Or, could fire sweep it away tomorrow, leaving you uninsured, without funds to replace it? No home owner can afford to run the risk of losing all he has invested in his property. Every penny should be safeguarded by adequate insurance against reach of disaster. The time to talk insurance is now; tomorrow may be too late.

The Advice of this Agency has saved many a property owner from loss. Why not let us help you, too.

Modern Equipment In the Home

What is "a home with all modern improvements?"

That phrase, so common in real estate advertising, has puzzled many homeseekers who wonder just what equipment is included in "all modern improvements." The phrase is also receiving attention from the building and loan associations who lend money for home building, as evidenced by an analysis of "all modern improvements" just made by John E. Waitman, general manager of the Miami Savings and Loan Co. of Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. Waitman has listed the equipment which his company considers necessary to make "all modern improvements" an accurate description, and his authoritative list is of interest to every home owner or prospective home purchaser.

"One piece of equipment to which we give considerable attention nowadays is in built Frigidaire," Mr. Waitman says. "Frigidaire installations are regarded as property assets which will in the future be considered in determining the value of a loan.

"A home is not modern without a Frigidaire. My company regards it as essential in a completely modern home as a bathtub. I would rather see Frigidaire going into a new home than a hardwood floor, because it promotes sanitation. A pine floor can be made to look attractive, but nothing can make an ice box permanently sanitary.

"Other features in the making of a 'home with all modern improvements' which are determined by my company in making loans are sun parlors, furnace, tile bath, sanitary closet, gas, electric lights, city water, fruit and coal cellar, water softener, tile flooring where needed, hardwood finish, laundry, sewer, garage and floored attic.

"We will loan $150 to $400 more on a home with Frigidaire as an in-built feature than a home without Frigidaire.

"We raise the standard of citizenship by rearing the coming generation in a modern home. Any element helping in the promotion of good health is an element needed in the making of a completely modern home.

"The phrase 'modern home' is much misused. An old bath tub, an obsolete furnace and electric lights constitute only a semi-modern home. A modern home has all the modern equipment—water softener, separate coal and fruit cellar, Frigidaire, everything."

James A. Devine, secretary of the Ohio Building Association League, seconds Mr. Waitman's definition of the modern home, and says:

"Building and loan associations have learned that a true appraisal of residence property cannot be made in a general survey of the exterior. The equipment inside the home is being considered in determining the size of loans, and building and loan associations are thereby doing a valuable service for the American housewife.

"A brownstone front and a well-kept lawn are not the only things building and loan associations look for when they make an appraisal. They are also looking for water soft-teners, electric refrigeration and other conveniences that make the home more than just four walls."

McManus, the artist, says he draws his own conclusions.

Grow Them RIGHT

Growing mash is just as necessary for growing chicks as buttermilk starting feed is for baby chicks. Neither an exclusive grain ration nor laying mash will do a satisfactory job of growing good pullets. Grain puts on fat and slows up growth. Laying mash forces early growth too fast and over develops the reproductive organs and forces pullets to lay before they have attained full size.

Growing mash is not expensive to use; it costs but little more than laying mash and the results obtained makes it far cheaper to use than anything else.

To use laying mash or an exclusive grain ration means that a high percentage of the pullets will be culls and that means a serious loss to the poultryman right at the time he can least afford it; when eggs are high in price.

FATHER'S DAY

Sunday is Father's Day. No blare of trumpets will sound, no fireworks will be discharged, no bands of music will sound their strains. No wreaths will be laid upon monuments. Just a brief pause of thought in honor of the men who head the families, the husbands and the fathers.

Why especially note Father's Day? Probably because nearly everybody else is commemorated and it is only just to devote a certain day to the wage earner, the breadwinner. Father is entitled to his one day in the year when the thoughts of people are turned to the question of parental responsibility.

Every day should be Father's Day—and Mother's Day. Every person who lives, young or old, should reverence, if only in prayer and memory, the parents. The only commandment in the Bible with a distinct and definite promise is "honor thy father and thy mother."

Father's Day this year should remind us of a most sacred love, and reconsecrate our hearts to the old homestead, and to the old hearthstone, and to the memories that are most treasured.

