FEDERAL ROADS

During the past year nearly ten thousand miles of federal roads have been built. This brings the total of federal roads to nearly 56,000 miles. This is really not a great mileage in view of the total amount of new roads built. It does add this much, however, of excellently constructed highway leading between population centers.

Perhaps the chief value of the federal road system is the impetus which it gives to states and counties, and the assistance that it gives in determining the best methods of construction. The states and counties have built many times as much road without federal aid as they did with it. Some of this might not have been built, however, if the government had not set the example, and certainly some of it would not have been as well built.

The bureau of roads has done a great deal of experiment work, of a kind that the states and counties could not, or at least would not, have done. The result of this experimentation is a clearer understanding of what constitutes a good road, and of what particular types of road may be adapted to particular localities.

COMMUNITY BETTERMENT

A man's duties are not over when he has provided for his family and given his children a chance to make good in the world. Every citizen of a town owes that town his cooperation in improving it and making it a better place to live in for the future as well as the present. This cooperation takes the form of supporting civic improvements, supporting public institutions, and taking part in all movements which are for the betterment of the community.

MANY INVENTIONS

The farmers are getting a whole lot of advice from the politicians. Some of it is good, but most of it is bunk. By this time the farmer should be able to tell the difference.

LOW RATES PAY BEST

The house of representatives, in passing a bill to restore the rate on postal cards to one cent, recognized the truth, proven by many examples, that it doesn't always pay to raise prices.

The rate on postal cards was raised to two cents in the belief that it would add to profits from the sale and distribution of this class of mail matter fully 10 million dollars annually. And what was the result? The post office department lost six million dollars a year by the two-cent law.

People simply cut down on the use of postal cards. They did not make it up by the additional use of sealed letters, either.

THE GRADE CROSSING

Railroad grade crossings constitute an ever increasing menace to the public. Even the stationing of watchmen and installation of crossing gates are not guarantees against accidents, and the guarded crossings are far in the minority. It is true that in most accidents at grade crossings automobile drivers and pedestrians have a large share of responsibility. But the fact remains that the grade crossing is antiquated and dangerous. Its removal has necessarily been slow because of the enormous expenditure and the engineering difficulties involved.

Although divorce is far more common than formerly, so, also, it would seem, are golden wedding anniversaries. At least, the newspapers are recording such events with greater frequency. A wife that is good for 50 years is a sound investment—sounder than that in a motor car that runs 150,000 miles. Ask the man who owns one.

LUCKY BABE

Babe Ruth, who is now filling a vaudeville engagement, is said to be making about $100,000 a year. About $52,000 of it comes from his contract with the Yanks, and the rest from his writings, advertising stunts and other things. As a member of the literati Babe is a first-class ball swatter.

WHAT'S DOING In West Texas

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce is maintaining an informational and legislative bureau in Austin during the session of the legislature with Manager Homer D. Wade in charge. This bureau is located at 218-219 Littlefield Building, and is at the service of all West Texans. Those desiring information on legislative matters or desiring service of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in legislative matters are invited to write the bureau concerning their needs.

Manager Wade is issuing each week a legislative letter concerning activities in the state legislature. He will keep West Texas informed of the matters of legislation concerning West Texas, and will undertake to give a weekly digest of the proceedings in Austin. This letter will go to all chamber of commerce secretaries in West Texas, will go to all officers and directors and unit directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and will be sent to all members of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce who will write to the general offices at Stamford, Texas, that they would like to receive same. There will, of course, be no charge for the service.

West Texas fared well in the organization of the legislature and in committee assignments for the past week. Hon R. L. Bobbitt of Laredo, was elected speaker without opposition. Another West Texan, Carl P. Phinney, of Brownwood, was selected as chief clerk of the House. West Texas was signally honored by the appointment of committee chairmen. Dewey Young of Wellington, becomes chairman of the committee on revenue and taxation; Lee Satterwhite of Amarillo chairman of the Penitentiary Committee. Cecil Storey of Vernon is chairman of the Oil and Gas and Mines Committee. The chairmanship of the Committee on Municipal and Private Corporations fell to E. S. Cummings of Abilene; George Kemble of Fort Worth was made chairman of the Committee on Eleemosynary Institutions. The Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence will be headed by Alfred Petsch of Fredericksburg. The chairmanship of the Committee on Commerce goes to M. H. Hagaman of Ranger.

