Tech talks

In observation of Alcohol Awareness Week, The University Daily asked Texas Tech students what they believe is a more serious problem on the Tech campus — drugs or alcohol.

While most respondents said they thought alcohol posed the biggest problem, one student expressed concern about drug use.

Students say the social atmosphere of college, coupled with the stress involved leads students to abuse alcohol.

Bad weather causes plane crashes in India; 164 killed

By The Associated Press

AHMADABAD, India — A Boeing 737 jetliner and another Indian passenger plane crashed in bad weather within two hours of each other Wednesday, and authorities said 164 people were believed killed.

The Indian Airlines jet was trying to land in heavy fog at the western city of Ahmadabad when it slammed into a tree, hit a power line and crashed. All but five of the 135 people aboard were killed, and three of the survivors were in serious condition with burns and broken bones.

About 1 hour later, a 30-year-old Fokker Friendship propeller plane leased by Indian Airlines to the domestic carrier Vayudoot hit the side of a hill in eastern India during a severe rainstorm, and all 34 people aboard were feared dead, officials said.

Indian Airlines Flight 131, was flying from Bombay with 129 passengers and six crew members when it crashed at 7:40 a.m. on its final approach to Ahmadabad airport, about 500 miles southwest of New Delhi.

Federal Aviation Minister Shiv Raj Patil said the death toll of 130 was the worst in the carrier's 26-year history. It was the airline's 16th major accident.

The government-run airline, which flies to 73 airports in India and to nine other countries, has come under fire for allegedly failing to maintain pre-flight safety procedures.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known, but one airline official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the airline suspects a technical malfunction complicated by bad weather.

Patil said he did not rule out sabotage and ordered an investigation headed by a high court judge.

A recording between the pilot and the Ahmadabad control tower gave no indication of trouble. Rescue workers found the flight data and cockpit voice recorders in smoldering wreckage and blood-stained debris.

The Fokker Friendship crashed into a 1,400-foot hill near Guwahati airport, about 960 miles east of New Delhi.

Emergency aid

EMS paramedics administer aid to Catherine Overton, a resident of New Mexico, after a traffic accident. According to the Lubbock Police Department, the brakes in Overton's car failed, causing her to hit a car that was stopped at a traffic light. Jim Rich holds Overton as her daughter Brandy watches. The accident occurred at 6 p.m. Wednesday at 19th Street and Indiana Avenue. Police did not know the extent of Overton's injuries as of Wednesday night.

Tech center given wine study grant

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

The Texas Tech based Texas Wine Marketing Research Institute recently received a $50,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to study wine consumers, said institute director John Fitzgerald.

A portion of the funds will be used to conduct analysis and consumer behavior research in major markets in Texas.

The research will focus on identifying consumers in different markets and understanding why they purchase Texas wines.

The data will be made available to wineries, retailers and distributors.

"Texas is the greatest potential market in the nation," Fitzgerald said.

Texas presently has the fourth largest wine sales in the nation. Fitzgerald identified Dallas, Houston, Austin and San Antonio as major wine markets.

The USDA funded the research through the federal and state Marketing Improvement program which develops programs and research for agricultural products.

Sauvignon Blanc were designated "Molto Fine," the highest technical rating for wine, at the Vin Italy Wine Exhibit in Verona, Italy.

Texas has the lowest national per capita consumption of wine at 1.4 gallons per year per person, however, Lubbock has the highest per capita wine consumption in the state, Fitzgerald said.

The average American consumes 2.6 gallons per year, he said.

Candidate's goal to serve constituents

By GARY HARPER
The University Daily

Otis Cooks, a Republican candidate for Lubbock County Commissioner Precinct No. 1, said one of his goals as county commissioner is to serve constituents, not dictate to them.

"A commissioner is a public servant, not a dictator. He works for the people," Cooks said. "I'm a lover of people. I don't feel I would be a dictator."

Cooks said Lubbock is one of the greatest cities in the state of Texas, and that county commissioners and Lubbock officials need to agree on more matters rather than arguing constantly.

"There shouldn't be a conflict between the city and city officials," he said. "We need to have a good relationship between the two. I think I would bring something to the commissioners court to advocate a good relationship."

Cooks opponent, Democrat Eliseo Solis, previously indicated that Cooks might receive more votes from blacks because of his race, but Cooks disagreed, saying he will represent all of the people.

"Look, I'm not running a black campaign. If elected, I'll not only serve the blacks, but the Anglos and Hispanics," Cooks said. "I plan on serving the people, not just one group."

Cooks, a retired Marine Corps staff sergeant, said he never really had any political goals until people began approaching him with the idea to run for county commissioner.

"I had a group come to me because they thought we needed a change, but I really didn't have any political ambition," he said.

Cooks

Although Cooks refused to give specific solutions to Lubbock's jailing problem, he indicated he would like to assist.

Cooks said he also plans on being accessible to constituents.

Skateboard ban possibility to curtail widespread damage to Tech property

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

Texas Tech may soon join other universities across the nation by adopting a ban on skateboards to curtail damage to university property.

Campuses at the University of Arizona, California and Texas have banned skateboarding on university property for fear of being held liable for injuries caused by skateboards. Officials at Tech, however, indicate that damage to university property would be the primary reason a ban would be enforced on campus.

Dewey Shroyer, director of department of grounds maintenance, said damage from skateboarding is widespread on campus and believes a policy is needed to control skateboarding.

"As long as there is abuse of property that we are caring for, abuse of state property, there has to be a policy," Shroyer said.

Damage to property includes destruction of benches, planters and stonework, Shroyer said. The benches around the UC have been especially prone to damage. Shroyer said the redwood tops of the benches have been broken several times by skateboarders jumping on them.

Stonework on several buildings also has been damaged by skateboarders doing tricks, Shroyer said.

Sgt. Danny Davis of the Tech Department of Police Services indicated that in addition to damage of university property, hazards caused by skateboarders both on the sidewalks and in the streets may lead to a skateboarding ban on campus.

Allen Rose/The University Daily

Davis said skateboarders' bumping into people on sidewalks is increasingly becoming a problem.

Currently, the only policy regarding skateboarding, whether on campus or not, is a state law forbidding skateboarding in the street.

Skateboarders, however, disagree with a skateboarding ban and feel such a ban would be unfair to skaters.

"Just because it's skateboards, it is not right that it should be illegal," said Kenny Flake, a former Tech student who is now an employee at Gadzooks.

