VICTORY FOR THE LOCALS WILL GIVE THEM DIST. FLAG

GAME WILL START AT 7:30 O'CLOCK SHARP.

The game of games, as far as Class B. high school football in this section is concerned, will be reeled off this evening at Ballinger starting at 7:30 o'clock, unless unfavorable weather conditions cause a last minute change to the afternoon, when the Winters High School Blizzards invade the neighboring city to the south, where they will close (we hope) the race for the district championship of District 22-B.

Coaches Bob Fulkerson and Amon Johnston will throw their powerful, undefeated Blizzards in full blast against the Bearcats in an effort to secure a victory, or even a tie, needed to give them a definite championship title in District 22-B. At the same time Coaches Felton (Pooch) Wright and Paul (Buck) Gibbs will seek to throw the district in a tie through their scrappy bunch of Bearcats in the final scheduled game for both squads. Should the Bearcats obtain an unexpected victory, they will be placed in a tied position with the Blizzards and possibly Rising Star if it wins from Cross Plains, as predicted.

It is said the Blizzards and Bearcats will be hampered by some of their squads being on the injured list, however, those who have witnessed games between these two teams know that they will be treated to a thriller tonight, and that anything can happen.

Only two of the games were shut-outs, Bangs and Mozelle.

Rising Star, a team that defeated the Bearcats early in the season, 19 to 7, sustained a 13 to 6 thrashing from the Blizzards.

"3 Men on a Horse"

It is the side-splitting story of Erwin, played by Frank McHugh—a meek little writer of greeting card verses who has the weird gift of picking winners in horse races. He keeps that secret to himself, and as he rides to and fro to work from his home, he jots down in a little book his prognostications and imaginary winnings. His nagging wife finds the book, denounces him as a philanderer, and browbeats him to the point of desperation. When his boss orders him to produce fifty Mother's Day verses before the noon whistle blows, his troubles begin to pyramid and drive him to a gin mill to drown his woes in drink. It is there that fate catches up with him. Three gamblers are talking about horses and Erwin timidly offers a tip. They laugh at him and bet on the favorite who loses. Seeing that the little man "has something" they imprison him and proceed to get rich on his tips on winners. Then things begin to happen.

"Poor Little Rich Girl"

Shirley Temple, of course plays the title role. She is seen as the daughter of Michael Whalen, a wealthy young business man who...

Let Your Rent Buy You a Home!

It is no longer true that "it is cheaper to rent than to own a home."

Your rent during the next ten years will buy you a nice home, . . . now is the time for real bargains.

For example: A 5 room modern home, near school, for $100 down; balance $18.70 per month. This house will probably average renting for $22.50 per month during the next few years.

his make-up. In the course of the story, he meets and falls in love with Gail Sheridan, daughter of the town's newspaper publisher. Once entrusted with the job of cleaning up the town, Boyd refuses to let anything stop him until he has broken up the entire Crystal Slipper gang and solved two killings for which the gang is responsible. Evelyn Brent, the hard-boiled and mysterious crime queen of the Crystal Slipper, discovers too late how strongly she feels for Cassidy.

"Secret Patrol"

It is the story of two buddies in the Royal Mounted in love with the same girl yet fast friends in their common calling—the protection of humanity in a wild and ruthless country. Alan Craig, played by Charles Starnett is assigned to investigate a series of apparently planned accidents in a St. John lumber mill after Gene Barclay, his brother mountie, previously assigned to the case, has disappeared. Barclay is played by Henry Mollison. Craig poses as a fugitive from justice to gain the good graces of Barstaw, the outpost blacksmith whom he suspects is involved in the accidents. Falling for Craig's impersonation, Barstaw gets the bright idea to have Craig pose as a mounted policeman and a clever complication of circumstances and events that follow is typical of Peter B. Kyne's adroit writing.

"The Sea Spoilers"

This adventure picture, starring John Wayne and a grand cast glorifies the thrills and romance of the Coast Guard patrol in Alaska. It depicts dramatically the depredations of a gang of sea going bandits who constantly pit their wits against the Coast Guardsmen in their nefarious trade of slaughtering seals along our northern coast. It is a new and vigorous type of role for the talents of John Wayne and he plays it to the hilt, supported by Nan Grey, Fuzzy Knight and William Blakewell. If you're looking for a new thrill, new screen story, here it is. The capture of the preacher's stronghold throbs with pulse gripping suspense and a flaming climax.

