County Agent Gives Information On 1937 Agricultural Conservation Plan

General plans for the 1937 Agricultural Conservation program have been approved by secretary Wallace after conferences of representative farmers and Extension Staff members had gone over the 1936 work and suggested needed changes.

Cotton and wheat, the crops listed as soil-depleting in which Texas is most interested, have been subject to very few changes in the revision.

Cotton is again rated at 5c per pound, and the base will be determined in about the same manner as in 1936. The maximum cotton acreage will be 35 percent of base.

Reduction from general soil-depleting base will be approximately the same; with the 15 percent limit still applying.

Before a farmer can receive payment on a general soil-depleting base he must make adequate provision for growing enough food and feed crop for his own uses, then the rest of the soil depleting base can be used for a soil depleting payment.

Secretary Wallace, stated that in the main all farmers who have taken part in the 1936 program approve its principles. That hundreds of meetings have been held over the U. S. where growers discussed the merits and demerits of the present program and made suggestions for a better one and that they had used all these suggestions as near as they could.

The modifications are intended, for the most part, to adapt the program more closely to the needs of the various regions.

For the 1937 program, additional emphasis has been placed on soil building and more money will be available for soil building practices.

"The new program should not only improve the soil but it also should protect the interest of consumers and help to preserve

The soil conservation and domestic allotment act was passed in 1936 by Congress, which authorized an annual appropriation of $500,000,000 for carrying out this program. So the actual appropriation for 1937 remains to be made, so this program we have drafted, therefore is dependent upon the action of Congress.

CHILDREN NEED TO BE SAFEGUARDED AGAINST T. B.

"One child out of every five in our schools needs to be safeguarded against a possible future breakdown from tuberculosis," Dr. Z. T. Scott, managing director of the Texas Tuberculosis Association, said today in an appeal to the women of Texas to take up the fight against tuberculosis, the foe of youth.

"Prevention of tuberculosis means the protection of the home, the conservation of child health, mothers know how important are the growing years of boys and girls, the building of strong bodies that can ward off disease. Women are the direct contact between school and the home.

"Tuberculosis is readily preventable if known in time. Science has given us two certain means of a check on our children so that we may know the first danger signals of tuberculosis and can act accordingly. These are the tuberculin skin test and the X-ray. Through examinations given school children which included these two methods of diagnosis, it has been found that one child out of every five is in danger of the disease and one in every hundred actually has tuberculosis. The resistance of these children can be built up through adequate rest, balanced diet and medical supervision."

Everyone may have a part in the campaign against tuberculosis, Dr. Scott said, by buying Christmas seals which finance the work of the affiliated tuberculosis associations, which are directing special effort at this time toward the prevention of tuberculosis among the youth of our state and nation.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stoecker from Butte, Montana, after several days' visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Stoecker, Sr., left last week for their new home at Miami, Florida.

"End of the Trail"

The film stars Jack Holt in the type role that first endeared him to audiences everywhere. He is seen as an adventurous, life-loving vagabond who enlists as a Rough Rider for the thunder and the glory but who finds instead a love for a beautiful young nurse, admirably played by lovely Louise Henry. His friendly rival for the girl's affections is young Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, who in the aftermath of the war is forced to battle Holt on opposite sides of the law. The dramatic circumstances surrounding these three is vividly sketched against the virile, action-packed scenes of war and strife.

The picture follows the romantic adventures of Anthony Adverse through five countries, across the seas and over three continents. For mammoth sets, for colorful and picturesque backgrounds, for dynamic action, for the unusual characterizations of its tremendous cast from Fredric March, the star, down to the smallest bit player, for the glamor of its romance, its human interest and sheer, unadulterated entertainment, this picture is unsurpassed. Fredric March has given the screen some wonderful portrayals in the past, but never has he risen to the heights of dramatic fire as in the title role of this picture. His Anthony is a living, breathing person, stepping out of a book into real life on the screen. He is ably supported by Olivia de Havilland, who came to screen prominence with her work in "Captain Blood." This is her first emotional role and she rises to it with true artistry. Other loves of Anthony are found in the characterizations by Steffi Duna, a fiery half caste with whom he lives in his African slave mart and Gale Sondergard, a voluptuous and passionate housekeeper. Both give unusually fine interpretations.

