Cavazos returns

U.S. Secretary of Education and former Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos will speak today at a physics meeting sponsored by the Tech physics department.

Also at the meeting, three Nobel Prize winners will participate in a symposium on "Frontiers of Physics."

The purpose of the meeting is to get people acquainted with what's going on in the frontiers of physics research, said Tech physics professor M.A.K. Lodhi.

Madrigal Dinner

The 12th Annual Madrigal Dinner will feature the feast of boar's head, figgy pudding and more, bringing the spirit of the 16th century to the Texas Tech University Center ballroom beginning Dec. 1.

Singers as well as other entertainers will be in appropriate costume of the 16th century to add authenticity to the event, said Gail Littleton, Madrigal Dinner publicity director.

Additional dinners will be Dec. 3-6, with each beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Millions spent on campaign-closing ads

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis asserted Thursday that voters by the millions are giving his underdog campaign "a very strong second look" in his favor. "His administration has cut deals with foreign drug runners. I'm going to cut aid" to their nations, said the Democratic nominee.

George Bush said Democrats were "grossly unfair" to say his advertising is tinged with racism.

"You're looking at a man who was out front for civil rights, and I will be again," the vice president said in a network television interview. He defended running mate Dan Quayle on the same score and said any political wounds will heal quickly after the election.

Dukakis combined an attack on the Reagan-Bush administration's record on drugs with ritual declarations that the political tide is turning in his favor. "His administration has cut deals with foreign drug runners. I'm going to cut aid" to their nations, said the Democratic nominee.

Most of the national attention was on the White House campaign, but not all.

Democrats were expressing confidence they will control both houses of the new Congress, although Republicans said they have a chance of picking up a seat or two in the Senate. A dozen gubernatorial contests dotted ballots being printed for Tuesday's Election Day.

The public opinion polls in the White House campaign continued to provide encouragement for Bush.

Dukakis was trying desperately to reverse poll deficits in several large Electoral College battlegrounds at once. He ventured unexpectedly into New Jersey, crooning a la Bruce Springsteen, "I was born to run and born to win." But Bush, Reagan, Quayle and Co. were pouring it on in Ohio, where private polls continued to show a solid Republican edge.

ABC said its survey of North Carolina — once Dukakis' strongest hope for a Southern success — gave the vice president an 11-point edge. Dukakis has a four-point margin in a New York survey.

Bush and Dukakis were spending millions on campaign-closing television and radio commercials, and both the Democratic and Republican parties previewed a spate of advertisements designed to maximize party support.

Dukakis had an ad featuring one of the most memorable television moments of the campaign, with Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen turning to Quayle during their debate and saying, "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

Republicans countered with the Great Communicator.

"America is at peace, and we are prosperous once more. ... On Tuesday, I hope you will vote Republican — up and down the ticket — to continue the change we began in 1981," said President Reagan in a 30-second GOP television commercial.

Bush and Dukakis both were on morning television programs while embarking on another dawn-to-dusk dash through key battleground states.

In a live 30-minute interview on NBC's "Today" show and later at campaign appearances in Illinois and elsewhere, Bush said any political wounds would heal in the weeks after the election. "I think the country will come together," he said. The vice president also renewed his no-new-taxes pledge.

Campus political organizations debate parties' stance

By GUY LAWRENCE

The University Daily

Texas Tech students gathered Thursday night in the University Center to hear collegiate chapters of the Democratic and Republican parties defend party platforms in front of more than 150 students and spectators.

The College Republicans and the Young Democrats clashed in the UC Coronado Room over opposing perspectives on national issues.

The event was co-sponsored by the University Programs ideas and issues committee, the Forensics Union, Pi Sigma Alpha and the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

A panel composed of KCBD-TV news anchor Abner Euresi, GBDys Maynard, president of the League of Women Voters, and University Daily News Editor Cindy Pandolfo posed questions to each group.

The panel asked questions covering issues such as the prospects of nuclear war, ethics in government, health care and deficits.

In opening remarks, the Democratic representative stressed education and job training while the Republican representative emphasized economic promise and defense of freedom around the world.

Although designed to be issue-oriented and informative, the event turned into a pep rally with continuous applause and Democratic placard waving.

The format also called for an exchange of questions, but Democratic representatives claimed no knowledge of the format and took issue with a request to question their Republican opponents.

As the audience shot questions at the debaters, the Democrats defended Michael Dukakis' stand on national defense, emphasizing the candidate's preference for strong conventional forces as a viable alternative to escalating the nuclear arms race.

Republicans stated that Bush would continue to pursue nuclear arms reduction with the Soviet Union without leaving American forces vulnerable.

In response to questions about universal health care, the Democrats proposed legislation that would require businesses to provide health care insurance for employees.

The Republicans responded that all Americans would be affected by such legislation through increased market prices that businesses would pass to consumers. A Republican administration would encourage families to begin saving for health insurance early.

When questions about the national deficit were raised, finger-pointing between the debaters continued with each faction blaming the other for the huge national deficit.

A Republican representative illustrated the growth of the deficit by comparing past deficits to a postage stamp.

While Democrats attempted to defend the integrity of their candidate's ethics, Republicans pointed to what they called corruption within Dukakis' state administration.

The Republicans seized the final opportunity by asking the audience to stand and join in the Pledge of Allegiance as a finale to closing arguments.

Senators suggest selling condoms on Tech campus

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

Legislation to support installing condom machines on campus was introduced at the Texas Tech Student Senate meeting Thursday and was sent to the student services committee to be researched.

Senators Kendra McKenzie and Rodney Markham, co-authors of the legislation, said the resolution was drafted because of AIDS.

"I believe the university is doing a good job of sex education, and if we're going to tell students to practice safe sex, we've got to provide them with the means to have safe sex," Markham said.

McKenzie and Markham said they want to work with the administration on this issue.

"I think we're a traditionally conservative campus, but I think this is a smart move," McKenzie said.

"Texas Tech is a member of the American Association of University Students, and we're talking to other universities through this organization," he said.

Markham recommended the condom machines be installed in both men's and women's residence halls and the University Center.

The condom machine revenue would not be for profit, he said; the machines would be contracted just like the soft drink machines on campus.

"The Student Senate is not endorsing the use of condoms; we're studying the policy," Markham said.

Republican signs stolen

The Democrats are not alone among the victims of stolen political signs, said Kevin Brinkley, a Texas Tech graduate student and a volunteer at the Republican headquarters in Lubbock.

"They're not the only ones being victimized," he said. "We're not crying about it; we just go out and put up another sign."

Brinkley said both Republican and Democratic signs have been stolen from Lubbock residents' yards. He said some of the signs he put in Bush supporters' yards have been stolen several times.

"The same thing has been happening to Republicans all over town," he said. "I put out the signs, then go back and check and they're gone."

Brinkley said the disappearance of political signs is nothing new around election time.

Brinkley said the signs probably are being stolen by individuals, not groups from either party, who do not like seeing a rival candidate's sign in a good location.

Brinkley said the Democrats are silly to think the Republicans have a group to go around town stealing signs.

U.S. depends on addiction, director says

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Editor

With a history steeped in alcoholism and drug abuse and with statistics suggesting a national crisis, Americans should not be surprised to learn that the United States could not survive economically without an addicted society, says the director of an alcohol treatment center.

