REVIVALIST TALKS TO LIONS AT TUES- DAY'S LUNCHEON

MUSICAL NUMBERS GIV- EN MUCH APPLAUSE BY LIONS.

Rev. D. A. Chisholm, Brown-wood minister who is conducting the revival services in progress at the First Methodist church, was the principal speaker at Tuesday's Lions Club luncheon, using as his subject, "Community Building." The speaker said, among other things, that the support of Christian churches and public schools was all-important in community building as no man, whether he ever darkened a church or not, would live in a town which did not have these institutions.

Featuring the entertainment part of the program were three voice numbers with accordion accompaniment by Miss Marijohn Melson of Sanger, Texas. Miss Melson is in the city visiting her aunt, Mrs. Lula White, and uncles, Messrs. B. G. and M. L. Owens. Two voice numbers with piano accompaniment were given by Larry Smith of Fort Worth, who is here in charge of the music at the Methodist revival.

C. L. Green, club president, was in charge of the opening exercises while Morey Millerman was toastmaster. The club meets next Tuesday at noon at Crews.

PAY YOUR BILL OR HAVE WATER CUT OFF--MAYOR

DELINQUENTS HAVE TO 15TH TO SETTLE BILLS.

Mayor J. W. Copeland said yesterday that unless delinquents made satisfactory arrangements by the 15th of August, their water service would be cut off.

Said Mayor Copeland: "I have discussed this matter with members of the council and they have instructed me to straighten this situation out, even if I have to cut off the water service. I find that entirely too many customers of the water department have money with which to do other things but none for their water bills. So I wish to say to those who are failing in the payments of their bills that they will avoid a very embarrassing situation for themselves as well as myself by taking care of this matter before August 15th."

Mayor Copeland said also that several merchants had recently been burning waste paper on the downtown streets and asked that the practice be discontinued, as it also is in violation of a city ordinance.

GOOD CROWD AT- TENDS TRENCH SI- LO DEMONSTRATION

J. A. Barton, county agent, in town yesterday said that more than seventy-five farmers were in attendance at the trench silo demonstration on the C. W. Colburn farm, 9 miles north of Winters, last Monday, and much interest was manifested in this new method of putting up feed for future use.

E. R. Eudaly of A. & M. College, was the principal speaker at the demonstration, and urged farmers to save all feeds for future use by using the trench silo method. He said records proved that feeds stored in trench silos had remained in good condition after being stored for eleven years.

County Agent Barton said that several farmers attending the demonstration indicated that they would dig trench silos this year. Bulletins on the subject were distributed. Those interested in securing one of these bulletins may do so by contacting or writing the county agent.

J. M. Martin, new vocational agriculture teacher of the Wingate school, attended the demonstration.

Mr. Barton announced that the West Texas Cotton Growers Association would hold a cotton classing school at Abilene the week of August 10th to 15th, inclusive, at which the new government grade standards which go into effect August 20th, will be displayed and explained by H. W. Thompson, Federal Specialist in Cotton Classing.

Hair-Raising Adventures in "Florida Special," Knockout Farce Thriller, Coming to Queen Theatre Sat'day Nite

PIONEER DAYS ARE COMEDY BACKGROUND FOR WHEELER-WOOLSEY IN "SILLY BILLIES," SHOWING TODAY-SATURDAY.

Comedy, melodrama and romance are mixed lavishly in "Florida Special," newest contribution from the Paramount studios, which opens Saturday at the midnight preview at the Queen Theatre with Jack Oakie and Sally Eilers in the leading roles. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are featured together with Dorothy Lee in "Silly Billies," showing today and tomorrow, "Hitch Hike Lady" with Alison Skipworth, Mae Clark and Arthur Treacher will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday. William Powell and Rosalind Russell are starred in "Rendezvous" showing Thursday night only.

"Florida Special"
Jack Oakie plays the role of a devil-may-care newspaper reporter, Shanghaied by Kent Taylor, wealthy playboy companion, on a train bound for the sunny south, he is forced to desert his newspaper to accompany the youth, who thinks his heart is broken by a blighted romance. On the trip, Oakie accidentally runs into a sensational story that proves the scoop of the year for his newspaper. On board the Florida flyer are an eccentric millionaire, his crooked secretary and his niece. Chained to the secretary is a box of uncut diamonds worth a vast fortune which the wealthy man is taking South with him. Rival gangs of crooks learn of the splendid haul possible on the train, and they board it, murder the secretary and are preparing to do away with the niece when Oakie prevents them from carrying out the act. He is not soon enough to prevent the jewels from being stolen, however and they disappear.

"Silly Billies"
Striking a brand-new note in feature comedy, the use of the covered wagon era as a setting, the new picture presents a wagon-train during the gold rush and an Indian attack on the caravan as its principal climaxes along with stage coach hold-ups and other exciting moments as backgrounds for the antics of the famous mirth-making pair. And while the antics are hilarious, the backgrounds themselves are as authentic as it is possible to make them. Between forty and fifty exact reproductions of pioneer vehicles were built and used in the covered-wagon sequences and the Indian attack and rescue by United States cavalry were filmed with great accuracy and attention to detail.

