LIONS LUNCHEON WELL ATTENDED LAST TUESDAY

DETAILED REPORT IS GIVEN CONDITION OF A. KRAUSS.

Denver Crumpler, tenor soloist with the Harley Sadler show, entertained the Lions Club last Tuesday with several vocal selections, playing his own accompaniment on the guitar.

Principal speaker was Mike Boyd, Ballinger florist, who gave a very interesting talk on yard beautification and horticulture.

A telegram from Sweetwater was read by Otis Grisham to the effect that the commissioners court of Nolan county had accepted the proposition of the State Highway Department and had started securing right-of-way in that county, looking to the building of a highway from Sweetwater to Coleman, via Winters.

T. D. Coupland, who had just returned from Houston where he visited with A. Krauss, a patient in a hospital in that city, gave a detailed report of his condition. One side of Mr. Krauss' heart is affected and physicians have advised him to refrain from business activities and physical exertion. He is expected to be able to leave the hospital this week, however, he will remain in Houston and other South Texas cities throughout the summer, Mr. Coupland reported.

Tuesday's program was in charge of Dr. J. W. Dixon.

MASS MEETING TO BE HELD AT BALLINGER

A mass meeting of the Townsend Old-Age Revolving Pension club of Runnels county, will be held at the Court House in Ballinger, Monday night, March 30 at 7:30.

Dr. W. R. Shook of Bradshaw will be the principal speaker. Other speakers will also be present from San Angelo, including Dr. H. F. Miller, district organizer.

The public is invited to attend. B. F. Huntsman spent the past week-end visiting with his son, Emmett Huntsman and family at Quemado.

COPS INSTRUCTED TO FILE AGAINST SPEEDING DRIVERS

CHECK-UP WOULD REVEAL MANY UNSAFE DRIVERS HERE.

Dispatches out of Austin this week bring the information that L. G. Phares, director of the department of public safety Thursday instructed highway patrolmen, Texas rangers and other department employees to file complaints against every person found violating the state speed laws.

"I am also appealing to the local enforcement officers and justices of the peace to assist us in every way possible in enforcing the highway laws," he said.

Explained the speed limit for pleasure vehicle on public highways outside city limits is 45 miles an hour. Within limits of an incorporated city or town, or within or through any town not incorporated it is 20 miles an hour.

The limit for commercial vehicles or trucks is 25 miles an hour for those registered in excess of 6,000 pounds. For 6,000 pounds or less, the limit is 40 miles an hour outside city limits.

"Let's adopt the slogan 'safety or else?' and make our highways safer for sane drivers," Phares said.

In Winters, a check-up on unsafe automobiles which are driven on the streets every day, would reveal alarming facts which are calculated to contribute toward unsafe driving. Much good could be accomplished locally should the slogan, "safety or else" be adopted and enforced.

Besides the golf course, the road leading from the highway to the club house and the grounds in general, are in better condition than they have been in the past several years and, as we see it, Mr. Fishel is due a vote of thanks from the club members for his excellent work.

James Cagney in "Frisco Kid" Will Show at the Queen Saturday Night at Midnight and Also Sunday-Monday

GEORGE O'BRIEN IN "THUNDER MOUNTAIN" IS THE CURRENT ATTRACTION AT QUEEN; OTHER GOOD SHOWS BOOKED.

"Frisco Kid," Warner Bros. thrilling tale of the glamorous Barbary Coast of old San Francisco, opens at the Queen Theatre Saturday at the midnight preview with an all star cast headed by James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay, Ricardo Cortez and Lili Damita. Zane Grey's newest and greatest story of rip-roaring outdoor adventure, "Thunder Mountain" with George O'Brien, is showing today and tomorrow. "Rose of the Rancho," Paramount's new musical romance showing Tuesday and Wednesday boasts the first original operetta-type score ever written for the screen. Edward Everett Horton is starred in "Your Uncle Dudley" which will be the featured attraction Thursday.

"Thunder Mountain" The story is the picturization of Zane Grey's new and popular novel. Its story, plot ramifications bear the stamp of Zane Grey's authenticity, the irresistible lure of his outdoor action pictures. Two women, Barbara Fritchie and Frances Grant play important roles in the life of George O'Brien, who in this picture is cast as a virile two fist-and-prospector. O'Brien's opponents in the picture are a gang of villainous claim-jumpers, led by Morgan Wallace. After O'Brien has discovered the richest strike in the country and returned to bring Barbara and her father to the mine, Wallace's men attack Dean Benton, O'Brien's pal, and steal his mine. His misfortune serves a purpose however.

"Frisco Kid" The picture is set in the colorful background of the early fifties when the waterfront at the Golden Gate was a flaming panorama of gilded gambling halls and palaces of pleasure. The characters are based on historic personages of the time who flocked to the city of gold.

Sleeves rely on their graceful lines brought into a snugly fitting wristlet type of cuff. Truly the work of designers forethought. A skirt that knows its duty and performs it admirably is this panelled one.

