National Co-operation Possible The companies making these mobile factories might agree to sell only one of a kind to each city (depending upon the size of the city). Then all the mobile bakeries could form an association to buy their supplies cheaper than it would cost the independent units. A similar plan could be followed by the mobile candy fac-

Economist Takes Look At Cotton Situation in U. S.

The cotton supply in the United States during the current season, August 1, 1959 to July 1, 1960, is estimated at 23.7 million bales, about 3.4 million over that of 1958-

One reason for the increase in supply, said John McHaney, extension economist, is that the 1959 crop was about 3.3 million bales over 1958 because of larger acreage and a record yield of 475-lbs. per acre. The larger acreage was due to the ending of the acreage reserve program which took five million acres of cotton land out

fundamentals of successful

You've heard it often, and we ing is: Don't hurry!

Hurrying and worrying is the way a man gets ulcers. To cure them, the doctor prescribes less work and more fishing. But if he goes about his fishing the way he goes about his work, it's no ulcer

Second rule is to have the proper equipment.

So sit back, relax, and think about it awhile. For example,don't rush down to the tackle store and say, "Gimme a rod and reel and a bunch of lures and whatever I need for a fishing trip."

In the first place, if you went about it like that, the tackle shop operator would think, with reason, that you were off your rocker. So think about it for awhile.

What kind of fishing are you going to do?

If you want to keep it simple, a cane pole is satisfactory. With such a time-honored rig, you not only can catch bream, but also most other fish, even up to the monster category.
Fact is, I know of a woman who hauled in an eight-pound largemouth bass with a cane pole.

Chances are, though, that you are going to want a rod and reel, can't touch with your cane pole. Furthermore, with rod and reel, you can use artificial lures. That cane pole is strictly for live bait. Now you've decided to buy a rod and reel. There are hundreds of them, but they all fall into three categories: bait-casting, spin, and fly. The kind you want depends on the sort of fishing you intend to do. Let's suppose that the largemouth bass is your quarry.

I'd suggest a bait-casting rig for this purpose; a fairly short rod, about 5 1-2 feet long, rather stiff, but with a flexible tip; and the best reel you can buy in a weight that will balance with your rod. Don't get a rod taller than you.

There are those who will argue with me, and I will concede some points to them. Prime objection to the bait-casting rig is that it is more difficult to master than a spinning outfit. True.

But. . . in seeking the largemouth bass you want something that will turn him back when he heads for the weeds, brush, stumps, and rocks where he resides. The largemouth is full of savvy about ways and means of fouling your line so that he can work the hook out of his mouth at his leisure.

Sure, the spin-cast reel is the easiest to learn. But ordinarily you don't use it with anything heavier than eight-pound test line. I know that such a line will stand a lot of pressure, but you can put much more line on a bait-casting reel, and there are going to be times when you will wish you had

So, let's start this beginner out right. He's going to buy some spinning stuff later on anyway.

Okay, he's at the tackle shop. The operator of this place is in business for a profit, but at the same time he wants the neophyte to become a successful fisherman. This newly-bitten angler will get the disease in its more violent form if he is successful in bringing home a few of the scaly ones. So you can rest assured that the tackle shop man will give the best advice he can offer.

Naturally he will advise our neophyte to get the best-not necessarily the fanciest. You can pay any amount of money for rods, reels. You can even have a rod custommade for you, if you like, with a lot of gimmicks, stylish wrappings, and whatnot. Frankly, the fish don't know the difference. They are not supposed to see the rod anyway-until

Have the tackle dealer fill the reel with 15 pound nylon line, and you've got the rig for black bass ishing. Wait a minute, though. You're not hurrying this thing, remember?

You're not ready to head for the river or lake, yet. First, you've got say it again, the first rule of fish- to learn how to use this new rig of

> So, the third rule of successful fishing is accurate casting. The back yard is the best place to work on it.

Put a practice plug on your rig. Fix up a target-a bucket or an old tire will do. If you use a bucket, lay it on the grass, open end toward you. Now back off about 40 feet. Here's the technique.

Hold your rod so that the reel handle is up. Put your thumb down firmly on the line that is coiled up on the spool. Your thumb is going to act as the brake in this operation; it's going to keep the spool slowed down just enough so that too much line won't come off too fast and cause a backlash.