"Hitch Hike Lady"
It is the story of an aged, English housekeeper who receives a small inheritance and decides to join her son in California; the boy unknown to her is an inmate of San Quentin prison. The passage to America uses up most of her funds, and upon her arrival in New York she decides to hitch hike her way to the West Coast. Enroute she encounters an English confidence man, a gangster, a young trailer salesman, and a pretty blonde dress designer of New York. All of them are bound for California and she makes them a part of her entourage. The members of the party learn that the old lady is in ignorance of the fact that her son is a prison inmate, and their efforts to keep her from learning the truth provide many of the excruciating comedy situations. Alison Skipworth has the leading role, in support are such capable players as Mae Clarke, Jimmy Ellison, and Arthur Treacher.

"Rendezvous"
The story concerns the efforts of William Powell, an ex-newspaper man and expert on codes and cyphers to decode enemy messages intercepted by the Intelligence Department, and the combined efforts of all to prevent the destruction of the American troop ships enroute to France by German submarines. Through this pattern runs the thread of the light romance between Rosalind Russell, a romance more than apt to remind audiences of Powell's previous effort, "The Thin Man." At the entrance of the United States into the World War, Powell resigns his position on a Washington newspaper and enlists for service overseas. He accidentally meets Miss Russell and reveals to her that he is really an expert on code and cyphers, the very man for whom the Intelligence Department has been searching, but one who wants action in the trenches instead of behind a desk. As a result he winds up behind the desk at the War Department, working on enemy code messages, and trying to prevent himself from falling in love with Miss Russell.

GRAVEYARD WORKING
There will be a graveyard working at Atoka, in the edge of Coleman county, on Friday, September 4th, which is the first Friday in September. Everybody interested is urged to attend and help with the work.
Dinner is to be served on the ground, and everyone is urged to bring well filled baskets.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schindler and son, Billie, of Marlin, were recent visitors with relatives and friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Schindler were former owners of a variety store here.

TODAY and TOMORROW

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

QUAKERTOWN visit
The other day we got into the car and motored out to Quakertown, Pa., where my friend Charley Meredith runs one of the best county weekly newspapers I know of, the Quakertown Free Press.
I was struck by the apparent prosperity of that section. I talked with several business men and a number of farmers in Bucks County. It's good farming country and there is no distress that I could learn of among the farmers there. Very few people are on relief. About the only sign of relief activities are the train-loads of city unemployed sent out to work on some projects in the southern part of the country.

Self-reliance is a traditional characteristic of these sturdy Quaker and 'Pennsylvania Dutch' people.

HOUSES 2-foot walls
We had luncheon in an old stone farm house built more than 200 years ago and still occupied by descendants of the original builder. We saw hundreds of similar stone houses, with two-foot walls and slate roofs, built to withstand the elements. There is plenty of stone all around that region, both red sandstone and limestone, and the early settlers did what the first settlers in every new country always do—built their homes of the native material close at hand.

We hear a great deal about "prefabricated" homes, built of steel or plastic slabs made in factories, and I have no doubt that we shall see great developments in that line. But I think they will be mostly erected in city suburbs. They are not likely to replace local materials, where those are available, assembled by local labor in country districts where almost every man can turn his hand to carpentry or masonry.

WASHINGTON crossing
We crossed the Delaware River at the very spot where George Washington crossed it in a rowboat on his historic retreat from Trenton. The bridge at Washington's Crossing connects two state parks, one maintained by Pennsylvania and the other by New Jersey.

Paralleling the Delaware River on both sides are canals, dug by early colonists to provide safe navigation no matter what the stage of the water was in the river. Both canals have been long since abandoned except as millraces for occasional sawmills and gristmills along the river bank. But the State of Pennsylvania is making a park a hundred miles long out of the banks and bed of the old Delaware Canal, to provide picnic and recreation grounds and smooth, safe waters for canoeing.

Even an abandoned canal has its uses.

GADGETS some wanted
I saw a new gadget the other day which its makers tell me is selling faster than they can turn it out. It is a garbage grinder that you put in the kitchen sink. It grinds the table and kitchen waste to a fine powder which is then washed down the drain, saving all the labor and smells of garbage cans and their emptying.

It struck me that its inventor was a genius. It takes a genius to foresee that people are going to want something which hasn't yet been made.

Forty years ago there was no public demand for automobiles or radios. Nobody had ever seen them so nobody knew that they wanted them. Half of the things that women buy in the stores are things they did not know they wanted until they saw them in the show windows.

Too many inventors, on the other hand, make the mistake of trying to produce something which they think people ought to have, without knowing enough about human nature to realize that the things we ought to have are not always the things we want.

John Daniels of Abilene was a visitor here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. McCarley have recently moved to Winters from San Angelo and are located on West Dale Street in the O. D. Dillingham house.

Miss Callie Fae Anderson of Novice, visited in the home of her aunt, Mrs. Emmett Bishop, north of town, the past weekend.

Citizens Here Get Chance to Vote In Nation-Wide Presidential Poll

THIS PAPER AMONG NATIONAL GROUP TAKING STRAW-VOTE.

Which of the presidential candidates in the national election this fall is going to carry Texas, Runnels county and Winters?

Which of the candidates will get the highly important small-town and rural vote? Which candidate will get those votes in the majority of states throughout the nation?