Mr. Wade in his first report declares that the West Texas group in the legislature is recognized as one of the strongest contingents in the state law making body. They stand together for the good of West Texas and work as a unit on legislation affecting this section of the state. He reports that the hoppers of both houses are filled with a mass of bills seeking to regulate every line of human endeavor in Texas. However, this is customary for the first week of a new legislature. Some bills die in the committee rooms, others fail in the houses. Within a fortnight the matters of legislation to be considered by both houses will begin to take shape and the attitude of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce concerning the different bills will be announced as they take form.

In the opinion of Mr. Wade, the present session of the Texas Legislature bids fair to be a constructive session, and he is optimistic of the outlook.

Roaring War Film On Way to Queen

What might well be advertised as the shortest fight in the history of the prize ring takes place in the opening round of Paramount's first Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatto starring vehicle, "We're in the Navy Now."

Wallace Beery as Knockout Hansen is matched against Sailor Percival Scruggs (Tom Kennedy). With the first blow Beery is knocked clear out of the arena. He wakes some hours later and sets out to find his manager, Raymond Hatton, who has flown with their combined resources. After an extremely funny chase, both find themselves inside the gates of a naval training camp. War has been declared and they are accepted as unwilling recruits.

"We're in the Navy Now" comes to the Queen Theatre at a time when the enthusiasm roused by "Behind the Front" is just dying away. Those who saw the first "sunny side of the war" film will never forget the riotous characterizations of these two stars. As dumb doughboy buddies they wrecked all laugh records. Now comes their latest, and from advance reports it will probably break both the receipt and roar records created by "Behind the Front."

This Edward Sutherland production comes to the Queen Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, February 9 and 10. In addition to the stars, Tom Kennedy and Chester Conklin, featured players, head a cast which includes Donald Keith, Lorraine Eason and Joseph Girard.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES

Christian Endeavors through out the world are observing this week, beginning January 31, and ending February 6, as Christian Endeavor Week, it being the forty-sixth anniversary of the organization. Under the leadership of Dr. Francis E. Clark who has devoted his life to the work, this great organization of young people has grown from a mere handful into the thousands, and has spread to almost every nation on the globe, the largest society being at Elat, Africa. The local societies are planning a joint program for next Sunday evening at which time all Endeavors are urged to be present, and visitors are most cordially invited.

Business Meeting

On Friday evening, January 29, the Adult Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Rives for the purpose of holding their regular business meeting which was called to order by the president, Mrs. Rives. Interesting reports were heard from the different committees and plans discussed for the new term. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Rives served delicious sandwiches, cake and coffee to the members present. Both the inspiration of the business meeting and the pleasure of the social hour caused each one to go away feeling that it is good to be an Endeavorer.

C. E. Prayer Meetings

The Adult Society held their regular prayer meeting Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Spill with Mother Hunter. A number of visitors were present and a very helpful and interesting program was carried out with Mrs. Kate Vancil as leader. The society was favored with a beautiful solo by Joe Vancil.

The Young People held their meeting at the usual time and place.

"Paradise" Boasts Thrilling Scenes

Colorful South Sea Island scenes; a replica of London's famous Beaux Arts Ball; one of the greatest screen battles in history between Milton Sills and Noah Beery; a coronation scene in which Milton Sills and Betty Bronson are crowned king and queen of a tropical island and a bitter struggle between a stolid, wealthy man and the ne'er-do-well son of an English nobleman.

Those are a few of the highlights of First National's latest Milton Sills starring photoplay, which opens at the Queen Theatre Monday and Tuesday, February 7 and 8.

An unusual cast has been secured for this picture. Betty Bronson has the featured feminine lead, with Noah Beery, Kate Price, Charlie Murray, Lloyd Whitlock, Claude King and Ashley Cooper in support. The adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's great novel "Paradise," was produced by Ray Rockett.

The Ground-hog Saw His Shadow

With a grunt, and stretching himself in his warm den beneath the ground, Mr. Groundhog strolled out Wednesday, Feb. 2. As tradition goes, if he did not see his shadow he would remain out and bask in the warm sunshine that was sure to follow.