IN MEMORY OF ZENOBIA HILL

Last Thursday night when death rode his range In Zenobia Hill's life he made a change,

He called with a voice sweet and kind;

With a gentle hand lifted her up behind,

And galloped onward across the divide,

Carried her safely to the other side.

She's now with her Maker on high.

So what need is there to cry? In life she was patient, kind and sweet.

Always a smile for those she'd meet.

As in the song "Don't Weep for Me,"

Her gentle voice seems to plead with me

To feel no sorrow, shed no tears,

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gardner spent last Sunday in Santa Anna visiting with relatives. They were accompanied home by Mr. Gardner's mother, Mrs. W. H. Gardner who is visiting in their home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Chapman are announcing the arrival of a baby boy on November 16th. He was given the name of Louis Dean.

Stop starting and you will soon start stopping.

But to meet her in Heaven in a few years.

To all those loved ones left behind,

I can say no words that are kind and gentle enough to lessen those pains.

Only, over all our God reigns.

To right each wrong; comfort each heart,

When death tears loved ones apart.

Son in your sorrow just cling to His hand,

And he'll lead you safely to that land

Where, as Christ has spoken,

Your loving circle will never be broken.

—Mary E. Fuller.

HONORED AT CENTENNIAL

MRS. MARY LONGLEY

MRS. MARY BERRY

WIDOWS OF TEXAS REVOLUTION ARE EXPO. GUESTS

ONLY THREE WIDOWS OF TEXAS HEROES ARE LIVING.

Dallas, Texas.—Two of the three living widows of the Texas Revolution were the honored guests of the Texas Centennial Exposition on Sunday, Nov. 15.

They are Mrs. Mary Catherine Berry, 83, who lives near Baird, Callahan county, and Mrs. Mary Longley, 74, of Abilene, Taylor county.

The third, Mrs. Mary M. Price, 93, lives in Rochester, N. Y. She is an invalid and was unable to make the trip to Texas.

Mr. Berry, native of Arkansas, is the widow of Capt. Andrew Jackson Berry, a veteran of San Jacinto, who died many years ago. Mrs. Longley is the widow of Campbell Longley, a native of Tennessee, who joined Gen. Sam Houston the day after the battle of San Jacinto.

In their honor Centennial executives planned numerous events. At the historic Calvacade, of Texas they witnessed the re-enactment of the stirring events of the world's sixteenth decisive battle, in which their husbands fought. They saw again Sam Houston, marches across the stage of time, his inauguration, the epoch of the Republic, the strides of Texas as a State.

They were welcomed by high dignitaries of State, City and Exposition, and a military ceremony was conducted in honor of the two widows of Texas heroes.

Abilene civic organizations and Max Bentley, managing editor of the Abilene Reporter-News, sponsored the preliminaries of the visit of the historic characters.

Extension Horticulturist Gives Out Orchard Hints

College Station.—“Dietitians tell us that we need around 250 pounds of fruit per person each year, yet Texas produces only 600,000,000 pounds, or about 100 pounds per person, and then ship to other states three-fourths of her crop, which leaves us only 25 pounds of fruit per person.” These surprising facts come from J. F. Rosborough, Extension horticulturist.

“Our fruit problem in Texas today is largely a matter of realizing the importance of producing fruit for home use,” Rosborough continued. “It seems to me that it is a definite indictment against good management if a family lives on a farm where fruit can be grown and yet buys fruit or does without it. The commercial orchardist measures his success principally by the result of sales on his bank account. The home orchard owner should measure his success by what comes to his table.”

Rosborough holds that many old orchards can be revived with proper care. “Oats, rye, vetch, and other winter cover crops furnish fertilizer and will put pep in the old trees next spring. Check the orchard for San Jose scale, and spray the affected trees with oil emulsion as soon as they are dormant. Trees infested with scale are subject to cold damage due to premature blossoming, and most of the strength which would make fruit goes to nourish the insects under the scales.

“Another practice in old orchards which means much to next year's crop is to pick up and burn or bury all mummified or diseased fruit,” the horticulturist added, “brown rot, scab, and other diseases carry over from one season to another on the dried up fruit.”

In cases where no orchard is available Rosborough recommends immediate plans for planting one. He advises picking a well drained, preferably sandy spot free from nematode infestation. Hill-side sites, he said, should be terraced and the trees planted on the contour.