These are questions, the answers to which will no doubt play an important part in the final national returns next November. Upon the choice of the small-town and rural America voters may rest the balance of power to swing the election for the successful candidate.

Reports from throughout the country indicate that voters everywhere are manifesting exceptionally keen interest in the political campaign now well under way. All signs point to a closely contested election.

It is therefore of especial interest at this time that the publishers of weekly newspapers throughout the country have launched a nation-wide presidential straw-vote, to learn "which way the wind is blowing" with the small town and rural American voters.

In Nation-Wide Poll
The Enterprise has joined in with these weekly newspapers and will conduct the vote in this territory. A straw-vote ballot is published in this issue. It may be voted by any legal voter. You do not have to sign your name. It is important, however, that you sign the name of the town and state from which you expect to cast your vote at the November election, so that the national tabulation of your vote will be accurately recorded.

Publishers Auto-caster Service of New York, producers of a service for weekly newspapers, is to serve in the capacity of national headquarters for this nation-wide vote. Your local vote will first be recorded here in Winters, then the ballot sent on to New York for national tabulation.

Our Votes are Important
Our local, county and state returns in this straw-vote will be of particular interest to voters everywhere, just as returns from other states will be of interest to the voters here. It is only through combined efforts of hundreds of weekly newspapers that such a record of sentiment in the small towns and rural America can be obtained.

It is therefore important that you decide now to cast your straw-vote in this balloting, so that your fellow voters for your favorite candidate in other states will know what may be expected from Texas.

Of first interest, of course, will be the returns shown in our choices right here in Winters and its trade territory. Decide now to cast your vote. Clip out

Marines Expecting to Enroll Record-Breaking Number of Men During Next 3 Months

Information reaching here today from Lieut.-Colonel Tom E. Thrasher, Jr., officer in charge of recruiting in Los Angeles, states that the Marine Corps Recruiting service is expected to enlist more men during the next three months than at any equal period for the past five years.

Due to the increase allowed the Marine Corps by the last naval bill, the sea soldiers find themselves 500 men understrength on June 1, 1936. This number will be enlisted from all parts of the United States, the Los Angeles office due to its proximity to the San Diego base will accept an unlimited number of young men for immediate enlistment.

Young men desiring to apply for enlistment who live in the vicinity of Los Angeles should call at Room 309 Douglas building, 257 South Spring Street. Those living in areas away from Los Angeles may write for particulars and examination papers to the above address.

The requirements for accepted applicants are: 18 to 28 years of age, in exceptional cases men will be accepted up to 30 years. At least a common school education, no dependents, of excellent character, 66 to 74 inches in height and be able to pass a rigid physical examination.

The Marine Corps has been keeping pace with the times, states Colonel Thrasher, a young man entering the service today has an opportunity to complete one of the many courses offered free of charge by the Marine Corps Institute, and with the physical training and experience that he receives with extensive traveling. He is better qualified to command a better position and salary upon reentering civilian life. Many young men leave the Marine Corps to accept positions as radio operators and aviation mechanics, also civil service positions are a great inducement to Marines who wish to serve but one enlistment and prepare themselves with a civil service course from the Marine Corps institute, with the five percent preference given to ex-service men they are in a very favorable position to receive an early appointment.

The GOOSE WOMAN

by REX BEACH

NINTH INSTALMENT

SYNOPSIS . . . Amos Ethridge is found murdered in a country lane with a crude cross of twigs on his breast and a scented sheet of note paper in his pocket. He was the richest man in the state with power and influence enough to make himself candidate for Governor. With his death came hints of an unsavory private life, of wronged women and betrayed husbands and fathers who had reason to wish him dead. There was also a powerful secret political organization opposed to him . . . Mary Holmes, called "the goose woman" by newspaper reporters, lives nearest the scene of the crime on a small chicken farm where she ekes out a poor living and tries to find in drink the forgetfulness of past glories when she was Maria di Nardi, world-renowned opera singer . . . Gerald Holmes, a talented young artist, is hated and loved by his mother who is embittered because his birth caused the loss of her voice and wrecked her operatic career. He has been befriended by the murdered Ethridge, and is engaged to another of Amos Ethridge's proteges . . . Hazel Woods, lovely and brilliant young actress, has been helped to success by Ethridge. She lives in a small cottage owned by Ethridge . . . Jacob Riggs, eccentric oldtime actor, now a doorman at the theatre where Hazel Woods plays, has appointed himself her guardian and lives in a room over her garage.

On Monday came the news that Mary Holmes was ill, completely prostrated by her son's arrest, and by the frightful realization of what she had done. This, too, was tasty. People enjoyed sympathizing with the innocent.

Mrs. Holmes was indeed ill, not, however, by reason of what she had sworn to, but by reason of what she had drunk. That boy's choice of liquor had not been wise and Vogel had been summoned early Sunday morning to learn that his principal witness was suffering from "non-alcoholic" poisoning. Realizing that the truth regarding her condition would surely become known and very likely prejudice her reliability as a witness if he sent her to a hospital, he insisted that she remain where she was, meanwhile receiving, of course, the best medical attention. He, it was who gave out the story of her collapse.