"The King Steps Out"

Handsome, talented Franchot Tone plays opposite Grace Moore in the role of Emperor Francis Josef of Austria, a young monarch in search of a bride; he plays the part in fine fashion. Bouquets must also be thrust at Walter Connolly, who once more turns in a bull's eye performance; Raymond Walburn, and excellent character actor who also, in his short film career, has known no wrong. This time it is a picture flushed with enchanting music, cleaved with a gay, amusing story, directed with the utmost finesse, acted by an excellent cast and possessed of the screen's loveliest voice—that of Grace Moore.

"I'd Give My Life"

It is as vital and forceful, as thrilling as the headlines of your favorite newspaper. Starting with the fight of an earnest, honest Governor to rid his State of a plague of racketeers who control it, the story moves swiftly through the thrills of the revival of a twenty-year-old scandal which is revived and held as a weapon over the head of the Governor's wife. Her son is a member of the gang, and has been convicted of murder. The Governor refuses to intercede on the boy's behalf. The march to the gallows, along the grim "last mile," starts. Then comes a smashing dramatic surprise which strikes with the force of a sledge hammer because of its unexpectedness, bringing happiness and peace to suffering innocent and straightening four tangled lives. Tom Brown and Frances Drake carry the love interest of the story with Sir Guy Standing in the role of the honest Governor.

"Stampede"

The film is from the pen of the internationally famed writer of fast-action stories, Peter B. Kyne, and is jammed with thrilling action. Charles Starrett enacts the role of Larry Carson, an upright young cattle trader

IN MEMORY of Walter A. Bahlman, who Died December Fourth.

Dearest hubby, you have gone to that land so bright and fair, But I'll meet you, Walter, meet you, in that promise land up there.

And now dear Daddy, how we miss you, Every minute of the day, But we know that soon we'll see you, There forever we will stay.

How we grieved at your departing, But we know it was his will So we'll prepare to make the starting And perhaps be with you still.

We could see your ship was sailing, After the evening sun had set, We all knew your heart was failing, And we knew your God you'd met.

You have left our home, all sadness, You have left a vacant chair, We are all so sad and lonely, Since you went to live up there.

You had smiles for those around you, You had words for those you love, And we know you have a mansion, With your Savior up above.

—By his Brother-in-law, Norman Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Henslee were business visitors in Austin Sunday and Monday.

who comes to a western community to avenge the murder of his brother by a criminal band. In these efforts he is aided by the beautiful Finis Barton, daughter of persecuted ranch owner who has been waging a losing battle against the overwhelming odds of the outlaws.

"The Jungle Princess"

The role of the jungle maiden is played by Dorothy Lamour, radio star, and the man is Ray Milland. She saves him from a man-eating tiger, takes him to her cave and nurses him back to life. He learns to love her and she returns his love with all the ardor and passion of her primitive soul. But when she returns to civilization with him they are confronted by Molly Lamont, to whom Milland is betrothed and it is only in the face of a fear-crazed horde of natives intent upon slaying them that Milland makes his decision between the two.

"Without Orders"

advances into 1937 with the LOWEST PRICE IN YEARS and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

The 60-horsepower V-8 engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine, available in five body types, is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase — to the same advanced design — with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." And it delivers V-8 smoothness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS. . . Maris Trevor is discouraged because Rod O'Rourke spends all his money developing an invention which he hopes will provide an income so that they can marry. Maris thinks they should enjoy the present rather than deny themselves for the future. She becomes uncertain of her love for Rod. Perhaps there would be more happiness with someone else . . .

She crumpled the note and put it in the wastebasket. They wouldn't likely be home for at least a couple of hours.

She'd just make a cup of coffee and have some cake, for probably Patsy was going to give them a swell supper. Swiftly she remembered how disappointed Pat had been that Rod had missed the duck dinner.

Maybe she had planned this surprise for him. Pat was always thinking about other folks and doing nice things for them. Well, she would be disappointed once more.

For a moment Maris wondered how Rod was making out, but only for a moment, because she suddenly realized that one of her favorite features was almost due on the radio, and turning the dial, she flung herself down in a comfortable chair, waiting for the coffee to "perk."

Then came the musical motif that signified the approach of the feature and a moment later she was completely transported to other realms. It was not until the players had been on the air for about half an hour that she remembered the coffee. Jumping from the chair, she darted into the kitchen just in time to salvage half a cup, and with that and a piece of cake, she returned once more to the living room to listen to the end of the play.