The backlash is the bane of bait casters. But if you will master the thumb-brake principle, you will have a minimum of tangles.

Now you're ready to cast. You're not going to do this the way you throw a baseball. This is mostly elbow and wrist action.

First, aim the rod at your target. Then bring it back, slowly and smoothly, until it is behind you at about three o'clock. Come forward sharply to twelve o'clock, because this kind of rig is more then simultaneously snap your flexible. With such a rig you can wrist forward and release your drop your bait into places you thumb enough so that the plug can fly at the target.

Keep thumb pressure on lightly and watch your plug. If the plug is going to overshoot the target, apply more thumb pressure. Do this smoothly, trying to make the plug drop easily and softly into the bucket or tire.

When you hit the target regulary, you're ready to go fishing for

Meet the man who gets the State Health Department's vote as Man of the Year

He operates the water system in your home town. Does the task sound prosaic? Then listen to health department sanitary engi-

Without the commodity he handles, men and cities would slowly die. You use his handiwork with confidence, yet without thought, each time you turn the faucet to drink of the clean, clear water.

Each time you fill the basin to wash your face or brush your teeth shave you call on him. Or on hundred occasions during a single, fleeting day.

He and all men like him are subjects of prime concern to the State Health Department's sanitary enginnering division. The interest stems from the fact that clean water is indispensible to good health.

The division is responsible for certifying water and sewage sy-stem operators who have the prop-er knowledge of the job and its public health implications, and for approving water systems serving the public. Well over 300 cities and towns, representing 90 percent of Texas' urban population now have approved systems.

Boiled down to its simplest terms, the Man of the Year has the task of collecting water for processing, making it safe for human use, and transporting it to homes and businesses. It goes on 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The Man of the Hour retails clean water. Is that important?

So important that no tyrant dares deny it to his people. Wars have been fought over it. Once mighty nations have collapsed because supplies were cut off.

The wandering children of Israel faltered in the desert and threatened rebellion until Moses smote a rock and brought forth a spring. Because of what the Man of the Year does during his eight-hour shift, the 140-plus gallons of water you use daily-assuming you're average-is delivered to you in all its life-giving cleanliness.

Part engineer-part chemisthis badge of honor is his cherished operator's certificate, bestowed by the State Health Department only on those who have proved to their ability to handle vital water system assignments. But the use of water so pervades human life that it loses significance. Thus does the Man of the Year get slighted when the public hands out accolades for service. (A weekly feature of the Health Education Division, Texas State Department of Health.)

1960 Census District San Angelo

Establishment of a district office for the 1960 Census of Population and Housing at the Welfare row, Mary Jane Matthews and Building, San Angelo, was announced this week by Director James W. Stroud of the Census Bureau's regional office at Dallas. William G. Stacy will be supervisor of the district office. He will direct a force of 15 crew leaders and 230 census takers in the following counties: Bandera, Brown, Coke, Coleman, Concho, Edwards Gillespie, Irion, Kendall, Kerr, Kimble, Kinney, Lampasas, Llano, McCulloch, Mason, Menard, Mills, Runnels, San Saba, Schleicher, Sterling, Tom Green, Uvalde, and Val Verde. Taking the 1960 Census nationally will require the services of 160, 000 enumerators, 10,000 crew leaders, and 400 district supervisors, all temporary workers. The district supervisors, working under the general direction of the permanent regional field directors, are responsible for all phases of the census in their districts. Duties of the district supervisor include the recruiting of the crew leaders, obtaining space for crew leader training, recruiting and training a small office staff, reviewing the completed questionnaires, and direct supervision of the field canvass which begins on April 1. Prior to the start of the census, all households will receive in the mail an advance census Report Form, a new census-taking device which is designed to speed up the field canvass and provide more accurate statistics. Distribution of this form, which contains the basic population and housing questions, gives the family a chance o assemble information abou each member in advance of the census taker's visit.

Guide for Determining Useful Life of Farm Property Available

Every taxpayer owning depreciable property used in his trade or business is faced with the problem of determining the useful life of each asset.