Gerald, very naturally, had no reason to question the cause of his mother's illness. It seemed to him that his plight was enough to prostrate her, but it destroyed his immediate hopes of disproving the charges against him. He was allowed to read the papers, but what he read appalled him. It was conceivable, of course, that his mother had actually witnessed the killing, as she maintained, and had told him nothing about it—she was eccentric; there was no telling what she might do or how she was likely to behave under the influence of liquor—but he strongly doubted this and clung to the conviction that she would confess to a wild and imaginative romance or that somebody would prove her story to be, in part, at least, the fanciful creation of an alcoholic brain. But would she confess? How could she bring herself to do so? Granting that she now realized where the truth of her story ended and imagination began, an assumption which, by the way, was not likely, was her love for him sufficient to warrant humiliation? Moreover, could she undo the wrong she had done, even if she tried? These were questions Gerald could not answer. As a matter of fact, he did not try very hard to answer them, for something more important than his own welfare weighed him down and rendered him apathetic—it was the misfortune that had befallen Hazel. From what he read in the newspapers, it seemed to him that he was the only person in the world who believed in her. The poor girl must be suffering more keenly than he. Hers was the greater tragedy.

Gerald was surprised on Monday to receive a visit from two lawyers, members of the leading local firm, and to learn that they had been retained as his counsel. He assumed, of course, that his mother had sent them and he took cheer from that fact, but he gained little comfort out of talking with them aside from the realization that some one stood beside him.

He had expected some word, some communication from Hazel; but none came and at last her silence convinced him that she, too, believed in his guilt. It was a bitter pill to swallow, but, after all, why should she doubt his own mother's word?

Some people are possessed of such self-confidence, and such high regard for their own importance, that they assume others must share that faith. It is a form of conceit, and no doubt it is a blessing to the possessor, but Jerry was not conceited. He was a humble-minded, modest young man and he considered himself of very little consequence indeed. Upon consideration it seemed quite natural that Hazel should wish to be assured of his innocence before yielding to her impulses. Had he not tried her sufficiently without putting her love to this test? He told himself that he had.

For several days Mary Holmes remained a very sick woman. Instead of enjoying her unparalleled publicity she lay abed weak, nauseated, suffering wretchedly. When at last she was able to lift her head she eagerly demanded the daily papers and a complete account of all that had happened since she was stricken, but not until she was strong enough to sit up did the doctor permit her curiosity to be gratified. Then he told her guardedly that the "man in the robe" had been arrested and that the Ethridge case had been solved. He did not tell her who that man was, but he prepared her for a shock. She listened incredulously, in a daze. He gave her the papers finally and left her alone to read them.

He returned to the sick room after a while to find his patient staring blankly at the wall. "I thought you might feel the need of a stimulant," he said.

Mrs. Holmes did not hear him. "Did—Jerry do it?" she inquired, stupidly.

"You ought to know. You saw him."

"But they can't—they can't do anything to him on evidence like mine, can they?"

"Why not? It's hard to get a conviction on purely circumstantial evidence, but yours is direct." There was a moment of silence. "The reporters are calling up every few hours. They want to interview you as soon as you're able to talk to them. Everybody is curious to know what you'll have to say. Yes, and the Woods girl has been here half a dozen times."

"I won't see them, nor her, either. Why does she want to talk to me? Hasn't she done enough? I shouldn't think she'd dare show her face on the street after causing all this and after everybody knows what she is." Mrs. Holmes found the doctor staring curiously at her; in irritation she flared out: "Why are you looking at me like that? What's the matter with you?"

"You're a queer creature. I was wondering how it feels for a mother—but you can't be much of a mother?" The speaker shrugged.

"How dare you?" Mrs. Holmes cried, shrilly. "The idea of your talking to me like that! I'm sick. I'm in no condition to—Why, even the newspapers blackguard me! But how did I know? What could I do? I never dreamed I'd—that it was—Jerry I saw."

Without comment the doctor turned and left the room.

The sick woman raised herself laboriously, gathered the newspapers together and flung them as far as she could. A terribly bitter but impotent feeling of resentment came over her; tears wet her cheeks. Again she had been fooled. The world was always against her. Why did everything she touched go wrong? Why was she frustrated in everything she tried to do? So Jerry had bought an automobile without telling her about it! That's where the whole trouble had started—out of his deceit. He was not only cold and indifferent; he was deceitful. He had been her ruin, from the very first; now he had ruined both of them. But he had brought this upon himself. The fool. She had never hated anybody as she hated him at this moment, for once again he had turned her triumph into disaster.

How could she help hating him when he despised her and disapproved of everything she did? Well, why should she worry? There was no love lost between them and the mere fact of their relationship meant nothing. It was an irksome tie . . . There had been a time when it meant something; he had seemed to care a great deal for her when he was a little boy . . . He had been a pretty boy, by the way, with cute, lovable ways. Mrs. Holmes stirred restlessly and rolled her head. But no longer! All he did now was preach and voice his contempt . . . Contempt from her own son. Well, this would take him down a peg. He'd have to get out of this scrape the best way he could; she did not propose to make a liar out of herself, to make herself ridiculous or—worse . . .