WORLD'S COTTON SUPPLY LARGEST IN THREE YEARS

“The world supply of cotton is the largest in three years, according to the Outlook Report being released from Washington. Texas farmers as the principal cotton raising group in the world are vitally affected by that fact since the price of cotton is governed to a large extent by world conditions,” according to W. E. Morgan, Extension Economist, of Texas A. & M. College.

“The increase in world supply is due to marked increase of cotton in Russia, Brazil, and China. In the face of a large world carry-over it is obvious if farmers in America greatly increase production in 1937 they may expect to encounter lowered prices. This tendency toward lowered prices, however, would be offset to some extent if the general price level continues to rise, or if there is further improvement in demand for the staple.

“Improved quality of Texas cotton would tend to strengthen the competitive position of American cotton abroad and to make it more salable at home. This is a thought worthy of consideration.

RATS ARE ECONOMIC AND HEALTH PROBLEM

That rats not only destroy property, but carry disease germs, is a well known fact. Prompt and effective measures by the United States Public Health Service for killing and rat proofing buildings have saved this country from serious epidemics, such as occurred in the Old World in past generations.

“It has been estimated that in the United States, rats and mice each year destroy crops and other property valued at over $200,000,000.” Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, said, “and even this large amount of money seems small compared to the human misery and loss of life which these small pests may cause.”

“If rats are in your home or business house, kill them as soon as possible. Because rats increase so rapidly it is useless to expect more than temporary relief from campaigns of riddance restricted to killing only. To be of lasting benefit the work of building rats out of their shelters and away from their food supply must go along with that of trapping, poisoning, and other means of eradication.

“Rats eat every known food, both animal and vegetable. The removal of garbage, rubbish, trash, and similar material is of importance in rat control as it affords shelter as well as food. “In recent years the use of ‘red squill’ as an effective rat poison has placed in our hands a most effective weapon. In case human beings or domestic animals should eat the bait containing ‘red squill’ they would vomit and rid themselves of the poison, but it seems that rats cannot vomit and they die of a progressive paralysis which kills in from one to four days, thereby giving them time to take to the open, as they commonly will.

“A thorough and systematic campaign to rid your neighborhood and community of rats will not only save money but will preserve your health and that of your family.”

Fat women don't get mad as easily as thin women, and they don't have to be watched as closely.

For companionship on an island we would prefer a man who knew nothing to a fellow who knew everything.

One of the ironical facts is that almost everybody who has any income is able to save money in hard times.

The prospect of modeling a perfect world seems increasingly remote.

Dairy Specialist Speaks

V. L. Alford, prominent dairy specialist with Western Produce Company, visited both vocational agricultural classes at the Winters school Thursday and spoke on the subjects of "Dairying, and How it Fits Into The Farmers Program." Mr. Alford started his discussion with the statement that the value of a cow was not only determined by the amount of milk produced but also the percent butterfat in that milk. He stated that Texas had a good dairy foundation to begin with as the average butterfat per year of Texas cows is 229 lbs. as compared with a U. S. average of 164 lbs. The classes learned that after a cows normal butterfat production had been reached that an increase in the amount of concentrates fed would not raise the percent of butterfat in the milk. Naturally, the butterfat would be greater due to the increase in quantity of milk. He then stated that due to the fact that percent butterfat was an inherited character, we could only increase the amount greatly by breeding the cows to males with records of production and percent butterfat back of them. Mr. Alford said that with the present price of feed, a cow giving 229 lbs. of butterfat per year would net the farmer $50 a year above the cost of feed. "This is, he started, as much as a bale of cotton would bring." He brought out the fact that he was not encouraging farmers to go into the dairy business but that it should be a part of a well rounded diversified farm program. Mr. Alford also discussed the making of cheese and invited the classes to visit the cheese plant at Abilene.

Projects

Our instructor has been checking up on the boys projects the past week and reports that even though most of the animals are doing nicely, some few are in poor shape. Mr. Williams has taught us that in order to finish animals properly they must be fed a balanced ration, cared for and trained for show.

Both vocational classes visited with Gerald and Merle Proctor last Monday and observed a trench silo being filled with chopped hegari. Approximately 75 tons of silage were placed in the trench.

Freshman Class Ancient History Exhibit Clever

Members of the Freshman class have completed an exhibit of Ancient History which is now on display at the Winters high school building. The class has been under Mrs. Phil Davidson who has charge of Freshman history this year.