"Addiction is big business. The country couldn't survive," said Gene Robison, director of Specialized Treatment for Alcohol Recovery (STAR) of West Texas. "We would go bankrupt. There is no way out."

The Texas Commission on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse has identified more than 11,000 jobs in the state that are related to alcohol and drug abuse.

It is estimated that 80 percent of young people in America will be directly affected by addictive disorders in themselves, their parents, siblings, spouses or children.

Of even more concern is the cost of treating addiction, Robison said.

"What is scariest," he said, "is the number of people who turn up in treatment."

A 45-day stay in a typical alcohol or drug treatment program costs an average of $16,000 to $30,000, he said. Robison asked how many average Americans can afford the cost.

Americans defended the industry, however, by stressing the necessity of treatment programs to the survival of the nation.

"The criterion used to determine success varies from program to program," he said. "But the programs do work."

Statistics indicate that 3 to 5 percent of the people who enter abuse do not recover. One of 35 gets sober, Robison said, and the rest die or go insane.

"The numbers and figures are not good," he said.

New laws that require group insurance policies to cover alcohol and drug counseling will help therapists and counselors reach the ailing public, Robison said. But he said the industry also must help.

STAR is the only local treatment program that maintains free beds for patients who cannot afford to pay for services, Robison said.

Renee Coke, an executive on the Lubbock Council of Alcohol and Drug Abuse, said society also must help.

"We must learn to recognize hereditary factors and other signs that indicate that alcohol is a problem," she said. "And before we can expect our kids to get clean, mom and dad need to practice what they preach."

Students need to become aware of the dangers that increased consumption poses to physical safety, Robison said. "They are not invincible," he said.

More than 95,000 Americans die annually from alcohol or alcohol-related problems. A breakdown of statistics indicates that more than 30,000 people die annually from cirrhosis of the liver. An additional 5,000 perish from alcoholic psychosis. Accidents, homicides and suicides related to alcohol claim more than 60,000 lives

Accidental death rates provided by the National Council of Alcoholism indicate that alcohol is the cause of 80 percent of all fire deaths and that 65 percent of all drowning victims had been drinking.

Alcohol is a factor in 70 percent of all fatal falls, and 40 percent of all fatal industrial accidents involved alcohol.

The most sobering statistics are those involving drunk driving and traffic fatalities. Drinking and driving claims more than 50 percent of all accident-related fatalities in the nation each year.

Last days before election can bring out worst

Scott Brumley
Editor

Deja vu strikes at the oddest times, and the last few days before the election — it's next week for those who have spent the better part of their time in a cave or have chosen to ignore the media hype surrounding the quadriennial spectacle — certainly qualify as an odd time.

Events of this week have awakened the spectre of elections past, or at least have proven quirky or irritating enough to prompt observers to sneer, "This is just like any other (choose your own expletive) election."

In a series of races dominated by image-related concerns — the old one-good-slander-deserves-two-others game — perhaps some value might be found in harkening back to a past event to put the current election in perspective.

On the international scene, specifically, just before the 1980 election, then-President Jimmy Carter faced a Middle Eastern quandary. The problem was the 52 American hostages held in Iran by a nation fully in the throes of an emotional, zealous religious revolution.

The stakes were high: the election itself loomed as the prize to be won or lost. Republican candidate Ronald Reagan was breathing down Carter's neck, giving the American people the impression that he was the man to get something done about this problem via the John Wayne approach to diplomacy. "Let's kick some butt if those kooks won't give us back what belongs to us," as the Duke (you know, the most prominent one before this campaign began) might say.

Carter managed to diplomatically persuade the Iranians to let the captivity-weary Americans come home, but folks back home in the States thought more could have been done, and it could have been done much sooner, to free the hostages.

End result: Carter was turned out of office in what Reagan termed a "mandate."

Reagan faces a similar muddle, characterized by the release Sunday of a videotape showing Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson, held hostage in Lebanon for more than four years, criticizing the Reagan administration for blocking release of other Americans held captive in Lebanon.

Reagan faces renewed scrutiny on the Middle Eastern problem on the eve of the election — an election in which he seeks to provide the impetus for number two man George Bush to take over the reins for at least four more years of Republican executive control.

Barring a miracle, the hostages will not be freed before the election Tuesday. Any influence Anderson's taped message and the hostage situation in general might have at the polls remains to be seen, but the past is a dangerous thing to forget in politics.

Nationally, Bush and Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis continued hammering away at each other through the gracious provision of prime news time on the networks and page one space in newspapers across the country.

Little can be said at this point about the election that already has not been said. Many Americans are dissatisfied with both candidates, but at this stage of the game such dissatisfaction fails to change the fact that Dukakis or Bush will be the next president of the United States.