But the sun shone brightly late in the afternoon, and Mr. Groundhog got scared of his shadow and scurried back into his cozy home to remain for six more weeks.

So the Groundhog says we are going to have six weeks of cold and stormy weather ahead of us.

Fact is, Mr. Groundhog is not taking any chances of freezing. Take a hint from him and order your coal today.

A Vacation—

Stein, whom Goethe loved so ardently and to whom he wrote so many letters, which have come down to us, containing, it is said, every word in the language than can be used to give expression to the emotion of love, only at last to be rejected. Then one sees the grave of his wife whom he married some twenty years later. In the Goethe-Schiller archive one sees a wealth of manuscripts of both these men and ample facilities for the use of scholars who are interested in research in their lives and works.

Eisnach, our next stop, is famous, first, because Bach, the greatest creator of religious music who ever lived, was born there. One visits the house, sees the family kitchen, living rooms, and bedroom with the bed where he was born. The house, very appropriately, contains a good collection of old musical instruments. And this city is famed also because the Wartburg stands upon a rugged eminence overlooking it. It was in this old castle that Luther was hidden for several months from his Catholic enemies and where he made his German translation of the New Testament. One sees the rooms where he lived, his bed, his literary table, and the spot on the wall where the bottle of ink struck which he threw at the devil, who was so real in his experience that he saw him at times stalking in the shadows. The plaster around the spot has all been chipped off and carried away by curious tourists. The Wartburg itself has been rebuilt in recent years and has as a result the imprint of modern hands. It contains a luxurious hotel and accommodates large numbers of tourists.

From Eisnach we went to old Neunberg, with its quiet architecture out of the middle ages, with its romantic memories of the meistersingers who one time made it so famous, and with the Duerer House, where the greatest painter that Germany has produced lived. And from here we made an excursion to Rothenburg. It is perhaps the most unique of the old German towns. The great massive wall with its huge towers, which was built for protection in the middle ages, still stands. We walked along the passage on the wall for several hundred yards where the soldiers stood in times of battle. Then we visited the Rathaus. We were led into its underground prisons with their torture chambers and dungeons and then to the top of the tower from which we could see the whole town. We saw why the place is called Rothenburg. All the houses are covered with red slate shingles and the town makes the impression of a field of poppies as one looks down upon it. This town stands today almost exactly as it was built and has stood from the time of the 12th century on. The narrow streets, the houses with the quaint old architecture and decorative painting on the outside walls, the huge wall of the city and the towers for defense, and the perfectly marvelous view of the Tauber, flowing through its gorge and spanned by the old double bridges around the base of the elevation upon which the city stands, are among the impressions that remain from the few hours only that we could devote to this delightful place.

Munich has so much to see that one cannot possibly give an impression of it. The old churches and the museum were to me the most interesting. One remembers especially the magnificent zwoelfertuerme (onion towers) of the great Frauenkirche which rivals the towers of the Cologne cathedral in beauty. And, then, there are the collections of Rembrandt and Duerer paintings. I shall never forget Duerer's Four Apostles, or the few moments before Rembrandt's The Risen Christ.

And then on to Garmisch in the Alps. About eighteen inches of snow had fallen, and the famous winter sport was in progress. It was my first time to see skiing. We saw a contest in which all the champions from all the German states were in competition. The schantze (skiing place) was on the side of a mountain. The fellows would start high up and come down with all possible speed to the place from which the leap was to be made. There they would spring high into the air like birds and land about fifty yards below. The best springs were forty-six meters. This sport requires great skill. Even the best springers would often fall and plunge headlong down the hillside through the snow, though, apparently, no one was injured. One afternoon we made an excursion to Mittenwald famous because of the violins made there. A tiny village of quaintly decorated houses with the Alps towering high on all sides.

Oberammergau is known from the Passion Play which the simple folk who live there have taken such pride in presenting so many years. It will be played again in 1931. This is another of the quaint old villages with decorative paintings on the houses. The paintings are usually taken from Bible stories or from the lives of saints. Often a crucifix or an image of the Virgin is built into the most conspicuous place in the wall of the house. The houses are so pretty that the whole town makes the impression of some sort of festive occasion. We visited the home of Anton Lang, who plays the role of the Christ, and met him and his wife. They told us about the village and of their recent trip to America. They have a son in college in America now. Then we saw his wonderful stock of pottery—he is a potter by trade—and bought some small pieces to take with us as remembrances to Japan and America. Those who play the roles in this world-famous dramatization of the story of Christ are all simple craftsmen, wood-carvers, potters, and the like, and have refused to use their dramatic talent to make money. An American moving picture firm has sought the right to make a film of the play, but they have persistently declined the offer—and that in the face of poverty since the war.