Back of skirt is cut in two pieces and the center seam is a valuable aid to perfect fittings.

Swarthout sings five songs while John Boles, who plays opposite her, has three and they sing a duet together. The picture represents an entirely new technique in screen musicals. Heretofore motion picture producers have been somewhat baffled by the difficulty of presenting songs without slowing up the story, but composers Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin have overcome this problem. They wrote the songs to tie in directly with the dialogue. The music becomes a natural extension of the lines.

"Your Uncle Dudley"

It is Edward Everett Horton's fate in this picture to be one of those people who are always so involved in civic affairs that they have no time or energy left to live their own life. For a time silver loving cups and adulation feed his vanity, but soon he begins to look for something more substantial. With his business falling off, his girl friend threatened to walk out and his parasitic sister clamoring for money, Horton takes stock of himself and decides to change his course. What happens when this new personality bursts on this horizon is revealed in the chuckle-filled climax of the picture and in its happy romantic close. Lois Wilson is the charming cast opposite Horton, with Rosina Lawrence and John McGuire the principals in a minor romance.

Recipes And Menus

Denton, March 25. — During Lent the search for meatless meals invariably brings us to the question of fish. And today the fish fillets make it easy to solve the problem. The fish are taken in salt water and immediately cleaned, boned, usually skinned, wrapped, packed, and sealed for delivery to all merchants. They may be purchased inland as fresh as from the ocean; for they are frosted at a very low temperature. This solidifies them immediately and retains the cell structure. It may be cooked immediately without "defrosting."

Breakfast: Vegetable juice, oatmeal, toast, marmalade, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Vegetable soup, Boston baked beans, apple-celery salad, brown bread, milk, cookies.

Dinner: Broiled Fillets of Haddock, Duchess potatoes, buttered peas, quartered tomatoes, hot rolls, orange sherbet.

Breakfast: Stemmed brown rice with apple sauce and cream, toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Baked salmon, stuffed tomatoes, spinach ring, fresh cucumbers, bread and butter, stewed rhubarb.

Dinner: Tomato juice, creamed chicken, buttered cauliflower, glazed carrots, radishes, hot rolls, caramel custard pie.

RECIPES

Broiled Fillets of Haddock: Brush the fillets with lemon juice and sprinkle with salt. Arrange on a hot oiled plank or heavy skillet. Place under the broiler-flame in an oven which has been preheated to 450 F. Broil for about 15 minutes. If served on the plank, surround with Duchess potatoes. These are made by adding beaten egg to mashed potatoes.

Baked Salmon: 1 No. 2 can Salmon, 1 cup mizzly sour cream, lemon juice. Turn canned salmon into baking dish. Sprinkle with the lemon juice. Pour over it one cup or more of good sour cream. Bake in a moderate oven (325-350 F.) until the cream reduces and gets spotted with brown.

Stuffed Tomatoes: 6 medium tomatoes, 1 cup bread crumbs, 1 small onion, 2 T butter. Brown crumbs and chopped onion slightly in butter. Remove centers of ripe tomatoes and fill with crumbs. Place in large muffin rings to hold their shape, and bake until tender and the crumbs are brown.

Some Important Principles of Fish Cookery: 1. To fry fish—quick cooking at a high temperature seals in the juices. 2. If fish is dry and tasteless it is frequently because it may be due to cooking too long at a low temperature. 3. The crispness of cucumber and the acidity of lemon are traditional accompaniments to fish, and both help to bring out its natural delicacy of flavor.

CHEVROLET

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the advanced construction of the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressure stream oiling and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

PROMENADE DECK

by Ishbel Ross

SYNOPSIS . . . A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Mareina" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romantic, entertaining . . . and tragic . . . Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls . . . These characters are aboard the ship; Macduff, dour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat, gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter; captain Baring, master of the ship . . . and his soul . . . NOW, GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THIRD INSTALLMENT

Miss Mudge seemed uncertain of herself and shot a birdlike glance along the table, but no one was paying any attention, except to push her out of the way. As soon as she felt the pressure of bodies around her, Miss Mudge took hold of herself and produced a handful of counters from her bag. She'd show Monte Carlo.

Macduff wondered how long she had been playing this game. He could see from the expression on her face that she had decided her counters were as good as anyone else's. She picked her numbers with care and distributed them defiantly. The wheel spun, and she watched it with a puckered, myopic gaze. The counters disappeared with amazing speed and left no trace. Miss Mudge dived into her purse, then shook her head. Her grey straw hat was slipping over one ear from all the pushing and shoving, but she seemed in hilarious spirits, excited by her surroundings.

She suddenly spied Macduff and recognized him for some one from the Mareina. That was enough for her. In a moment she was standing in front of him, twinkling owlishly through her glasses.

"Just think, I've been losing all my money," she announced, as if that were an everyday occurrence in her life.

"Well, what of it?" said Macduff ungraciously.

"Oh, I beg your pardon." Miss Mudge stepped back and he felt impelled to make grumpy amends. "Do you want a lift to the boat? I have a car."