GALLUS

Some fashion moulders are trying to bring back the suspender, or "gallus," as it is commonly referred to. It is claimed that men, when arguing politics in front of the post office or on the street corners, have nothing to hook their thumbs under and snap when they want to emphasize a remark. The belt is good for nothing outside of holding up the trousers and strapping fractious youngsters.

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

President Coolidge is going into the Black Hills of South Dakota for his summer vacation. Presidents of the United States in the past have journeyed into the West, but never for a protracted stay such as is contemplated by Mr. Coolidge. The White House, in a measure, follows the chief executive.

The selection of the Black Hills, where game and fish abound, away from the beaten paths, might imply that the President is not especially anxious to commune with politicians during the next few weeks. His presence in South Dakota doubtless will have its effect both upon him and upon the people of the Middle West.

The President is going to the State Lodge in the heart of the hills this week for a rest and to tramp and fish. The country in which the executive's lodge is located is wild in its nature, abounding in fish and game. Scenically, the Black Hills region is not surpassed. Some of the most neighborly, human and hospitable folks in the world live in this section of the country. They will be honestly glad to see the President and he will know they are glad. President and Mrs. Collidge will enjoy a wonderful vacation.

LOTS OF NEW LAWS

Legislatures in forty-four states this year introduced 40,000 new bills, 10,000 of which have become or are soon to become laws. This unlimited spawning of legislation is not a new disease. It has been chronic for so long a time that even the best lawyers of the country find themselves confused by the spreading complexity in the legal code. The plea for simplification cannot be made too often.

SMALLER MONEY

United States paper money is to be made smaller. The secretary of the treasury has approved a proposal to make bills one-third smaller than the present money. The new one-dollar bills will carry a portrait of George Washington and the two dollar bills one of Thomas Jefferson. It is already too small for the needs of the majority of the people. What would be appreciated is a move to make money larger, at least in its purchasing power.

WHAT'S DOING In West Texas

ABILENE—One hundred and twenty-nine outstanding West Texas business leaders and professional men have been named by President R. W. Haynie of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to serve on the eleven active bureaus of the regional organization for the year of 1927-1928. Appointments embrace representatives from towns and cities in every district of the West Texas Chamber territory and the bureaus embody every phase of activity necessary to continued growth and prosperity of the West. Two new bureaus include the oil and gas bureau and the highways and transportation bureau.

RALLS—Tractors and graders are at work on construction of the Ralls-Post highway. This work is being financed by the road district which voted bonds several months ago, and is under supervision of County Commissioner Early Long and the commissioners' court.

McLEAN—The McLean chamber of commerce has already gone on record as favoring a delegation to the 1928 meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce at Ft. Worth.

STAMFORD—Plans are under way in various towns and cities for entertainment of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce motorcade during the first ten days of July. The trip will touch the most scenic and picturesque spots in the resort section of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico. All those desiring to make the trip are requested to write the West Texas Chamber of Commerce office at Stamford immediately.

STEPHENVILLE—Plans are being perfected here for erection of a modern tourist park. The project is under direction of the local chamber of commerce.

MIAMI—When the 1927-28 school term opens here, Miami students will be housed in a new $65,000 school building. Contract for the structure has been awarded and preliminary work is under way.

ALPINE—A large cotton oil mill will be erected here in July, to be completed by opening of the fall season. Arrangements for building the structure are now under way by representatives of the Pearsall company who are to build the plant.

SAN SABA—Deal has been closed with the Hokenbury Hotel System, Inc., of Harrisburg, Pa., to sell stock for the erection of a 35-room hotel in this town. Local committees are completing the sale of stock and the work on this modern hostelry is expected to start at an early date.

COAHOMA—Rapid progress is being made by the pipe line crew working near here on a line from Midland to Ranger. Local business concerns are enjoying increased business, due to the presence of the crew in the Coahoma trade territory.

LEVELLAND—The first wheat crop of any consequence was sown in Hockley county this season. Every indication points to the fact that this county is well adapted to the growth of that grain, and the acreage planted is in good condition.

BLEDSOE—A new $100,000 combined high school and grammar school building will be opened formally here next September when 175 pupils of the Bledsoe district and a faculty of ten teachers start off the 1927-28 school year. Bledsoe schools have leaped from 7 pupils and one teacher in 1925 to almost 200 in 1927.