There is no standard life of farm property, says Bob Cherry, extension farm management spec ialist. Useful life in each case must stand on its own merits. For example, a barbed-wire fence with untreated posts on the Gulf Coast might do well to last 10 years, whereas the same fence in the Trans-Pecos area may last thirty "Useful life" means useful life to the taxpayer, the specialist explains. An automobile might be charged off in three years by one taxpayer with heavy usage, while his neighbor's vehicle of the same model will last for six years because of light usage. Factors to be considered in determining useful life include the amount of use, age when acquired, policy as to repairs and upkeep, climate, and operating conditions.

(without really meaning to)

You're not the sort of man who deliberately closes his eyes to the future. Not at all. In fact, you started buying U.S. Savings Bonds because you knew they could mean a better life for you and your family in the years ahead.

And yet today there is more reason than ever to invest in Bonds. And millions of Americans know it. The amount of money they own in Bonds is at an all-time high-over 421/2 billion dollars.

For instance, only recently a hunter in the cedar brakes near Austin saw a movement in the brush. He leveled his .30 caliber rifle and shot a friend through the neck. The man had on a white shirt and the shooter thought it was a deer waving its white tail as it moved through the brush.

Both men were illegally hunting-out of season and trespassing. The lamdowner said that these men and others had practically cleaned out his pasture of deer and turkey on illegal forays.

A few months ago a game warden was sitting on a hill overlooking one of the Highland Lakes. He was glassing the area for illegal deer hunters.

He saw three men in a car trailing a boat down a little used road to the lake. Occasionally he turned his glasses to watch them put their boat into the water.

Then to his astonishment, instead of taking fishing tackle from their car, they brought out "telephone" equipment. He watched them go out in their boat, drop the copper wires overboard and then gather up fish that had been shocked when they turned the magneto handle.

The warden used his radio to call another warden nearby and when the fake fishermen docked, the wardens were on hand to greet them. Two of the men said that they hadn't believed the "telephone" system would work and had gone along just for the ride. Anyway, they paid $42 each in fines. and now they know how the device works. Also they know that

Several years ago a fisherman walked into a stream with a charge of dynamite. He had stripped off his clothes and had planned to plant the charge in a deep hole under a big rock, where he knew some fish made their homes.

Something slipped. The charge went off. He was blown to bits by the explosion.

Only recently a warden, working at night, caught a man and his wife and two boys. The man was jacklighting deer. When arrested he pleaded with the warden that he had a responsible position; he was a leader in one of the boy's in his church. He tried to talk the warden out of giving him a ticket.

But the warden also was a leader in a boy's group and active in his church, and he too had a good

This violator paid his fine. What the boy's of his group think of him now is another question.

Another man, his wife and a friend, were patrolling a dark country lane at 2 o'clock in the morning. They had shot two fawns that weighed 14 pounds each.

When the warden arrived they tried to speed away. But they failed to make a sharp turn.

By the time the warden reached them their car was on fire, and all four wheels were spinning in the air. One man had been thrown out of the car. The man and his wife were pinned beneath the burning wreckage. Luckily the warden had a fire extinguisher and a radio. One of the men went to jail when he couldn't pay his fine. The other man and the women spent several days in the hospital. The two fawns were even too small to provide meat for a charitable institution and had to be destroyed. Violators will attempt to hide over-limits of birds in their hul caps. They'll lock their illegal kill in the trunks of their cars and then hide the keys.

Some of these violators are persons of high standing in their own communities. They would sit on a jury and give a bank robber a life sentence. But they would rob nature's bank of its most priceless possessions and then defy the law they otherwise uphold.

Again, the question, what makes a game-law violator?

One thing that doesn't make a game-law violator is for the young to be taught by their own parents to respect all laws.

They are taught not to shoot air rifles in towns where they are not supposed to. They are told to get permission from the landowners before going through a fence with a .22 rifle. They are told that guns can be useful, or they can be dangerous, depending upon their handling. They are warned not to take more than their legal limits of game or fish.

They are taught to observe shooting hours, and not to shoot from highways. When young people are taught these things by their parents they are not likely to grow up with a desire to "telephone" for fish, shoot fawns at night by the side of the road, or kill more than their long time-perhaps as long as we have fish and game. But there is no reason why the number cannot be decreased every year.

You ca, help by reporting game-law violators the same as you would an escaped convict or a bank robber.