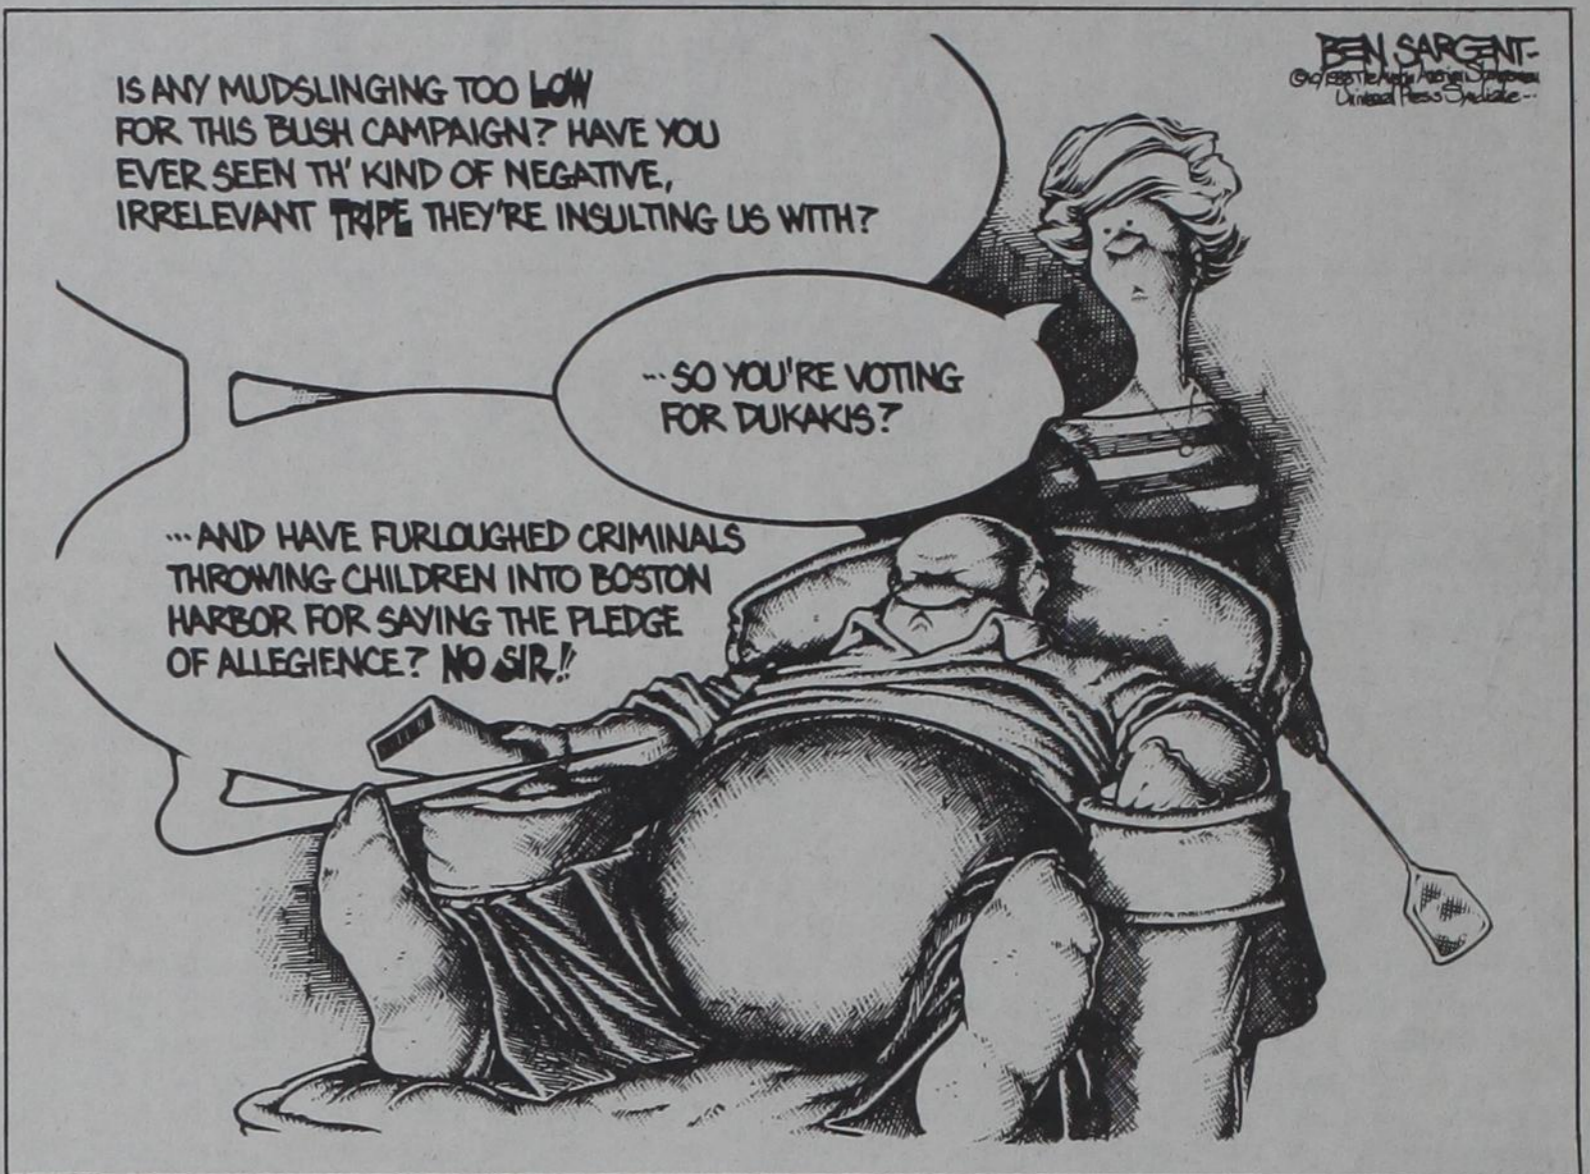

If Americans are bored with the campaign itself, perhaps an area of interest worth watching will be the influence at the polls of events such as the Lebanese hostage crisis and release of government figures indicating that the United States slipped further into debt.

Locally, Democrats and Republicans have swapped charges that the opposing party has been stealing or replacing their campaign signs in yards and along streets.

Whether members of either party are guilty of such vandalism is irrelevant. The fact that a campaign to decide on the future government of the city, state and nation could degenerate into such a juvenile endeavor is nauseating.

Officials of both parties are right to denounce all political vandalism. Now, if they can only come up with something effective to do about it...

Regardless of any other factors, the election — like the show — must go on. And go on it will on Tuesday.

The Party Lines

This Week's Topic: Discuss your party's stand on crime.

Democrats

Throughout this campaign, the Republicans have charged Michael Dukakis with being soft on crime. But behind all the Republicans lies is the truth about Dukakis and crime. Dukakis' record proves he is a tough, effective crime-fighter.

Under Michael Dukakis' leadership, crime in Massachusetts has dropped dramatically. Massachusetts experienced a 13.4 percent decline in the crime rate while the nation as a whole experienced an increase of 4 percent. Massachusetts has the lowest homicide rate of any industrial state, a rate that is 50 percent below the national rate.

A task force, created by Dukakis, designed to target and track career and violent criminals as well as offenders identified as a serious threat to the community, is largely responsible for this substantial drop in crime in Massachusetts. The Violent Fugitive Arrest Squad, implemented in 1985, is the only such program in the nation and has successfully tracked down and arrested more than 600 felons.

To swiftly and effectively deal with crime, Dukakis increased the number of state police in Massachusetts to record levels, an increase of 20 percent since 1983.

By waging a real war on drugs in Massachusetts, Dukakis has seen to it that five times more drug offenders were sentenced to state prison in the past four years. Drug use among high school students in Massachusetts is declining twice as fast as the national average.

Young Democrats

EDITOR'S NOTE: The above responses are the fourth in a weekly forum that has allowed representatives of each of the Texas Tech political party organizations to discuss their parties' stands on the major issues involved in the 1988 presidential campaign. The forum is being presented until the November general election. The views expressed in the responses are not necessarily those of The University Daily.

Republicans

During the past eight years, the Reagan administration has shown a true commitment to reducing crime on our streets and in our homes. With George Bush as its leader, the Republican Party is ready to continue fighting crime.

The first objective in fighting crime is to sentence felons to stiffer jail terms. We also believe that the death penalty is very important in winning the war on crime. The burden of crime in our cities should rest with the criminal and not with the law-abiding citizen. Under a Republican administration, the goal is to punish the criminal and not the citizen.

Another objective of the Republican Party is to win the war on drugs. Those who give drugs to our children will be dealt with by stiff punishments and rehabilitation. However, after a third conviction the criminal will be sentenced to life in jail.

The Republican Party believes that, in order to reduce crime effectively, it must be done on the local level. The Republican Party stands tall against the felonies and drug pushers of this country, and we urge you to join us.

College Republicans

Libertarians

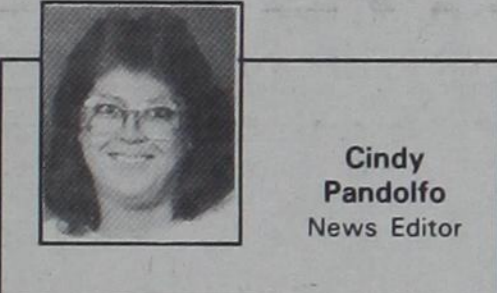

America has a larger percentage of its population behind bars than any nation on earth, including the Soviet Union. Crime is a real problem here, but much of our problem is really one of definition. Libertarians believe that you only have crime when it's possible to point to a victim — a real victim. Society cannot be a victim, because society doesn't suffer; only individuals suffer. It also is ridiculous to believe that you can be a victim of yourself.