Pictorial Beauty in
"Mare Nostrum"

"Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea), Ingram's newest production for Metro-Goldwyn, booked for the Queen Theatre for Monday and Tuesday, June 20 and 21, is an exceptional picture.

Ingram has taken the famous Blasco story and with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno enacting the leading parts, and the original European location as his background, has made a powerful drama that merits all the praise and attention given it.

The story is of the Mediterranean Sea during the early periods of the War. The romance of the beautiful spy and the Spanish sea captain is the central attraction of the picture, with submarine warfare, secret service systems of European powers, marvelous characterizations by the foreign artists and the pictorial and historical locations on the Continent all giving added interest. With the exception of Miss Terry, Moreno and Hughie Mack, who has a prominent comedy role, the entire cast is made up of leading European actors and actresses who make their American debut in the picture. It is a treat to see new faces and to have them give such creditable performances as the entire cast of "Mare Nostrum" gives. The German characters are especially fine. The pictorial beauty of "Mare Nostrum" is beyond description. Ingram has carefully blended his locations into his story in a way that makes them a part of it.

A Woman and Her Money

Jim Scott usually gave his wife a check the fifth of every month to pay the household bills.

One day Mrs. Scott heard someone talking about unprofitable accounts and was amazed at the suggestion that banks would be better off if many of their accounts were not on their books. Feeling somewhat indignant, she told her husband about it.

"What do you do with the check I give you each month?" asked Mr. Scott. "Why, I put it in my bank account," she answered. "Yes," he replied, "and how long does it stay there?" "Well, I pay all bills before the tenth of the month, so most of it is there about five days." "And," said Mr. Scott, "your checks go all over town. The bank really goes all around paying your bills and keeps your books for you, too. I think I've seen you refer to your cancelled checks to verify having paid a bill.

"Now," said Mr. Scott, "if your money is in the bank only five days, they can hardly lend it out. If they did, they would be forced to have it paid back in five days to meet your checks. A bank's main source of income is from loans. Don't you think they are entitled to some consideration for the service they give you?"

"I never saw it that way before," said Mrs. Scott. "Perhaps I can arrange to keep more money there all the time by building my account up a little each month."

"If you'll do that," said Mr. Scott, "then you'll begin to be a really valuable customer to your bank."

Mrs. Scott's plan is a good one for everyone to follow.

Says Drinkers Are Responsible For Bootlegging Evil

To All Those Who Drink or Buy Intoxicating Liquor:

This appeal is addressed to you in the hope that you will think seriously about these things and that you will let the appeal do you good.

Alcohol is a poison to everybody who drinks it. A train of bodily weaknesses and diseases follows its use. Brain and nervous disorder and weakness continue long after its immediate effect has passed away and even becomes permanent. It shortens life. While some who drink it survive for a number of years, many die early, and the number of survivors is constantly being diminished, for they have weakened their bodily resistance to disease.

The effect is seen even in the face of all who drink it. The physical effect of this poison is seen on your face if you have been drinking it. Not only its physical effect but your face shows its evil effect upon your soul. Its degradation of character shows upon your face. Go to the mirror and study in your face its physical and moral effect.

Every one who drinks intoxicants knows that there is a stain upon the character of every bootlegger. But you who drink their stuff are partners in their wrongdoing. Whoever you are, you share their degradation. The written law, for certain reasons, may not convict you, but morally you are partners in their crime. They would not sell the poison if somebody did not buy it. You and others like you are making them bootleggers. Some of them may think they are better than you, for they won't drink much of the vile stuff. But for you and others like you, they might quit their evil business in their wrong doing. Whoever if they repent, God will save them. If you repent, He will save you. You who drink are responsible for bootlegging, and you are going to meet the judgment of God.

ALICE TERRY and ANTONIO MORENO in "MARE NOSTRUM"

You who drink are helping to corrupt others. Even women, some of them, drink to their shame. Even some boys and some girls have been led into this sin. Every one who drinks helps in some way to corrupt others. Many of the shameful things that have been done would never have been done if it had not been for drinking this poison.

Bootleggers lead young men to become bootleggers. When you drink their stuff, you aid in corrupting youth. The whole thing is destructive to our community and national life and whoever aids it lacks that much of being a true patriot.