But she was hardly seated till the door opened and Patsy and Johnny entered.

"Home so soon?" questioned Maris as she greeted them.

"Didn't you go to the movies after all?"

"Yep," answered Pat, "but it was a rotten picture. Where's Rod? Hasn't he come over yet?"

"No, he left for Cleveland today."

"He did?" cried Patsy. "What's up—got a new job?"

"No, he's got a chance to demonstrate his radio gadget."

"Say, that's great," remarked Jimmy. "Good old Rod; I sure hope he makes a hit with it."

"So do I," exclaimed Pat. "But I suppose that'll mean he'll want to marry you right away and take you to the country," she added, looking at Maris as though she expected her to confirm her suggestion.

Maris smiled, but made no remark.

Then, noting the coffee cup on the table, Pat said, "You haven't looked in the ice-box, have you?"

"Of course not, although I'm starving," answered Maris.

"But I thought you'd have a bite before you came home tonight—you usually do that on my night off."

"Oh, it's all right, Pat. I worked late at the office."

"You did?" questioned Pat.

"Yes," replied Maris, almost too eagerly. "I had to see about some stuff in connection with the exposition—at least Fayson's part in it. And say, Rowene Quick was in in the morning, all dressed up in the wedding gown she is going to wear at the show. She looked gorgeous."

"I don't believe she's any prettier than you," remarked Jimmy.

"All right, folks, let's eat," Pat said. "You can come and help me, Maris, and Jimmy can get us some good music and not these blood-and-thunder dramas you're so crazy about."

"It's too bad Rod couldn't be here," declared Patsy, opening the ice-box and revealing a sumptuous meal of cold spiced tongue with vegetable salad and a delicious frozen dessert. "I just hope this trip will bring him some luck. Don't you feel excited about it? Is he going to call you up?"

"I don't suppose so."

"What do you mean, Maris? You're surely not keeping up that silly fight with him, about Dulcie? You must be crazy if you'd let a thing like that come between you—"

"Suddenly Patsy stood stock still in the middle of the kitchen floor. You haven't thrown him over for the chance that one day Stan may talk to you?" Her eyes seemed to pierce the girl beside her.

"Don't worry, Pats, and work yourself up into a state. I'm not worth it, really. Only you may be interested in knowing that I've a date with Stan tomorrow."

"A date with Stan?" Patsy repeated incredulously. "Oh, Maris, do you know what you're doing?"

"There, Pat, don't get all 'het up.' It's only to tell him something about an announcement for the exposition. Guess he wants my reactions to it." Laughing lightly, Maris shattered the tension of the moment.

"Well, I'm glad, though you had me worried for a minute."

"That's silly. Stan's engaged to Rowene Quirk, so he hasn't any eyes for other girls." (At least not just now, thought Maris to herself.) "If only I'd her money, what stunning clothes I'd have!"

"He's really engaged to her?" demanded Pat.

"Yes, one of the girls saw the announcement in the papers, so not one of us girls will have a look-in, though it's a darned shame, for rich husbands can't be picked up at every crossroads."

"It's better so," commented Patsy, and for a moment Maris felt furious at her. Even if she was perfectly content with Jimmy Doyle and his future, other girls had dreams of really raising themselves through their marriages to important men.

"Stan Fayson," remarked Patsy, "would probably turn some working girl's head with his attentions and wealth, and then she'd find herself left high and dry when he got tired of her. Well, I guess we're ready to start. Come on, Jimmy."

"All right, sweetheart," he answered as he came into the dining room and put his arm about Patsy.

Maris caught the look of affection that passed between them. Somehow it annoyed her. Patsy was a jewel of a girl, but how could she be satisfied with Jimmy? Yet she seemed to adore him. Somehow that very fact seemed to make her feel like throwing Rod permanently into the discard. Maris felt with her beauty she should surely do better in the marriage market than marry a man who merely had a job—even if she loved him.

Well, she thought, now, as she glanced again at the couple, she wouldn't make a mess of her life by letting her heart rule her. What did marrying for love do for anyone? A cynical smile curled at her lips. Now she was glad she had not let herself be carried away by her emotions. She must keep them under control. Whatever came of love matches that folks raved about, but disillusion when the couples came up against the practicalities of life?