Gramm denies reports of AFB closure

From Staff Reports

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, Wednesday denied reports in a national magazine that Reese Air Force Base is on a Pentagon hit list of bases that could be closed if defense spending is reduced.

Gramm, who was in Lubbock for a visit to the local Republican headquarters, said training more pilots is important. He said that under the Reagan administration's policy, training bases such as Reese AFB would not be closed.

Under a Dukakis administration, however, Gramm said, Reese's fates is uncertain.

Gramm said the policy pursued by the current administration may in fact train more pilots at Reese.

Three other military bases in Texas also were included on the list of more than 45 bases targeted in a proposed base-closing plan.

Gramm refuted a list of proposed military installations targeted for closing and published in U.S. News and World Report.

According to U.S. News and World Report, the U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate approved a plan promoted by Rep. Dick Armye, R-Texas, calling for a commission — retired lawmakers, defense experts business leaders and environmentalists — to prepare a list of possible military installations to be submitted to President Reagan at the end of the year.

All show, no go in '88

Race for White House leaves voters clueless

Cindy Pandolfo
News Editor

The 1988 presidential election marks a sad event in the course of American history.

Sad because in a land filled with promise, talent and leadership the only offering made to the American public is representative of the mediocre.

The 1988 election represents a choice of the lesser of the evils, not an election of the best candidate for the presidency.

Even for Americans like myself who reject the idea of supporting a political party, and who attempt to vote for the most qualified person regardless of party affiliation, choices are difficult.

The last presidential debate was a revelation for the American people. After listening to both candidates for an hour and a half, the public was no closer to knowing what Bush plans to do for America or what Dukakis stands for than before the debate aired.

Oh, we know that Dukakis has reservations about Quayle. How often have we heard the Dukakis query, "What if Bush should die and Quayle became president?"

What does that have to do with a Dukakis administration?

We know that Bush touched our hearts with his story of the child he lost.

The story, however, failed to explain why Bush believes that a child born with birth defects deserves love, affection and a chance to live regardless of handicaps while a perfectly normal child conceived from rape or incest should die. Life is life regardless of the conditions surrounding the creation.

We know that Dukakis believes a president should work with, not against, Congress since this was his patented reply to no less than three questions ranging from nuclear armament to the federal deficit.

Congress — a predominantly Democratic Congress — should be held accountable for the policies implemented over the last eight years.

The public can and should determine campaign issues. As a shareholder in America, cast your vote by turning off superficial debates that focus on smiles, hairdos and body language rather than on issues.

The time is now. Write to your representatives and demand necessary changes.

Opinion

In defense of condoms

To the editor:

I would like to address this letter to Richard Dressman, whose letter appeared in the Monday, Oct. 10 edition of The UD.

I was just wondering, Richard, if you think that prayer is a new form of birth control. Did it ever occur to you that maybe if those 4,000 women who have abortions in the United States had used condoms or some other form of birth control that perhaps they wouldn't have needed the abortions?

Furthermore, I salute the UD staff for keeping the students informed about issues such as condoms and AIDS. These situations can only be solved by an informed public, not by prayer alone. If you want to pray about something, why don't you pray that God will give us the strength and knowledge that we need to solve these problems ourselves?

If you're wondering why I haven't mentioned the football thing, it's because I don't think that football has anything to do with abortions and condoms, and I doubt that God really cares about football.

When opinions turn ugly

To the editor:

I am increasingly concerned about the tone of recent contributions to your Opinion section. It is both natural and laudable that passions quicken during this political season. What is regrettable, however, is that these passions find expression through a style that I term "argument by outraged dismissal."

To an extent, I may be found guilty of this same offense as the proximate author of the quote "He proved to be the airhead that he truly is" when analyzing Senator Quayle's performance in the vice-presidential debates for UD political reporter Gary Harper.

Nonetheless, I hold that it is exceedingly cheap for letter writer James King (UD, Oct. 13, page two) to simply dismiss my analysis as biased "ignorant trash." Perusal of many other recent letters proves that these sophomoric words, strung together in various concatenations, are the currently favored way to express the more honest traditional epithet "eat sh... and die."

In my own defense, I can only say that if my assessment of Quayle's performance is biased "ignorant trash," I am at least in the very good company of political observers of such diverse perspective as George Will, William F. Buckley, David Broder and Jack Germonde.

Halos, pitchforks given

To the editor:

Glowing Halos to whoever was responsible for changing the format at KTXU-FM. As I drove into Lubbock after a long summer, I was greeted by wonderful music emanating from 88.1 on the FM dial. Lubbock finally has a radio station that I can listen to because of the music and not because I'm being bribed with the chance of winning money!

Halos also to those responsible for the new (?) display atop the Double T at Jones Stadium. The graphics are great! (I wonder if that is where the extra $7 in the price of Complete Sport packages went?).

A good-sized pitchfork to whichever agency was responsible for the street outside the UC not being finished during the summer (Bad planning?).

Accident-prone pitchforks both to the drivers around here who think the indicator lights on their autos are just decorations and to the pedestrians who have forgotten that one is supposed to look before stepping out onto the street.

A half-hearted halo to the "bicycle officer" who is trying to make the sidewalks safe for pedestrians again. You should spend more time along the stretch between mass comm. and the UC (you might even catch me).

Double-ended pitchforks to those who could not find anything good to say about Lauro Cavazos last year but who could not stop singing his praises after he was nominated to the Cabinet. I wonder if those people were glad to see him confirmed or just glad to see him go.

Finally, golden halos to the Red Raiders (football, that is), for allowing me to witness a homecoming victory before I die.

Tip something besides hat

To the editor:

The other day, I witnessed something that really ticked me off. I was waiting in the lobby of a certain dorm for a friend, when a pizza deliveryman runs in. I watched as a rather large student motioned to the pizzaman that it was his order. I then watched in disbelief as the student received his two large pizzas and waited for the change... all 45 cents of it. The pizzaman left as I realized he must do countless times every night: without tip and unappreciated.

Come on Techsians! These people work hard to deliver food to you so that you don't have to go out and get it yourself. They get paid just over minimum wage. Almost all their pay comes from the tips they make. Try to imagine what it must be like to be a deliveryperson. They hurry so as to please the customer, you, and must deal with sometimes rude and obstinate people. Not to mention the wear and tear on their cars. I imagine during the winter it will be even worse with the streets iced over. Surely if you can afford to order out for pizza semi-often or go out and party on the weekends, you can afford to tip these drivers one small buck. Try to remember that these people are doing you a service. Also remember: Tipping is not a city in China!

