Bentsen clear winner, Tech professors say

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

Several Texas Tech political science professors agree that Lloyd Bentsen trounced Dan Quayle in Wednesday night's vice presidential debate.

Charles Fox, an assistant political science professor, said U.S. Sen. Bentsen did a better job in both appearance and in answering questions than his Republican opponent.

"He proved to be the airhead that he is. Bentsen was clearly superior," Fox said. "It's appalling that somebody that has gotten ahead with the help of his family would lead this country."

Several professors thought Quayle responded with irrelevant and memorized answers to many of the questions.

"He had a programmed response for virtually any question that came up," Fox said.

Associate political science professor Sue Rinehart agreed, adding that the Indiana senator had a weak performance with few high spots.

"Quayle had memorized answers, and he was going to use them no matter what the question was," she said. "I would say Bentsen was clearly superior."

Rinehart did indicate, however, that Bentsen had two troubling spots.

Bentsen stumbled when asked to illustrate the differences he and presidential candidate Michael Dukakis have on certain issues, she said.

Rinehart said Bentsen explained more of his own personal issues rather than defining the issues that both he and Dukakis agree on.

Professor Lawrence Mayer said Quayle seemed nervous and too cautious in answering.

"I thought Sen. Quayle talked in a very slow fashion which indicated he was worried he would make a mistake," Mayer said. "Quayle impressed me as a person with very little intellect. He didn't indicate his leadership."

Mayer said Quayle stuck too much to slogans that characterize the campaign.

"Quayle didn't say much," he said. Neale Pearson, another political science professor, said Quayle's voice and inflection made him sound uncomfortable.

"Quayle was speaking slowly. He was responding in an unnatural way, whereas Bentsen was more natural and spoke in a normal speech pattern," Pearson said. "His body language showed he was uncomfortable."

Assistant political science professor Jerome O'Callaghan said he thought the debate was better than the presidential debate between George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

"The crowd was much more involved," he said.

O'Callaghan said Quayle was under intense pressure and that it showed.

"His answers were not as convincing as Bentsen's," he said.

Presidential candidates campaign in Lone Star State

By The Associated Press

Bush and Quayle

FORT WORTH — Vice President George Bush said Thursday he favors the death penalty for police-killers, a stance that met with rousing approval from a group of Texas law officers.

The Republican presidential nominee also outlined other aspects of his five-point plan for fighting crime as he addressed about 400 Texans at a program sponsored by the Dallas-Fort Worth Crime Commission.

Gov. Bill Clements, local elected officials and dozens of uniformed law officers were among those attending the vice president's speech at a Fort Worth hotel.

Bush discussed only crime during the address and did not talk about Wednesday night's debate between Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle and Democratic candidate Lloyd Bentsen.

But later Thursday, greeted by about 500 people at Midland International Airport, Bush said, "I think Dan Quayle did an outstanding job last night."

Senate discusses problems with financial aid office

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

A resolution requesting an increase in staff and resources in the Texas Tech Office of Financial Aid was sent to the student services committee during a Student Senate meeting Thursday night.

Tim Rusk, a law student, spoke to the Student Senate about the service students receive from the financial aid office.

"Most students on financial aid are having problems," he said. "Loans aren't processed in a timely manner."

Rusk said the administration may not be aware of problems with the financial aid office. Petitions have been signed in the law school, and senators will be circulating petitions throughout the campus.

He said petitions will be presented to the acting president and the administration.

"If we don't voice our concern, nothing is going to be done," he said.

Rusk said problems with the financial aid office are not the fault of the employees.

"With their limited resources," he in his Fort Worth speech, Bush criticized Democratic presidential opponent Gov. Michael Dukakis for not supporting the death penalty and said capital punishment is necessary for certain crimes, including the killing of law officers.

"I believe there are some crimes that are so heinous, so brutal, and I include particularly the killing of a police officer," Bush said. "We simply must involve the penalty of death."

Bush also said he believes it is time for the federal death penalty to be put back in use.

He criticized a Massachusetts furlough program that let convicts, including first-degree murderers, leave prison for the weekend. Bush said 59 criminals convicted of violent crimes never returned from weekend furloughs.

"His (Dukakis') motto is 'Go ahead; have a good weekend,'" Bush said, as the law officers chuckled.

Bush said the other four parts of his anti-crime program include cracking down on gang violence, ensuring certainty in sentencing, focusing on career criminals and increasing technical and financial assistance to local law enforcement agencies.