State intervention is necessary only when one individual uses or threatens to use force or violence against another person or their property. It also is necessary to enforce contracts and punish misrepresentation and fraud. From this perspective it is easy to see why Libertarians do not view gambling, prostitution, any form of consensual sex between adults, use of alcohol by adults between the ages of 18 and 21 or the use, production, distribution or sale of drugs as crimes.

While politicians clamor for more and bigger prisons, law enforcement for larger and larger budgets, all at public expense, the drug problem grows and grows, we lose our freedoms in the name of creating a "drug free" society and underworld figures grow incredibly rich. Let's get rid of drug profits, let's get drugs out of our schools, let's keep real criminals in jail, let's restore our civil liberties and our rights of privacy, let's repeal drug laws.

Nuclear plants ruining health; government officials responsible

Cindy Pandolfo
News Editor

Americans have blindly traded a fairytale land for a nuclear wasteland.

The locations are numerous, but the horror stories are the same as people who live near nuclear waste sites battle contaminated environments.

Hamilton, Ohio, was a fairytale community where parents raised children on the land owned by fathers and grandfathers before them. Life was good in Hamilton until the Fernald Nuclear Plant opened.

Hamilton's townspeople have become the victims of nuclear waste dumped in the city by the government — waste the government claimed was safe.

The Zenser family, who live three blocks from the Fernald Plant, question the safety of the plant like most of members of the community. The couple's two sons both developed forms of cancer — one cancer of the bone and the other leukemia.

The nightmares — children who have unexplained skin diseases, cancer, loss of hair and weight loss — deal only with health issues. Efforts of terrified townspeople to escape the danger they believe pervades the town are stifled by the inability to dispose of real estate.

Banks in Hamilton refuse to buy homes located in close proximity to the plant. Those homeowners who can sell do so at a loss.

Even though the plant is not safe, production cannot be shut down without further endangering the lives of the people in the town. Processes must continue or the containers that hold radioactive material will rust and release the contents into the air and ground.

Although U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, addressed the issue of nuclear waste on a recent Phil Donohue Show, Glenn and other members of the Senate Armed Services Committee must stop hiding behind a veil of secrecy.

Glenn admitted on national television that "we (the government) know what to do with some waste. And some, we don't know what to do with."

The Department of Energy estimates that $150 billion to $175 billion is needed to clean up nuclear facilities in the United States. Even if the money was available today, Glenn said, the cleanup will take 20 to 30 years to complete.

Countless numbers of people will die before the problems of nuclear waste are corrected, yet the nation's leaders and legislators ask the American people to trust government to remedy the problem. How can lawmakers earn our trust?

Government — of the people — refuses to answer to the people. Government — by the people — hides the truth from the people.

Nuclear waste is a national scandal. Americans should demand a congressional investigation of nuclear plants, and someone must be held accountable.

an angel as he yelled at the officials to change the call and seemed to be having a conference with them, all on regional television!

It would appear to the objective reader that Brad Walker has a vendetta against Jack Pardee and the entire University of Houston. Did they refuse him admission? Did Jack Pardee refuse him an interview or call him a wimp? Or is the sports editor trying to raise support at Tech for the Arkansas Razorbacks?

Must I remind Mr. Walker that we do have a football team here at Tech called the Red Raiders, and while they might not be headed for the Cotton Bowl this year, they deserve his support and loyalty — not his grandstanding attitude toward the Hogs. On the topic of loyalty, I would much rather see a team in my home state win over one from another state. Does he consider himself a Texan or what? If he does not, I'm sure Arkansas has a place for him.

Most of Brad Walker's other weak remarks in the article deserved no response, only pity for his poor journalism. One statement was an uncalculated swipe against the city of Houston, and I speak for many not even from there who are offended. Mr. Walker appears to dislike Jack Pardee so much that he must curse everything related to Pardee, including the city of Houston. So the next time Gerald Myers grows upset at a basketball game, will Brad accuse Lubbock of being a hell hole in which to live? I'm sure the people of Houston would find it surprising that he called their abode, "the filthiest city in the state" and suggested it has no class, especially when those people made it the fourth largest city in the nation and the energy capital of the world. If Houston is filthy, I would hate to see a "clean" town in Arkansas or whatever podunk place Brad Walker calls home.

Seeking Hebrew course

To the editor:

I have lived in Lubbock almost 10 years and have attended Texas Tech University some of that time. Throughout this time I have waited for the university to have the Hebrew course they have listed in their catalogue.

Am I hopelessly waiting for something that the university seems unable to have even though advertised in their catalogue?

Nonetheless, for lack of a higher educational medium, I would like to do something on my own. Therefore, would there be anyone interested in a "hebrew, self taught" get-together? If so, please let me know by writing me at 2220 16th St. (79401) or by calling me at 744-8866. This sort of method would not only be a way of solving this problem, but would also be free, except maybe for cost of materials.

Job well done by KTXT

To the editor:

I would like to send my appreciation for the great job Clive Kinghorn and his staff at KTXT 88.1 FM have done for Texas Tech and the South Plains. However, there are always people who have nothing better to do but put down something unique to this community, namely an "alternative" radio station other than the same old radio format we hear day in and day out in Lubbock. Public radio needs to be commended for the variety it has. Let's keep this station unique so we can have an alternative in the music, news and public radio announcements we can so benefit from. Again, my congratulations to all those who keep this fine station going. Keep up the good work!

Go back to Arkansas!

To the editor:

This is in response to Brad Walker's article in the Oct. 24 UD concerning the University of Houston-Arkansas football game week before last. First, tell me this guy isn't the sports editor of The UD. It's a joke, right? His article sure was — probably a lame attempt to fill up sports page space before the printing deadline. Normally, something like this should be placed on the Viewpoint page, but there was so much bull in this one that it stunk up the entire paper!

Walker's criticism of University of Houston Head Coach Jack Pardee was underhanded and overly harsh, to put it mildly. Pardee was upset with a call the officials took five minutes to reverse in favor of Arkansas. I have met Coach Pardee and can promise you he is not a second-rate coach. He may have let his emotions take over at a critical point in the ball game, but they were not completely unwarranted whether the five-minute call was correct or not. I suppose that when Gerald Myers or Spike Dykes becomes upset over a controversial call, Walker will be there to tell us what jerks they are! Boy, Arkansas head coach Ken Hatfield did look like

Physics conference to feature laureates

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos and three Nobel Prize winners will be keynote speakers at a physics meeting today and Saturday sponsored by the Texas Tech physics department at the Holiday Inn Civic Center.

The Nobel laureates will participate in a "Symposium on Frontiers of Physics" from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and Saturday.

Cavazos will present "Science Education: What Needs to Be Done," at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Petroleum Room of the Holiday Inn Civic Center.

Texas Tech physics professor M.A.K. Lodhi said the meeting, which has been in the planning stages for more than a year, never has been in Lubbock.

"The purpose of this meeting is to get people acquainted with what's going on in the frontiers of physics research," Lodhi said. "This is a forum for students and teachers at the high school and college level and industrial physicists."

The Nobel laureates received awards for studies ranging from medical technology to astronomy.

California Institute of Technology's William Fowler, 1983 Nobel Prize winner for theoretical studies of nucleosynthesis, will present the lecture, "Early Nucleosynthesis in an Inhomogeneous Universe."