She looked at him questioningly for a moment, then brightened up. "That would be kind of you," she said.

Miss Mudge's elation faded as soon as her cabin door was closed. She sat on the edge of her bed and wondered if it had been so clever of her, after all, to have lost forty of her precious five hundred dollars. She hadn't intended to stake more than a quarter at a time, but she had won five dollars at the start, and that had seemed so exciting that she had gone on and on to ruin. "You're a fool, Alice Mudge," she told herself, severely. "You save and scrimp for years and years, and then you spend twenty-five dollars at Madeira for a Spanish shawl, and lose forty dollars at Monte Carlo as if you were an heiress."

From now on she would have to be economical. Too much of her money was gone and she was only beginning the cruise.

Miss Mudge took out her diary and proceeded to record her impressions of the day.

The Mareina was easing out of the harbour and the lights were flickering like a forest of lighted candles. The coast line was slowly engulfed in the night, and the boat began to toss in a Mediterranean storm. In a stateroom amidships on C deck, Jenny and Peter Rumford were unpacking their things. Jenny stopped every few minutes to look a little tremulously at Peter, whose attention was all on what he was doing.

"Well, we're off." His voice had a note of relief. "Perhaps you won't worry so much now, Jenny. There's nothing like the life of a ship's anchor to lighten the heart."

Jenny moved to his side and slipped her hand beneath his chin. Her voice was beseeching. "Peter! You'll never let me regret what I've done. Your love will justify everything. You'll never let me down—not now, after what I've done." She clung to him, panic in her voice.

"Angel!" said Peter in his most convincing tones. "I should not be running away with you if I weren't prepared to spend the rest of my life in making you happy."

He tightened his hold and his head drooped over hers. Her fears were lulled and her heart sang with sudden melody. She closed her eyes and sank limply in the circle of his arms. She dimly remembered the starved months of her marriage, and the hatred she had for her husband. There was nothing to regret where he was concerned. Her baby was another matter.

"Darling," he said, what are you thinking of?"

"Quite a lot, Peter." She dragged her thoughts back to the present. "I'm seeing myself as a small and selfish worm. In fact, I'm seeing myself as I am."

Peter could detect the fright in her voice. He laughed at her. "Morbidity again! I wish you would not analyse yourself so much. You know, if you keep it up, I shall regard you as a little egotist. Women all are, or they wouldn't think that what they do matters so much."

He leaned over her absorbed face and kissed it to a healthy glow. "Be gay, my child, and forget about yourself," he implored her. "We're only beginning, and you musn't feel like this. Let's go out and look at our shipmates. They're sure to be terrible."

The ship was en fete. Chinese lanterns swung on the after-deck—the orchestra played an old Viennese waltz and the sky was powdered with yellow stars four evenings later as the Mareina neared Stromboli. The moon hung low in the sky, like a golden guinea. It was an old story to Dick, leaning against the rail, smoking a cigarette and watching with cynical interest.

His attention wandered over the dancing couples. He wasn't interested in pretty girls at the moment, but he supposed he had to dance with some one. Men were so scarce. His glance came to rest on the little teacher from Cabin 454. She was sitting by herself in a corner, enveloped in a Spanish shawl, with poppies too large for her size.

The handsome officer she had seen about the boat was moving in her direction.

"Won't you dance with me?" asked Dick, bowing formally over her.

She snatched at the fringe of her shawl and looked at him in confusion. She was much too nervous to rise to her feet.

"Oh, do come on," he urged her. "This is a good tune."

A flock of nervous fears went chasing one another across Miss Mudge's sensitive face; then something propelled her to her feet.

Miraculously Miss Mudge's step was suddenly in tune with the chief officer's and he had her firmly clasped by the Spanish shawl, whirling her around with such speed that she soon forgot about her feet. Her head swam with excitement and she caught a whiff of tobacco that made her faint. She had never been clutched to a man's chest like this before. Her head brushed his sleeve and she shivered with joy.

When the music ended, he led her back to a little table. She looked about with an elated air.

"What will you have to drink?" asked Dick, disentangling himself from the fringes of her shawl and spying her pink chiffon dress.

Miss Mudge blushed. "Thank you," she said, "but I never drink. You see, I'm a White Ribboner."

"A what?" echoed Dick. "A White Ribboner—teetotaler you know."

"Oh, I see, Band of Hope." He looked at her with a rising gleam of interest. She was really unique—her spirit twinkled brightly through the faded shell of her flesh. It would be fun to tease her a little.

"But you can't possibly go around the world without having a drink," he protested. "It wouldn't be decent. Let me order you something gentle that won't bite."

Miss Mudge was half-persuaded. Light leaped in her eyes; she nodded her head. Dick decided to get her a creme de menthe. She sat very straight in her chair, with her hands folded nervously under her shawl. At times she shot timid glances at her companion, not quite sure what he might be going to do next. The drinks came, and Dick toasted her.

"Happy days on the Mareina!" he said.

Miss Mudge had never been toasted before, but she smiled, said thank-you, and took a swallow. There wasn't very much of it—such a little glass. It surely couldn't go to her head. Suddenly she giggled and set down her drink.