Street gang violence is one of the most serious crime problems in the country today, Bush said.

He proposed creating a new "gang unit" within the criminal division of the Justice Department; imposing mandatory sentences for illegal gang activity; and prohibiting bail, probation or parole for criminals until they pass drug tests.

Dukakis and Bentsen

LONE STAR — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis on Thursday told former employees of what once was a healthy northeast Texas steel plant that he would help bring back their jobs.

"I don't have to tell you what's happened to jobs and industry, to your jobs and your future in the past eight years," the Massachusetts governor told supporters, many of them former employees of Lone Star Steel Co., at a rally on plant grounds.

Dukakis and his running mate, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, campaigned in Texas the day after Bentsen's 90-minute debate with Indiana Senator Dan Quayle.

Turning back to economic matters,

Dukakis

Dukakis said the reason many workers had been laid off from the plant and other industries is because of unbalanced trade with foreign nations.

"Foreign companies are buying up real estate, buying up companies, buying up plants in the country. Pretty soon, we're going to be tenants in our own country," Dukakis said.

"We're going to give you a national energy policy that makes sense for America and helps to bring jobs back to this plant in the east part of Texas," Dukakis said.

After being presented with a plaque bearing a star representing Lone Star Steel, Bentsen took the podium.

"After listening to Dan Quayle for 90 minutes last night, I can understand why he kept talking about job training," Bentsen said.

"We're going to stand up for the working people of this country."

The rally was in a park on the grounds of the Lone Star Steel plant in a clearing among the tall pine trees of northeast Texas.

State senator plans to use experience to fight drugs if elected to Congress

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, who is running to represent the 13th Congressional District, told the Texas Tech Student Senate Thursday night that he advocates improving higher education and helping decrease America's drug problem.

"I feel the experience in the Texas Senate is a training ground in dealing with the people in Washington, D.C.," Sarpalius said. "We've got to do something about the problems."

A Tech graduate, Sarpalius said seeing his mother suffer from alcoholism as a child made him decide to devote his life to public service.

Sarpalius said people who suffer from alcohol or drug dependency have a difficult time receiving help.

"The sad thing is 90 percent of the population who have a drug problem are turned away," Sarpalius said. "I feel very committed to work in that area in the federal level."

Sarpalius is known in the Texas Senate for spearheading stiffer penalties for people found guilty of driving while intoxicated.

When asked if he favors stricter DWI laws in Texas if elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, Sarpalius said DWI laws should be written at the state level.

Sarpalius said, however, that states create an incentive for the federal government to intercede when they fail to pass strict DWI laws.

Increasing money for research, education, treatment and surveillance, he said, is the key to decreasing the drug problem across the nation.

Sarpalius explained that America's high criminal ratio is hurting the nation economically. He also attributed increased crime to too little education.

"Ninety percent of the people who are in the penitentiary are the ones who quit school," he said. "It's cheaper to send your child to Harvard University than it is for him to be sent to a state penitentiary."

Sarpalius ended his speech by telling student senators that candidates who have all the right answers would be ineffective. "I think if you find a candidate that you agree with on everything, he probably won't be very effective in office,"

Pedestrian accident, shuttle's return mark debatable week

Scott Brumley
Editor

An old song tells that "what comes up must come down." This week's highlights started off coming down, and Republicans and Democrats respectively contend they are the ones for whom the week ended on an upbeat note.

Locally, however, the week was marred by a vehicle-pedestrian accident Monday near the intersection of 19th Street and Flint Avenue that left a Texas Tech senior critically injured.

Eric Haynes, 26, was struck by a car while standing on the median that divides eastbound and westbound traffic on 19th Street. He suffered head and internal injuries.

The accident raises the question of a serious safety problem for a number of Tech students, faculty and staff members. The problem is the safety factor (or lack thereof) involved for pedestrians who cross the major thoroughfares that border the Tech campus.

Thousands of Tech students, faculty and staff members park off campus and cross such busy stretches as 19th Street, Fourth Street and University Avenue on a daily basis.

Haynes's accident points to the risk involved in going to class or work on the Tech campus. Should trying to get to work or school be a venture as dangerous as bullfighting?

The hazard needs to be scrutinized of the city of Lubbock, and the Citizens Traffic Commission in particular, in an effort to alleviate some of the potential danger Tech pedestrian traffic faces.