Richard Wilson of AT&T Laboratories won the 1978 Nobel Prize for discovering cosmic background radiation. He will discuss interstellar molecular clouds.

Allan Cormack of Tufts University, who won the 1979 Nobel Prize for developing computerized axial tomography (CAT) scanning, will discuss early developments of CAT scanning.

Other speakers will include an engineer from the University of Miami and Cavazos, former Tech president.

Nejat Veziroglu, director of the Clean Energy Institute at the University of Miami, will discuss hydrogen energy systems.

Lodhi said a physics circus and workshops approved by the Texas Education Agency (TEA) for Advanced Academic Training (AAT) credit will be conducted. Topics will include nuclear, atomic, mathematical and semiconductor physics. Renewable energy and industrial physics also will be discussed.

"This is a chance for researchers to disseminate their knowledge to people and for physics teachers to incorporate this information into their classes," Lodhi said. "We could learn from each other."

Lodhi said neighboring states, California, New Jersey, New York, Nebraska and several foreign countries will be represented at the conference. About 400 people are expected to attend, he said.

The registration fee is $12. Meals and some workshops require additional fees.

Prizes will be given to the best high school and college students and teachers.

South Texas universities vote to merge with A&M

By The Associated Press

LAREDO — Directors of the University System of South Texas voted unanimously Thursday to make the system's schools in Laredo, Corpus Christi and Kingsville part of the Texas A&M University System.

Schools that make up the South Texas system are Laredo State, Corpus Christi State and Kingsville-based Texas A&I University.

"Now it's up to the Texas A&M University System board to say whether they are interested in our becoming a part of that system," said B. Alan Sugg, chancellor of the South Texas system and president of Corpus Christi State University.

The USST board also voted Thursday in support of establishing a law school at Kingsville. It was not decided, however, whether it favors starting a new law school or moving the unaccredited Reynaldo G. Garza Law School from Edinburg.

A&M's regents will vote whether they want to take over the three USST schools on Nov. 21, said A&M System Chancellor Perry Adkisson.

Adkisson said he thought the A&M regents would vote for the merger.

It then would be up to the state Legislature to decide whether to join the two systems.

Adkisson said A&M would like a greater presence in South Texas and in urban areas, such as Laredo and Corpus Christi. If approved, a merger could begin as early as next September, he added.

College Station-based A&M operates Texas A&M, Tarleton State University at Stephenville, Prairie View A&M and Texas A&M University at Galveston.

Sugg said A&M needed a vote of approval from the South Texas schools before deciding on the merger.

"From what Dr. Adkisson and the staff at the Texas A&M University System have indicated to us, we're pretty far along in terms of becoming a part of the Texas A&M System, even though it still would be up to that board and ultimately up to the Legislature," Sugg said.

According to a feasibility study the USST board approved Thursday, A&M would encourage and support development of more graduate and professional programs in South Texas.

As part of A&M, the South Texas schools would have access to the Higher Education Assistance Fund and the Permanent University Fund.

The South Texas board would be dissolved with a merger, and presidents of the South Texas schools would report to the A&M regents, according to the feasibility report.

University Daily receives top awards

The University Daily received three national awards Saturday at the Associated Collegiate Press/College Media Advisers Convention in Atlanta.

Ami Nutter, a former student advertising manager, received a first place award for Best Advertising Campaign. The UD staff received a second place National Editorial Leadership Award from the Los Angeles Times for a series on the mistreatment of Texas Tech's custodial employees, and Greg Humphries, a student publications photographer, received a third place All American Photographer Award in the Best News/Feature Photo category.

Tech names new engineering director

Elizabeth Denton Elias has been named director of engineering development for the Texas Tech University College of Engineering effective Nov. 1.

Elias' duties include program coordination, alumni contacts and development efforts for the college.

A Galveston native, Elias received a bachelor's degree in secondary education and a master's degree in speech communications from Tech. She also has served as manager of volunteer services for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Medicine. She has been involved with promotions in the Lubbock area for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Prof to visit Tech, give math lecture

Stephan Ruscheweyh, a professor at the University of Wurtzburg in Germany and the Federico Santa Maria Technical University in Chile, will be a distinguished visitor in the Texas Tech mathematics department Sunday through Wednesday.

Ruscheweyh will present two lectures while visiting the Tech campus. The first, "On the preservation of convex curves, with applications to univalent function theory" will be given at 4 p.m. Monday in 101 chemistry building. The second will be presented at 4 p.m. Wednesday in 101 chemistry building. The focus will be "Maximum range problems for polynomials."

Both lectures are open to the public.

Working For West Texas... For Our Future.

When we elected Larry Combest, he promised to support our conservative philosophy, to vote with us and be our voice in Congress. He's kept his word.

A Conservative Voice.

- Taxpayer Hall of Fame for voting to reduce taxes and government spending
- National Security Leadership Award for support of peace through a strong national defense.
- Golden Bulldog Award for exemplary record to cut federal spending, eliminate government waste and reduce the deficit.
- Guardian of Small Business Award in recognition of outstanding work on behalf of small business and entrepreneurship.

A Record of Hard Work.

- Sponsor, bills creating Plant Stress and Water Conservation Research Lab and Fish & Wildlife Research Unit at Texas Tech.
- Sponsor, bill to repeal new diesel fuel tax.
- A leader in the successful fight to revamp farm credit.
- Co-sponsor, Major Anti-drug Legislation.

For Jobs in Agriculture

"We can compete against any farmers in the world, but we should not be forced to compete with foreign governments. Farmers and producers have a right to be heard in the trade negotiations.

The 1985 Farm Bill continues to work for a majority of West Texas Producers. Soon, Congress will draft new farm legislation. It is more vital than ever that we get our fair shake from this bill."

For Jobs in Energy

"We must continue the fight for a comprehensive national energy policy to raise and stabilize energy prices. Recent repeal of the windfall profits tax is a first step in the right direction to remove tax disincentives and government regulation on the oil and gas industry."

For a Strong Economy

"We do not need to raise taxes to cut the deficit. Congress must learn to live within its means. I support a balanced budget amendment, the line item veto and a freeze on increased spending to eliminate the federal deficit."

For a Strong Defense

"We make progress for peace by negotiating from a position of strength. I support a strong national defense. This is the best and only way to promote democracy, peace and freedom."

Stealing Texas signs can mean trouble

Remember that street sign you took from your hometown that has your last name written on it? Or the sign telling travelers that they were entering your hometown?

Such signs can make great mementos to carry away to school. But while the signs commemorate your name or city, they also can spell trouble for you.

The Texas Tech Department of Police Services reminds students that Texas takes a dim view of the theft of state property. State property includes street and highway signs as well as warning devices (such as flashing signal lights affixed to barricades).

Tech students confiscate a number of signs each semester, Tech police said. Those students face possible criminal charges for being in possession of signs or warning devices.

Removal and/or possession of state signs is a misdemeanor and is punishable by a maximum fine of $200.

Removal, defacement, tampering or interfering with a warning device also is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $25 to $1,000 and imprisonment in the Lubbock County Jail for up to two years.

Students in possession of this type of property are encouraged to turn it in to the Tech police. Students guilty of the offense can surrender signs and devices voluntarily. Criminal charges will not be filed against those individuals who cooperate with the police.