These statements may be unpleasant for you, but are they not true? As a servant of God, I appeal to you to stop your part in this evil, to repent and come to God. He is merciful. Yours truly,—Gid J. Bryan.

Birthday Party

Master Bob Stribling of Westbrook was honored with a birthday party at the charming home of his aunt, Mrs. Clyde Roberts, Saturday afternoon, June 11th.

Many interesting little outdoor games were enjoyed after which the little folks were ushered into the dining room where the birthday cake was resplendent with seven tiny pink candles. As the candles were blown out, one by one, each small guest wished the honoree many happy returns of the day. Delicious refreshments of angel food cake and ice cream were served.

An unusual "joke" was played on Master Bob. He was brought into the living room, seated, and blindfolded. The guests surrounded him and when the blindfold was removed they all rushed forward and showered him with many pretty and useful gifts and toys.

Miss Ruby Roberts assisted Mrs. Clyde Roberts in entertaining. Lollipops were given as favors.

The small guests present were: Bob Stribling, Estelle Key, Junior Stribling, Joyce Burton, Warren Roberts, Rowena Long, Harlan Dorsett, Rosemary Burton, Mavis Roberts, Robert Allen Farmer, and Leatress Corum.

Shasta daisies and gladiolas were effectively used as floral adornment to the reception rooms, where eight tables were arranged for a series of progressive forty-two games.

High score was won by Mrs. Raymond Henslee and Billie Crook, who were presented hand-painted handkerchiefs.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Williams, served lovely refreshments of shrimp salad, potato chips, olives, wafers, lady fingers and frosted orange crush.

PAULINE Mallingate, strangely absent from her home in London for 18 months, is believed to be "Mrs. Creswold," mistress of "The Moat," a mystery house in Yorkshire, not far from the country place of Mrs. Bertha Northwood, friend of the Mallingates.

HENRY Emerson, wealthy stepfather of the girl, has vanished mysteriously from a summer resort where he had been staying with his wife and another stepdaughter, Lorna.

DR. JULIAN Emerson, claiming to be related to the missing man, has taken Lorna and her sick mother from the resort to Mulberry House, an old estate in Paxton Common, where he is holding them captive.

GERALD Craven, Lorna's lover, has joined with Mrs. Northwood and Noel Shannon, British war ace, in tracing the missing family. Through information obtained from Ellen Storey, a maid at "The Moat," Craven and Shannon fly to Paxton Common. There Shannon accepts a heavy fee for taking Dr. Emerson to Yorkshire.

In the meantime Dr. Emerson suffers a nervous collapse in the village where Shannon left him, and is taken to a hospital. Craven, at Paxton, manages to see Lorna at Mulberry House. They agree that Craven should go for help, while Lorna, to avoid suspicion, shall remain with her mother. Two of Dr. Emerson's guards intercept Craven as he is leaving. They beat him into insensibility and leave him in the roadway. He is taken to the home of Mrs. Donald in the village.

The two intoxicated guards enter the house and attempt to make their way into a connecting room where Mrs. Brown and a man named Carter are discussing the situation into which Dr. Emerson has placed them. One of the guards is about to strike the woman when Carter intervenes. When all is quiet again Carter suggests that Mrs. Brown retire while he remains on watch.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
BUT Mrs. Brown sank into a chair and leaned her head against the wall. She remained awhile in silence watching him, then she said: "I never could make you out, sir. You are such a strange man! But there must be great good in you." At that moment there came a violent ringing of the bell and a knocking at the front entrance.

Mrs. Brown started to her feet, and pressed her hands against her heart.

"The police!" she said in a whisper.

But Carter got up also and stretched out his hand.

"Wait! We must not make any move without considerable thought."

The knocking and the ringing went on for a space of a minute or two, but still they stood and made no move. And then it ceased and straining their ears they could hear voices dying away in the distance.

"Not the police," said Carter with a little laugh. "If it had been they wouldn't have gone away. I'm puzzled." He sat down and passed his hand wearily over his brow. "You heard what Gilbert said—that someone had been here tonight. Well, he was right, Mrs. Brown. There was a young man here . . . I saw him climb the wall just a few minutes before those two came in, and I should say there has been some ugly work done outside."