Several options need to be studied. Such options include construction of an overhead walkway such as those seen over interstate highways in populated areas, efficiency upgrades of the city's traffic light system so pedestrians may count on certain periods when they can cross busy streets safely and placement of walkways away from intersections where traffic direction changes are less frequent and sudden.

The Tech community should wonder whether Haynes's misfortune will call attention to the problems faced by pedestrians who try to reach the Tech campus on foot. If such attention is not paid soon, others could pay the price Haynes paid Monday.

National attention this week focused on Omaha, Neb., Wednesday where Democrat Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Dan Quayle squared off for a vice presidential debate similar in structure to the one in which their presidential running mates engaged last week.

The debate showed the American voter a number of things — one of which was not, with one possible exception, 90 minutes of exciting television viewing.

The encounter seemed somewhat more measured and reserved than the debate between George Bush and Michael Dukakis, but verbal shots were fired during the course of the evening. Most of those shots came from Bentsen's smoking-gun mouth.

The sharpest moment of the evening came when Quayle compared his congressional experience to that of John Kennedy at the time Kennedy was elected president. "I was a friend of Jack Kennedy," Bentsen sneered. "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." Quayle, as expected, faced a barrage of questions from the panel of journalists who asked the debate's questions about his qualifications. He managed to answer the queries with as much clarity as could be expected under the circumstances and came away from the debate without committing the fumble many Republicans were said to be fearing.

In such a respect, many observers noted that Quayle won a victory. When the debate itself was analyzed, however, observers and pollsters gave the contest squarely to Bentsen.

The effect of the vice presidential debate is not likely to be marked. The showdown most assuredly did little to shatter any preconceived notions of either candidate.

Again, the real result won't be seen until Nov. 8.

The world's attention zoomed in this week on the California desert, where the space shuttle Discovery returned from its four-day mission and put an old powerhouse back into the space race.

Discovery touched down at Edwards Air Force Base Monday to scores of cheering spectators and peering journalists. The craft's safe landing was heralded by Americans and others who stand to benefit from the United States' return to space.