The exhibit is interesting, unusual and shows a great deal of time and effort was spent on its erection. The exhibit is original and is each individuals own idea of the Stone Age. Various sleds, stone axes and war weapons in crude form were made for the exhibit as we would imagine them to have looked in those days. Several carvings were created from bars of soap and a very clever mud hut, typical of those days was erected. Several models showing their mode of dress, an Amphitheater made from card board and a scene of a cavaran of Egypt crossing the Sahara are unusually good. Other interesting features of the exhibit are the Roman Hut Urns and a gold Harp.

RECOVERY IS HERE

If there were any doubt left in anybody's mind that economic recovery is well under way in America, the action of the United States Steel Corporation is raising the wages of its employees ought to be convincing evidence. It will cost the Steel Corporation somewhere above $75,000,000 a year to grant these pay increases.

Other and smaller industries have been gradually restoring wages to the pre-depression level, but steel is the key industry of them all. When the steel companies are prosperous all the other industries are prosperous. It is the first to feel the effects of a slack of business activity and the first to realize the effects of business recovery.

Another evidence that we are back on the main highway leading to prosperity is the enormous increase in automobile production and sales and the promising outlook for that industry for the coming year. The new models for 1937 are just now being shown to the public for the first time. Without exception, they are better cars for less money. And it is easier today for the ordinary citizen to buy an automobile than it ever has been before. Credit terms have been extended and interest rates reduced so that it is difficult to imagine any person not on relief who cannot afford to buy a car.

The Federal Reserve Board's commercial and industrial review of 1936 confirms the evidence of recovery. The Board reports that the current level of business activity is higher than at any time since 1930. That the employment is substantial is indicated by the marked expansion in residential and industrial construction, which were the lines in which recovery had lagged. Employment and payrolls in industry and commerce continue to increase, along with corporate profits and dividends, the Board reports and dividends power production and railroad traffic show marked increases.

It seems apparent that America is in for another great era of prosperity, in which more citizens than ever before are sharing.

A THOUGHT FOR THANKSGIVING

Of all the holidays which we customarily observe, there are two of distinctly American origin which are celebrated all over the United States. Those are Independence Day and Thanksgiving Day. Both of these have peculiar significance to all Americans. They go back to the roots of our national life. Independence Days, or should be, an annual reminder that our national liberty was achieved only because free men were ready to fight for the right to govern themselves. And Thanksgiving Day, now about to roll around again, should be a reminder that the foundations of America were laid by men and women who cherished spiritual liberty even more highly than they held personal and political liberty.

"Liberty," said Woodrow Wilson, "is a spiritual conception." Liberty of conscience is one of the fundamental precepts of our national structure, guaranteed to every citizen under the Constitution. That spiritual liberty is, perhaps, the most precious of all the bounties for which Americans should give thanks on the last Thursday in November.

1936 ————— by A. B. Chapin

So far in our history America has been more abundantly blessed than any other nation has ever been since the beginning of recorded time. We have prospered as no other nation has ever prospered. We are just beginning to realize that the latest world depression let us off more lightly, as a people, than it did any other race or nation. We are now beginning to realize too, that we are well on our way out of the magnitude beyond our present dreams. For such material blessings it is well to give thanks to the Providence which has guided us; but it is also well to remember that there are greater treasures than money and the wealth of which money is a measure.

Let us, in the midst of our Thanksgiving feasting and merrymaking, not forget that we are possessors of a great spiritual heritage, and make the day an occasion for pledging ourselves anew to the upholding and perpetuation of that spiritual liberty, that freedom of conscience and of thought, which our forebears sought and found in their New World.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

With the reelection of President Roosevelt the major question which now interests Washington is whether the New Deal policies will be continued or whether the Administration and the new Congress will take a more conservative attitude in public affairs. The general belief here is that the next four years constituting Mr. Roosevelt's second term, will not be so filled with spectacular experiments in government as the period just passed.

Despite the sweeping victory of the Democrats, it is the belief here that Republican opposition in Congress will be much better organized and led than in the past two Congresses, and that there will be a swing toward the conservative side in the Democratic Congressional leadership.

An interesting phase of the Congressional situation is the rise to prominence in the Democratic Party councils of the Texas group. Vice President Garner is the leader of this bloc, which is more powerful than most people realize. Seven other Texans in the Lower House, including Representatives Rayburn, Connolly, Sumners, Marvin Jones, Buchanan, Lanham and Patman, wield among them a powerful influence. They have a close tie with the Administration through another Texan, Jesse Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who in many respects is the most powerful figure in the executive department. Texas has six committee chairmen in the House.