But suddenly all her calculated plans received a jar when Jimmy said, "I guess Rod will be a rich man one of these days. One of the engineers down at our place was talking about his gadget. He thinks it will revolutionize radio reception."

"That would suit you all right, Maris, wouldn't it?" questioned Patsy.

"Yes, of course," answered Maris, "but no one knows yet. It may only be a pipe dream."

"You don't sound very enthusiastic over Rod's ideas," remarked Jimmy.

"Oh, maybe I've heard so much about this wonderful gadget that I'm not going to believe in its wonderful future. Guess I'm from Missouri, and need to be shown."

There was a note of boredom in Maris' voice as she answered.

"Just wait till Rod comes back from Cleveland. Probably the engine of the train he comes in on will be flying flags. I've a hunch he's going to make good with it all right," announced Patsy.

"Yes, echoed Jimmy. "I feel that way too, although it may take a little while to make adjustments on it but when it's ready for commercializing I guess the shekels will simply pour in. Say, Maris, you've got a good thing in Rod." And he grinned at the girl.

"Maybe that's what you think," she answered.

After the conversation swung into a different channel. No further mention was made of Rod or his gadget, and Maris was glad of it. She would not tell them she was no longer interested in Rod.

Late that night as Maris stood at her window, looking across the roofs of Manhattan, a remark of Jimmy's echoed insistently in her ears. "Yeah, it's the rich guys that are the biggest racketeers in the country. Fellows like young Fayson often have tie-ups with folks you'd never dream of. That's why so many of these investigations into racketeers suddenly go up in thin air—the big guys behind them have flung around a bit of cash and everything's okay again."

As Maris watched the lights disappear from window after window she felt strangely troubled. Jimmy had as much as said that you couldn't find a decent rich fellow; that if you made any investigations about him you would surely discover something pretty damaging about him. But the thought that a fellow like Fayson should be linked up with racketeers was staggering. What good would that do him? He had plenty of money.

Why should Stanley risk such shady connections when he would one day be the head of a big important business?

But then, Jimmy did talk a lot. Sometimes Maris got bored with his talking, but going around as he did, probably he heard a lot. Still it was unthinkable that a man like Stan Fayson should wish to link himself with anything of a questionable character.

Yet Jimmy had said some of these rich men were so money-mad, that even the big risk they took in such undertakings was quite discounted, when they felt that more money would be theirs if they could transact such shady deals.

Somehow she felt troubled as she remembered how Jimmy had insisted that he could mention more than one well known man who was the brains of some racket—men whose wives, even, would not suspect them of such activities.

Of course she would not want to marry that type of man—there could be no lasting happiness with a background of this sort.

Surely Jimmy must be mistaken. Everything about Stan Fayson seemed to assure her that he was a gentleman in the full est sense of the word. Oh, why should he suggest such things, even hint at them, when this dark-eyed, debonair young man might play such an important part in her life? She tried to banish Jimmy's words, tried to tell herself he was "just talking."

But when she slipped between the sheets and her hot cheek pressed against the cool pillow, there seemed to be something sinister hovering about young Stan Fayson.

Then suddenly all her fine theories of a girl bettering herself by marrying a rich man, seemed to lose their power. Something within her cried out for Rod. He was straight. He was true. He would never link himself with anything shady. Had she made a mistake in passing up the love he offered her? But before she had reached a decision, drowsiness stole over her. Jimmy's pronouncements lost weight. Everything seemed to grow blurred. Maris had fallen asleep.

Next morning when Maris reached the office, she hurried at once to her desk, read the announcement Stan had given her, and finding nothing in it which she could improve upon, she decided to put it on his desk at once. But as she started down the corridor, old Mr. Fayson's door opened, and Stan almost collided with her.

Handing the paper to him, she said, "There isn't a thing to be changed as far as I see."

"That's fine," he answered quickly. "Thanks very much." But as he turned to speak, Maris felt his eyes look questioningly into hers, and her cheeks grew rosy. Something told her he was aware of her for the first time.

With a smile on her lips, she hurried back to her desk to meet the wide-eyed gaze of Milly.

Mrs. Wilkinson Is Emanon Club Luncheon Hostess

In a Christmas setting, Mrs. I. N. Wilkinson entertained members of the Emanon Contract Club and a few invited guests at a bridge-luncheon Wednesday. A silver Christmas tree lighted with blue lights gave emphasis to the color scheme of silver and blue with blue bells tied with silver ribbon forming the centerpiece of the dining table.