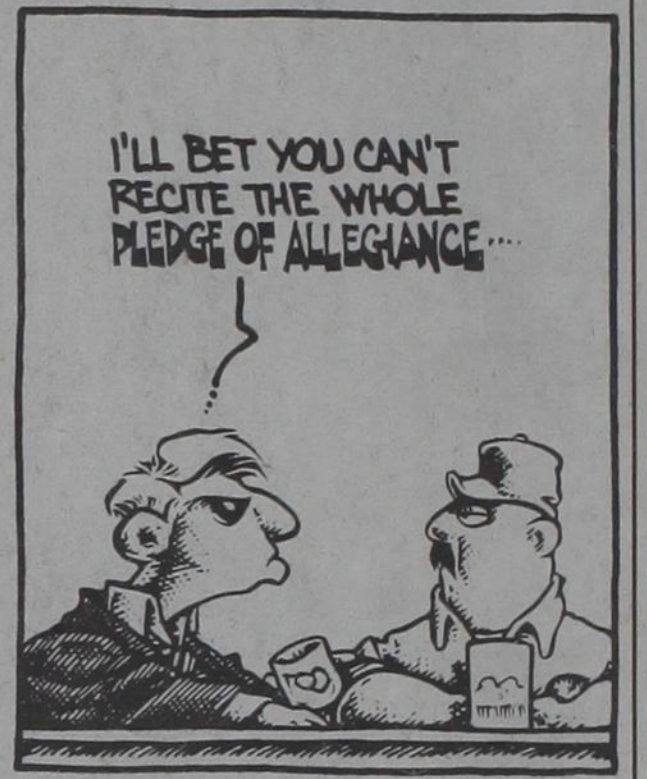

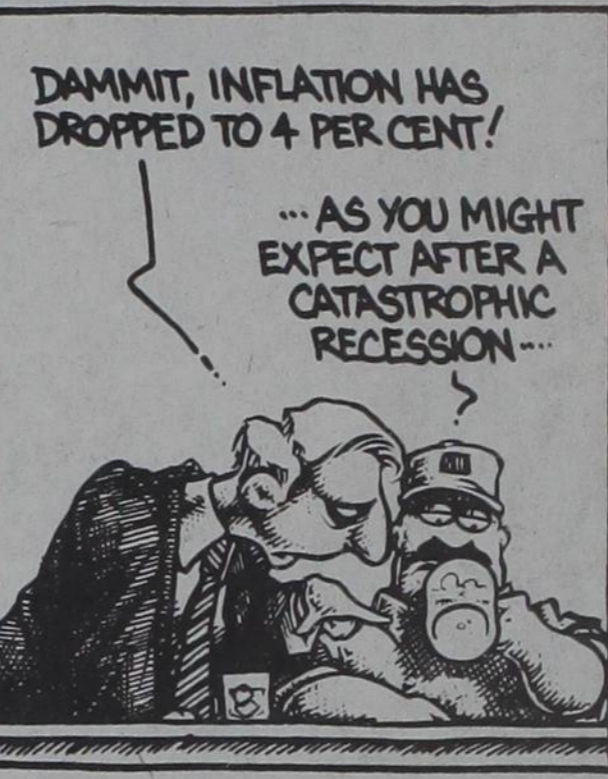

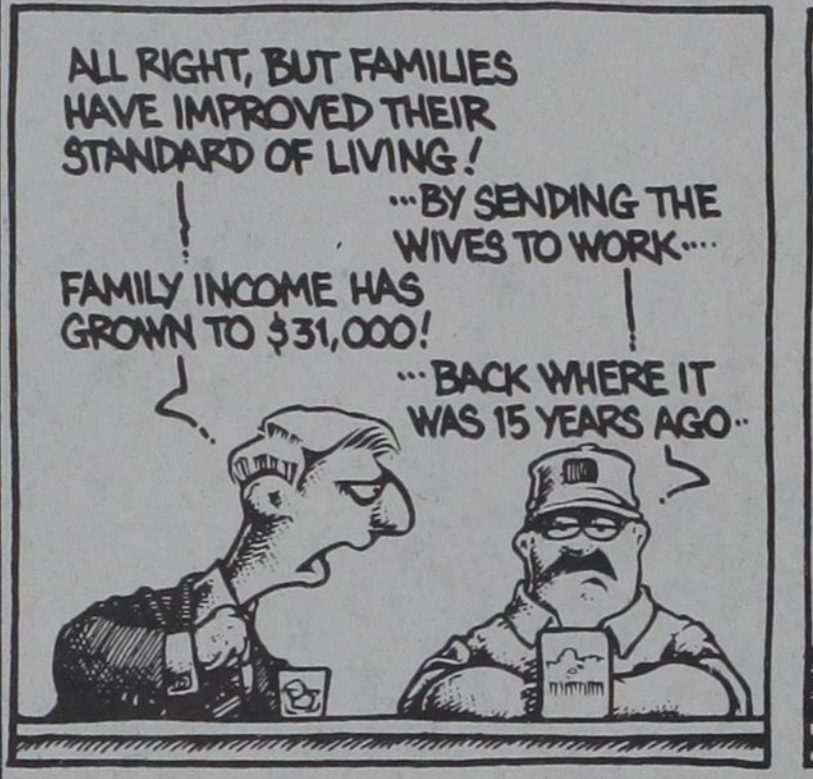

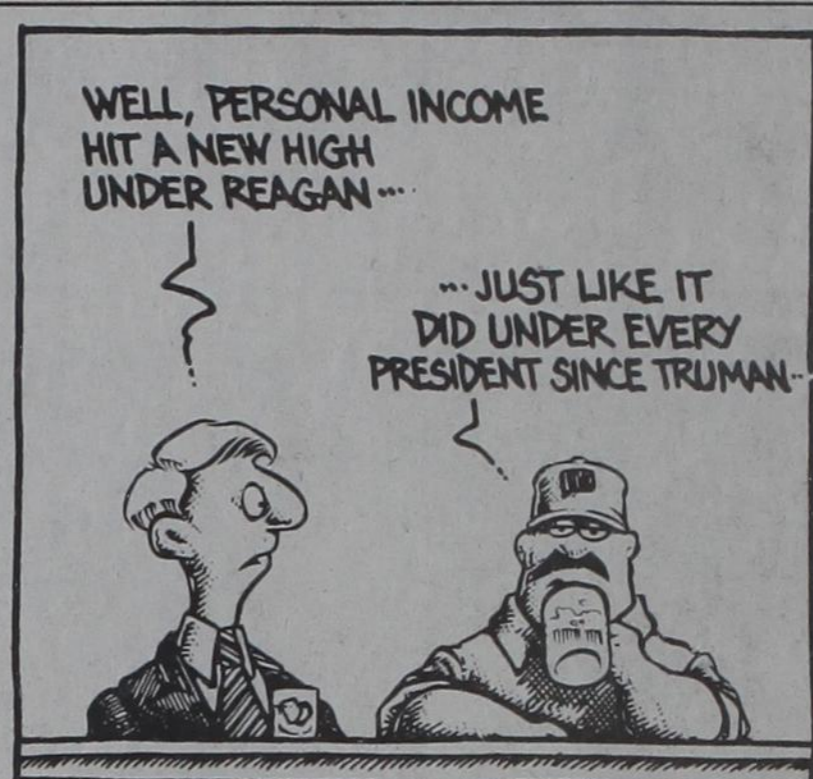

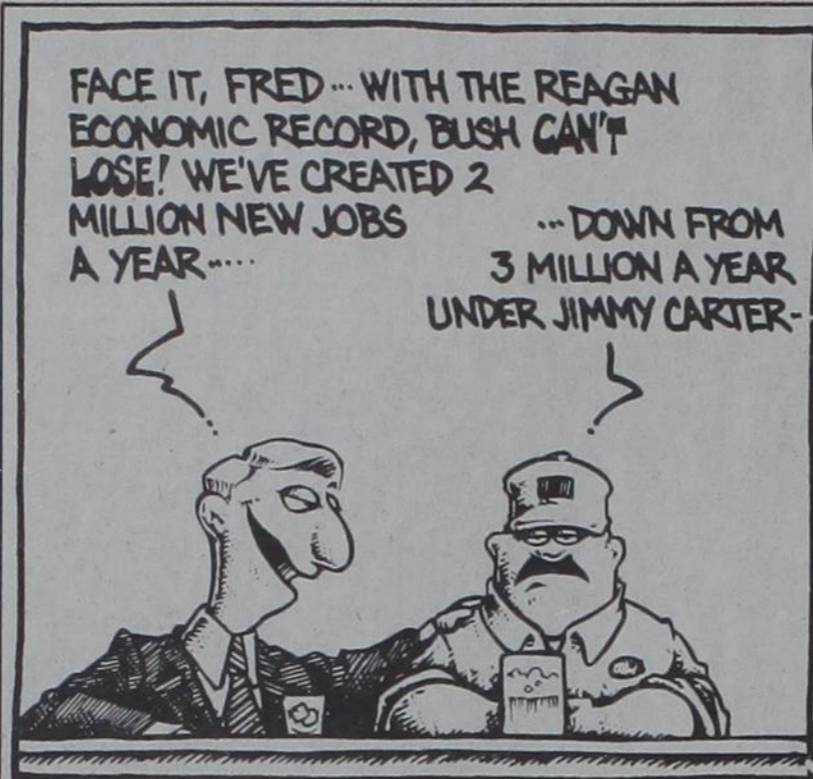

The shuttle program's woes during the 2½-year period after Challenger exploded in January 1986 were much publicized and raised questions about whether the United States could re-enter space as a viable scientific, defense and commercial entity.

Discovery's success got the ball rolling in the right direction, but the National Aeronautics and Space Administration now must keep the shuttle program in a successful mode to establish its viability as a means for transporting commercial cargo such as satellites — after all, it takes money to operate machines like the shuttle.

Discovery sustained trivial damage during liftoff, but NASA officials assure the public that the American space program now is firmly back on track.

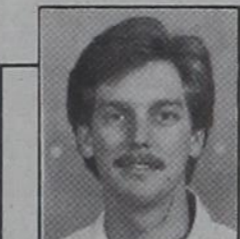

For political and space enthusiasts, the past week was a gem. The weekend provides a respite for the politically inclined as next week marks the arrival of the second presidential debate.

Such an opportunity should not be squandered. If people stay awake celebrating all weekend long, how will they stay awake to watch Bush and Dukakis take potshots at each other?

Too many coaches, 'scores' spoil debates

Brad Walker
Sports Editor

It's very easy for me, since I report on the sports world, to translate things I see into sports terminology for my general sports mentality.

This may seem unfathomable for some, wrong to even a few more, but sports is the so-called "mirror on society," and I often deal with events this way.

I see that other members of the media like to equate non-sports events to a sports-like game.

This is America, by golly, and we want to know who are the winners and losers.

A current example is the series of presidential and vice presidential debates.

I guess debate is the key word there. A debate is designed to designate a winner and loser after all is said. Nevertheless, should we all spend so much time worrying over who won the Dukakis-Bush or the Bentsen-Quayle debate?