Our party made the excursion to Oberammergau in a sleigh. The road wound its way between overhanging peaks of the Alps on both sides. All was wrapped in snow and heavy clouds hung low over us. The cold was not severe, but a mist of snow and rain was falling. Many of the peaks were lost entirely in the clouds and mist. Often as we came to a steep ascent the load became too heavy for the horses and we got off and walked up through the snow. There were many incidents along the way to be remembered. Our guide lost his balance once and pitched headlong into the snow. We sang together, or talked with peasants who happened to be walking the same way. An old man told us that he was born in that region 63 years before. Boys pelted us with snowballs.

This section of Germany is almost entirely Catholic. One sees the images and statues on all sides. At short intervals along the road are placed the crucifix or the Virgin. In the most inaccessible places in the canyons and on the peaks one comes suddenly upon these symbols which the Catholics have placed there to bear testimony to all who pass that way. On the very top of the highest rock crag on our left as we were approaching Oberammergau there was still to be seen in the clouds a lone cross. I thought at the time of the song we sing at home "On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross", and as we came back that way we sang it together. But it was growing dark and the cross had disappeared in the mists above.

These towns in South Germany are characterized by friendliness and hospitality. The people enjoy visiting together. They sit in groups in their eating and drinking places. They all drink beer, though I saw no drunkenness. Even the Catholic monks own and operate breweries, and they make a famous quality of beer. The word Munich in German means "little monk." And the esctcheon of the city is "Muenchner Kindl." That means "little monk child." He is dressed in a monk's garb, and his outstretched right hand holds a mug of beer; in his left, a bunch of radishes, which are often eaten with beer. These Bavarians greet one another with "Gruess

$1000 a Month Left to Girl Who Never Knew She Wasn't Millionaire's Child

As long as Mary Charlie Page orphan is alive she will have $1000 a month to spend. Then if she has any children they will have the $1000 a month and then if they have children, they will have the $1000 a month.

Such is the will of Charles Page, millionaire oil man who died recently in Tulsa, Okla. Mary Charlie, now 15 years old and a student in a girls school in Tulsa, was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Page when the girl was only a few months old.

Revelation to Her Although newspaper men and many other citizens of Tulsa knew of the adoption, the girl herself did not know she was an orphan until the millionaire's will was filed for probate. Throughout her life she had believed she was the natural daughter of the Pages.

Mary Charlie Page

Her will provided for perpetuation of the home's operation. Every time Mary Charlie accompanied her adopted father to the home, she turned to him and said:

"I'm glad I'm not an orphan." The millionaire only held her closer to him and told her he, too, was glad.

And all those years the friends of the Pages helped the foster parents keep the secret from the girl.

The Page will provides that the widow shall have an income of $1500 a month for life for herself and Mary Charlie.

The girl's income until she is 21 years old is to be only $500 a month, but the fact she will share her foster mother's income warrants a statement that Mary Charlie will have a thousand a month henceforth.

Three Generations

When the girl reaches 21 the actual cash at her command is to be $1000 a month and that is to continue through the third generation.

"More important than the money is the legacy of love Daddy Charlie left me," said the young heiress recently. "He was the kindest man in the world."

"I will try to live to be the good woman he wanted me to be. I will try to spend the money as he would have me spend it."

Sunday School Class Honored Anna Frances Kilpatrick

The twelve-year-old girls' class of the Methodist Sunday school met Thursday evening, at the church for a surprise party for Anna Frances Kilpatrick. Candy making was the main feature of the evening, which proved very entertaining and amusing. After a few games Anna Frances was presented with a box of gifts which included gingham and trimming for a dress, two pairs of hose and several handkerchiefs, all given as tokens of love that will help replace articles lost in the recent fire. Each member brought an invited guest. Hot chocolate, cakes, and candy were served to the following: Anna Frances and Cleo Kilpatrick, Ardis and Doris Piercy, Ida Feral Miller, Geneva Bailey, Ola and Ruby Butts, Zeldia Carroll, Vergie Mae Ellison, Lucille and Willie Brock, Madge Adams, Eleanor Gates, Mattie Elizabeth Blanton, Alvaretta Atkins, Broyles Hall, and Mrs. E. M. Hall.