On the Republican side the stage is set for an active and aggressive Opposition, looking forward to the Congressional elections of 1938 and the Presidential election of 1940. The foremost Republican leaders are Representatives Snell, Wadsworth, Hollister, Bolton, Martin and Treadway. In the Senate, Senator McNary will continue to be the nominal leader by virtue of seniority, but as he is regarded by his associates as being distinctly pro-Roosevelt, the actual leadership will fall to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, who seized the reins last winter and led the only effective opposition which has developed in the past 3½ years.

All the indications, therefore, point to serious and intense political activity on Capitol Hill for the next two years.

There is some doubt whether Representative Bankhead of Alabama, the present Speaker of the House, will be physically able to continue in that office. The principal candidates for the speakership, in the event of Mr. Bankhead's retirement are Representatives O'Connor of Tammany, Rayburn of Texas and McCormick of Massachusetts. The Tammany influence is expected to be stronger in the new House, and the Tammany bloc will hold the balance of power on many issues.

Another thing which seems certain is that there will be more lobbies and more powerful ones trying to influence Congress on behalf of special groups and minorities than at any previous time. The labor lobby will probably be the most powerful of these, having as its objective the Guffey Coal Bill, the Six-hour Day for railroad workers and the 30-hour week for all employees. Part of the labor program is to try to build up a strong labor party to play a part in the campaign of 1940.

The effort of the farm lobby will be to keep what it has got rather than to urge further benefits for farmers. The Veterans' lobby, however, having succeeded in getting the prepayment of the bonus over President Roosevelt's veto, has been encouraged to believe that it can get anything it wants. What it wants now is a general life pension for veterans and the widows and orphans of veterans.

So far as Washington observers can see, only two or three Cabinet changes are in prospect. It is the general belief that someone will replace Dan Roper as Secretary of Commerce, though there is no agreement as to who is most likely to get this post. There will be a new Secretary of War to replace Harry Woodring. If Mr. Ickes wants to retain his job as head of the Department of the Interior he can do it. Mr. Ickes has built up a powerful political machine of his own and it would be politically inexpedient for the President to try to replace him if he wants to stay. It is the general belief that very much less will be heard about Tugwell, Frankfurter, Jerome Frank and other members of the "brain trust" during this second Roosevelt administration.

Washington has it that the man closest to the President now is Donald Richburg, former head of NRA and that he is likely to receive an important Cabinet portfolio.

One makes enough mistakes when he does his best.

County Planning Program Is Launched For Farmers

Plans to determine farmer opinion on land use were recently presented to the Texas Extension Service staff by the state committee on county planning of which G. E. Adams, Asst. State Agent, is chairman and W. E. Morgan, Extension Economics, is secretary. The plans will be launched in a statewide way immediately, and within the next two months an effort will be made to secure estimates from every county in the State.

County agricultural and home demonstration councils will be asked to meet first and appoint a joint committee to have charge of the work within the counties. These committees will arrange schedules of community meetings where farmers will be given farm plan sheets upon which to write down their figures as to present land use on their own farms and the estimated changes if the land use is to be planned to keep up and improve soil fertility and prevent erosion.

These sheets will be collected in each county and tabulated and the county committee will prepare from them an estimate for the county. County estimates will be collected by the State committee at College Station, summarized for the State and forwarded to Washington where Texas figures will be compiled with information from the other states.

This information, originating with the farmers themselves, the Department of Agriculture will use for guidance in agricultural programs.

Make-Believe Bride

by Ruth Harley

SECOND INSTALLMENT

Synopsis: Maris Trevor is discouraged because Rod O'Rourke spends all his money developing an invention which he hopes will provide an income so that they can marry. Maris thinks they should enjoy the present rather than deny themselves for the future. She becomes uncertain of her love for Rod. Perhaps there would be more happiness with someone else . . .

"I've never spoken to him," declared Maris stoutly. She wondered why Patsy seemed to have an almost uncanny intuition about her thoughts.

"Maybe not, but I bet you're watching every minute for that very chance."

"Well, it's a long one, anyway. Miss Riggs gives out all the work, and it's only the tried and trusted—not a newcomer like me—who are allowed to work for the boss or the boss' son. What chance have I to get acquainted with young Fayson?" she questioned nonchalantly taking another roll. To herself, however, she confessed that she would make the chance soon if it didn't come along naturally.