The issues do come up in these debates, and the candidates offer some (usually brief) explanation of their stances on the matter.

I wonder if America really expects a flawless speaker to serve in the White House?

After watching the Bentsen-Quayle contest Wednesday night, the main issue was none of the actual issues of this election year.

The concern of both parties was about how many times they "scored" and on what grounds.

I also heard quite a lot of mention about how much each candidate was "coached" before the debate.

In covering sports for years, I have never seen a team in any sport be overcoached — to the point of sterility, with no instinct — and I had no idea what the consequences could be. However, Wednesday night may have answered my question.

I can see how the vice presidential hopefuls would be asked to toe the party line, but Dan Quayle could have just as soon had a wind-up pin stuck in his back. ABC-TV called him "robotic" during the debate.

The man was scared to be himself. That's a far cry from the always-confident Quayle we see on the campaign trail, even though we supposedly were going to see the "real Dan Quayle" Wednesday night.

It didn't happen. It couldn't happen. There was a game to be played that ended up giving us too much "coaching," too much "scoring" and not nearly enough of the issues that they were there to contest.

Flag waving demonstrates patriotism, not sickness

To the editor:

In no way is that disrespectful to other nations.

Cheerleaders' showing less than spirited at A&M

To the editor:

To the two Tech cheerleaders:

This letter is in regard to Saturday's game. I just wanted to say how embarrassing it was to see you all make such a fool out of yourselves and to the Tech fans that were attending the game. I'm appalled by the immature behavior that you all continued to carry on of imitating the Texas A&M yell leaders.

Obviously neither of you have any respect for such traditions. Had it been in our home court, I don't think it would have mattered, but because the game was at College Station, and in front of 63,000 Aggie fans, it was unacceptable.

I am very proud to be a part of Texas Tech and it really pisses me off that anyone had to see your poor sport attitude. I suggest that next time you go to A&M, (since they are the only SWC school who has a different form of cheering) please, for the sake of the true Tech fans, don't embarrass us again.

'Rag' remark shows immaturity, closed-mindedness

To the editor:

This is in response to the letter to the editor by Mr. Thomas Payton in the Oct. 4 issue of The University Daily. I find it absolutely amazing that a college student can be so immature and narrow-minded as to call the university newspaper a "rag" simply because he does not like the music the music reviewer does.

So, while I respect Mr. Payton for not liking the music in question, I do not respect him for whining about somebody else liking it.

Overseas day scheduled for today in UC

To inform students of the many opportunities available to earn credit for studies outside the United States, the Overseas Resource Center of the Office of International Programs has announced Overseas Opportunities Day.

The study abroad fair will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today in the University Center courtyard. Information about Education Abroad Scholarships also will be available at the fair.

Students get chance to study in London

Texas Tech students can receive credit for participating in the London Semester Program. Students have an opportunity to live in London while studying theater, English literature, history, geography or elementary education.

Sophomores, juniors and seniors who have a cumulative GPA of 2.5 are eligible for the program. The deadline for applications is Oct. 21. For more information go to 242 West Hall or call Linda McGowan at 742-3667.

Symposium to commemorate French Revolution

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

The bicentennial celebration of the French Revolution will be commemorated at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Rare Book Room of the Texas Tech Library.

"The Forgers of the French Revolution: 1750-1815," a symposium celebrating the 200th anniversary of the revolution, will present various perspectives of the culture and history of revolutionary France.

Assistant history professor David Troyansky, who also is assistant director of the symposium, said symposium papers reflect current interest in the cultural history of the revolution.

"There are a lot of different positions on the French Revolution," he said. "Until about the 1960s, historians tended to focus on the social origins of the revolution. More recently, historical literature has been about the creation of a modern political culture."

The symposium will cover the 39 years before the revolution through the end of the Napoleonic empire, said Norwood Andrews, director of the symposium.

"The French Revolution changed the course of western history," said Andrews, a classical and romance languages professor. "We want the public to get a better understanding of that other cornerstone of the modern world."

Alfred Cismaru, another professor of classical and romance languages, recognized the Tech symposium as well as symposiums at New York University, Harvard University, Georgetown University, the University of California at Los Angeles and the Brooklyn New York Museum.

Jean-Yves Guerin, professor at the University of Paris at Nanterre, will present a discussion at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in the Library on the "Le Mariage de Figaro: A Pre-Revolutionary Play?" The theater department will present scenes from the play at 8 p.m. in the laboratory theater.