Architectural problems

Specialist says West lags in wind research

By JEFF PARKER
The University Daily

An internationally recognized specialist this afternoon will discuss the wind problems faced by the design of today's larger, more narrow buildings in relationship to their respective environments.

Brian E. Lee of the Polytechnic Institute of Hong Kong will conduct a special seminar called "Wind In An Urban Environment" at 3:30 p.m. today in 205 civil and agricultural engineering building.

While focusing on Hong Kong, which boasts one of the most modern architectural environments in the world, Lee will explain what he sees when he walks through downtown Hong Kong. He said he looks at the problems specific designs would cause in a certain area and how those problems could be corrected.

Lee said the seminar will consist of a discussion and a slide presentation to demonstrate how Hong Kong is seen architecturally today.

Lee, originally from England, is asking for research dollars for Western countries to ensure more research in the wind engineering and construction management fields.

He said the Japanese continue to move forward in research while the West is lagging behind.

The United States, as well as Europe, must continue to explore new research for construction, Lee said. The Japanese built 20 wind tunnels for construction research compared with the United States and the United Kingdom, who have managed only one each. Japanese construction companies already are building 25 percent of all U.S. site contracts, and the Europeans are worried about the trend continuing overseas, Lee said.

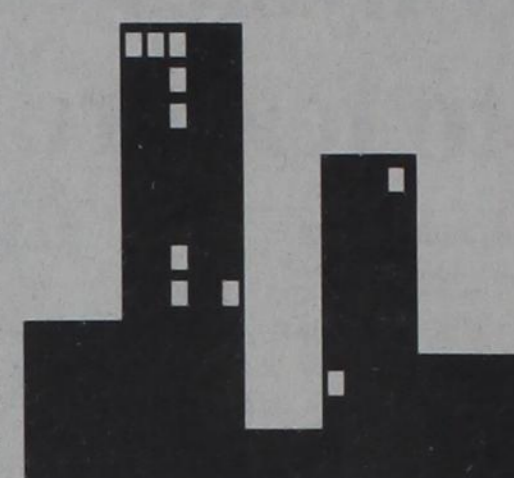

Lee said the U.S. research conducted on small or medium-sized buildings is being extrapolated to fit the needs of today's larger designs.

If the practice continues, Lee said, the country could experience repetition of the major economic disaster caused by Hurricane Alisha in 1983 by extensive damage to building windows in the downtown Houston area.

National wind engineering funding in the United States has been on the decline the last few years, which only hurts the American economy, he said. Japan is spending 10 to 20 times faster than the United States, Lee said.

Publicity, Lee said, is essential to the effort of keeping western construction western.

Change, according to Lee, is a factor that is constantly occurring, and to keep pace with the rest of the world, the West is faced with having to tackle today's problems with tomorrow's methods. Consequently, funding for research is essential to maintain close competition with the Far East.

Lee, whose work includes the study of human comfort in urban areas during high winds, was a visiting professor at Clemson University in South Carolina and has been on the faculty at Sheffield University in England.

Tech's physics department to sponsor fair, circus

By JEFF PARKER
The University Daily

Did you ever wonder if there was a beginning of the universe?

Texas Tech students will have a chance to answer many exciting, unusual questions at the department of physics, which will sponsor a physics fair and circus this weekend.

The events are sponsored in conjunction with the physics department's meeting of Nobel Prize winners at the Holiday Inn Civic Center this weekend.

The physics fair and circus are co-sponsored by the American Association of Physics Teachers, the American Physical Society and the Society of Physics Students.

U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos will be the guest speaker at a banquet at the Holiday Inn Civic Center at 6:30 p.m. today. The former Tech president will speak on "Science Education: What Needs to be Done."

The physics circus, which will be in the Tech science building, is designed to have quick-paced, visually oriented experiments based on physics principles.

Experiments include an exploration of the cosmic microwave background radiation — a direct indication of the Big Bang of the universe.

Demonstrations will explore the mystery of how a person can lie on a bed of nails without getting hurt.

Guests also will learn how lasers work and what happens to a rubber ball that is frozen to absolute zero temperature.

The physics circus is presented to show that physics can be fun, according to M.A.K. Lodhi, a Tech physics professor.

Madrigal tickets now available

By GABRIELLA MINOTTI
The University Daily

Ticket sales will begin Monday in the UC ticket booth for the 12th Annual Madrigal Dinner, a holiday event featuring a feast of boar's head, figgy pudding and more.

The dinners will bring the spirit of the 16th century to the Texas Tech University Center ballroom beginning Dec. 1.

"It is a traditional type of dinner that would have been served during the Middle Ages, decorated with banners of the great families of Europe," said Gail Littleton, publicity director for the event.

"There will be a boar's head, or roast of pork, and wassail, which is a traditional cider."

Candle-lit tables decorated with pine boughs will seat the honored guests of the king and queen, Littleton said.

The king greets his guests before the trumpet fanfares signal the beginning of the entertainment.

The singers, as well as the other entertainers, will be in appropriate costume of the 16th century to add authenticity to the event, Littleton said.

Littleton said the idea of the Madrigal Dinner was adopted at Tech 12 years ago by Claire Mackey, wife of then-Tech President Cecil Mackey.

Littleton said Mackey was a guest at a similar Madrigal Dinner at a college in Florida and brought the idea back to Tech.

The evening of entertainment begins at 6:30 p.m. and includes a performance by the Madrigal Singers. Their performance will be divided into two segments, one preceding the dinner, dealing with love, and one following, consisting of traditional carols.

Additional dinners will be Dec. 3-6,

Madrigal Singers perform

each beginning at 6:30 p.m.

The Madrigal Singers consist of a select group of Tech vocal students who audition to perform at the dinner. This year's chosen singers include sopranos Heidi Berta, Lori Marvel, Susan Meyer and Jean Reigles; altos Lyn Hester, Kelly Perko and Elizabeth White; tenors Clinton Barwick, Byron Norwood and Danny White; and basses Steven Martin, Brian McKinney and Mark Synek.

Donald Bailey, director of choral activities in Tech's music school, is the artistic and musical director for the annual dinner. Reigles and White, who will be singers for the event, also are the assistant musical directors. Both are music Ph.D. students working to obtain advanced conducting degrees.

Aside from the Madrigal Singers' performance, the evening also features harpsichordist Brent Williams, who will provide keyboard music. A recorder consort, minstrels, magicians, jugglers, jesters and other 16th century forms of entertainment also will be present.

Littleton said because the dinner is a sellout every year, the three-night event has been extended to five nights. Littleton said she still expects a sellout despite the two extra nights and urges people to buy tickets as soon as possible.

Tickets are available by calling the UC ticket office at 742-3621 or at the ticket office beginning Monday. Mail order ticket sales also are being accepted. To get a ticket order flier, call the UC ticket office.

Tickets prices are $11 for Tech students, $15 for the general public and $30 for scholarship seats. The scholarship seats include a direct donation to the music school's vocal scholarship fund, which receives all profits from the Madrigal Dinner.