The three-course luncheon was served at quartet tables laid with Madeira linen over red with poinsettias, tied in blue and silver centering each table. Hand-decorated poinsettia place cards marked places for the guests.

Mirror reflectors were presented Miss Bendena Spill who won high score for the club members and Mrs. Gillispie of Abilene, high score for the guests. Poinsettias for high cut were presented Mrs. Victor Behrens of Abilene, Mrs. R. H. Henslee and Mrs. J. M. Skaggs, who in turn presented them to the out-of-town guests.

Those present were Mesdames Victor Behrens, Ray Maddox, Gillispie and Sellers, all of Abilene, Bailey Mack of Ballinger, J. M. Skaggs, Roy Mack, John Q. McAdams, Jack Wilkinson, R. H. Henslee, Miss Bendena Spill and a luncheon guest, Mrs. J. W. Dixon.

The group enjoyed games in which Mrs. Walter Lee and Mrs. Grover Davis won the first prizes. Guests were invited into the room where a lovely Christmas tree held gifts for each one.

Refreshments of sandwiches, potato chips, ambrosia cake and coffee were served to Mesdames Grover Davis, Pete Davis, LaDell Davis, C. O. Rodgers, Riley Marks, H. B. SUGGESTED RATIONS USING SILAGE

A 900 or 1000-pound cow giving 20 pounds of milk should have 60 pounds of silage and 4 pounds of cottonseed meal, or 60 pounds of silage, 3 pounds of cottonseed meal and 2 pounds of oats.

A cow giving 30 pounds of milk needs 5 pounds of cottonseed meal, 5 pounds of oats and 60 pounds of silage.

When it is desirable to do so, wheat bran may be substituted for oats.

As much as one-half of the total silage may be replaced with cottonseed hulls at the rate of 1 pounds of hulls for 3 pounds of silage. In other words, 30 pounds of silage and 10 pounds of hulls may be used for the roughage in the ration.

We are sorry to report the pastor of the Baptist church in the hospital at Abilene from a scalded foot. Some of our folks visited him Saturday. We are hoping for him a speedy recovery. He sent Bro. Moore, one of the Bible teachers in Hardin-Simmons university, to preach for us in his absence Sunday and Sunday night.

The men of this community are going right on with the work on our new church. The Methodist people are so nice to us inviting us to their church to have services with them while our building is being torn down and rebuilt. We appreciate their kindness more than we can say and how glad we are that Christian people will cooperate together and in so doing show the Christ-like spirit.

TAKE A LOOK AT SOUTH AMERICA
 President Roosevelt's visit to South America has turned the eyes of the people of North America toward the southern half of the Western Hemisphere, about which most of us know a great deal less than we know about Europe. Somehow the history and geography of South America seem to be rather neglected in most of our school courses, considering the fact that the countries and peoples to the South of us are much nearer neighbors than are those of Europe.
 How many children are taught in school, for example, that Brazil is a larger country than our own? Brazil is big enough to take in the entire United States of America, and enough more to occupy an area as big as Texas. Yet that enormous country has a population of only 13 persons to the square mile, while the population of the United States is nearly 42 to the square mile. With three times as many people as it has now, Brazil would be less crowded than are we of this Republic—and we still have a good many millions of unsettled territory.
 The proper title of Brazil, it might be noted, is exactly like ours—it is the United States of Brazil. It is different from all the other nations on the American Continent in that its language is neither English nor Spanish but Portuguese. Nobody knows the extent of Brazil's natural resources in minerals, oil, timber, agricultural and grazing