Evasive ethics:

Dukakis bears marks of tainted past similar to questionable Bush history

Todd White
Guest
Columnist

Michael Dukakis has gone out of his way during this election to portray himself as the "honest" candidate, the candidate who would not tolerate any corruption in his administration. He has accused Ronald Reagan and, therefore, George Bush, of having the most corruption-riddled administration since President Grant.

Asked to comment on what he believed Ronald Reagan's role was in the assorted improprieties, Dukakis glibly replied, "A fish rots from the head down."

When former Attorney General Ed Meese resigned, Dukakis proclaimed that the Republicans had "given us one scandal after another, one resignation after another."

Many Americans, myself included, admitted that the governor's points had merit and that perhaps it was time for reform.

The next logical question: is Michael Dukakis the man to clean up Washington? The answer, hidden in Democrat demagoguery, is a resounding no. One look at the Dukakis record will show why.

Gerald Indelicato — Indelicato, Dukakis' personal friend and foremost education adviser, was appointed by Dukakis to the presidency of Bridgewater State College and was personally sworn in by Dukakis. This same man later was sentenced to 30 months in jail and ordered to pay $80,000 to the state when he forged the names of trustees of Bridgewater to a deed so that he could build a house.

The only explanation came from a Dukakis staffer who said, "We don't micro-manage around here."

Francis Pilecki — Another disastrous appointment by Dukakis and also in the area of education, Pilecki was appointed in 1978 to be the head of Westfield State College. Pilecki was allowed to resign by the board of regents of the college after he was accused of sexually molesting a male student.

The Washington Post reported that the student was given $10,000 by the regents and thereafter signed a pledge of confidentiality.

As if the first mistake by Dukakis was not terrible enough, especially in light of the ensuing cover-up, this same professor was allowed to return to his teaching role at another state college.

Oh, by the way, Dukakis' appointed successor to Pilecki was recently caught breaking college rules to get his daughter admitted and filing for reimbursement for dinner expenses with people that are nonexistent.

New Braintree Prison Land Sale — This deal is the subject of a current FBI investigation. It seems that New Braintree, a small town of 800 souls with no public transportation and no doctor, had been rejected as a prison site by state authorities at least twice. However, when two Dukakis contributors bought the little group of buildings (which would need complete reconstruction to be useful as a prison) the site moved straight to the top of the prison charts.

The value of the land also skyrocketed, from $3 million in December of 1985 to $8.7 million in the space of five months.

Dukakis asked the state Legislature for $22 million, including $10 million for the land, to build the prison. An investigation by local residents who did not want the prison showed that Dukakis, who denied any connection to the owners of the land, grew up with one of the owners.

Dukakis did not recall these meetings, according to one staffer, because he was not paying attention.

The prison will still be built, but the land will be purchased for "only" $5 million instead of $10 million.

When reporters and eventually Massachusetts courts asked for documents connected with the case, Dukakis claimed executive privilege a la Richard Nixon and refused to turn over the requested papers.

Finally, on August 15 of this year, the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ruled that Dukakis had no such privilege under Massachusetts law.

John Sasso — Does anyone else out there remember the dirty little "attack video" that bumped Senator Joe Biden from the Democratic Primary race? That video was produced by John Sasso, Dukakis' campaign manager and long-time friend.

After the political heat was turned up on Dukakis, Sasso resigned. "John (Sasso) will not have any relationship, formal or informal, with the campaign," Dukakis informed us all.

Fast-forward to the general election, and a Dukakis besieged by a seemingly surging George Bush. Just like Tommy Lasorda in the World Series, Dukakis went to his bullpen and out came (surprise) John Sasso.

Numerous other questionable appointments have been made by the man who told the Democratic National Convention "in the Dukakis White House, as in the Dukakis Statehouse, if you accept the privilege of public service, you had better understand the responsibilities of public service.

"If you violate that trust, you'll be fired — if you violate the law you'll be prosecuted...."

From Indelicato to Pilecki to the Dukakis-appointed Sheriff of Middlesex County who is being investigated by a state grand jury on charges concerning a no-show job scheme and the Dukakis-selected members of the Boston Licensing Board who have accepted bribes from a now-indicted and suspended attorney, Dukakis has shown no more ethics than his fellow Democrats did in New York City's infamous Tammany Hall.

Maybe Dukakis can succeed where Boss Tweed failed and make the American people see the distinction between graft and honest graft. Is ethics in government Michael Dukakis' breakthrough issue?

With a record such as this, I think not. For the sake of the Republic, I hope not.

White is a second-year law student from Rockwall.

More data show teacher shortage exists

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

One survey says America has plenty of teachers and others say a shortage exists. The big question is which survey to believe?

Although recent surveys indicate a teacher shortage does not exist, Richard Ishler, dean of the Texas Tech College of Education, says more data supports a shortage than not.

"The National Education Association predicts one million teachers will be needed in 1990," Ishler said. "The truth of the matter is somewhere in between."

A National Center for Education Information (NCEI) survey of 75 school districts and 1,000 education majors seeking employment found a waiting list for many jobs available this year.

NCEI President Emily Feistritz concluded no teacher shortage exists. Her conclusion, however, has come under fire from other educational groups.

"NCEI ignored reports from the Labor Department that 35 to 40 percent of the teaching force will be eligible for retirement by the end of the century," Jewell Gould, research director for the American Federation of Teachers told College Press Service.

Marilyn Rogers of the National Educators Association told CPS that although 25 percent of all college students are needed for teacher education, only 8 percent are presently enrolled in education programs.

Suburb schools with good reputations that offer high salaries have no difficulty finding teachers.

"But take the the 1,100 school districts in Texas and not very many fit that description," Ishler said. "Houston, Dallas and San Antonio are having trouble finding enough qualified teachers."

The teacher shortage is centered in the Sun Belt — Florida, California and Texas — which Ishler said has one of the highest shortages in the nation.

"We need 20,000 teachers a year," Ishler said. "The 67 institutions that certify teachers only produce 8,000. About half of the teachers in Texas come from out of state."

He said shortages exist in the fields of bilingual education, math, science and special education. The most serious shortage, he said, is in junior and senior high schools.