"What's up?" Dick inquired. "Oh, I was just thinking of Ohonto."

"What's Ohonto?"

"Ohonto, Wisconsin—the place

I come from." She seemed to be saying, "It isn't possible that you haven't heard of Ohonto."

"Nice place?"

"Very, I teach there, but I'm having a sabbatical year to see the world."

"I hope you won't be disappointed."

"Oh, no!" Miss Mudge's voice was fervent. "It's wonderful!"

The music had started again, and his companion's face waved eager signals across the table. He swung her to her feet and they danced again—a waltz this time. She clung to him more confidently now, and he smiled down at her as if she were the only woman in the glittering salon. He took her back to her seat and made his adieux, covering her embarrassment with his protective air. Should she go on sitting where he had left her, or should she slip back to her quiet place by the wall? The chief officer was dancing now with Miss Foster. Her lovely arms were twined around his neck. Nevertheless, he remembered Miss Mudge, sitting alone in her corner and tossed her a scarlet balloon. She held it aloft for a moment and smiled at him. Then she let out the air and put the deflated bauble in the black satin bag that Agatha had given her for evening wear. Her first souvenir!

Clare, an enticing Cleopatra, was still dancing with Lovat, a Spanish grandee, Angela watched them over her creme de menthe frappe. She could see that her husband's fingers were deeply sunk in an exquisite back. At last he relinquished his partner and moved smoothly towards her.

"How about turning in, Angela? You're looking tired." His voice was solicitous. She was suddenly ravaged under her make-up.

"I am, rather. Dancing at sea makes one very tired—the strong air, I think, and the bumpy deck."

"But you've scarcely danced at all, Angela," said Lovat, a little crossly.

"Yes, but I feel those things, Lovat darling."

She went below and unhooked her period costume. She took off her powdered wig, but it was scarcely whiter than the smooth hair beneath it. Turning her back on Lovat, she slipped into the loveliest of her negligees, black lace over apricot chiffon.

"You'll be gone from me in five days," she told him. "I wonder if you will miss me when you are back in England."

"I shall simply be lost without you," he assured her.

"Ah, Lovat," Angela's voice was a sigh. "How I shall miss you! Besides, I shall be five months older when I come back."

"You'll always be the same to me," he said, and stooped to kiss her hand. She leaned over his head and her lips brushed the dark laquer of his hair. The mirror revealed the widening path that stretched between them. Angela turned from the sight of his youth. "Whatever happens I shall still adore you," she said.

Lovat studied her as she lay on the pillow—the tenderness of her mouth, her sensitive nose, and the way her hair swept back from her ears; but the mask of age was set as she lay in the semblance of sleep.

He slipped into his dressing-gown and sat with a book under the shaded light. Half an hour passed and he scarcely moved. At last he was sure of her regular breathing and the relaxed look of her face. She must be asleep.

He put down his book, snapped off the light, stole to the door and through the curtain that flapped as the ship rolled noisily on her way.

Two dark eyes caught his jubilant small-boy air as he slipped past the shaft of light. Angela turned to the wall and burning tears rolled slowly down her cheeks.

TODAY and TOMORROW

by FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

UTOPIA . . . dream

More than four hundred years ago Sir Thomas More wrote a book describing a mythical land in which there was no poverty and no crime, where everybody lived happily and peacefully. He was expressing an ideal which all of the great philosophers and religious leaders have discussed and prayed for from the beginning of civilization.

More's word "Utopia," has come to mean an impractical dream of a perfect world. Practical men are inclined to view with distrust any plan for the reorganization of society which does not take the frailties and perversities of human nature into consideration and, so far every effort to bring about Utopian conditions by political methods has been a failure.

I do not believe that universal happiness can be brought about either by legislation or by force.

EQUALITY . . . theory

The idea that all men are created equal and have equal rights is so modern that it was almost born yesterday. Much of the world's present trouble, it seems to me, arises from the acceptance of the ideal of equality without the realization that it is only an ideal and does not exist in reality.

The best that can be hoped for, I am convinced, is a gradual approximation, over a period of hundreds, perhaps thousands of years, to a social order in which everybody will be secure in his enjoyment of whatever his individual character and ability entitle him to; no more, no less.

Economically speaking, that, it seems to me, is the nearest we can come to equality; and that would not mean either equality of wealth, equality of social status or equality of intelligence.

DEMOCRACY . . . the world

If we are ever going to have anything resembling Utopia, it is going to be brought about by the slow and sometimes painful processes of democracy, and not by the dominance of a few over the many or of one class over another class.

The ancient Greeks had what they called a democracy, in which a small group achieved a wide measure of individual liberty, and contentment at the expense of a large group of slaves. Communism, as demonstrated in Russia, seems to me to consist of a small and limited group, members of the Communist Party, living in measurable comfort at the expense of an enormous mass of oppressed peasantry. I have not been able to discover what either the Fascist regime in Italy or the Nazi rule in Germany has contributed to the greater happiness and contentment of the masses in those countries.