"Well, Maris, I haven't worked around hotels for the last few years without learning a thing or two, and remember young fellows like Fayson may play around with girls like us, but that's all there is to it. They don't want us for wives."

"Who said we wanted to marry them? You take things too seriously."

"No, Maris, but when you've a perfectly good boy friend, I can't see why you want to break up with him on the chance that young Fayson will take a shine to you. Why don't you call Rod and tell him to come around? I bet he's wising you would. Go on," begged Patsy.

"Why should I? That young man needs a lesson."

"But, Maris, it seems so silly to break up a worthwhile friendship just because Rod won't get in new car! You know he'll get one later on—once he puts his invention over—and then you'll be mighty sorry if it's some other girl who goes riding in it instead of you."

"Oh, go on, Pat; you needn't think you'll frighten me into calling him up. When Rod comes to his senses again there'll be time enough to talk to him. Say, if you want to get to the hotel early you'd better be stirring—at least if you want to sample your chocolate cake first."

"But the dishes?" countered Patsy.

"Never mind the dishes. I'll do them, only I want to take my time over this sumptuous cake and coffee," said Maris, rising and turning on the radio.

The velvety click-clicking of twenty noiseless typewriters echoed in Maris' ears. She was sitting at her desk in the stenographers' room the next morning. There was no sheet of paper in her machine, nor any dictaphone going at her side, for she had just finished a batch of letters and Miss Riggs, her chief, had not given her anything else to do.

Her eyes were not on her machine nor on her fellow workers, but her gaze wandered along the corridor to the glass-encased office where young Stanley Fayson was seated at his desk. His coming had caused a wild flutter of excitement in many of the girls' hearts. Some of the youthful stenographers had openly discussed their chances of catching the wealthy young man who, like many another college boy, had assured his friends he was going to revolutionize his father's business.

But so far, in spite of a reputation that had preceded his arrival—that pretty girls were his specialty—he had apparently not learned of their existence. Or perhaps, as Miss Riggs suggested when queried by one of the girls, he was too near his father now, to start anything.

As Maris gazed at him, she noticed his sleek black hair, his swarthy complexion and his restless, dark eyes. When he lit a cigarette the gleam of a jewel in the quaint ring he wore on his small finger, caught her eye, while she felt a glow of satisfaction in his immaculate clothes.

"I bet he pays at least a hundred dollars for a suit," she thought to herself, noting his smart cut morning suit, and he has a different one on every day. They say he gets them all made by some grand London tailor, and he wears imported shoes and hats. Oh, gosh, doesn't he look swell!"

A faint frown of discontent twisted her dainty lips. A girl would be lucky to get a man like that along with all his father's millions. Didn't someone say his grandmother left him a million, too? Gosh, some folks, have the luck!

"Now," she thought, "if only I had the money to dress like the girls he goes around with, I'm sure I'd look just as well. Oh, wouldn't it be grand to marry a man who could give you gorgeous clothes and jewels and cars? Someone who would take you to Europe and anywhere you wanted!"

Then a far-away look came into her eyes, for swiftly she remembered Rod. But then she pouted. Why didn't Rod bother more about his clothes? Often she wished he would wear them better, have them pressed oftener . . . But a wistful smile crept around the corners of her rosy lips. Rod was a dear. He had been so good to her. That time when she had the flu he had nearly bankrupted himself sending her flowers. He knew she loved them.

Again a look of discontent crept into her eyes. If she married Rod she'd have to live in some cheap little bungalow, for he had told her he wanted to live in the country even if he had to become a commuter. Well, Maris wasn't so sure she liked the idea. She loved the noise and the excitement of New York. The country kind of gave her the blues. It was so quiet. Maybe she could make Rod change his mind about that.

But suddenly she pulled her thought together. Why should she be thinking of Rod when maybe Stanley Fayson—the warm color flooded her cheeks at the very suggestion of his name—might fall in love with her?

The cracking of the door disturbed her thoughts, and she turned to see two giggling debs coming down the corridor. How carefree they seemed; how stunningly they were dressed! Again Maris realized what a drab picture she made in her cheap printed silk frock. One girl was dark, with snappy brown eyes and seemed vividly electric in all her gestures; the other was a languorous blonde, but even her somewhat uninteresting face was transformed with laughter.