Ishler said the problem in Texas was caused by class sizes, low salaries and poor working conditions.

"Teachers felt they had no respect," he said.

To solve the problem, Ishler said salaries must be competitive and standards should be developed for teachers.

"Increased salaries are drawing people back in," he said.

The average yearly salary of Texas teachers is $25,300. The average salary of a beginning teacher is $20,000 to $22,000, he said.

Universities and colleges will produce two-thirds of the teachers needed by 1990, but many will leave the profession.

Ishler said one-third of all certified teachers never enter the teaching field, and 35 to 40 percent drop out within the first five years.

According to current student SAT scores, 7 percent of college freshmen want to be teachers.

"In the 1960s, it was 19 percent and dropped to 4 percent. For the last three years, it has gone up one percent each year," he said.

According to CPS, school districts with teacher shortages award emergency teaching certificates, assign teachers to courses outside the certification area, use teachers' aides, increase class sizes and eliminate course offerings to cope with the problem.

Applications to honor society available

Membership applications for Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership and scholastic honor society, can be obtained at the ICASALS office in 103 Holden Hall and in the Dean of Students Office in 250 West Hall. Completed forms must be returned to the office no later than 4 p.m. Nov. 4. A written letter of recommendation from a Texas Tech professor or staff member is required with the application. Late applications or letters will not be considered.

Candidates for membership must exhibit exemplary character, responsible leadership and service in campus life. Membership is awarded to undergraduate junior and senior students and to graduate students.

Student employees given scholarships

Scholarships have been awarded to student employees Paul Hood and Julie Tidwell of the department of building maintenance and utilities in recognition of outstanding work.

A native of Fort Worth, Hood is a senior mechanical engineering major. He also is a student engineer in Engineering Services.

Tidwell, who is from Munday, is working on a master's degree. She works in clerical/secretarial services in Central Heating and Cooling Plant No. 1.

Scholarships have been awarded the past four years from the department of building maintenance and utilities.

New organization promotes sober fun on campus

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

High on Life is a new social organization that promotes sober fun and encourages students to "party smart," said Lilli Correll, president.

The organization was started to offer students an alternative to drinking on campus, she said. Students don't have anything else to do but go to parties and get drunk.

"Our organization lets them know there is a way to have fun without drinking," she said.

High on Life is planning activities such as bowling, flag football, putt-putt golf and dancing.

Correll said the organization members participate in the activities typical to college students, but without alcohol and drugs.

Correll said "High on Lifers" are planning to organize a group discussion time when students can talk about grades, relationships and any problems students have. The group would reassure each other and offer support to each other, she said.

"So you don't have to stuff it down inside and take drugs to make it go away," Correll said.

The organization has between 15 and 20 members, but anyone can come to an activity, she said.

"I don't just want people to come who are sober, but it's open to anyone," Correll said. "I don't want people to come drunk though. I want to show that people can have fun sober. I can be high on life."

The organization will coordinate a taxi service for students who are too drunk to drive home, she said.

"When they're too drunk to drive, we can come get them," Correll said. "And we won't even harass them."

For more information about High on Life, call Lilli Correll or Joanna Hyde at 742-6880.

Police receive reports of clothing theft

Have you had your clothes ripped off?

In recent weeks, several students have reported being victimized by individuals who have removed their clothing from laundry rooms in the resident halls.

The Texas Tech Department of Police Services reports theft of clothing has accounted for approximately $511 in lost property over the past several weeks.

To prevent clothing theft, Tech police suggest students refrain from leaving personal property unattended in the laundry area, even for a few moments.

Mammograms to drop mortality rate

By MICHELLE STRICKER
The University Daily

One in every 11 women will develop breast cancer — the most common cancer to strike American women — sometime during her lifetime, making mammography increasingly important, a physician said.

Mammograms, low dose X-ray examinations of soft breast tissue, often reveal cancer long before a woman or her doctor detect a tumor. Five to 8 percent of breast cancer cases, however, will not be detected with a mammogram, said Dr. Linda Persohn, a medical doctor and assistant professor of radiology at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

"Because not all cancer shows up on the mammogram, women who test negative should be regularly examined and also practice regular self-examination," she said.

Persohn said several problems may be responsible for cases of undetected breast cancer.

The breast tissue of young women who have not borne children is very dense glandular tissue that appears white on a mammography. Unfortunately, any abnormality of the breast will also appear white. Should the abnormality be located within or near a muscle mass, the X-ray would appear normal.

Although detection may be difficult in certain cases, Persohn said women should be assured that mammography is very successful in the detection of breast cancer.

The American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute conducted the Breast Cancer Detection Demonstration Project from 1973 until 1981. Of women studied, 91 percent of breast cancer was detected by mammograms compared to 9 percent detected by self-examination alone.

The CA-A Cancer Journal for Clinicians estimates an additional 135,000 women will develop breast cancer in 1988. Mammography testing will decrease the mortality rate by 30 percent, Persohn said.

"If more women in the high-risk group would just keep up with their examinations, the decrease in the mortality rate would be much more significant," she said.

The American Cancer Society currently recommends that women have an initial mammography between the ages of 35 and 40. Women 40- to 49-years-old should be tested every one to two years, and women 50 and older should be tested every year.

Mammograms are very successful in detecting cancer for women over 50, the most afflicted group, since breast tissue becomes less dense as a woman matures, Persohn said.

The radiation dose associated with mammograms is very low, said Judy Ancell, chief radiology technician.

Ancell added that X-ray machines have been radically improved in the last 20 years.

Tech Talks

Today's question:

Which do you think is worse on the Tech campus — alcohol abuse or drug abuse?

Reporter : Laura Merril

Photographer : Allen Rose

Amy Boyd Jr.
Food Nutrition Devine

"I think alcohol is more widely abused because there is so much stress in college life that it becomes a real focus. It is mainly used to get away from it all."

Janice Garfield
Sr. Broadcast Jour. Dallas

"I feel alcohol is a bigger problem not only at this school but all over America mainly because alcohol is so easily obtained."

Allan Herring
Soph. Marketing Plainview

"Drug abuse is worse because there is so much you can do to your body. Drugs affect you quicker than alcohol."

Katy Mayberry
Fresh. Business Mgt. Borger

"I think alcohol is more of a problem especially within the Greek system. A frat party is one of the main places you can go to get alcohol."

Troy Ridley Jr.
MIS Austin

"Alcohol abuse is worse. It seems like fraternities are into drinking, and guys are always getting caught with beer in the dorms."