Mesdames Jennings and Jones Entertain Club Members and Husbands

Mesdames T. V. Jennings and H. O. Jones were hostesses to the Literary and Service Club and their husbands and sweethearts on Thursday evening, January 27th.

The pretty home of Mrs. Jennings was the scene of the occasion. This was the first social of the club year in which those of the sterner sex were included, and they expressed their appreciation as their joyous tones rang out with those of the club members throughout the evening.

Seven tables were prepared for progressive "42" and wife matched wits with husband for high score.

The hostesses were assisted by Mesdames A. H. Smith and Gid J. Bryan in serving lovely refreshments of chicken salad, potato chips, wafers, olives, coffee and angel's delight in two courses, while pretty nut baskets in pastel shades were passed.

At a very late hour the guests lingered, reluctant to bid the hostesses good-bye, and bring the happy occasion to an end.

Sunday School Class Showers Member

The Wesleyan Daughters Sunday school class of the Methodist church honored Mrs. Kilpatrick on last Friday evening with a shower of useful love gifts to help in a measure to replace such articles lost when her home was burned recently.

This class under the leadership of Mrs. W. F. Latham, is doing a great work, and is always ready and willing to help those who are unfortunate or in distress.

Gott." When the waitresses (there are hardly any waiters there) serves a drink, she says "Zum Wohl!" and when she serves food "Guten Appetite." One does not find there the formality and rigidity that characterizes North Germany. They are like two different countries.

Everywhere we saw the same evidence of the love of home and city. I saw many houses that were built for a very small amount of money, but none that were poorly built or slovenly kept. There is the same love of quaintness and beauty everywhere. The love of decoration is evident not only in the painting and carving and architecture of the houses, but also in the dress of the people. The men often wear feathers or tassels or medallions on their pyramid-shaped hats. I would not risk my memory so far as to undertake to describe the women's dress. One sees very many ox teams—a very few horses and mules. The yokes are fastened usually on the horns. There are coming to be quite a lot of automobiles, but they have difficulty in getting through the narrow winding streets and seem out of place in this region that has not yet really come under the spell of the mad rush of our modern age, though the changes are now coming rapidly. We rode to the top of Kreuzeck mountain, more than five thousand feet, in an electric train which is suspended from a cable like a spider from his web. One finds living in Bavaria very cheap. We got nice beds for fifty cents a night, and food in proportion—and wonderful food it was. Beer also is cheap. In Nuernberg it was forty-six pfennigs (about eleven cents) per liter and there was a great occasion in the town at the time because the price had been raised two pfennigs. The account of this entirely unjustifiable and unbearable procedure filled the front page of the newspaper and international news only made second page. There was a threat of a beer strike unless the old price was restored.

Alas, however, our trip of ten days had to come to an end and we came back to Berlin to hear some more lectures at the university and lose ourselves again in our books. We brought with us the impression that we had made a trip to another world—a world that still lives in the olden days, a world that we read about, where people have not forgotten the beautiful art of living at home, of being friendly, and have not yet been fascinated by the gaudy colors and cheap satisfactions of the artificial ways of modern life, and have not yet had to learn, as we in America are now learning to our sorrow, that the most glowing promises of our mechanical age are only deceptions, that the gold turns to dust, the fish to serpents, the bread to stone, in one's hands.

Buck Jones Both Aggressive and Gentle in Film

Theatre patrons who admired Buck Jones in "Lazybones" and enjoyed his quaint conception of the indolent, irresponsible, but loveable "Lazybones," will find many traces of the same fine character sketching in his newest Fox Picture, "The Gentle Cyclone," which comes to the Queen Theatre Friday and Saturday, February 4 and 5.

Buck, of course, is the "Cyclone," and despite the suggestion of gentleness in the title of the picture,

Mr. Jones at times is as vigorous and tornadic as his fondest fan could wish. In fact in many of the scenes of "The Gentle Cyclone" Buck swings a pair of very lusty and decisive fists.