LET'S LOOK AT THE RECORD!
 An ardent young scientist completed a long series of experiments only to find that the results he sought to achieve simply could not be produced. Imagine his mental distress when he learned that the identical experiments had been carried thru in another university some years before. If he had known about this previous attempt he could have saved two years' hard work.
 He said: "There ought to be a careful record of the failures as well as the successes in scientific research. Some institution should maintain a graveyard where the young scientist could go and find a record of every research that has proved no good."
 If this would be a good thing in science it would be even more useful in business—and in statesmanship. In business we seem to learn so little from the past. We go through the same vicious circle of optimism, expansion, inflation, collapse, depression, and despair.
 There is hardly a single detail of the economic experience of the past seven years that cannot be matched in the record of every description since the industrial system began. Yet the human mind refuses dumbly to remember. Each fresh burst of prosperity is hailed as a "New Era" and each bust is regarded as something unprecedented and irreparable.
 So with statesmanship. If you read the history of the Roman Empire Diocletian you will learn that practically all the measures of modern government were tried out in his day—with results that are sad to remember.
 France tried most of them after the collapse of the Mississippi Bubble, and England hurried them onto the statute books when the South Sea company collapsed.
 All this information is in the Congressional Library, but unfortunately our law makers seldom visit the library.
 They should be compelled to spend at least a day a month in it, and there should be a Permanent Committee of Congress called "The Committee on Things That Sound Good but Won't Work."

I'LL TELL YOU HOW TO WRITE
 Emerson in his diary says: "I have heard that the engineers in locomotives grow nervously vigilant with every year on the road, until the employment is intolerable to them; and, I think, writing is more and more an error to old scribes."
 A famous American novelist was asked: "Does writing novels lands, except that they are enormous."
 Argentine is another big country, even less thickly populated than Brazil. It is about the size of the United States east of the Mississippi. Its climate is much more like that of this country than is the semi-tropical climate of most of Brazil. And its wealth is greater in proportion to population than that of any other nation in the world except possibly our own United States. Argentine, like Brazil, offers a vast and fertile field for exploration, development and trade.
 Those are some of the things about South America that ought to be taught in the schools, along with the Spanish language and its closely allied tongue, Portuguese. For some day, it seems quite likely, North and South America are going to be bound together in very close ties of friendly alliance.

TODAY and TOMORROW
 FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE
 KING... his rights
 I have a feeling that the great majority of Americans feel much more sympathetic with King Edward VIII of England in his clash with the British Government, than they do with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and his Cabinet. That is not only because the King made himself well known and popular on his two visits to this country when he was Prince of Wales, but because of what I think is the general American feeling that even a king's private life and matrimonial affairs are his own concern and those of nobody else.
 As I read the news from England, the King's desire to marry Mrs. Simpson was merely seized upon as an excuse by the ministry to undertake to reassert the exclusive right of Parliament to govern the Empire, and to rebuke the King for what seemed to be interference in political affairs. The existing order of the British aristocracy is afraid of what might happen if the King showed too much sympathy for and interest in the troubles of the common people and the unemployed.

CONSTITUTION... unique
 The British Constitution is a curious thing. It is not written down anywhere. It is made up entirely of laws, customs and precedents. Its fundamental principle, however, is that Parliament constitutes the actual government of the nation and that the King must be guided by the advice of the Cabinet, which is composed of members of the House of Commons. Even the House of Lords has nothing to say about the government.

 The latest amendment to the British Constitution was the adoption of the Commons of a resolution depriving the House of Lords of its previous veto power over enactments of the Commons. That was just before the war, when Lloyd George, as Premier, was fighting for his program of land taxation and greater security for labor, a program of which the Lords did not approve. King George V, acting on the advice of his Cabinet, threatened to create enough new Peers of the Realm to provide a majority for Lloyd George's program in the House of Lords. Under this threat the Lords capitulated.
 There have been clashes between the King and Parliament many times in the past 300 years.

ABDICATION... James II
 One thing the King of England can always do if he disagrees with his ministers is to quit his job. One side or the other must resign, if they cannot reconcile their difference. If the Cabinet resigns the King must call upon some other member of Parliament to form a new Cabinet. If he cannot get the support of a majority of Parliament, the next step is to call for a general election of a new Parliament. And if the new Parliament still stands out against the King, there isn't anything left for the King to do but either to come off his perch or resign.
 James II chose to abdicate the throne of England rather than yield to the dictation of Parliament. He did not formally resign, but threw the great seal of England into the Thames, got on a ship and went to the Continent. A great many good people of England still think that his descendants are the rightful monarchs of the nation.

AMERICA... George III
 America has figured in two constitutional crises in England. George III refused to take the advice of his Cabinet, which was to leave the American colonies alone, and by his stubbornness forced the Revolutionary War and lost the colonies. Now an American woman whom King Edward VIII wants to marry has precipitated the most serious English constitutional crisis in more than 150 years.
 Mrs. Simpson's ancestors fought the British in the Revolution.