The woman sat down once more and covered her face with her hands rocking two and fro. And when she spoke her voice was broken.

"Is there to be no end to all this dreadful business? What has he got in his mind about this girl and her mother? What does he want with them? You know it is very serious!"

Mr. Carter's reply was not given; he sank in his chair, rested his chin in his hands and then he looked upward toward the stairs.

"Go to bed," he said. "Leave me. I have much to think out. Go and get what rest you can . . . poor woman, I am sorry for you! I shall sit here awhile. The night air refreshes and drives ugly memories into the background. Rest!" he repeated. "You need all your courage and all your strength."

Despite her mistress' protests, Elley Storey got up after she had been asleep only about a couple of hours. She declares that she was quite refreshed and, being a strong healthy young woman, that sleep, short as it had been, had refreshed her and made her eager to do all that she could for Mrs. Creswold and the sick man.

Her mistress was downstairs when she had washed and dressed, and Ellen stole into Henry Emerson's room. To her great relief she found him considerably better. He gave her a smile and his voice seemed a little stronger when he spoke.

He told her that he already had had some breakfast and that he was able to move a little in the bed. And then he plied her with questions. He gave her his name, and then he wanted to know where he was, to whom this house belonged and whether he could get into communication with his wife?

"You sent that dreadful looking man away . . . It was him as was doing all this bad treatment."

"Well, sir!" said Ellen. "I cannot tell you much. I can only give you the name of this house. It is called The Moat, and the village is Barnsley-on-Moor . . . it's in Yorkshire. I don't belong proper like to Yorkshire, though my grannie does. I was brought up in London."

She chatted away about her own little life whilst she was making the room sweet and clean and opening the windows to let the summer air come in freely.

In the day time, though he was better than he had been the night before, Henry Emerson looked shockingly ill, and Ellen was quite distressed about him. But she kept this to herself when she met her mistress, for she knew that Mrs. Creswold was greatly troubled about Mr. Emerson.

The two women together made up their mind to do all in their power for the sick man, the only thing they could not do was to give him the assurance that they would get in touch with his wife. In fact, Pauline Creswold withdrew as much as possible from his sick room, and once she let the truth escape from her.

"I hate not to be able to calm his anxiety, but even if I knew where his wife was, I should not dare to get in touch with her."

"Don't fret, ma'am," Ellen said in her brisk way. "What we have got to do is to try to get him well and strong again, but he'll be a little while before he gets back his full strength. He's been ill treated most shocking. I never see such bruises! Why, there isn't a part of his body that isn't black and blue." Then she added quickly as Mrs. Creswold sat down with a little moan, and covering her face with her hands: "I know perfectly well you'd have stopped it if you could. Why you did stop it . . . you sent that dreadful looking man away . . . it was him as was doing all this bad treatment."

"Yes, I did that," said Pauline Creswold, lifting up her white face, "but I shall pay for it, Ellen, and God knows I have paid enough already! I don't want to seem cruel, but I cannot bear going near that poor old man . . . his eyes haunt me."

"Well, you leave him to me, ma'am," said Ellen. "As I told you last night, I'm used to looking after sick people. Why, my grannie when she has one of her bad spells, she's mighty difficult to handle . . . and he's so good, poor gentleman."

"You are very good to me, Ellen," said Mrs. Creswold. "I don't know if I shall ever be able to repay you."

"Lor! bless you' ma'am, who wants payment? Why, it's a poor sort of person who would not be kind to someone in trouble! Now, I'm just going down to freshen things below, and if you want me all you have to do is to ring your bell or call and I'll come in a jiffy."

"You cleaned the rooms so beautifully yesterday they cannot need very much today."

"Oh! only just a bit of dusting, ma'am."

It was a peaceful day and this peace seemed to steal into the pain-racked body of Henry Emerson for Mrs. to Ellen's great satisfaction he fell asleep and slept continuously only waking to take the food which she insisted on his swallowing.

She was very busy, as brisk as a bee bustling about that old house, encouraging Mrs. Creswold to eat some luncheon and then going in to try to speak to the old Frenchman whose liking for her was evidently greatly increased.

The day was hot and after luncheon she persuaded Francois to go and sit in a chair in the garden.

