist."

The band originated in Pearland when four high school friends began playing in garages to escape the boredom of their small town, Bean said.

"When we started, there was very little to do in our town," said Bean. "Playing was so much fun. It was a feeling of celebration."

The group officially was named the Judy's in 1979 when the first single, "Teenage Hangups," was released. The original name of the group, The Jets, was changed because it was deemed too common among band names.

Since 1979, the Judy's have been working with new people and in new places, but Bean said they enjoy performing in Texas.

"We play out of town a lot but not too often," said Bean. "We don't want to overexpose ourselves."

The Judy's first album, titled "Washarama," included songs "Guyana Punch" and "All the Pretty Girls in High School." Their second album, "Moo," is the latest release by the four-man band. "Girl of a Thousand Smells" is their most recent single.

Concert goers should hear a medley of Judy favorites.

The doors open at 8 p.m. for dancing and the concert begins at 10 p.m. Tickets are $7 and can be purchased in advance or at the door of "the basement."

Eastwood to donate papers to Wesleyan

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (CPS) — Clint Eastwood made their day at Wesleyan University in Connecticut. Eastwood announced two weeks ago that he will donate all documents and film relating to his career as an actor, producer and director to Wesleyan and the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Persuading Eastwood to make the donation apparently wasn't too difficult, although it took three years to clinch the deal.

"We saw him, told him about the archive and who was in it and kept in touch with him," said Jeanine Basinger, Wesleyan's Corwin-Fuller Professor of Film Studies and curator of the school's cinema archives.

Eastwood, currently out of the country, could not be reached for comment about why he chose Wesleyan. Basinger speculated that he might have been attracted by the other film folks in the campus' collection: Ingrid Bergman and directors Raoul Walsh, Elia Kazan and Frank Capra. Eastwood is known as a Capra fan.

"No one would ask why we wanted the working papers of James Joyce or Beethoven, but everyone's asked about this," she said.

Reunion: Moore enjoys coaching again, to meet former players this Saturday

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

Almost three years after leaving Texas Tech as well as college football, former head football coach Jerry Moore has resurfaced this season at the University of Arkansas.

On Nov. 18, 1985, Moore became the only Tech mentor ever to be fired after failing to produce a winning ballclub in his five-year tenure. After leaving coaching and fulfilling many business goals, Moore said he is back with the sport he loves, rejuvenated and ready for the future.

Moore spent the two football seasons after his firing at Tech working for UP National Lending for Hallmark Mortgage, where he took part in real estate and construction projects.

"Financially everything was probably better than I deserve with Hallmark," he said. "I just missed coaching. There was an opportunity at the University of Arkansas, so I'm here."

Moore said his family was supportive of his decision to re-enter coaching. He said they knew it was what he wanted to do.

Now an optimistic Moore is a volunteer coach, working with the offense, primarily the passing game, and with special teams.

His plans at the moment are up in the air. "I'll just have to wait 'til after the end of the season," he said. "I look forward to every day here as an exciting challenge.

"I'm not too concerned about it... I think it will all work out. That's the plan I think I've got for my life."

Moore's sole reason for laying out of coaching was for his family. With two sons attending Tech and a daughter with many friends at Lubbock Coronado High School, Moore thought it best not to make another move.

"I really thought I'd coach," Moore said, with Clemson as his first choice after considering jobs with the then-St. Louis Cardinals and Auburn.

Working in private business allowed Moore to realize many business ideas. "It (his layoff from football) was just a little longer than I expected, but it worked out fine," he said. Now Moore, after posting a 16-37-2 mark at Tech, says he has other goals in football to complete. He said he is "re-committed to the sport and my life. Hopefully, God willing, I can fulfill those things."

After time to reflect on his firing, Moore said he has no bitterness toward Tech. "My bitterness would only be toward a handful of people," he said. "I have no bitterness at all toward Texas Tech. It's not bitterness, really, it's disrespect, because it hurt my family. People don't realize when you fire a coach, you don't just fire one person, you hurt a lot of people."

To explain how close he still is to the university, Moore said, "I've got letters on my desk right now from professors at Texas Tech."

Moore also has corresponded with Tech players.

Senior quarterback Tolliver easily recalls a letter he received from Moore this summer just after the birth of his son. "The players really liked him," Tolliver said. "You loved to play for him because he was looking out for his players' best interests."

Tolliver said he was glad to hear Moore was coaching again. "It was good for him. I kinda figured it would be awhile, but I didn't think it would take this long," he said.

Moore's last season with Tech was filled with six close-call games with the Raiders winning only two. The next year under David McWilliams, Tech cruised to a 7-4 record and a berth in the Independence Bowl. Moore admits he did his part in recruiting.

"I wish I hadn't recruited so many good ones, because we have to play them this week," he said. "I was happy that they went to the bowl that next year. They're a bunch of classy guys."

Moore's last day

Jerry Moore coached Tech for the last time Nov. 25, 1985.