The role presents Mr. Jones in fine contrasts, for at times he is as gentle and apparently as harmless as the title suggests. Again, he is the wild riding, fear defying Buck Jones of many a valiant western picture.

"The Gentle Cyclone" has been made under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke, who has piloted Mr. Jones through many of his best western stories. The cast has been selected with unusual care, and a picture with fine entertainment value has been produced.

The De Willo Concert Company is one of the most unique companies in concert work. On our Lyceum course they will feature DeWillo Semerou and his Concertina-Grande. This is an instrument that approaches the pipe organ in tone volume and DeWillo is one of the world's recognized masters of the instrument.

The other members of the company are LaNoami Coffin, violinist, a pupil of the famous Tirindelli; and Mrs. DeWillo Semerou, soprano and pianist. More than half of their program consists of ensemble music. The uniting of these three artists gives us one of the most satisfactory Lyceum attractions we have ever had.

How to read Percentages

Were Dodge Brothers to sell 100 motor cars one year and 200 motor cars the next, they could truthfully announce that their sales had increased 100% in a single year. Yet they would only have sold 300 motor cars in all.

In other words, PERCENTAGE of annual gain is not conclusive. The NUMBER of cars sold is the true test.

That Dodge Brothers sales in 1926 showed an increase of 27.6% over 1925 is not the MAJOR fact to consider—striking as it is.

But that Dodge Brothers sold 259,967 cars in 1925, and then in 1926 sold 331,764—a gain of 71,797 sales in twelve months—tells a story of growth that stands out like a tower on the skyline of the industry.

Three hundred and thirty-one thousand buyers LAST year! Many more vital improvements added THIS year! No increase in price! Three powerful arguments for earnestly investigating this smart and sturdy product before deciding what to buy!

BEGIN HERE TODAY

LORNA MALLINGATE is at the seashore with her mother and stepfather, Henry Emerson. They have been worried about Lorna's sister, Pauline, who has not been home in London for 18 months. Communication with her has been carried in through a forwarding address in Paris. Lorna's mother and stepfather have just returned from a honeymoon in Italy.

DR. JULIAN EMERSON, who claims to be related to Henry Emerson, has informed Lorna that the latter had no right to marry her mother—that he already had a wife in London. Henry Emerson is mysteriously missing. Julian and Lorna have told her mother that her husband was hurried to London due to sudden illness.

Julian has given her a sedative and she is lying unconscious in her room. Julian has failed to fully explain his position, but Lorna has agreed that she and her mother will return to London with him immediately.

GERALD CRAVEN, Lorna's lover, comes in as Lorna is preparing to pack. He tells him all that has transpired and he promises to follow her to London that night. Lorna's reserve breaks under the strain of the past few hours and she tells Gerald of her love for him. He begs her to repeat the declaration of love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

FOR answer Lorna lifted up her face and kissed him. And then the door was opened and Julian Emerson came in. His face went as black as night as he saw the girl and the young man together. In fact, it wore almost a savage expression. He came forward and spoke abruptly:

"I have fixed up everything," he said, "and arranged a kind of bed in the car on which you mother can rest. Have you got the things packed? No. Well, as a matter of fact we will not be able to take any luggage with us—just put a few things together in a handbag and the rest can be sent on afterwards. I will fix that with the manageress."

"Thank you," said Lorna. She spoke very quietly. "You are taking a great deal of trouble, but we shall not worry you more than necessary; Mr. Craven is going to look after my mother and myself."

The two men exchanged a nod, acknowledging the introduction, and Gerald Craven, who still held Lorna's hand, gripped it very tightly.

"I shall see you very soon," he said in a low voice. And then he left her.

Julian Emerson was as good as his word. He carried through the whole of the proceedings quickly and quietly.

The departure was at the time of the afternoon when the hotel guests were scattered in many directions; a good many of them shut up in their rooms resting, and except for the hotel staff there was no one to witness their departure.

It was about half an hour before he got into communication with Mrs. Northwood's country house, and then it was only to be informed that she had gone abroad.