GOVERNMENT . . . limited

Many of my friends try to convince me that the sure road to human equality and human happiness lies in the direction of an all-powerful government. I do not agree with them. When they talk that way they are talking about intrusting the lives and the destinies of a whole people to a small group which is conveniently designated by the term "the government." But any government, either of one man or any larger group, is necessarily composed entirely of human beings, themselves subject to all the passions, prejudices, ambitions and other frailties of the rest of the human race.

The weakness of all of the Utopian plans for making the world over lies, it seems to me, in their disregard of the most precious of all human possessions, individual liberty of thought, speech and action. No government is good enough to be entrusted with any power over any individual except the power to keep him from infringing upon any other individual's liberties.

CHARACTER . . . personal

Democracy on the American plan has worked with less justice to the ordinary citizen and greater opportunity for the exceptional individual than any other system of government that has ever been tried. Democracy has worked in America because it developed and brought to a high degree, courage, initiative, self-reliance and personal responsibility in its citizens.

Those are the elements which make up what we call "character." They are not the product of government; they are qualities which are developed in each individual, one by one, by the combined influence of the home, the church, the school and the environment of one's youth. Government cannot make men self-reliant or responsible. It can destroy or impair those qualities by ordering men's lives for them. By putting the emphasis on dollars instead of upon character it can instill the belief that the only thing that counts in life is material success.

Nothing can more effectively block the road to happiness than that.

Ford Building to House Pageant of Transportation

Building operations are under way on the Ford Exposition Building, model of which is shown above, for the Texas Centennial at Dallas, according to officials of the Ford Motor Company.

The Central Contracting Company of Dallas, Texas, has been awarded the general contract for the Ford Exposition Building, it was announced today. The same firm was previously given the foundation contract. The plumbing and ventilating contract will be let later this week.

Excavation for one hundred twenty-one column footings and the pouring of approximately eight hundred cubic yards of concrete for the foundation will be completed this week. Erection of three hundred sixty-three tons of steel will be started immediately, according to officials of the Moshier Steel Company of Dallas, who were given the steel contract. It is estimated the steel frame work will be completed April 12th. The building will be of steel, concrete and sheetrock. It will be completed for the opening of the Exposition June 6th.

The structure which will have a complete air cooling and humidifying system, will contain 55,000 square feet, of which forty-three thousand square feet will contain an interesting group of exhibits showing manufacturing and testing processes used by the Ford Motor Company at its River Rouge plant at Dearborn, Michigan. There will also be a pageant of transportation, dioramas showing the progress of raw materials from the soil of the Southwest to the finished parts of Ford cars and an exhibit from the Henry Ford Trade School.

An outdoor court adds thirty-six thousand square feet to the exhibit's total space. The court will be attractively landscaped with trees, shrubs and flower beds. There will be comfortable chairs and benches distributed in the court where visitors may relax in the shade under colorful umbrellas. There will also be a display of passenger and commercial cars and trucks in the court.

On one side of the Ford Building will be a group of nine reconstructed historic roads and trails known as the "Roads of the Southwest." Each unit of the series will be surfaced with an exact duplicate of the original paving material used on the roads which played important roles in the development of the Southwest. Included in the roads will be San Antonio Road, Fort Worth Pike, "Chisholm Trail," Butterfield Stage Road, Santa Fe Trail, Pan American Highway, Yuma Road, Magazine Street in New Orleans, and Main Street in Dallas.

"Good Neighbor" Role Safest World Policy, Texas Speakers Find

Dallas, March 25. — Playing the role of "good neighbor" in world affairs, and cooperating actively in international efforts to promote peace, should be recognized by the United States as the most effective means to prevent war, economic authorities concluded Saturday after a five-day meeting of the Institute of Public Affairs.

The Institute, sponsored by Southern Methodist University as an educational highlight of the Texas Centennial year, and underwritten by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, presented during the week such names as Clark W. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, W. E. Dunn, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Peter Molyneux, editor of The Texas Weekly, and nearly thirty others.

Recommended strongly by the Institute were downward revision of the tariff structure, affiliation with the World Court and League of Nations in a concerted effort to prevent war, and general restoration of world trade to bring back prosperity. It was pointed out that Texas, as the nation's leading exporting state, was more vitally affected than any other state by world economic tendencies.

THE NEXT WAR

The only certain thing about the next great war is that it will be different from any previous war. That is the way with wars. General staffs and strategists study the latest war in preparation for the next one, and then the enemy springs a surprise on them that changes the whole situation.

The British and French high commands had a great contempt for machine guns in the beginning of the World War. They were going to march right into Germany—until the German machine guns stopped them and they had to "dig in" and fight from fixed positions until they could spring their own surprise—the "tanks." The Germans were contemptuous of tanks, until they found they couldn't stop them with machine guns. It was the British tanks, as much as any one thing, that won the war.