She couldn't go back on her sworn statement, even if she wanted to. That was perjury. And this Woods hussy who had played at love-making with him, what did she want? Help, of course, in clearing him. Humph! Some mothers might feel called up to go to extreme lengths for their sons, but not she. No. She would not talk to her.

The next day, however, when Hazel Woods came again, Mary Holmes suddenly changed her mind and had the girl sent up stairs. She was feeling strong enough to sit up in a chair by this time; she steeled herself to endure some hysterical outburst, some extravagant appeal to her sympathies. It surprised her when none came. Miss Woods was haggard and listless, but she was in perfect control of herself. She had fine eyes, the elder woman noted, but they were hopeless and they gave the impression of thorough defeat. She made it plain with her first words that she accepted as true what had been given out through the papers—namely, that Mrs. Holmes' illness was the result of shock and maternal anxiety, and took it for granted that she was ready to join in any effort, however desperate, to undo the mischief she had caused.

This gave the mother a disagreeable sensation. She inquired coldly, "Have you been to see him?"

Hazel shook her head; her voice faltered. "How could I, after what came out? I was tried, convicted, and—publicly branded, all in one day. It would only cause him pain to see me and I can spare him that." After a moment she went on: "I've done what little I can. I've hired the best lawyers in the city but—that is so little." Again she choked. "Oh, Mrs. Holmes, he didn't do it! I know it and so do you, but what can we do?"

"I—Nothing, I'm afraid."

"We must do something. Don't you understand the danger here in? If it hadn't been for your statement—"

"Oh, of course, blame it on me!" irritably cried the elder woman. "I suppose everybody expects me to—to go back on my oath, just because he's my son."

The girl pondered this gravely, then nodded. "Why, yes, I suppose they do expect that. It's what any mother would do. I'd lie. I'd steal, I'd sin, I'd do—" anything if I had one. But—"

"He has never been a real son to me. He never cared a snap for me. He has caused me every bit of unhappiness I ever had. I've had more than my share, by the way." The speaker's tone was one of utmost bitterness.

"And yet it makes no difference, does it? You love him just the same." Mrs. Holmes uttered a derisive sound. "Oh, now! Why try to deceive me? We women nurse our babies at our breasts and no matter how old or how big or how bad they became they are still our babies and we fight for them, tooth and nail. I'm a woman, I know."

"Humph! We fight for our lovers, too. Do you, honestly—care for Jerry?"

"I love him. I want him so much that I'd—burn eternally to have him for one day, one hour. You must know how I feel. I'm speaking to Maria di Nardi . . . But that's not all. I care for him so sincerely that I wouldn't marry him, even if he asked me. It's too late. You understand that, don't you? He can be cleared; he can make a name for himself; people will forget, so far as he is concerned. But they'll never forget the girl in the Ethridge case. You see, Mrs. Holmes, I'm not the great artist that you were. You had a God-given voice and a God-given genius. Maria di Nardi wasn't an ordinary woman; she was more; she was one out of many millions. She loved and suffered more intensely than we common women; she topped greater heights and sounded lower depths. Jerry told me the story you told him. It is the divine talent, the heaven-sent gift of the artist, that we must worship, not the weak, human artist herself. The one is so insignificant, so unimportant as compared with the other."

Mary Holmes experienced a grateful warmth about her heart at these words. Here was a fellow "professional," a woman with soul and understanding. Hazel was still speaking:

"Jerry feels the same way. Even what you told him that last night made no real difference in his regard for you. When you say he is no son, that he never loved you, you are so mistaken. The world suffered a loss when you lost your voice, but have passed on, through him, a talent perhaps as precious as your own. It must be saved—not for us only, but for the world. Your career was ruined; you can't permit his to be destroyed."

WIDER MARKETS FOR TEXAS PRODUCTS IS AIM SAFEWAY STORES

Creation of wider markets for Texas agricultural products by stimulating increased consumption has been the object of five intensive farmer-consumer campaigns waged by Safeway, Inc., during the past six months, it was announced here today.

The campaigns which have been praised by farm leaders throughout the country were conducted in behalf of various industries representing beef, lamb, citrus fruits, dairy products, and canned peaches.

L. B. Harris, Divisional Advertising Manager of Safeway Stores, Inc., in announcing results of these five campaigns said that additional farmer-consumer crusades would be waged during the balance of the year.

"This plan to help agriculture was originated by Safeway nearly five years ago when sheep men were faced with financial ruin because of enormous surpluses," he said.

"In that critical period Safeway through extensive newspaper advertising and increased sales efforts marketed in excess of 15,000 lambs in two days.

"This cooperative movement resulted in immediate financial salvation for the sheep industry and led to the inauguration of these farmer-consumer campaigns which have so successfully demonstrated the advantages of the chain store method of distribution."

Praise for the help extended to their respective industries as a result of these farmer-consumer campaigns have been voiced by officials of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, Pacific States Livestock Marketing Association, California Fruit Growers Exchange, Utah Wool Growers, Idaho Wool Growers Association, Montana Wool Growers Association, Arizona Cattle Growers' Association, the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association, American Livestock Association, and many other agricultural groups throughout the country.

R. C. Pollock, secretary of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, in a communication to R. W. Doe, vice president of Safeway, said in part:

"Your campaigns have been very complete, well organized, and without doubt very effective. I know that your activity along this line is appreciative by all branches of the livestock and meat industry."