Census Bureau says education new American fad

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

Dropping out of school is no longer cool, according to figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau that indicate education is the new fad among Americans today.

The latest census report reveals more Americans than ever have high school and college educations.

Census Bureau demographer Robert Kominski told the College Press Service in March that more than 75 percent of people 25 years of age and older finished high school, and almost 20 percent have completed four years of college.

Richard Ishler, dean of the College of Education, said monumental strides have been made in education.

"I think the quality is better than it's ever been," Ishler said. "Since 1983, every state has passed an educational reform package."

Factors in a quality education include emphasis on basic skills and critical thinking.

"It's more than just rote (memorized) learning and understanding the content," he said.

Ishler cited a lack of certified teachers, financial, family, and community support as obstacles to a quality education.

"People with kids in school are a vanishing breed," Ishler said. "Only 26 percent of adults in any given community in the nation have kids in school."

Despite the progress, impediments to a quality education remain, Ishler said.

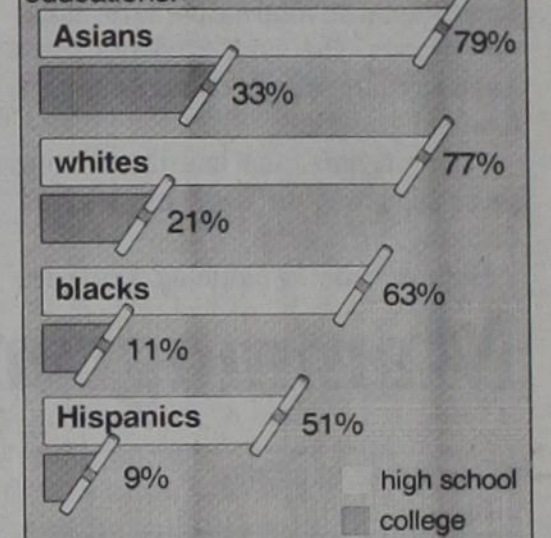

"Problems in education are never fully solved," he said.

According to CPS, Kominski attributed the education trend to the civil rights movement and expansion of college grant and aid programs in the 1960s and 1970s.

Kominski said the West has the highest educational levels with high school graduation rates of 80.6 percent. The number of people with college degrees totaled 22.3 percent. The South represents the least educated region, Kominski said. Only 71 percent of its citizens have high school diplomas and even fewer, 18 percent, have college degrees.

Graduating Seniors...

According to the latest census report, more Americans than ever have high school and college educations:

Mark Harlier/The University Daily

Since 1960, hormone levels

Pumping iron has replaced flower power. Pinstripes have replaced paisley. And Wall Street has replaced Woodstock.

But of all the major changes that have taken place since the 60's, one is hardly visible at all: the change that has taken place in the Pill.

In 1960, the Pill contained as much as 150 mcgs. of the hormone estrogen. Today, it's down to 35 mcgs. or less. That's a fraction of the original dosage.

Yet, today's Pill is as effective as yesterday's. In fact, it's still the most effective birth control available other than sterilization.

But is the Pill right for you? You should see your doctor to help you answer that. If the answer is yes, then the ultimate decision is yours. And it's important that you learn all you can about oral contraceptives.

First and foremost, what are the risks? Does the Pill cause cancer? Will it make you less fertile? Do you need to take a rest from it? These are just a few questions that have surrounded the Pill since 1960. Questions which must be addressed by you and your physician.

What about the Pill and breast cancer? Although there are conflicting reports concerning this issue, the Centers for Disease Control reported that women who took the Pill, even for 15 years, ran no higher risk of breast cancer than women who didn't. The CDC also reported that ovarian and uterine cancer are substantially less common among women who use oral contraceptives.

The Pill has been shown to have other health benefits as well. Pill users are less likely to develop pelvic inflammatory disease (tubal infections), benign breast disease and iron deficiency anemia, not to mention menstrual cramps.

But if the Pill is so effective at preventing pregnancy, can it later prevent you from having a baby when you're ready to have one? Studies in the Pill have indicated that if you were fertile before you took the Pill, taking it will not affect your ability to have children later. Some women may experience a short period of readjustment after discontinuing the Pill. Even so, most women usually become pregnant soon.

One piece of advice you may have heard if you're on the Pill is that you should take an occasional rest from it. Yet there's no medical basis for this advice. Furthermore, a rest could turn out to be anything but restful, since switching to a less effective form of birth control increases your chances for unplanned pregnancy.

Now that you know what the risks aren't, you should know what the risks are. For example, if you are taking the Pill, you should not smoke. Especially if you are over 35. Cigarette smoking is known to increase the risk of serious and possibly life-threatening adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels from Pill use. What's more, women with certain conditions or medical histories should not use the Pill.

Even if you're already on the Pill, you should see your doctor at least once a year. And read the patient information regularly.

Taking the Pill is easy. Deciding whether or not to take it isn't. That's why it's so important for you to make an informed decision. Continue reading everything you can about birth control methods. Seek out reliable sources. Talk to your doctor. You've already taken a step in the dropped considerably.

right direction. Just think, since you began reading this, there's a good chance your knowledge level about the Pill has increased. Considerably.

Do you need advertising experience?

Making his living as 'freak of nature' doesn't bother State Fair Lobster Man

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — On the midway, one door down from Pork Chops the fat man, sits Grady Stiles the Lobster Man, who calls himself "one of the last legitimate freaks of nature on the road" worth paying a dollar to see.

Stiles, 51, is working the State Fair of Texas, sitting on a pillow under a tent and explaining his body to an audience of eight or 10 people.

"I am known as the Lobster Man because my hands were born shaped as that of a lobster, as you can see," he says for the umpteenth time at sundown on a slow Monday.

"My great-grandfather, my great-aunt and my dad were born like this before me. Instead of feet, I was born with flippers like a lobster. I am married and have four children. I have two that are perfectly normal and two born like I am. We are the only family on medical record to be born like this inherently. Any questions, I will be glad to answer."

No questions from this group, just long stares. The sign out front guarantees $10,000 if his hands really don't look like lobster claws, and no one is asking for money.

Both hands are deformed, each with a very large thumb and finger that meet at a point. Of the many doctors who have studied him, none have been able to explain the hands, Stiles said.

But he can pick up a plastic cup and a cigarette during his display to the onlookers. He can also give a firm handshake.