People are as inaccurate in describing the size of a steak as fish-That is one of the big questions teach this lesson. One warden said ermen are in telling you the size

He was at home on the sea, and his courage in the face of the enemy was legendary, yet he was capable of writing the most tender love letters, and his treatment of his men was, by the standards of his times, extremely humane.

This is just part of the fascinating picture of John Paul Jones, America's first naval hero and founder of Annapolis, which emerges from Samuel Bronston's "John Paul Jones," filmed in eye-filling Technirama and Technicolor and due Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the State Theatre.

Conservation in '59

A year-end summary of conservation educational activities carried out during 1959 in Texas shows that real progress was made, says Jack H. Barton, extension soil and water conservation specialist. The summary was compiled by Barton from the 1959 annual reports of the State's county agricultural agents.

The specialist said that team work and understanding between the supervisors of the Soil Conservation Districts and the county agents of Texas were largely responsible for the progress made in educational activities. These activities included meetings, tours and contests, educational exhibits and demonstrations, preparation of newspaper and magazine stories, presentation of radio and television programs, distribution of printed material, and meetings involving SCD supervisors and county agents.

All educational activities showed good increases. Barton said. Outstanding increases were posted in the use of educational exhibits and demonstrations and printed materials for furthering conservation work, he noted.

Barton pointed out that the 177 soil conservation districts of Texas now cover approximately 98 percent of the farm and ranch lands and that the districts are residents can develop and promote their own soil, water and plant conservation program.

Each of the districts, he added, is a self-governed, State subdivision established by the district residents through popular vote. They concentrate the authority in the local community and exercise it by democratic methods. A local district is supervised by a fiveman board, and are elected public officials of a subdivision of the State government.

The Texas Legislature in 1940 authorized the creation of Soil Conservation Districts as an aid to carrying out the State Constitution as it relates to the conservation of soil and water resources, and to promote and protect the health, safety, and general welfare of the people of Texas.

New Dollar-Saving Prices

Step-Vans, 4-Wheel Drives, many light-duty models with automatic transmissions-all are lower priced. Prices have also been reduced on all optional V8's.

New Torsion-Spring Suspension

Eliminates I-beam shimmy and wheel fight! With torsion springs up front there's a brand-new, smoother, easier handling feel behind the wheel. New rear suspensions include wide-based coil springs in most light-duty models; tougher variable-rate leaf springs in medium- and heavy-duty models.

Electronically Balanced Wheels Front wheels and tires are balanced at the factory. Helps make that new ride revolutionary!

New Cabs—Wider, Safer, More Comfortable

Many models are a whole 7 inches lower (without sacrificing road clearance), so it's easier to hop in and out of cabs. Still there's more space inside: more room for hats and hips, more foot room with suspended pedals. Cabs are safer, too; new build makes them 67% more rigid.

Loudest gripes are about the retroactive feature of the plan and the fact that any moving traffic violation, no matter how minor, counts against the motorist.

Since 1946, the average lint yield per harvested acre has increased from 134 pounds to the Commission said Texas colleges 1959 yield of 337 pounds.

Last year county agents in 205 counties assisted producers with various phases of the 7-Step Program. Emphasis was placed on the use of cotton burs for soil improvement and to reduce gin fires. Burs were spread on 8,323 farms in 138 counties. A few years ago most of the burs were burned as waste, Elliott noted.

There was a marked increase in the use of defoliants and desiccants and machine harvesting in 1959 over 1958. Harvest aid chemicals were used on 58,236 farms in may not open branches without 167 counties as compared to 37,885 farms in 162 counties in 1958.

In posting the $69 million plus savings in labor, producers used 29,236 stripper harvesters and 3,280 spindle pickers in 143 and 100 counties, respectively. The weed and grass control savings were made through the use of 43,378 rotary hoe equipped tractors in 166 countries, the use of spot oiling of Johnsongrass on 150,834 chemicals on 50,532 acres in 125 counties. Lateral oiling with post emergence chemicals for weed control was used in 56 counties.

Full credit, says the specialist, goes to the county 7-Step Committees and the county agents of Texas for the achievements made under the program. Their contributions, concludes Elliott, to this cooperative effort have materialy strengthened the economy of