All symposium sessions, which continue through Saturday, are free and the public is invited.

For more information call the department of classical and romance languages at 742-3145.

Stealin Horses gallops into Hub

By GABRIELLA MINOTTI
The University Daily

Stealin Horses, a group from Kentucky, will steal the Hub City music scene Sunday night as the four-member band gallops into "the basement" for a rock and pop concert. The doors will open at 9 p.m. for the Arista artists, who were featured recently on M-TV.

The group consists of vocalist Kiya Heartwood, drummer Kopana Terry, bassist Jon Durno and guitarist Brian Bonhomme. Together they have written songs ranging from rock to pop and from punk to bop.

As the group tours the Texas area and heads toward Lubbock for the first time, the musicians concentrate on working, said Joy Arista of Arista Records.

"The band just wants to keep going and going," said Arista. "They really want to reach as much audience as they can."

Songs from their debut album, "Stealin Horses," include "Harriet Tubman," a song dealing with the war on slavery. "Turnaround," a tragic love song, also is featured on the album. "Ballad of the Pralltown Cafe," a ballad based upon true story, joins many others in the group's first album.

The group was born as "First World," consisting only of Heartwood and Terry. The female duo were signed to Castle productions, which is connected to one of Nashville's top recording studios. The band made live appearances in locations in Nashville and Austin. At one point, more than 10 major labels requested the rights to Stealin Horses, including Arista, the chosen label.

After playing in the Midwest and Southeast for three years, the band changed its name in 1986 when the girls made a decision to quit their day jobs and devote all their time and effort to the future of their growing band.

Stealin Horses then adopted two new members, Durno and Bonhomme. The four musicians have planned a promotional tour of college and alternative radio and retail outlets. They recently toured with the Stray Cats and the Smithereens.

Ron McIlroy, co-owner of "the basement," said the music "sounds real good" and should attract a crowd for its unique style.

The doors will open at 9 p.m. at "the basement," and admission is $6.

Musical meditation of India to be shown

By TIM WEINHEIMER
The University Daily

Krishanaswamy of Bangalore, India, will perform centuries-old music meditation of the spiritual heritage of India at the Hodges Community Center at 8 p.m. today and at St. Paul's Church of the Plains at 1510 Avenue X at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The songs of Krishanaswamy are composed mostly by the mystic saints of India, ranging from the scholarly verses of Shankara to the songs of Meera, said Raj Prabhakar of Raja Wholistic Counseling of Lubbock.

"He sings in eight different languages," said Prabhakar, "bringing all religious traditions of prayer and hymn of the world together."

The Raja Wholistic Counseling center provides instruction in personal growth, stress management, crisis coping, loneliness, parent/child relationships and many other directional counseling services, she said.

Donations generated from the program are for educational purposes of needy persons in Bangalore, Prabhakar said.

Cross country teams host invitational

The Texas Tech men's and women's cross country teams will host an eight-team invitational meet Saturday at Mae Simmons Park.

The women are scheduled for a 3-mile race at 9 a.m. Saturday. The men will follow at 10:20 a.m. on a 5-mile course.

Raiders try to pick Hogs' 'bone

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

No one can deny the fact that Arkansas is on a roll.

When Texas Tech strolls into War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, Ark., Saturday, the Red Raiders will be facing a Razorback team with an unblemished record and one that has poked its head into the Top 20 at No. 19 for the first time this year. Kickoff is set for 12:05 p.m. The game will be televised on Raycom starting at noon.

Arkansas, which pounded TCU 53-10 Saturday in Fayetteville, is 1-0 in Southwest Conference play and 4-0 overall.

Tech, 1-3 for the season and 1-1 in league action, has beaten Arkansas only once in the past 11 years. Tech defeated the Razorbacks 17-7 in Fayetteville in 1986. But the Raiders are 3-6 in games played in Little Rock.

Tech coach Spike Dykes said Arkansas "(has) had a mad-on for about a year, and they have been playing like it."

Sophomore quarterback Quinn Grovey will be calling the signals for the Hogs, and it's no secret to opponents that Arkansas now is passing the ball.

In all of last year, Arkansas threw for only 940 yards. Thus far in 1988, the 5-10, 170-pound sophomore has passed for 478 yards and is averaging an outstanding 61 percent completion ratio.

There certainly are no shortcomings at special teams, either. Senior place kicker Kendall Trainor set a school record last week with five field goals.