DIVORCE... modern
 The only ground upon which the British Cabinet objected to the King's marrying Mrs. Simpson was not that she was a Commoner nor an American but that she had been twice divorced. That fact, they felt, would impair the respect which they felt the peoples of the British Empire should feel for their queen; but when the King proposed to marry her in his capacity as Duke of Cornwall, and not as King, they said it could not be done. Anyone he

MRS. C. W. WILLIAMS COMPLETES NEW HOME
 Work on the new home for Mrs. C. W. Williams on route four will be completed this week and ready for the family to move in by Monday. It is built on the same location that the old home was built on.
 The house is a substantial frame building with five rooms, a bath and all modern conveniences that can be had on the farm, with the water piped throughout the house, built in cabinet and closet space.

 married would have to be Queen. Kings have been married before to divorcees, and at least one famous monarch, Henry VIII, divorced two of three of his own wives.
 I think there is a good deal of hypocrisy about this divorce pretense. Certainly the post-war atmosphere in which King Edward has grown up takes a much more liberal attitude toward divorce than did the people of his Great Grandmother, Victoria's time.

Many a Friend Recommends BLACK-DRAUGHT
 People who have taken Black-Draught naturally are enthusiastic about it because of the refreshing relief it has brought them. No wonder they urge others to try it!... Mrs. Joe G. I find that taking Black-Draught prevents the bilious headaches which I used to have."... A purely vegetable medicine for the relief of

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Dec. 10 (Auto-caster.)—Possible changes in the Social Security Act is one of the principal subjects being discussed by Administration officials and members of Congress preliminary to the opening of the first session of the 75th Congress, which will begin on January 5.

The feeling is quite general that the act is not sufficiently comprehensive, in that it does not take in agricultural workers, domestic servants and employees of educational, charitable and scientific institutions and of "instrumentalists of state and Federal governments."

The Treasury's ruling that all banks which are members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation are instrumentalists of the government removes all bank employees from the provisions of the Act as it now stands.

There is also some talk about the possibility of eliminating the individual tax on employees' pay envelopes and providing for old age retirement benefits out of general taxation. It is not considered probable that this will be done.

It is certain, however, that the whole subject of old age pensions, either by means of individual contributions or provisions for old age assistance to those in need will be one of the most actively debated questions to which the new Congress will have to find a satisfactory answer.

S. S. B. To Baltimore

And in the meantime, nothing could provide a better demonstration of the way in which government offices have made Washington the most crowded city in America than the fact that the Social Security board had to go to Baltimore, to find a suitable building to house its departments.

The board found that at the very beginning of its work in connection with the Old Age Benefits Insurance part of its work, at least 120,000 square feet of floor space. Not that much space could be found in the District of Columbia.

One hundred and twenty thousand square feet is as much as is included in a ten-story building, 100x120 feet in area. Moreover, besides needing floor space, the board found that it would have to fill that floor space with such a heavy load that nothing short of factory construction would carry it.

There will be more than 50,000,000 individual filing cards for ready reference. This includes the original registration cards filled out by workers, and the official copies of them which will constitute the working file. The cards alone will weigh about 250,000 pounds.

The board found a factory building in Baltimore with three acres of floor space; is moving into it and hopes to be ready on January 1 to begin keeping the records of the earnings of the estimated 25,000,000 workers who come under the Old Age Benefits provisions of the Social Security Act. Also, a record of the payment of the income tax of one per cent of each worker's wages and the additional payroll tax of one per cent paid by his employer.

The decision of the Supreme Court by a tie vote of four to four that the New York state unemployment compensation law is constitutional is held here to indicate that the unemployment insurance provisions of the Social Security Act may also be held constitutional.

Trade Situation Improves

The international trade situation is reported by the State Department to have been greatly improved since France joined with England and the United States on an agreement to maintain the parity of their respective currencies by a stabilization agreement. Last week the remaining three nations which are still on the gold standard joined this international agreement. They are Switzerland, Belgium, and the Netherlands, which is Holland.

One effect of this agreement regarding currency is expected to be the working out of a means of checking excessive exports of gold from one country to another.

President Roosevelt not long ago expressed concern over what he called "hot money" coming into the United States from Europe. What he referred to was investments in American securities against gold credits in the United States, resulting in the holding by foreign investors of billions of dollars worth of stocks and bonds which they might suddenly take a notion to dump on the market and so depress prices abnormally.