And that is how Stiles makes a living, sitting under a tent and allowing people to look at him for a dollar in Dallas, a little more in New England, where the economy is better.

"I make a living," he said. "But I've never been able to make enough money to quit. I've told myself I would quit several times but never have."

Stiles said he works more than nine months a year. With his wife and two of his children, he travels from fair to fair across the country in a trailer.

"You know the thing I really get tired of is the routine, saying the same thing over and over," he said. But then the next group came in and Stiles started again.

"I am known as the Lobster Man ..."

Houston-Hogs matchup will decide SWC champs

Brad Walker
Sports Editor

This may not seem like the time of the season for a conference championship, but hold on to your armchair, because the Southwest Conference winner will be crowned Saturday.

It's Arkansas versus Houston, can you stand it?

Kind of a shame. It just won't have the same feel as a Texas-Texas A&M matchup, or an Arkansas-UT game or etc., etc. ...

And the largely empty Astrodome won't spill forth that feeling of a "college classic" like War Memorial in Little Rock would, or Kyle Field in College Station or etc., etc. ...

And the Raycom telecast won't hold a candle to anything the major networks or ESPN could do for any game featuring league leaders. Of course the mid-hangover, noon kickoff won't help boost the excitement of the day either.

Nevertheless, the SWC game of the year is upon us. The winner is headed for Dallas. The loser is headed for Birmingham, Memphis or Jacksonville (but not Houston).

But if you think hard enough, a time in SWC history comes to mind when a Hogs-Coogs contest was something worth howling about. The mid- and late 1970s saw the Cougars, who had just entered the league, go Cotton pickin' three times. Add their 1985 appearance, and Houston has been four times. Arkansas won the conference in 1975, but they've been hard pressed to return since then, even though they've made 10 other bowl games.

Saturday may not recall many memories of 10 or more years ago, but it may help to ease our minds that both squads once were league giants.

The Cougars might be pretending, also. Second-year coach Jack Pardee has turned around a decimated program. Only now it will be ruined again by season's end, according to the word trickling down from the NCAA.

Houston is in trouble, and the Cougars are going to get nailed. So wouldn't it be all too fitting for this once-proud conference to have its champion put on probation two years in a row?

Thank goodness it won't happen. I mean literally, thank goodness.

Be thankful for the clean-living Razorbacks, headed by Ken Hatfield. If he can pull this game off, then the perfect story has been written. Good beats evil. Let's hear it for amateur athletes.

Hatfield finally learned how to deal with his criticism since landing in Fayetteville. Give the people what they want — or at least make 'em think it's what they want. The fans cried out for a more passing offense, and Hatfield agreed to their wishes. But if they had hoped for Canadian-style football, they might have been fooled.

Arkansas leads the SWC in rushing with 261 yards per game, while the passing game ranks sixth. The offense remains the wishbone, and the Hogs remain a ground-oriented attack. Houston couldn't stop the Aggies from steamrolling them with a powerful running offense, and the Hogs should do the same.

Everything's going well for Hatfield this year, finally. The fans are off his back and the kings of 9-3 appear headed for 11-1. Hatfield won't have to resign, much less get fired.

So here it comes, the SWC showdown. This isn't Ann Arbor, Mich., and it's no Ohio State-Michigan, but it's all we SWC fans have.

Pardee says Cougars must play to ability

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — University of Houston Coach Jack Pardee doesn't think the Cougars have to play over their heads to beat 13th ranked Arkansas in their Southwest Conference showdown Saturday.

"If the Houston Cougars play the kind of football we're capable of playing, we can beat anyone left on our schedule," Pardee said. "We don't have to play over our heads, we just have to play up to our ability."

The Cougars, 4-1 for the season and 1-1 in SWC games, must play to their capabilities against the Hogs, 6-0 this season.

"If we have a bad game, commit turnovers and have lapses, I don't see anyone we could beat," Pardee said. "But it's comforting to know that if we play the kind of football we can play and get the breaks, we can win."

The Razorbacks rank second in the SWC in total offense, led by quarterback Quinn Grovey, the league's most efficient passer and fifth ranked in total offense.

"He's good, he's fast, he's quick and he's very deceptive," Houston defensive end Keith Jenkins said.

"He'll be in my dreams this week. Most of the time I'm hitting him and tackling him."

"I try to make my dreams as realistic as possible, so I also have him making the big plays."

Grovey rushed 101 yards and passed for 111 in last week's 27-24 victory over Texas, while engineering the Hogs' wishbone offense.

Pardee is concerned about the Arkansas defense, which matches its offense with a No. 2 total defensive ranking in the SWC.

The Hogs won't be the Texas A&M blitzing machine that helped beat the Cougars 30-16 two weeks ago, Pardee said.

"Arkansas is good at dropping people off in coverage and forcing bad plays downfield instead of behind the line," Pardee said.

The Razorbacks beat the Cougars 21-17 last season with a second half rally that included dropping eight and nine defenders back in coverage.

"They shut us out in the second half last year and I'm sure we'll see some of that again," Pardee said.

The Cougars are 4-1 for the season and 1-1 in SWC games. They've beaten Baylor and lost to Texas A&M. Last week, they beat Tulsa 82-28.

Arkansas has beaten Texas Christian, Texas Tech and Texas for its SWC victories.

Pardee thinks the pressure is on the Razorbacks, playing on the road and trying to erase the stigma of perennial runners-up.

"If we beat them, they are looking at second place again," Pardee said. "It's a heck of a big game for them, I think it's more pressure on them."

Jenkins will concentrate on helping shut down the Hogs' wishbone offense and Grovey.

"He's what makes it go," Jenkins said. "If we could shut him down, I think we can control them to an extent."

Moon ready for Cincinnati showdown

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon, part of a startling list of quarterback injuries this season, doesn't want quarterbacks overprotected by too many rules.

He specifically is not in favor of restricting the blitz, which makes the quarterback a target.

"I like to see the blitz coming because it gets you in man to man coverage and if you beat the blitz you can make a big play," Moon said.

Moon, along with backup Cody Carlson and 19 other NFL quarterbacks have been sidelined by injuries this season.

Bigger, stronger and faster defensive players could be endangering the quarterbacks but Moon hesitates to take away from the aggressiveness of the game.

"They've done just about all they can do to protect the quarterback," Moon said. "I don't know much else they could do without taking away from the aggressiveness of the game."