Summarizing the effect of the campaigns, Mr. Harris said Safeway is striving continually to reduce living costs to consumers and at the same time provide the farmer with an easy and profitable distributing system without paying unnecessary 'in between' expenses.

A zoological display containing more than 1200 specimen of insects, many of them native to Texas, is on display at the University Centennial Exposition at the University of Texas in Austin. The display will go into the Texas Memorial Museum when the first unit is completed late in the fall, as will all other displays on exhibit in the University Centennial Exposition.

The Centennial half dollars, depicting the history of the State itself, are much sought after for souvenirs from the Texas Centennial Exposition by out-of-state visitors and Texans.

BRUCE BARTON Says! PAS

STRIVE FOR CLASS B RATING

The late Dwight Morrow had this saying, which is often repeated by his friends: "You can divide all the members of the human race into two classes. There are the Class A people who get credit for what other people do, and there are the Class B people who do the things for which the Class A folks get the credit." And he added: "A wise decision is to try to keep your membership in Class B. You accomplish more, and there is much less competition."

His career contained plenty of proof that he took his own medicine. Some of us, who were close to him during the war and in his subsequent activities as Ambassador to Mexico and as delegate to the Disarmament Conference in London, know how often the idea was Morrow's while the glory went, with his full approval, to some one with more medals and gold braid.

The yen for popular acclaim is normal and provides the steam that turns a lot of wheels. Men will work to be praised, and to have their wives and children think they are Big Stuff. Every move in statesmanship finds a dozen gentlemen, each of whom will tell you that he was the one who did the arranging. In a business organization, if a new idea succeeds, you learn that every officer from the President down was the geni who conceived it.

Seven cities claimed Homer after he was dead. The proponents of a dozen candidates have tried to steal fame of Shakespeare. Class A is always full. Meanwhile, down in Class B a few quiet spirits keep in the shadows and pull the strings. They operate on the basis of the old Jesuit motto: "A great deal of good can be done in the world if one is not too careful who gets the credit." They are not crowded, and they claim to have a lot of fun.

EASE UP, SECOND HALF

A gentleman who has gone quite a bit beyond his fiftieth birthday was discussing with his wife the purchase of a little place in the country. They have no children or other direct dependents and by frugal living have saved a modest competence. Speaking out of the habit of a life-time, the wife objected that the expense might be more than they ought to undertake.

To which the man replied vigorously: "The more I read about death the less I want to hear about money."

He went on to talk about the discovery which is the oldest in the world, and yet is new to every man in turn—the eternal surprising discovery of death. Youth lives as if life were to last forever. Middle Age is startled by the sudden loss of friends. Reluctantly comes the conviction that Nature makes no exceptions—that what has happened to the wise and great of all ages will happen also to us.

When this awakening takes place, some face it frankly, forecast the probable time remaining, and readjust their habits and thoughts. If up to that time they have struggled to save money, they begin to say: "Why should we keep on saving? We can't take it with us. Why not enjoy ourselves? Why not make other people happy by giving some away?"

This is the intelligent attitude, it would seem. There are some unfortunate folk who get less generous with themselves and with others as they grow older. The first half of life ought to be a good stiff battle for every man. Whether he be born rich or poor, he ought to be compelled to do a man's work in the world; to struggle and to save. But why not make the trip down the other side of the hill as smooth and comfortable as possible?

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Johnson have recently purchased the E. M. Hall residence and moved to their new home the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hawkins have returned home from a several weeks' visit with relatives at Winfield, Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Colburn and children, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Colburn spent two days last week attending a family reunion near Junction on the Llano river.

James M. Simpson, Jr. FOR REPRESENTATIVE, 92ND DISTRICT I thank the people for their splendid vote, which gives me the distinction of being their most probable candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative. By thrice having been a candidate for this office, with the best of intentions to help the common people, with a good record in all respects, and with interest and ambition for this line of work, I feel that my sacrifices have not been in vain, and I again present myself, as a result of the first primary election, for your choice as Democratic nominee for Representative, and I hope that you will choose me and give me a trial in a life interest and ambition to better statecraft. YOUR SUPPORT WILL BE APPRECIATED!

An Open Letter From D. M. WEST Ballinger, Texas August 4, 1936. To All My Friends in the 92nd Representative District: This is to state that I am actively supporting Jimmie Simpson in the run-off Democratic primary, August 22. I am doing this because I believe, under the circumstances, he is by far to be preferred of the two candidates. All know that I made a strenuous fight in the recent campaign before the first primary to elect men about whom there is no question. Let's give Jimmie Simpson a chance. He walked over the district in the last campaign and made a remarkable winning—and greatest of all, his home county people in Concho county gave him a large vote of confidence. He carried his home county over the two other candidates, therefore, I call upon my friends all over the district to be a unit in working for and voting for Mr. Simpson. Go to work now to get the people to the polls and victory, yet, will be ours in behalf of clean men and good government. (Political Advertisement) D. M. WEST.