Lord Kitchener, the great English general, couldn't see the value of high explosives. Result, Britain went into the war with only shrapnel shells, such as they had found effective against the Boers in South Africa. Nobody pinned much faith on airplanes in war, at the start. Even when the United States came in, nearly three years after hostilities began, this country had only a couple of dozen or so of military airplanes.

France and Britain sneered at the submarine, until the U-boats began to sink their ships in the North Sea and the British Channel. Poison gas was another surprise sprung by the Germans, for which the Allies were not prepared. Just now all military experts are figuring on much greater use of airplanes in the coming war, two or three or a dozen years hence.

It does not follow, however, that either "planes or gas will be the principal weapons when the "civilized" nations go to war again, though airplanes enabled Japan to win Manchukuo from the unarmed Chinese and have enabled Italy to get farther in Ethiopia than anyone had expected.

It is probable that the next

HE WON'T STARVE, ANYWAY

When the "Bachelor King," Edward VIII of England, intimated to Parliament the other day that he might get married, society gossips all over the world began to speculate as to what particular lady he has in mind. The best guess is that he hasn't picked her yet, but was preparing against the chance that he might decide to get married, when he asked the British House of Commons to provide him an income which would enable him to support a Queen, if he should take one.

Of course, Parliament gave him what he asked for, a mere $2,500,000 a year, the same as his father got. In addition, he keeps the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, which he had as Prince of Wales, and which come to about $350,000 a year. All that looks like a lot of money to pay to one man for just being King. But out of his income the King has to maintain a great staff of courtiers and servants, and keep up a palace or two, so he may not have so much left over.

When you get at the facts, moreover, England gets its King cheaply enough: for Queen Victoria, his great-grandmother, turned over to the British people all of the crown lands, the ruler's individual property, which had come down by inheritance over a thousand years. The revenues from these lands now go into the Treasury instead of into the King's pocket, and come to several times the amount that is paid him to keep up his royal state. So it works out pretty well for everybody.

More than half the indignation that people enjoy is over something that is none of their business at all.

war will introduce new weapons and new horrors of which we have scarcely dreamed as yet, and for which the professional fighting men of the non-military nations, such as the United States and Great Britain, will be as unprepared as they were in the last war.

SPRING REMEDIES

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, March 25—While President Roosevelt is away on his annual fishing trip in Florida waters, the boys on Capitol Hill are doing some serious work trying to draw up a new tax bill which will raise the additional $800,000,000 a year that is necessary to bring the government budget into balance.

They have taken as the basis from which to start the President's proposal to tax corporate reserves, but the more they study it, the less likely it seems that they will adopt the Treasury plan as submitted.

There are two reasons for this hesitancy. One is considerable doubt as to whether it will really raise the necessary revenue and, second, the question whether it would be good public policy to draw down corporate reserves to a point where big industries might not be able to carry on through another depression, as so many of them have done, by the aid of that part of their profits which they had put away for a rainy day.

"Rainy Day" Funds
The United States Steel Corporation, for example, has a reserve of more than $250,000,000 which on the face of it looks pretty big; but the corporation last year paid out over $7,000,000 in dividends on its preferred stock, although it earned only a little less than $1,200,000 profits. The difference came out of the reserve.

U. S. Steel is only one of many corporations which have followed a similar practice throughout the depression years, and as these are studied, the feeling grows that it would not be good economies to go as far as the Treasury has proposed.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House will draft the first bill and the Senate Finance Committee will redraft it. The best guess now is that the resulting measure will leave the net tax burden on corporations about where it now is but will put a heavier tax burden upon the recipients of corporate dividends, thus hitting mainly the income-tax payers who now pay on incomes of from $10,000 a year up.

Politically this will look good to the average voter who does not regard himself as being affected by taxes which he does not pay directly, and it will not give the big industrial incorporations any excuse for reducing employment of curtailing operations. The last thing that Congress wants to do is to pass any laws which would tend to check the rising tide of re-employment.

No Boat Rocking
There has been an increase of about three percent in industrial employment since last May, according to the latest figures of the National Industrial Conference Board. At the same time there has been an increase in the average wage of industrial workers from $21.75 a week to $23.50 a week. Those figures do not show as great an increase in employment and wages as most folks would like to see, but they do indicate a definite upward trend and the feeling on Capitol Hill is to be very careful and not to put over any new legislation which would check this rising tendency.

The most confused situation in Washington is the housing program. A dozen or so diverse points of view held by as many important personages seem to be in almost hopeless conflict.

The efforts to smooth out the situation point now toward an adjustment which will take the Federal Government entirely out of the financing of slum-clearance projects, subsistence home-steads and other projects for providing low cost housing for the poor, but will set up one powerful Government bureau to stimulate private loans under Government guarantee for all of these and other low-cost housing projects.

The threat of an early European war is regarded here as more serious than previously. The realization that in such an event any one of a hundred things might work to drag the United States into another war is growing. The recent neutrality resolution is not regarded by practical-minded students of international affairs as likely to be effective for its avowed purpose.