Moon, who suffered a broken shoulder bone diving for a fumble in the season opener, doesn't think his position has been marked for injury.

"I think it's just a coincidence this year that quarterbacks are getting hurt," Moon said. "Next year it could be the running backs or wide receivers."

If injuries continue, Moon said, restricting the blitz and rush could be necessary.

"When it's just a normal four-man rush, usually you don't see the quarterback get hit that hard," Moon said. "They still will get hit, but you don't have the wide-open running start at the blind side like you do now."

Moon tried to pick up a fumble and run with it against Indianapolis and took a direct hit on his shoulder.

Carlson replaced Moon for the next four games until he broke his thumb against Kansas City Oct. 9.

Moon was supposed to be out for six weeks and return Sunday against the Cincinnati Bengals, but he said his personal timetable called for his return last Sunday.

Moon was right on target, leading the Oilers to a 34-14 victory over Pittsburgh. He completed 11 of 19 passes for 174 yards and two touchdowns.

Moon thought a return against the Steelers was necessary to be prepared for the Central Division showdown against the once-beaten Bengals.

"We're in the position we want," Moon said. "We're 5-2 and they're 6-1 and we're going up there to play them," Moon said.

"They are an excellent team. Last year they just had some things go bad for them. This year, they are making those plays and they've got the same people making those plays."

Raiders head for Abilene riding high

By CURTIS MATTHEWS
The University Daily

The Texas Tech men's golf team will swing through Abilene today and Friday for the third annual Charles Coody West Texas Intercollegiate tournament.

The tournament will be played on the par-72 Fairway Oaks Golf & Racquet Club course with 18 holes taking place each day. Today's tee time is 8:30 a.m.

The Fairway Oaks course was used two weeks ago for the Gatlin Brothers Southwest Classic — one of the stops on this year's Professional Golf Association tour.

Tech is coming off a strong finish in last weekend's New Mexico Golf Classic in Las Cruces, N.M. The Raiders went into the final round nine shots behind Colorado. Tech made up the difference, matching the Buffaloes total score, only to wind up second due to a tiebreaker.

Winfrey

Leading the Tech team will be Mike Winfrey and Dale Akridge. Winfrey tied for third out of 95 in last weekend's tournament, and Akridge finished ninth.

Also playing for Tech will be Mark Allen, Kevin Youngblood, Jim Sanders and Jason Foster. Allen has missed the last two tournaments due to class conflicts. He and Akridge are the only Raiders to have made the trip to last year's Abilene tourney.

After finishing no lower than sixth through four tournaments this year, Tech coach Tommy Wilson has had plenty to smile about.

"We're riding high at this point in our season," Wilson said.

Also competing in the tournament are Abilene Christian-Purple, ACU-White, Cameron, Eastern New Mexico, Howard Payne, Oklahoma City, Southwest Texas State, Texas Wesleyan, UT-San Antonio and Rice.

Voter's error drops FSU to 7th

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Because Florida State slipped a voter's mind, the Seminoles slipped from fifth to seventh in the weekly Associated Press football poll, and that created a small furor in the state Tuesday.

After a 45-21 victory over East Carolina on Saturday, Florida State fell from fifth to seventh, behind Nebraska and undefeated West Virginia. Nebraska, 6-1, moved from seventh to fifth after defeating No. 10 Oklahoma State 62-42. West Virginia, 6-0, was idle and remained No. 6.

"This is unbelievable," said Wayne Hogan, sports information director at Florida State. "We've won six straight ball games. ... West Virginia moves in front of us and they didn't play."

AP college football editor Herschel Nissenson, who conducts the weekly poll, said one of the 60 sports writers and sportscasters who vote failed to list Florida State in the Top Twenty.

The voter, not identified under poll guidelines, said he probably would have voted the Seminoles seventh, enough to keep them No. 5 in the final tabulation.

"It was an oversight on the part of the voter and an oversight on our part for not double-checking," AP Sports Editor Darrell Christian said Tuesday. "We try to ensure it's as honest, of course, and as accurate as such an unscientific survey can be."

The Seminoles have rolled up six straight wins after losing 31-0 at Miami in their season opener.

"We haven't been impressive the last three weeks, but I was surprised we dropped two places after winning," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said Tuesday during his weekly telephone conference call with reporters.

"If the reason we dropped is that somebody didn't vote us in the Top Twenty, I'd think that would take care of itself if it is corrected."

Christian said this week's poll will stand, adding, "It's unfortunate, but it probably will rectify itself next week."

Hogan said, however, that the error could perpetuate itself because voters often work off the previous week's poll table. Once listed as No. 7, the Seminoles are likely to remain No.

Astros ink All-America pick

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have signed two-time All-America pick Dave Silvestri, the club's second-round choice in the June draft.

Silvestri, 21, from the University of Missouri, was Houston's third pick overall and its second selection in the second round.

He has reported to the Astros' instructional league camp in Kissimmee, Fla., and will work with that club through the end of October, team spokesman Chuck Pool said Wednesday.

The 6-foot, 175-pound native of St. Louis hit .409 at Missouri in 1988 with a school-record 21 homers and 79 RBI. His career average with the Tigers is .379 with 35 homers and 199 RBI in 180 games.

Silvestri was named first-team All-America in 1987 and 1988 and All-Big Eight Conference in 1988. He was a member of the Pan American Games' team in 1987.

Silvestri's signing was delayed by his participation on the U.S. Olympic baseball team, which claimed a gold medal in Seoul, South Korea last month. He batted .285 with the Olympic team with two homers and 23 RBI.

Texas returns more than 1,000 tickets

Longhorn fans have just said "No" to Lubbock.

The University of Texas has returned 1,300 of 6,500 tickets allotted to the school for the Tech-Texas game Oct. 29 in Jones Stadium, according to the Texas Tech ticket office.

The unsold tickets are located near the 10-yard line on the east side of the stadium.

Netters to play at ITCA meet

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will compete in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association regional qualifying tournament today through Sunday at the University of Texas at Austin.

Winners of the tournament will qualify for the national ITCA tournament this spring. Tech coach Mickey Bowes will take eight singles players and four doubles teams. The event will witness 128 singles players and 64 doubles teams from throughout the Southwest region, which includes such nationally ranked powers as Texas, Trinity, SMU and TCU.