Lorna sat beside Mrs. Emerson, keeping her hand on one of her mother's. As they were driving swiftly through the country, she suddenly recollected she had not given any direction to the chauffeur. As if imagining what was passing in her mind, the man who sat opposite her looked up from a narrow book in which he was writing some notes apparently and put some questions to her. "I suppose you have made no plans?"

Lorna said "No! It is impossible for us to go to our old house, because it is let. It will have to be to a hotel, I am afraid."

"Why are you afraid?" he asked. She answered him promptly: "Because I don't think it is the most desirable place for my mother."

"You can leave your mother in my hands. I am going to take care of her."

"There is our own doctor," said Lorna. "He will attend to my mother."

Emerson did not answer this; he merely smiled at her in a queer way. "Of course, you still mistrust me? Well, that's natural, of course."

The girl was not disarmed by his frankness. She looked at him steadily, and then replied:

"I want to know if you have the right to come in and do what you have done? And I want to know why you managed to get Mr. Emerson away from the hotel without at least letting him see me?"

"I can answer that last question right away," said the man coolly. "I did not get Mr. Emerson away, as you put it. He got himself away. My dear young lady, he was in a damned hurry to leave the hotel, if you must have the truth."

Lorna's heart beat wildly. She leaned forward and said:

"By that I may suppose that you have been telling me a lot of lies? That Mr. Emerson is not ill? That he has not been taken to a nursing home? You wish to infer that he has behaved like a coward and that he has run away so that we shall not get in touch with him?"

"You put it exactly," said Julian Emerson, with that curious smile of his. "I won't go so far as to assert that Mr. Emerson is in very good health. On the contrary, he is very far from being that, but he certainly ran away from you, and even I don't know where he has gone."

Lorna's face was drawn of color, but her eyes were bright, and she had never looked prettier; as a matter of fact, at that moment she was beautiful—a fact which did not escape the man immediately in front of her.

"Your other questions," he said half lightly, "can be answered right away. I have already informed you that we have been searching for Henry Emerson for some time past. It was chance which brought us the knowledge of where to find him."

"Alas!" she said. It was her only answer to his speech, and the rest of the journey was passed in silence.

Gerald Craven heaved a great sigh of relief as he found himself driving to the station. If only he could have had a little longer conversation with Lorna. But everything had been so hurried; she had been in such a state of agitation and the knowledge that she loved him had driven everything out of his thoughts at that moment. Now he began to ponder over the situation, and the more he thought about it, the less he liked it. His thoughts turned naturally to Bertha Northwood.

He must send her a telegram; he knew she would not hesitate to do all in her power where there was trouble. But he would wait until he had seen Lorna and learned exactly what had happened to Mr. Emerson, and what lay in the immediate future.

When his rooms were reached he could not settle to anything, but walked to and fro restlessly waiting impatiently for the sound of the telephone bell.

It was about half an hour before he got in communication with Mrs. Northwood's country house and then it was only to be informed that she had gone abroad.

As evening passed into night and no news came through, Gerald Craven convinced himself that something very wrong was happening to the girl he loved.

The night wore away and Lorna never rang up. No message reached him; not a note, not a telegram: nothing.

When midnight came he abandoned hope. He did not know exactly what to do, and he tormented himself by imagining all kinds of disagreeable things which must have intervened to prevent Lorna from letting him know where she was. Out in the streets he hailed a taxi and directed the man to drive him to the old house in the St. John's Wood district, where he had first met Lorna.

When he reached the old house he found it shut up and there was only a charwoman in command of the premises. She gave him the information that "the folk" had gone away to the seaside, and she shook her head when he spoke about Mrs. Emerson and Lorna; evidently they were strangers to her.

So Gerald Craven got into a taxi once more and was driven back to the West End.

When they had been traveling for some time, Lorna gradually realized that the car was not taking them to London; she had motored to the seaside, so she knew the road they should go, and even as she grasped the fact that they were in a part of the country unknown to her, they turned in through some gates, and after passing along a secluded avenue, the car was drawn up in front of a house which had an old-fashioned look and was in a sense rather imposing.

As the car stopped, Lorna looked across at the man opposite her.

"What place is this?" she said.

"This is not a hotel."

"No! As you said justly to me a little while ago a hotel is not the best place for your mother. I have pleasure in offering you the hospitality of my own house, Miss Mallingate."