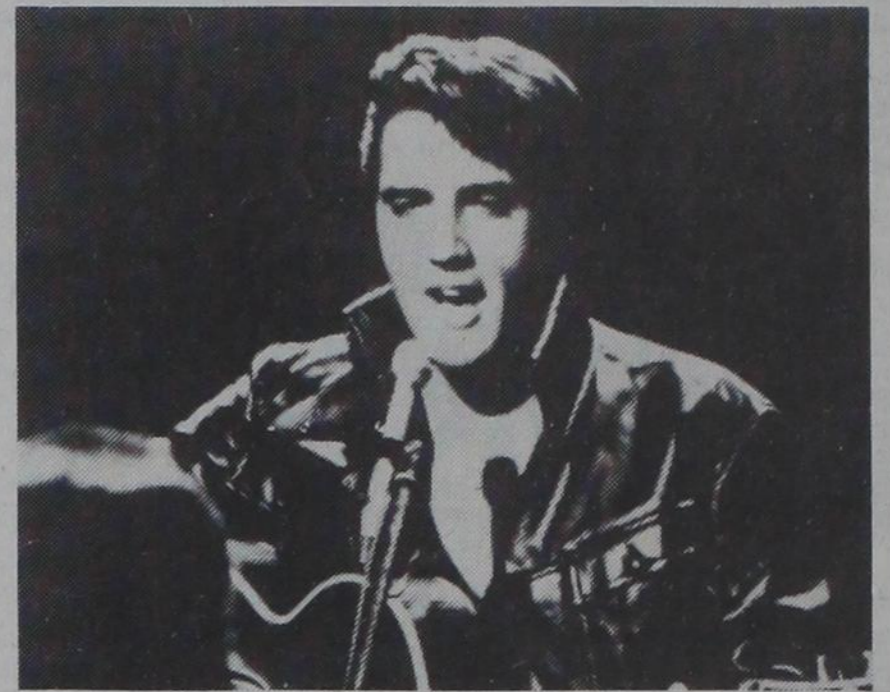

Elvis may live, but not in today's UD

Due to a plethora of Elvis stories received this week (honks and scads, even), the King stories are not running today.

Yes, Elvis lives, but not on the pages of today's UD. Next week, a whole page has been reserved for your sightings of Elvis.

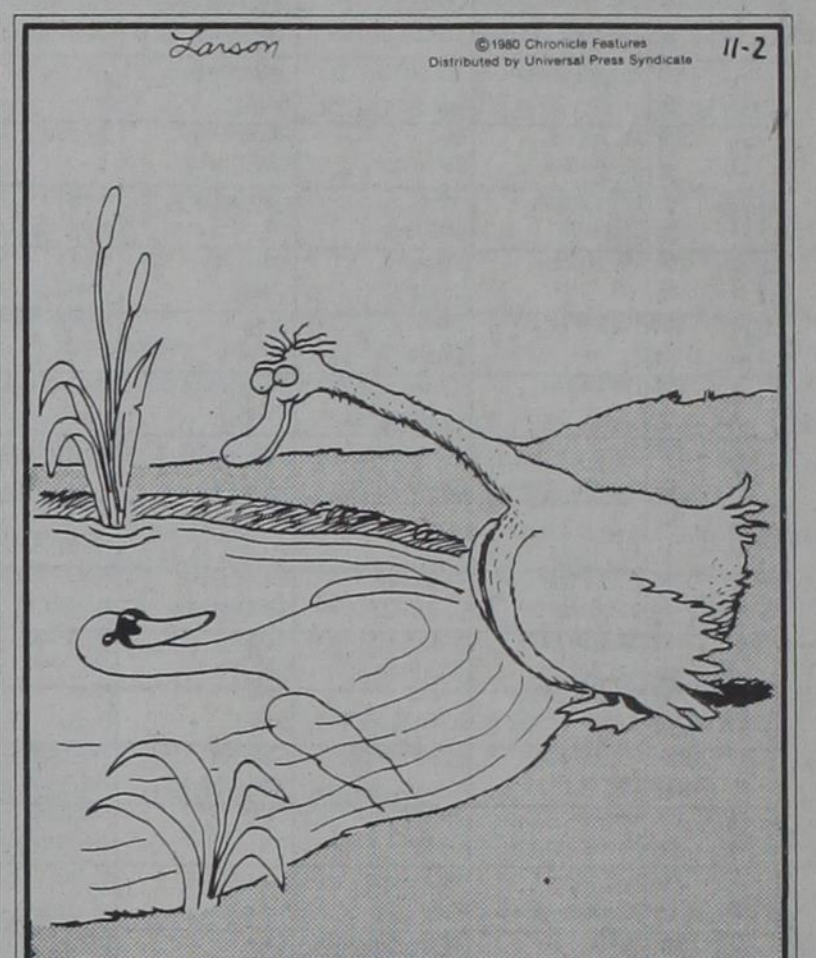

That's right, one whole page of Elvis. Elvis singing, Elvis dancing, Elvis washing dishes with Debbie Gibson, Elvis the security guard. Curious yet?

Tune in to The UD next week for the lowdown on the King in the Hub City.

Lady linksters to finish fall

The Texas Tech women's golf team will complete its 1988 fall schedule Saturday through Monday in Lamar University's 9th Annual Lady Cardinal Invitational in Wildwood.

The team will compete in a College-Am on Saturday with the 54-hole tournament set for 8:30 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday at the Wildwood Golf Resort.

Michelle Hapack, whose 237 at Stanford last week was the Red Raiders' best individual score, will lead Tech alongside Amy McDougall. Also playing for Tech will be Laura Kleinmann, Neisy Rodriguez and Leslie Light.

Raiders enter double-match weekend

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team, 11-14 and 2-4 in the Southwest Conference, remains at home this weekend to battle Texas A&M today and Rice on Sunday. Both opponents have beaten the Red Raiders in earlier action this season.

The Raiders, riding a three-match winning streak, already avenged an earlier loss to Baylor on Oct. 25 at the Tech Student Recreation Center. But Tech coach Donna Martin said revenge will not be a prevailing thought today against the Lady Aggies.

"I think probably with Baylor, that was a real strong quality," she said. "Against A&M, I don't feel those emotions, I guess because I respect A&M. I would also have to believe A&M is a stronger team now than they were. It should be a competitive match."

If any of the Tech players are looking for revenge against the Lady Aggies, it would be "to set the record straight," Martin said.

Outside hitter Cheri Steensma provides the power in the A&M offense with 405 kills (a conference best) this year for a hitting percentage of .303.

Second half spurt gives Tech exhibition victory

In its first game of the season, the Texas Tech men's basketball team defeated Athletes in Action 87-79 in an exhibition contest Thursday night in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

After trailing by one at halftime, the Red Raiders, led by guard Sean Gay's 18 points, opened the second half with a 15-2 scoring run.

Gay's five-foot jump shot five minutes into the final half put Tech in front by 12 to take a 54-42 lead with 15:27 remaining.

"We got out of it what we wanted. I was pleased with our effort," Tech coach Gerald Myers said. "We needed some confidence. That's one thing we got out of this game."

AIA managed to cut the Tech lead to four points with 1:20 left in the contest, but a pair of Scott Whillock and J.D. Sanders one-and-one attempts fell true to close the scoring.

Myers said the Raiders played good ball-control offense in the game's final minutes. "I thought our guys handled it pretty well," he said.

Tech center Wes Lowe contributed 15 points.

Tech's top rebounder was senior forward Tracy White with 11.