There is, of course, no way of preventing anybody anywhere from buying shares in American corporations. But if the other nations in this currency agreement cooperate in checking shipments of gold to this country it will be much more difficult for foreign speculators to acquire large holdings in the American security markets as to constitute a danger to the stability of prices.

One of the exploits upon which the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice—otherwise the "G-Men"—is receiving congratulations, is the conviction of an Arkansas farmer on a charge of peonage. It is the first serious blow struck directly by the Federal government at a practice which is said to be common in many parts of the South and which amounts, in effect, to enslaving negroes.

The system is the simple one of having negroes arrested on the charge of vagrancy and then have the local court sentence them to forced labor under contract to a farmer. In this particular case the farmer happened to be the town marshal and arrested nine negroes as vagrants and had them condemned to work out their fines by labor on his own farm. The G-Men's attention was called to this incident, and their investigation resulted in the conviction of the farmer-marshal, who was fined $3,500 and sentenced to two years in prison if he fails to pay the fine.

Walker Scheduled for Farley's P. O. Job?

WASHINGTON... Persistent echoes which rebound through the halls of the new and modern Postoffice Department building here, carry the news that Frank C. Walker, (left, above), is the man whom President Roosevelt will ask to take the cabinet post of Postmaster General when James A. Farley, right, resigns around the first of the year to return to private business. Walker was a staunch administration supporter through the first Roosevelt term. Farley will of course remain chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

MODERN WOMEN

by CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS

Women are forging ahead in banking circles. Ever since the Association of Bank Women was organized several years ago, more and more women have gone into the field. The new president of the women's association, Miss Anne Houston Sadler, assistant secretary of a New York bank, is young, attractive, full of ideas, an active member in some of the leading New York clubs, and makes an excellent speech. Some day we may see women at the head of banks in all our big cities.

Taking the customer into your confidence and finding out what she likes and doesn't like about your store, is one way to improve your business, according to Mrs. Hortense M. Dominici, president of one of the largest women's specialty shops on Fifth Avenue, New York. Mrs. Dominici invites small groups of customers, typical ones, she calls them, to lunch with her every month and over the salad and ices she asks her guests to tell her just what they think of her store. Mrs. Dominici says that much of the store's success has been achieved as a result of these get-together luncheons.

A feature writer for a Buffalo paper who is blind, has just returned from a visit of several months in South America, where she interviewed many important people and sent back articles to her paper. Miss H. Katherine Smith, the blind girl reporter, takes notes in Braille. She was graduated from Vassar, where she studied journalism, in 1927, and within a week after receiving her diploma landed a newspaper job. Her mother accompanies her on assignments.

Russia, I am told, gives due recognition to its women astronomers. In fact, the Soviet country appears to lead in this respect and one-third of practically all observatory staffs are women. Mrs. Inna Lehmann-Balanowska, considered one of the most brilliant astronomers in that country, is attached to Russia's largest observatory near Leningrad.

A remarkable woman has recently come to this country, remarkable because she and her husband, the Dame and Seigneur of Serk, are monarchs of the last feudal state in the world. The Dame of Serk, or Sark, a tiny island in the English Channel, is Mrs. Robert W. Hathaway. She helps her husband rule over this state which was created by Queen Elizabeth in 1556. Until her marriage in 1929, Mrs. Hathaway herself was Seigneur of Serk. No automobiles are allowed on the island and it is four years since a crime has been committed there. When the Dame and Seigneur decide on a holiday, Mrs. Hathaway notifies the telephone company to discontinue service that day and also notifies the post office to close.

Can he play in Every room?

Here he is—the pride and joy of the household. Full of vim and vigor, ready at all times to go places and do things. Moreover, he does—and you wouldn't want him to change the least bit. Like all children, he is a natural born explorer. The living room . . . dining room . . . bed room . . . kitchen—this is his limited world during the indoor winter season and he makes the best of it.

He doesn't know that the toy soldiers left on the other side of that closed door that leads to the unheated living room mark a cold and health-threatening spot. He hasn't learned that a sudden change of temperature, such as going from a heated room into a cold one, makes it easy for him to "catch cold." If he knew these things he would urge you to give him the protection of healthfully warm temperatures in every room this winter.