The girl sat struggling for composure, and despite all her courage there was a break in his voice as she answered him.

"I am obliged to you, Dr. Emerson, but I should prefer to go on to London where my mother can have her own doctor to attend to her."

"She is in no condition to be taken any farther today," was the reply. Then the man added irritably: "Now, don't for God's sake make a noise and a fuss! I am going to explain everything to you as quickly as possible, but first of all, we have to attend to your mother. We must get her to bed, and I shall send for a specialist, if necessary."

Man is a Daylight Animal

For centuries civilization has developed man as a daylight animal. Nature has generously provided him with good illumination.

Even in a dull day outdoors, the level of lighting intensity will run to several thousand foot-candles. On a bright day it may go up to from five to seven or eight thousand.

Keep this in mind when you realize that three or four foot-candles of illumination is the intensity provided in stores where they think they have good illumination.

"Raising the standard of illumination" is another way of saying reduce production costs, increase production, reduce accidents, lower the rate of spoilage, increase profits—declare dividends of good health, good will, and bright, shining coin of the realm.

We should like to show you what correct illumination will do. It is a long way from daylight, but it will accomplish truly remarkable results. At the same time we will show you how it pays its way and more.

If you will send us a line or give us a ring on the telephone, we shall gladly get in touch with you.

PEN POINTERS

We won't believe all this talk of prosperity until Mr Rockefeller starts giving away half-dollars instead of dimes . . .

Five hundred million cans of corn are reported ready for consumption during 1927. That's almost as many as apartment dwellers threw out last year.

The United States smoked 54 cigars per capita during December, 1926. Somebody must have got 198, as we are told Mr Dawes uses a pipe. . . .

We wonder if Mr Coolidge ever gets to feeling creepy with that dogwood, elusive presidential spokesman speaking about in his shadow . . .

Herbert Janvrin Browne again predicts a cold summer. But don't worry. There'll be plenty of swimming.

Episcopalians to Meet in Abilene

Abilene, Texas, Feb. 3.—The Bishop's Crusade, a movement within the Protestant Episcopal church for reconsecration and a quickening of the spiritual life of the membership, comes to the Abilene Parish the week of February 6-11.

This crusade is being held in two parishes of every diocese and missionary district of the United States and in the North Texas Missionary District, embracing about 80 West Texas counties, it is to be held at Abilene and Amarillo.

The Crusade opens in the Episcopal church at Abilene Sunday night, February 6, and for the ensuing week there will be three services daily, as follows:

3:00 p. m. Women's meeting.
7:30 a. m. Celebration of the Holy Communion.

7:30 p. m. Preaching mission, prayers, congregational singing of old-time hymns.

The Crusaders are Bishop Robert M. Mize of Saline, Kansas; Rev. Phil Porter of Akron, Ohio; and Mrs. W. P. Telman of Houston. Bishop Mize will preach every night.

Episcopalians scattered throughout the territory contiguous to Abilene are expected and invited to attend any or all of these services. Max Bentley, general local chairman for the Crusade, announces that these visiting Episcopalians will be given lodging and breakfast in the homes of Abilene members of the church. Dinner and supper will not be included in the hospitality, as the local committee does not want to keep the Abilene membership of the church from attending the afternoon and night services.

Episcopalians expecting to attend any of these services are requested to report at the Abilene rectory immediately upon arrival, and quarters will be assigned them.

Mr and Mrs. R. L. Labenske and daughter, Mildred, and Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Crews and little daughter, Pauline, left Saturday for a visit in San Antonio and Heberville.

We Have Made a Record

With the Safety Hatch Incubator this and last year, and it is gratifying to know that many sales have been made to present users—proof positive that they are giving satisfaction. And we say that every Safety Hatch user is in every way satisfied.

Raise More Poultry

Never in the history of the world was poultry and egg production so urgently needed, and so profitable as it is right now. The good citizen who produces livestock, poultry and eggs is a national asset of inestimable value.

The Safety Hatch incubator will give real, gratifying service, not only next year and the next, but with ordinary care will continue to give first-class, efficient service long after inferior incubators have gone to the junk heap after short lives and lots of troubles.

We want you to compare the worthy features of the Safety Hatch with other incubators before you buy.

Come in and let us explain the exclusive superlative features of the Safety Hatch.