Thoughts Toward Defense
Renewed interest is being shown in our own military preparations. The McSwain bill to increase our army airplanes to 4,000 has been favorably reported in the House. The United States Army today has only 776 serviceable planes.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs has recommended an appropriation of $600,000,000 for the War Department, to provide, among other things, for increasing the regular army from 140,000 men to 165,000. The War Department has just let contracts for 512 airplane engines to cost $43,000,000, most of them the most powerful ever built.

Political gossip here is swinging back to a discussion of the chances of the formation of a third party, headed by Al Smith and the Liberty League crowd. Active efforts to organize such a "Constitutional Party" are said to be under way, but a good deal of doubt is expressed as to whether any great following of anti-Administration Democrats would flock to its standard.

Opponents of Governor Landon of Kansas, regarded now as in the lead for the Republican nomination, are bringing up against him the fact that he is receiving a great deal of pre-convention support from Oklahoma oil interests—which is quite natural considering that he has been connected with the oil business all his life and owns much oil-producing land.

Emergency Wind Erosion Program Ready to Go into Immediate Action

College Station — The emergency wind erosion program being administered by A. and M. College through the Texas Extension Service is ready to go into immediate action as soon as funds are received from Washington, D. C., Director H. H. Williamson of the Extension Service has announced.

"A major part of the counties are organized in the Panhandle area and applications for treasurer's bonds are being received," the Director said.

He went on to say that all application forms have been sent out to the counties and the administrative machinery is set up at College Station to handle the emergency wind erosion program with the least possible delay.

Director Williamson explained that the program will be handled in the counties by county wind erosion committees elected by the county council. These committees will consist of three farmers, who will elect a chairman and a treasurer. The treasurer of such an organization need not be a member of the committee.

The county agricultural agent will act as secretary and be responsible for the educational phases of the work and generally supervise the program. The county agricultural agent will represent the Director of the Texas Extension Service.

Other points of the emergency wind erosion program are: The county committee will appoint community committeemen, who must approve farmers' applications, and, after the work has been completed, certify before final payment is made that the work has been completed as specified by the county committee and agreed to by the applicant.

Checks for 60 per cent of the total grant will be issued to each farmer upon approval of application, and the balance paid upon certification that the work has been completed.

Only solid listing or strip listing or chiseling can be approved by the county committee, and all work must be done on the contour.

"This requirement has been made," the Director explained,

"in order to conserve all moisture and assure a vegetative covering that will prevent the occurrence of the same situation next spring."

K. J. Edwards, who has been appointed as Assistant District Agent for Soil Conservation Work for the Panhandle area, will assist in the wind erosion program. He will have his permanent headquarters at the Potter county agent's office in Amarillo.

All field work will be carried on by Parker D. Hanna, Extension district agent of the Panhandle area, and O. G. Tomlinson, Extension district agent of the South Plains area, through the county agricultural agents in each of the counties affected by the emergency wind erosion program.

MILLIONS OF POUNDS HAVE BEEN USED BY OUR GOVERNMENT

The Automatic Electric Range Is the Answer!

Every member of the family appreciates wholesome, well-cooked food. It's necessary to health! However, few people realize, except the housewife, the toil and drudgery necessary to prepare three meals a day. Just think of preparing over a thousand meals a year beside the many other laborious duties of a housewife.

Many West Texas homemakers have found a happy solution in the elimination of unnecessary toil in the kitchen. Today, the modern mother can place an entire meal in the oven of her range, set the oven control and time control and return home hours later to find a "piping hot" meal ready to serve. This is the marvel of automatic electric cookery!

On Texas Farms

Henderson— Eighty-three cuttings were rooted, 15 trees were put out, three kinds of vines were used for screening, and 11 varieties of flowers were grown by Mrs. A. R. Slaughter, 1935 yard improvement demonstrator for the New London home demonstration club in Rusk county, according to Miss Marie Wilmeth, assistant home demonstration agent.

As her soil was poor and rocky, Mrs. Slaughter filled in the yard with new top soil and sodded the lawn with bermuda. In the spring she rooted two cape jasmine, four crepe myrtle, two eunonymous, two pussy willows, and 25 each of abelia, wax leaf ligustrum, and amour river privet. In the fall, these plants were transplanted to the shrub beds.

The trees consisted of three red buds, three umbrella chinias, three sumacs, and six sycamores.

Wharton — Discarded storage space in the bedroom of Elvira Martinez, bedroom demonstrator of the Pierce 4-H club in Wharton county, has been transformed into a convenient clothes closet for only 50 cents, according to Miss Della A. Pfluger, assistant home demonstration agent.

By adding a six inch board, the 18 inch closet was made large enough to hang the clothes as they should be. The 45 inches of wasted space in the upper part of the closet was made usable for storing bedding by adding a partition and building a door. A rod was added and a shoe rack was built.

Until her closet was remodelled, Elvira hung her clothes in another corner of the room with a curtain around them.