Agricultural Outlook For Texas More Optimistic Than Country at Large; Major Crops, Livestock Near Normal

Austin, August 5.—It is significant that the agricultural outlook for Texas is far more optimistic than for the country at large, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. Although some damage has been sustained in scattered areas of the State by drouth and perhaps even more by floods, present indications are that the total output of major crops and livestock enterprises will be nearer normal than it has been for the past several years, he said.

"This fact in conjunction with the higher level of prices of farm products which is already assured, should make for substantial gains in the agricultural income of the State," he continued.

"Retain trade in Texas is already reflecting this improved agricultural outlook. In Texas the increase in retail sales during June over those of June last year, was considerably above that in the Nation at large.

"Aside from the uncertainties mentioned above in connection with the corn crop, the business outlook in the country as a whole for the second half of the year continues bright. The demand for automobiles, steel, and a great variety of other goods promises to be well sustained.

The revival in the cotton textile industry also is important. "Looking still farther ahead, the longer term factors, those likely to operate over the next several years appear to be extremely favorable. The tremendous shortages of durable goods—including construction—that have accumulated during the depression, our enormous supply of investment funds, low rates of interest, and the relatively low level of commodity prices—in comparison with the period 1923-1929—make a situation that is probably stronger than any that has existed in this country at the close of earlier depressions.

"It should not be overlooked that in spite of the improvement in general business and international trade from the depression lows, we are still far below normal. Industrial production is now back to the levels of 1930, the first year of the depression. Population in this country has increased by more than six millions since that time.

Assuming that the increase in per capita consumption, which has prevailed consistently in this country with only intermittent interruptions for more than a century, will ultimately be resumed, it can readily be seen how much farther we still have to go to reach our old stride in industrial production."

GINGER ROGERS TO PRESIDE AT QUEEN'S NIGHT, CENTENNIAL

Dallas, August 5.—Ginger Rogers, who made her theatrical debut in Dallas, will return here this week to preside over the grand finale of Queen's Night, Saturday and Sunday.

The movie star, first caught the attention of the public when she won a Charleston contest here in 1925. Saturday night she will crown the winner of another contest, that for queen of the Texas Centennial Exposition. In the coronation she will use the coronet Florence Eldridge wore as Queen Elizabeth in making the movie, "Mary of Scotland."

The queen will be the winner of a Texas-wide contest sponsored by Chrysler, Dodge, DeSoto and Plymouth dealers. District winners have been chosen and presented at other Queen's Nights at the $25,000,000 Texas World Fair.

Ina Ray Hutton, the blonde bombshell, and her all-girl orchestra will play for the coronation, and also for dancing afterwards on the world's largest stage, which has been built in the Cotton Bowl at the exposition.

Miss Hutton and her Melodears began an engagement Tuesday, August 4, in the Amphitheatre at the exposition under the auspices of Chrysler Motors. Half of the proceeds from the 10-cent admission charge will go to the fund of the Salesmanship Club of Dallas for underprivileged children and half to a fund for exposition special events. Miss Hutton will play in the Amphitheatre from 7 to 10:30 p. m.

Miss Rogers, Miss Hutton, the queen of the exposition and her court will ride into the Cotton Bowl on the myriad-lighted Hollywood electrical floats. These million-dollar floats, which form a brilliant revue of themselves, were built in competition several years ago by the various moving picture studios in Hollywood.

A trip to Hollywood and a screen test by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer awaits the queen of the exposition, whose identity will be kept a secret until the coronation Saturday night.

COUNSELS OF MODERATION

It is both interesting and, to most folk, surprising, to see the advertisements of one of the largest firms of whiskey distillers counseling moderation in drinking. Yet, on analysis, it appears to be the most intelligent move which the liquor business has ever made.

Most folk will agree that drinking cannot be prevented by law. The unfortunate experiment of national prohibition provided proof enough of that. Almost every nation has made efforts by political methods to control the traffic in "hard liquor," but nowhere has any means been found effective except that of education in temperance. America has always been a whiskey-drinking nation. The manufacture and sale of whiskey has again been legalized, except in a few states which are still "dry" by popular vote. It is not the moderate use of whiskey which lies at the root of the still active agitation for prohibition; it is intemperance and excessive drinking.

It is, therefore, a highly intelligent move on the part of the distillers to join in the counsels of moderation, to warn their customers against excessive indulgence. They want to continue in business, but not at the price of making drunkards.

Their situation is comparable, in some respects, to that of the builders of automobiles. The increasing number of cars, with greater engine power and vastly higher possible speeds, has been accompanied by an appalling toll of human lives from motor accidents. Now the automobile makers are giving vigorous support to the campaign for moderation in driving, just as the whiskey makers are counselling moderation in drinking.

When all's said and done, the problem of temperance, whether in driving, in drinking, in eating or in any other human activity is an individual one. Every man must solve it for himself. There is no mass method of making people behave according to a fixed rule or act at all times in their own best interests. But every effort such as this one of the whiskey distillers, to instill the principle of moderation in all things, is a step in the direction of sanity and human progress.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Borders of Carthage, Texas, were in the city Tuesday greeting friends and acquaintances. Mr. Borders is a former employee of the Winters State Bank. They were enroute to Big Spring to visit relatives.