Unbeaten at home, TCU welcomes Tech

By BRAD WALKER
Sports Editor

November woes could begin for loser

How long is a college football season? A Texas Tech football fan just might tell you it's a month too long.

The chilly winds of November recently have made the Red Raiders blue. Perhaps injuries ultimately take their toll, or all energy is exhausted after playing Texas. Whatever the reason, Tech owns a 5-17-3 record during the 1980s in regular season games after Texas.

The Raiders have corrected their November nosedive somewhat the past two years, going 3-1-1. However, the lone tie forced Tech out of last year's postseason bowl picture.

November begins Saturday for Tech when the Raiders visit Amon G. Carter Stadium to play the TCU Horned Frogs at 2 p.m. November also has been unkind to TCU. The Frogs' last November win also was its last over Tech — 27-16 in 1984.

Tech, 3-4 for the year and 3-2 in the Southwest Conference, is riding a two-game winning streak into the game. TCU stands 4-4 and 2-2, hoping to pull off consecutive wins over Tech, Texas and Texas A&M to grab a bowl bid.

Tech leads the series between the two schools 21-20-3, but TCU has won 15 of 23 games in Fort Worth.

The Frogs have won all four home games this season and await the Raiders for homecoming. Tech coach Spike Dykes, who won his first Tech road game ever Oct. 15 against Rice, knows of his team's road ills.

"We're not the best road team in the world," Dykes said earlier this week. "They (TCU) seem to be all-world at home, and that's where we have to play them."

Not all the odds are stacked against the Raiders, however.

Tech quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver will be making his fourth start against the Frogs. Tolliver has murdered TCU for 810 total yards, completing 50 of 96 passes for eight touchdowns and no interceptions. Tech has outscored TCU 135-56 in the last three meetings.

But while Tolliver has the offense clicking, the Tech defense has found itself in the lower ranks of the conference.

Tech opponents average gaining 438.7 yards per game — 253.1 on the ground and 185.6 through the air. The Raiders have had particular problems with the wishbone formation.

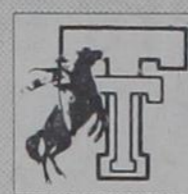

North Texas, Arizona, A&M and Arkansas accounted for each of Tech's losses by successfully running out of the 'bone. While TCU prefers the veer offense, it does use the 'bone.

Linebacker James Mosley and safety Donald Harris will try to contain the Frog backfield of quarterback David Rascoe and halfbacks Tony Darthard and Scott Ankrom. Mosley and Harris lead Tech tacklers with 105 and 100 stops.

Tolliver leads the SWC in total offense with 213 yards per game. His main target has been Tyrone Thurman, who has 32 receptions this fall. I-back James Gray is the league's fourth-best rusher at 84.6 yards a game.

The Raiders will start their fifth different offensive line Saturday. Left guard Chris Shafer's injury in the Texas game moves redshirt freshman Jason Duvall into the lineup.

'Green' 'Horns lose battle to Raiders

Curtis Matthews Sports Writer

For the majority of Saturday's Texas Tech/Texas game, it looked as if it was going to be a battle of the freshmen. A dubious contest to see which team's freshmen would fold first.

In the second and third quarters it looked like Texas quarterback Mark Murdock, a freshman, was having a field day teaming up with Tony Jones. Murdock completed 20 of 35 passes for 326 yards and Jones (5-7, 137) came up with some rather big plays on his way to six catches and 177 yards.

Jones went over and past freshmen cornerbacks Sammy Walker and Quinton Rhodes.

By the end of the 33-32 Tech win, the Texas freshmen proved to be the weak link for the Longhorns. Tech quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver wouldn't let the Raiders go down without a showdown, hitting home on eight of 12 passes for 107 yards in the final stanza. Both starting Texas cornerbacks were (and for a lack of depth still are) freshmen. Both backups also are first-year players.

Tech's last touchdown came when senior Eddy Anderson caught a 46-yard pass ahead of freshman Mark

Berry. Tolliver then found Travis Price in the corner of the end zone for the go-ahead points. Price beat a (you guessed it) freshman, Willie Mack Garza, for the game.

A Baylor coach had better go slap offensive tackle Dennis Smith before Saturday's game against the Hogs. Obviously he's been dozing as of late.

"Arkansas has a different type defense from what we've seen recently," Smith said last week to the Associated Press. "They look similar to Southwest Texas on the video as far as their formations go."

Granted, Smith did say Arkansas would be tougher than SWT, but to even compare the two teams in the same sentence is ludicrous. What on earth is Baylor doing watching SWT videos? Or do they still have visions of that 45-7 win in their heads?

If a SWT win still is on their minds, that must tell you something about the Bears' goals and attitudes this year. □ □ □

Maybe a few too many shots to the head by opposing linemen have left Rice cornerback William McClay a little giddy.

Earlier in the week, McClay had some rather high expectations for Saturday's game against No. 1 ranked Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

"I don't think they'll take us lightly, because they've seen the films and they're well coached," McClay spouted off to an AP reporter. "But I don't think they'll be prepared for what we'll bring up there."

Sorry, William, you're going to be in for its own castle.

TCU coach Jim Wacker remembers Tolliver.

"Billy Joe Tolliver! He has flat murdered us for three years in a row," Wacker said.

Rice, Notre Dame put streaks on line

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Here are previews of college football games of Nov. 5 involving Southwest Conference teams:

RICE at NOTRE DAME
11 a.m., WGN-TV (CA Ch-21)
Rice faces the Fighting Irish for the fourth time in history as Notre Dame seeks to increase a 3-0 series lead. Rice, which has lost a nation-leading 14 consecutive games, will be going against the No. 1-rated Irish, who have won eight straight.

Irish defensemen may spend the afternoon chasing elusive Rice quarterback Quentis Roper, who is third in the SWC with 1,218 yards of total offense and who owns 84-of-153 passing statistics for 990 yards and five TDs.

Notre Dame is among the national leaders in rushing defense and uses option quarterback Tony Rice for big gainers.

HOUSTON at TEXAS
Noon, Raycom (KJAA-TV 34)
The Longhorns seek to avenge a 60-40 loss to the Cougars at the Astrodome last year as the teams meet for the 15th time since 1953.

UT also hopes to remain in the thick of the 1988 SWC race with a triumph over the run-and-shoot Cougars.

As many as five quarterbacks could see action for the two teams as coaching staffs search for quick scoring opportunities.

ARKANSAS at BAYLOR
Baylor tries to play the role of spoiler against the Cotton Bowl-bound Razorbacks.

Arkansas needs one win to equal its second-best start (9-0) in school history.

Both teams have been struck by injuries to key personnel, but the Razorbacks have had a stabilizing force in runningback Barry Foster. Kicker Kendall Trainor has made 15 consecutive field goals.

Baylor's defensive team, always tough against the run (135.5 yards allowed per game), has two of the SWC's most aggressive linebackers in Gary Joe Kinne and James Francis (58 stops).

LOUISIANA TECH (3-5) at TEXAS A&M
A&M returns from an open date to challenge the independent Bulldogs, who fell to the Aggies 32-3 last year at College Station. Tech is capable of an upset, though, after knocking Southwestern Louisiana from the ranks of the unbeaten 19-16 earlier this fall.

On the Line

Against the spread
How the spread works:
Notre Dame (-31.5) means it must win by 32 points or more in order to beat the spread.