Can you tell us where to find Mr. Fayson—Mr. Stanley Fayson?" questioned the small, dark-eyed girl.

Maris was suddenly glad that her desk edged the draughty corridor.

"It's like walking through a maze to find your way through all those passages," laughed the blond girl.

Maris said, "Mr. Fayson's office is the last one down the corridor. He's at his desk."

Quickly the girls turned.

"Oh, there he is!" The small, dark girl turned again after she spoke, and smiled to Maris.

Then she said, "Thanks so much I'm afraid we must seem awfully dumb."

"Of course we are," rejoined the other girl, "though I bet you'd be mad, Rowene, if I told you so."

When they hastened down the corridor, Maris' eyes were riveted on the girls. Where had she heard the name "Rowene" before? Then suddenly she remembered what one of the girls had told her—that Rowene Quick's mother was crazy to have her daughter marry a rich man.

Well, she'd evidently lost no time in having her meet Stanley for when they entered his office she perched causally on his desk, lit a cigarette and chatted lightly with him. She was a Western girl—fairly rich too—and folks said her mother was crazy about money.

Suddenly jealousy seared Maris' heart. Why was a life of hard work to be her lot when she was just as cute as those other girls who didn't know what it was to hit the keys of a typewriter to toil all day in an office, and sell their freedom for a paltry pay envelope?

It wasn't fair, no, it wasn't! Then Stanley rose and took his hat from the rack, holding the door of his office open. The girls passed down the corridor accompanied by him. A dull fury swept through Maris.

But even as they passed her desk and Maris noticed the coy glances Rowene gave Stanley, Miss Riggs put some records on her desk.

"You've got to be very careful with this letter," she told the girl. "There are a lot of figures in it, and as quotations on piece goods are being given at frightfully low prices, you must be sure and get them all right." She paused beside Maris for a moment. "You'd better let me go over this after you finish, for a slip in any of these quotations might mean a terrible loss for the house."

"All right," answered Maris, slipping a sheet of carbon between the letter-head and second sheet before she put them in her machine.

But even as she put on her earphones and started the machine going, her thoughts followed Stanley and the young society buds who had lured him from his desk so easily. While her slender fingers transcribed words that she heard, back in her mind her thoughts were busy contrasting her life with that of the girls who evidently thought an office was merely another amusing place.

Hour after hour she worked, with but a short breathing space for lunch, for many of the salesmen were in from the road, and the correspondence room was deluged with their work. She glanced at the clock. Five minutes to five. Well, she'd not be in too great a hurry to finish the letters she was working on, or Miss Riggs might give her some more.

The five o'clock whistle sounded. The hum of marching feet echoed all around Maris raised her eyes. The last cylinder had been given out. She would turn her letters in now.

But when she reached the desk, Miss Riggs said, "Oh, just a minute. We've got to check over that letter with the quotations. I put it to one side here it is."

Gradually the room emptied as the girls hurried from their desk. At last Miss Riggs said, "I guess that's all right," and rising, hurried with the letter to the vice-president's office. Maris went back to her desk and covered her machine. She was just putting away her eraser and carbon paper when she heard a light football beside her.

Glancing up, she saw young Stanley Fayson coming down the corridor. He tipped his hat as he passed her and said, "Surely you're not still working?"

"No, I've just finished," she answered.

With another smile the young man passed through the swing door.

"He's a dear," whispered Maris to herself as she gathered up her bag and hurried to the cloakroom. "I bet there's nothing to all those stories of his wildness at college. Gosh, but hasn't he the fine manners!"

If only she could let the girls know that the proud young boss had spoken to her! They'd be jealous, all right, especially Milly Tremaine who felt she was the Star office vamp.

But when she reached the dressing room, there was none of the giggling and chattering that usually greeted her ears. She opened the door. All the girls had gone. It seemed too bad she couldn't find even one for an audience. Well, perhaps it was better so. There might come a day when she could calmly speak as though Stanley were an old friend of hers.

The true coward has cold feet when he gets hot under the collar.

One way not to have peace of mind is to give others a piece of it.

An abundance of pride makes one jealous of himself.

One who believes everything he hears believes nothing.

RUN-DOWN, anemic people should eat plenty of Bread and iron-rich foods. Scientists agree that, not only is the iron in Bread healthful, but Bread helps you to get the full benefit of the iron from the other foods you eat.