Vernon — "When my neighbor, J. E. Earnhart, terraced his farm and caught all the surplus water off my farm, I thought he did a foolish thing," says Fred Coburn of the Tobert community in Wilbarger county. "However, when harvest time came in 1935 and he gathered twice as many bales of cotton on the same number of acres as I did, I decided that terracing was not so disastrous." Mr. Coburn is terracing his land now, according to Fred Rennels, county agricultural agent.

Brady—K. W. Huffman, McCulloch county dairyman, increased the flow of milk from his 22 cows by 16 gallons per day when he opened his trench silo and added 20 pounds of silage daily to the ration of each cow. Huffman was one of the 13 McCulloch county farmers working with J. D. Prewitt, county agricultural agent, who each dug and filled a trench silo last fall.

These silos were put down as drouth insurance, but when the small grain pasture was frozen and the milk production of his herd fell below the profit line, Huffman decided not to wait for the drouth to begin using his silage.

Decatur — By feeding 91 pigs for 36 days, Leon Atkerson of Wise county made a net profit of $1,134, according to D. F. Eaton, county agricultural agent. The pigs averaged 140 pounds each when started. The hogs cost $155, cost of feed was $279, and they brought $1868 when sold. The hogs consumed 360 bushels of corn, 3600 pounds of peanut meal, 1800 pounds of cotton seed meal and 1800 lbs. of tankage. Atkerson attributes his success to good hogs, plenty of feed properly balanced and good care.

On Texas farms and ranches they are planning to put into operation the new Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act. And along with all the rest of the State they are celebrating the Centennial.

As they walk their fields and ride their fences thinking about the soil and deciding what lands to withdraw from depleting crops, will they be a bit rueful as they remember that only one hundred years have passed over the State? The ruin wrought by erosion would not have come so soon if better care had been taken.

Cotton—hailed as king; and cottonseed, the recognized crown prince of King Cotton's reign.

HITLER TELLS THE WORLD

BERLIN, Germany . . . Chancellor Adolf Hitler (right), told all the world why he was sending German arms into the demilitarized area along the Rhine (shaded area on map), in violation of the Locarno pact and the Versailles treaty. He then dissolved Parliament and called for a general election for March 29th. Hitler's claim is that Germany is released from its treaty obligations by the recently signed Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact. CHEVROLET OFFICIAL NAMED CENTENNIAL RANGER BY ALLRED

Dallas, March 10. — Governor James V. Allred of Texas has commissioned William E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet Motor Co., a Texas Centennial Ranger in recognition of his eminence in the automobile industry and his friendship for Texas.

The official presentation of Mr. Holler's commission took place Saturday in Dallas at the grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition. General Manager Webb of the exposition made the presentation.

"I deeply appreciate the honor conferred upon me by Governor Allred," said Mr. Holler at the ceremony. "The magnitude of the Texas Centennial is much greater than I had realized before seeing it. Millions of visitors from all parts of the United States will unquestionably see this magnificent exposition during the summer. I hope to be one of them and think the whole Southwest should be complimented for arranging such an interesting and instructive exposition."

The celebration and exposition will start June 6. Twenty-five million dollars are being spent on grounds and buildings. Most of the buildings are being constructed for permanency. The site is the grounds of the Texas State Fair.

A beautiful and permanent stadium seating 50,000 people will attract sports of high caliber. The exposition counts on 12,000,000 attendance this summer.

have been such staunch cash crops that it has been easier to allow them full sway than for each of us to think our way through the problem of each piece of land for which we were responsible.

But like all monarchs left by their subjects to their own devices they have tended to become tyrants and act on the "after me the deluge" plan.

With the present and future good of the land and all whose security rests on its continued fertility and productiveness, cotton has come to be classified—on performance—as a soil depleting crop.

With the understanding of its effect on the soil it may still be a tremendously valuable crop. But the wise farmer will not plant and replant any piece of land in it year after year.

Texas Farmers Practice Soil Conservation

College Station — Terracing and erosion control demonstrations were conducted by county agricultural agents on 9,791 Texas farms involving 702,152 acres during 1935, according to figures compiled from county agents' annual reports by M. R. Bentley, Extension agricultural engineer. The work covered 191 counties.

An estimate of the total amount of work done by county agricultural agents, vocational teachers, farmers, and others in the State amounted to 1,178,642 acres on which terrace or contour lines were run during the past year. The work involved 19,040 farms in 202 counties. The nearest approach to this in previous years was in 1931 when 1,000,000 acres were reported.

In 118 counties, county owned tractor and grader outfits terraced 165,656 acres.

In 13 counties the commissioners' court has voted favorably on using a portion of the funds from auto license tag fees for terracing as proposed in Senate Bill No. 227. In 130 other counties, the county tractor-grader outfits are available for terracing at approximately the cost of operator's wages and gas and oil, or at a higher rate, when they are not being used for road work.

In addition to the terracing work done, 948,860 acres in northwest Texas were chiselled during 1935.

The estimated number of acres in pastures which have been terraced in Texas is 248,928. This is the first time that this figure has been asked for in annual reports of the county agricultural agents, and it includes the terracing of pastures done in all previous years, not in 1935 alone.