Raiders Amy Ryan, Rebeca Nevarez, Karen Biggerstaff, Barbara Fitterer, Jamie McCaffery, Tanya Hamilton, Samantha Issac and Mallory Grantham will make up the singles lineup.

Howell hurls battered Dodgers to 3-1 lead

By The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Reliever Jay Howell got even by getting Mark McGwire with the bases loaded in the seventh inning Wednesday night, preserving the Los Angeles Dodgers' 4-3 victory over the Oakland Athletics and moving them within one game of the World Series championship.

The crippled Dodgers will try to win their sixth title and first since 1981 when ace Orel Hershiser faces Storm Davis in Game 5 tonight. Of the 35 teams that took a 3-1 lead in the Series, 30 went on to win.

Howell, victimized by McGwire's game-winning home run in the ninth inning a night earlier, got revenge this time. He relieved starter Tim Lincecum with two outs in the seventh ahead 4-3, but a walk and error loaded the bases.

McGwire, just 1-for-13 in the Series, swung at a first-pitch fastball and popped it straight up to first baseman Tracy Woodson. Howell finished for a save in the same ballpark where fans constantly booed him last year when he pitched for the A's.

He ended it by striking out A's home run king Jose Canseco on a 3-2 pitch with the tying run on first and getting Dave Parker on a foul pop to third.

The Dodgers ended a streak of 13 consecutive victories by the home team in the World Series. They did it the hard way, with top hitters Kirk Gibson and Mike Marshall unable to start because of injuries and catcher Mike Scioscia forced to leave with a twisted right knee in the fourth inning.

Belcher, just the third pitcher to start in the Series on his birthday — he turned 27 — went 6½ innings and allowed three runs, two of them earned, on seven hits.

Dave Stewart, the two-time 20-game winner, took the loss. He gave up four runs, only two earned, in 6½ innings.

Dave Henderson, who had four of Oakland's nine hits, doubled home Walt Weiss, who singled, in the seventh. That finished Belcher, and Howell walked Canseco on five pitches before usually reliable shortstop Alfredo Griffin dropped a liner by

The Dodgers' injury problems continued when catcher Mike Scioscia twisted his right knee on an unsuccessful steal try in the fourth inning and limped off the field and into the dugout. He might be able to play in Game 5, but the team said Scioscia would be in pain.

Rick Dempsey, the only other catcher on the Los Angeles roster, replaced Scioscia. All-purpose Mickey Hatcher would have been next in line if Dempsey had been hurt. Steve Sax drew a walk to start the game and took third on Hatcher's perfect hit-and-run single. Sax scored when a pitch skipped off catcher Terry Steinbach's mitt for a passed ball.

Next, it was sure-handed second baseman Glenn Hubbard's turn to miff. He bobbled a routine grounder by Mike Davis — forced into the cleanup spot by injuries to Gibson and Marshall — that sent Hatcher to third. Another run scored when John Shelby's line drive skipped off Stewart's glove and went for an RBI groundout.

Manager's decisions magnified in Series

By The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — In the World Series everything is magnified.

Hitting slumps. Pressure pitches. And maybe most of all, manager's moves.

Tom Lasorda and Tony La Russa each have gotten credit and criticism through Game 4 Wednesday night.

La Russa, one of five lawyer-managers in baseball history, is cool and efficient. He plays the percentages, only once in a while going with a hunch.

"I won't ask a player to do something he can't do," La Russa said. "That usually doesn't work out well."

With the score tied in Game 3, slow-footed Ron Hassey led off the eighth inning with a walk. Walt Weiss, the ninth-place hitter and good with the bat, was next up and most everyone, including the Dodgers, expected a sacrifice bunt. Instead, La Russa let Weiss swing away, and he flied out.

"In Hassey's case, he can't run," La Russa said. "I tried not to put him in a position where he had to run."

The Athletics went on to win 2-1 on Mark McGwire's solo home run in the ninth inning off Jay Howell.

In Game 1, Dave Stewart took a one-run lead into the ninth. La Russa brought in Dennis Eckersley to start the inning and later with the tying run on second base, the Athletics passed up an intentional walk and pitched to Kirk Gibson, who won the game with a two-run homer.

"There was a good hitter on deck (Steve Sax) and I thought our best chance was to go after Gibson," La Russa said.

Lasorda got another opportunity to use Gibson in Game 3. The score was tied 1-1 when the Dodgers loaded the bases with no outs. Scheduled to bat were Mike Scioscia, Jeff Hamilton and Alfredo Griffin, the bottom part of the lineup.

"It was either Scioscia or Rick Dempsey and I thought at the time with no outs that maybe Mike could get a hit," Lasorda explained.

La Russa, sticking by the book, brought right-hander Gene Nelson to face the right-handed Hamilton. The left-handed Gibson, again unable to start because of hamstring and ligament damage, was ready to pinch hit.

"I thought about it, but I didn't want to use him in the sixth inning and be caught short in the end. I would be using three players in that one position," Lasorda said. "I thought that the guy that I had coming up could do the job."

He didn't. Hamilton grounded into a force play at the plate and Griffin grounded out to end the inning.

Sweeney an injury away from directing Cowboys

By The Associated Press

IRVING — Kevin "Too Short" Sweeney's first shot in a regular season non-strike NFL game will come the next time Steve Pelluer doesn't learn how to slide.

Sweeney is just a concussion away from the controls of the Dallas Cowboys.

"Kevin may get in there pretty quick if Pelluer doesn't learn how to slide," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "Kevin would make things interesting. The players all like him."

Pelluer suffered a concussion on the third play of a 17-7 loss to the Chicago Bears on Sunday and spent the rest of the game relearning his name on the sidelines while Danny White played.

White suffered ligament damage to his knee which will keep him out of action at least a month. Sweeney was promoted to second string.

Pelluer has been knocked out of three games this year, one in preseason, with concussions.

Sweeney was the hero of the replacement games for the Cowboys last year. He started and won two games for the "rhinestone" Cowboys, hitting 14 of 28 passes for 291 yards and four touchdowns.

But Sweeney has a label of being too short and hasn't worked his way into a game this year.

"I've fought that tag all my career, including when I was at Fresno State," said Sweeney, who set numerous NCAA passing records for the Bulldogs.

Landry said Sweeney does have attributes to offset his stature.

"He is a winner and a leader and he could be a starter," Landry said. "He has some awful good qualities which we saw in the replacement games."

"He can really throw the football. It's a matter of whether he is strong enough to hold up under the punishment."