Actual laboratory research, conducted by leading scientists and food experts, proves this interesting fact about Bread. Everyone should eat Bread at every meal because it helps you get and utilize iron for building rich, red blood.

Remember—the iron in Bread is healthful—and that's one reason why Bread is your best and cheapest energy food!

CAMPAIGN FOR RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP IS UNDERWAY HERE

T. D. Coupland, secretary of the Board of Community Development, began soliciting Red Cross membership fees here Thursday morning and throughout the day received hearty cooperation from business men and downtown employees.

The entire work of soliciting membership is being done by Mr. Coupland and he stated late yesterday that he had secured $121.50 by four o'clock and expected to reach the $200 mark before he had finished. Several business firms were 100 per cent, having listed every employee in the business establishment.

Officials of the Red Cross want it understood that one-half of the membership fees will remain in the local treasury to be used in charity dispensations.
The splendid work of the Red Cross was manifested in San Angelo, Ballinger and other flooded districts recently and those who are solicited in the drive for memberships should consider it a privilege to contribute to such a worthy organization.

Renting departments of the big real estate firms are rushed to death from the last two weeks of August to the first of October. That's the day that gypsylike Manhattan cliff-dwellers move from one apartment to another—actually by the thousands.
It's typical of the restless spirit of the city.

WOMEN

CHARL'ORMOND
WILLIAMS
President of National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Women have so many qualities that fit them for the position of hotel manager that it is not at all surprising to find some who are outstanding in this field. There is Miss Mary Lindsley, for instance, head of a hotel in Washington, D. C., who has achieved success by carrying out her idea that operating a big hotel is in many respects like running a home on a large scale.
According to her, the factors which make for comfort—order, cleanliness, quiet, good food, good service, knowledge of how to purchase and how to care for equipment, and how to control labor, all enter into the management of a hotel. Besides the distinction of being a successful manager, Miss Lindsley is a pioneer in establishing and maintaining a "no tipping" service.

As an emissary of the Italian Association of University Women, the National Council of Italian Women, and other Italian groups, Signora Olivia Agresti has been in this country a few months lecturing at universities and colleges and before clubs, chambers of commerce, bar associations and various other groups. Her mission, she explained, was to be informative.

Nothing surprises us anymore about new jobs women are undertaking. You hear of them almost every week. One of the latest is that undertaken by Mrs.
C. Stewart Johnson, who, is I believe, the only woman in this country in charge of a fossil hunting expedition. Her explorations are for the benefit of the Canyon, Texas, museum, and she directs men WPA workers who are removing skeletons from pliocene beds near Clarendon, Texas.

Strangely enough, art was represented by a banker, Jean Reid, who aside from her duties as Manager of the Women's department of the Bankers Trust Company, is an excellent painter of miniatures. Malvina Hoffman, one of the foremost women sculptors in the world, represented her field.

Dr. Mary Jobe Akeley, African explorer, who returned recently from one of her safaris, says that the tribes of Mozambique and Swaziland in Southern Africa, cling to their old civilization despite efforts on the part of the white man to make them change. They like their old costumes, of which Dr.

Akeley brought back several cases for the American Museum of National History in New York.

There seems to be nothing
the young bride can't do nowadays and still keep within the tenets of good taste laid down by Mrs. Grundy. She can be married in pink. She can march to the altar decked in diaphanous green. She can be unconventional in white cotton. And she can go completely modern in a wedding dress of sheerest wool. No longer is ivory brocade an edict which the well-dressed bride must follow. It is her privilege and duty to be beautifully gowned.
The bars have been lifted.

Whether you would set back the clock, if you had it to do over again and veer away from an ivory wedding gown, is beside the point right now. The interesting factor in this revolutionary trend in fabrics, is that cotton can be so lovely and wool so sheer that it can be draped to fit the majesty of a wedding gown.

The story is told that Napoleon always dined on roast chicken for breakfast. Whether he appeared at seven o'clock or eleven, his cook always had the chicken done to a beautiful turn. One asked how he managed it, "Sire," he said, "I put a fresh chicken on every 15 minutes."

Back from two weeks in the country, a tenant child—one of the group given a vacation by a "fresh air funds"—almost danced with joy. Out of the grimy, crowded city for two weeks, she was full of health, and tickled to death to get back to town, because the country was so dull, the eggs had been so fresh they had "no taste", and she didn't like the milk, 'cause it didn't come out of shiny bottles. But she was full of health.