THE TORCH-LIGHT PARADE OF BY-GONE CAMPAIGNS

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, August 5.—The old-age pension question comes to the fore again as a result, partly, of the convention of the Townsend plan advocates in Cleveland and partly of Gov. Landon's acceptance speech at Topeka. There are really three old-age pension plans under public consideration in the United States at the present time. They are:

1. The Townsend Plan for a straight pension of $200 a month for every person over 60 years old regardless of need.

2. The system now in effect in many states, and available to every state which wants to take advantage of this provision of the Social Security Act, namely, of providing a pension of not less than $30 a month for every needy person over 65 years old.

3. The old age benefit provision of the Social Security Act, which is an annuity insurance plan, to which workers in certain occupations and their employers are to contribute to a fund administered from Washington to provide for retirement pensions at the age of 65.

A Permanent Fixture
Washington has not yet recovered from its surprise at the apparent strength of the Townsend plan movement as indicated by the enthusiasm at the Cleveland convention. That the Townsend plan is utterly impracticable is the opinion of most economic authorities; that it is politically potentially powerful is conceded by every political expert.

Gov. Landon's pronouncement on old age pensions was an endorsement of the present plan of Federal co-operation with the states to take care of the needy aged, to which he added the promise to make the Social Security workable in its other aspects.

The old age insurance benefit and the unemployment insurance features of the Social Security Act have been under critical examination for a year now and considerable concern is expressed over the possibility of administering these phases of the law from Washington.

Washington forecasters are in agreement, however, that whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or Mr. Landon takes his place, some kind of an old age pension system, at least for every elderly person in need, is a permanent fixture in the American system from now on.

Landon's Acceptance
Naturally, political comment on Gov. Landon's acceptance speech varies from enthusiastic endorsement to equally enthusiastic denunciation, according to the political temperament of the commentator.

The point upon which the opposition fire is what he said about the rights of labor to organize. His declaration that, if elected, he would use his official power as far as possible to guarantee to workers the right to belong to any union, or no union, as they individually chose, either a company union, a craft union, or an industrial union, "without interference or coercion from any source," is the sore spot with organized labor.

Labor organizations do not like the intimation that the power of government will not be placed behind them in their efforts to organize workers. Mr. Landon's acceptance of the company union system of organization is also not relished by labor leaders.

How far this may have the effect of further alienating the labor vote is a good deal of an open question. One of the shrewdest political analysts here points out that 80 percent of organized labor is already safely in the Roosevelt camp and that Mr. Landon's remarks may have alienated another five percent.

Just what this strength amounts to and how effective it may be in determining the result of the election in close and doubtful states is something upon which nobody cares to make a definite prediction.

Civil Service Reform
The action of President Roosevelt in placing old postmasters under the competitive civil service system is variously interpreted. Republican commentators point to it as an effort to insure permanency in office of the large number of politically appointed Democratic postmasters now on the job. Democratic spokesmen cite this action as proof of the sincerity of Mr. Roosevelt's desire to take the administrative functions of government out of party politics.

Pure and nonpartisan civil service reformers are naturally pleased at winning at least a partial victory. They point out, however, that this has not been brought about by an act of Congress, but by an executive order, which any future President can revoke at will.

What the Civil Service Reform League is seeking is a law of Congress extending the classified civil service to include all postmasters. Such a law seemed very close to enactment at the last session of Congress but failed to pass.

Robinson-Patman Act
Washington is still trying to figure the probable effects of the Robinson-Patman Act. It is in essence, an anti-trust law reaching farther down the line and with more teeth in it than any previous legislation having for its purpose the regulation of business.

Reports from all the wheat-growing regions of the world are giving the Department of Agriculture some concern over the possibility of a real wheat shortage. This year's drought, added to the curtailment of production, has resulted in reducing the food production of the United States. Drought conditions elsewhere have also resulted in a short wheat crop. The outlook is distinctly for higher prices to consumers for all food stuffs.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Almost every active human being is subject at one time or another, to fleeting, shifting twinges varying from slight discomfort to severe, pronounced pain. Such may not be accompanied by any inflammatory signs—heat, redness or swelling—just transitory pain, often mistakenly called "muscular rheumatism."

Such annoyances almost invariably come from disturbed nerves. Organs adjacent to the locality complained of should be studied. Constipation—an impacted bowel—may cause anything from head neuralgia to sciatic irritation, and even pains in ankles and heels. Unlaid the bowel and relief comes. All pains in nerves should be investigated as to local injury. Grandma lifted a heavy rocker yesterday; today she has a sharp pain in her wrist. You "turned" your ankle last night on an uneven sidewalk.

Little disturbances due to injuries may be treated by hot fomentations, heat and medications rubbed on. Good liniments are very useful if persisted in. It is possible that no cause for a localized pain can be found. In such case the physician is a timely resort if the pain does not disappear after rest and heat. A lazy liver may produce pain at point of shoulder blade and elsewhere, to disappear of itself after eating fruit. Most of the fleeting pains in the lower extremities are produced by trouble in the organs within the body, unless local injury has occurred. "Diffuse neuritis" is a warning that demands the physician.

Misses Sara Tom Jones and Orelle Caskey and Sid Caskey of Coleman visited with friends here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Smith are announcing the arrival of a baby boy, who was born on August 31st.