Defensively, Arkansas has two standouts in senior tackle Wayne Martin and senior Steve Atwater at safety. Martin has 29 tackles — 11 coming behind the line — and has caused five fumbles.

"Anytime you can hold TCU to 152 yards you are doing something right," Dykes said. "(Arkansas is) probably ... playing better right now than they have in the last two or three years."

For the Raiders, about the only bright spot in last week's 50-15 loss to Texas A&M was Billy Joe Tolliver breaking two school records. The latest to fall were career completions and attempts (358 for 767).

Aside from the records, the Tech offense was kept in check by the Aggies.

A's take thriller, 2-0 lead

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Walt Weiss, the ninth-place hitter in a lineup of sluggers, singled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning Thursday night and the Oakland Athletics beat the Boston Red Sox 4-3 for a commanding 2-0 lead in the American League playoffs.

The Athletics headed home, where they swept all six games from Boston this season and have won 14 of the last 15. Game 3 is tonight with Oakland's Bob Welch facing Mike Boddicker.

Jose Canseco, who led the majors with 42 home runs and 124 RBI, homered for the second straight game and Mark McGwire hit an RBI single in the seventh for a 3-2 lead before Rich Gedman's home run in the bottom half of the inning tied it.

But while Oakland's Bash Brothers brought the Athletics back against Roger Clemens, it was the bottom part of the order that won it. Ron Hassey singled with one out against Red Sox relief ace Lee Smith and took third on Tony Phillips' two-out single. That brought up Weiss, a .389 hitter against Boston this year, and he escaped an 0-2 hole against the fast-balling Smith and lined a single just in front of diving center fielder Ellis Burks.

Spikers host No. 4 Texas

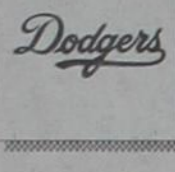

The Texas Tech volleyball team, in the midst of a five-game losing streak, will try to piece itself together to do battle with No. 4-ranked Texas at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Student Recreation Center.

Coach Donna Martin said she is unsure how she can get the Red Raiders back on the winning track. Tech is 0-2 in Southwest Conference play and 8-12 on the season.

"I don't know what we're going to do," Martin said. "We probably need to make some lineup changes or something. I think we'll definitely be making some changes before Sunday."

The Texas Longhorns are defending SWC champions for the sixth consecutive year as well as NCAA final four participants for two years in a row. The Longhorns are 10-3 for the season.

OU may test UT's pass defense

Curtis Matthews
Sports Writer

Everyone must be watching game films of Texas defending the pass. Oklahoma (3-1), the 3-1 Longhorns' opponent at 2 p.m., Saturday in Dallas (a nationally televised game on CBS-TV), tried a new wrinkle last week when the Sooners got near Iowa State's goal line.

Against the Cyclones, Jamelle Holieway, quarterback for ground-happy OU, completed two passes for short-yardage touchdowns.

Mmmm. Could this become a trend for 1988 Texas opponents?

Rice (0-3, 0-1 in Southwest Conference play) is just what the doctor ordered for TCU (2-2, 0-1) when they meet Saturday at 7 p.m.

The Frogs were the No. 5 rushing team in the nation (320.3 yards per game) going into last Saturday's contest with Arkansas.

But prior to the game, Frog coach Jim Wacker thought TCU would have to throw the ball to beat the Hogs. The Frogs got off only 18 passes, but their quarterbacks dropped back more times than that, only to find themselves running for their lives.

Nimble quarterback Scott Ankrom, who had been averaging 85 yards rushing a game, lost over 30 yards on 11 carries. The Hogs held TCU to 152 yards rushing overall.

Rice is last in the SWC in rushing defense.

What do you think the TCU game plan will be this week?

Two SWC coaches are shooting for win No. 100 Saturday.

Grant Teaff of Baylor (3-2) is trying for his 100th as the Bears' head coach against Southwest Texas State (2-3), at 1 p.m. in Waco. Jackie Sherrill is trying for his 100th as a college head coach at 4 p.m. in the Astrodome when his Texas A&M (1-3, 1-0) squad goes against the Houston Cougars (3-0, 1-0).

Houston coach Jack Pardee will get a chance to play against his alma mater this weekend.

Pardee was an All-SWC fullback for the Aggies under Bear Bryant.

On the Line

Against the spread

How the spread works: Arkansas (-13.5) means it must win by 14 points or more in order to beat the spread.