"Leave me to clean up . . . You go and smoke your pipe."

She had wheeled an easy chair into the sick room and when she stole upstairs after she had washed up the dishes and cleaned the pots and pans, she found that Mrs. Creswold was crouched up in the chair watching over the sick man.

"She'll close her eyes, too, before she has been there very long," Ellen said to herself, and she went downstairs to find some more work to do.

It was while she was there that the telephone rang. Ellen hesitated an instant and then with a jerk of her head she went forward and took up the receiver. A man spoke.

De-Urbanizing America

The small town finds electric power a strong ally. As the evolution of industry turns into a new and brighter phase, factories are released from concentration in densely populated urban centers. To a substantial extent this has been made possible by the transmission of electric power from advantageously located generating stations, efficiently operated and adequate in capacity, to communities for miles around; sometimes bringing electric service for the first time; sometimes replacing inadequate local plants.

With the assurance to the small community of ample and economical power, industry is enabled to realize the advantages of better and cheaper living conditions for workers, and in many cases closer proximity to raw materials and markets.

Development of the local demand immediately available—the grist mill, grain elevator, waterworks system, street lighting—justifies the initial investment by the utility company, which thereafter cooperates with the community in building up local industries and attracting new ones.

In this kind of healthy development, apparent throughout America, the West Texas Utilities Company is one of the most active participants.

Miss Barber Weds Rev. J. W. Ware

A wedding of interest to friends here was that of Miss Myrtle O. Barber to Rev. J. William Ware of Montezuma College, which took place at the First Baptist church June 3rd, with the pastor, Rev. H. H. Stephens, officiating.

The bride is well known here, having taught English in high school for two years, and the past year has been teaching in Montezuma College and doing preparatory work for entrance to Southwestern Seminary at Fort Worth. She is a graduate of Simmons University, receiving her degree with the class of 1924.

The groom is well known in New Mexico, having been an active worker in church activities for several years. He served on the New Mexico State Board as a E. Y. P. U. and Sunday school worker in 1924, together with Miss Barber, and other Simmons University friends. He received his A. B. degree from Montezuma College this month.

Rev. and Mrs. Ware will be in Montezuma this summer and will attend Southwestern Theological Seminary this fall.

Jno. Q. McAdams returned home the latter part of the past week from a fishing trip on the coast.

OUR HERO

On one early misty morn,
While the world was in a trance,
Our hero, Capt. Lindbergh,
Started sailing towards France.

He drove out o'er the Atlantic,
As far as eyes could see,
He was on his way from New York to Paris,
Over a lonely sea.

Just what was in our hero's makeup,
To do what no other ace had done;
He reduced the hours of darkness,
In his flight towards the sun.

This bustling lad sailed all alone,
Across the briny deep;
He stopped a little while in France
So that they might take a peep.

Of all the heroes of the air,
We are holding him to our heart,
The reason he made it safely through
He had the courage to make the start.

We admire our hero lad,
The lad with arms or brawn,
Who has added more to our history
While he flew towards the dawn.

So he is our hero of heroes,
We hold him as sublime,
He is the ace of all the aces—
A marvel in our modern time.

The Endeavorers held their first joint meeting for the summer months on last Sunday evening, June 12th. The Adult Society put on a good program for this meeting with Mrs. Kate Vancil as leader. Each society was well represented, but it is hoped that every Endeavorer in town will be present next Sunday evening at 7:15. The Young People will have charge of the program. At the close of the program George Hall, our District President, who has just returned from the State C. E. convention at Fort Worth, will give a report of that meeting. Don't fail to be present.

Don't be fooled on house paint!

"Cheap" paint isn't cheap at all!

When you are tempted by wonderful claims, elaborate guaranties and a very low price to buy "cheap" paint, remember this:

"Cheap" paint sells at a low price because it is low in quality—poor stuff. That's the only reason a manufacturer can afford to sell at a low price.

By the gallon it costs you less. But don't let that fool you. It will cost you many times more than good old SWP on the wall—by the job and by the year—because it covers only about half the area per gallon—and lasts only about half as long.

Come in and let us tell you the truth about the high cost of "cheap" paint—why SWP House Paint is the least expensive.
