New Methods of Voting May Come From Disagreements On Election

By VERN SANFORD
Texas Press Association

New efforts to change Texas' "scratch method" of voting are in prospect as a result of disagreements growing out of this year's close general election.

As the law now stands, voters using paper ballots are required to scratch out the names of all candidates for an office except the one for whom they are casting their vote.

In this year's election, thousands of voters scratched either the Republican or Democratic candidates but didn't notice or bother to scratch the small list of candidates from the Prohibition and Constitution parties. Some election judges threw out these ballots.

Some went ahead and counted them.

Republican leaders contend that they might have won Texas, instead of losing by a thin margin, if the same rule had been applied on all these carelessly marked ballots.

Further, the GOP chiefs charge, the scratch method was designed to encourage voters to vote a straight party ticket.

Actually, scratching is the old, traditional way of voting in Texas. For a time during the fifties the law was changed so that a voter could either scratch out the names he didn't want or put check marks by the ones he did want. But this either-or approach was even more confusing, both to the voters and ballot counters. So the legislature changed back to the scratch-out method only.

Several months ago the Supreme Court issued a 5 to 4 decision upholding the lower courts. On motion for re-hearing, it reversed this and held, again 5 to 4, that the case was not "accidental death."

In the case, an accountant died from a blood clot on the brain about a month after having watched fire destroy his office records. Two lower courts held that the beneficiaries of the accountant's insurance policies were entitled to the double indemnity provided for accidental death.

Several months ago the Supreme Court issued a 5 to 4 decision upholding the lower courts. On motion for re-hearing, it reversed this and held, again 5 to 4, that the case was not "accidental death."

LAND BOND SALE DISPUTED

House General Investigating Committee will study the merits of holding a veterans land bond sale Dec. 5.

Veterans Land Board has scheduled sale of $12,500,000 in bonds for that date, but Jerry Sadler, due to become land commissioner Jan. 1, says the sale should wait until next year. Sadler said that, because of the upcoming change of federal administrations, interest rates might be lower next year. This would enable the state to sell the bonds at a lower rate, paying less for the money it borrows.

Motorists will lose an outspoken friend on the Board when Penn J. Jackson leaves to return to his old post as district judge in Cleburne. Jackson has resigned the insurance post effective Jan. 1.

He has been in open disagreement during the past few months with the other two board members over the so called merit rating plan for auto insurance. He favors scrapping the present controversial plan and letting companies set up their own basis.

Board Members Robert W. Strain and Ned Price want to continue the controversial plan, at least for a time.

Public indignation over the new program has been high. It ups auto insurance rates about 30 per cent on drivers who must pay the high penalty for receiving traffic tickets, regardless of their accident records. Only other recourse is to do without insurance.

Jackson's resignation means there will be two insurance board appointments to be confirmed by the Senate next session. Price was appointed last spring and has not yet come up for Senate approval. Merit rating has stirred up strong feelings, pro and con, among legislators and undoubtedly will be a factor in the behind-closed-doors discussion of Board appointees.

PAYROLL TAX PROPOSED

State Finance Advisory Committee will recommend a payroll tax, borne equally by employers and employees, to bolster the state's sagging treasury.

Commission plan calls for a 1 per cent tax, half to be taken from the employee's wages, half to be paid by the employer.

It would raise an estimated $100,000,000 to $110,000,000 a year. Even this would not cover all the state's new money needs if the legislature attempts to meet demands for school improvements and medical care for the aged.

Payroll tax, actually an income tax on both businesses and individuals, is certain to meet the objection that it is not graduated according to ability to pay.

TUITION HIKE ASKED

Another money-raising proposal that is already stirring up sand is a proposed $50 a year raise in tuition for state colleges.

Commission on Higher Education voted to recommend this increase to the Legislature, saying it would bring in an additional $5,000,000 a year for college support.

It would mean the tuition for a nine-months term would be up from $100 to $150.

Tuition increases, when they have come before the Legislature before, have set off hot debates. Opponents charge that it "keeps the poor boys out of college."

Commission also voted to ask the Legislature to admit the University of Houston to the state college system — provided, among other things, that it will not cut down on support of existing state colleges.

NEW CLUB RULES ISSUED

Beginning Jan. 1, private clubs in Texas can operate only if they meet the following requirements set by the Liquor Control Board:

(1) Provide food service. (2) Meet basic operating expenses from dues and fees rather than from liquor sales. (3) Be managed by officers elected by the membership. Rules are designed to prevent operation of open saloons under the guise of private clubs.

Competition Within SAC Method of Measuring Strength

Although the strategic Air Command has ways of measuring elements of its strength, it must have a method of proof.

Once each year, the command calls nearly 100 of its best combat crews and their maintenance men to engage in a competition. This contest, SAC's annual Bombing-Navigation-Air Refueling Competition, is often times labeled the "world series of bombing."

It has a dual purpose—to test and prove the accuracy of SAC's "cream of the crop" crews, while at the same time promoting a higher degree of esprit de corps with command-wide participation.

Except for 1950 when Korean conflict began, the meet has been an annual event since 1948.

The competition takes approximately four days. Each mission involves an aerial refueling, celestial navigation, and a simulated bomb attack on three cities. Usually, the bombers fly from one base, while the aerial tankers fly from another nearby base.

Each bombardment wing and refueling squadron in the command is represented by two crews. Each crew flies one mission accompanied by an umpire who monitors the operation and insures strict compliance with competition rules.

Bombing is judged purely for accuracy in hitting the corner of a building, a smokestack, or some other pinpoint target. The simulated bombing is measured by a radar bomb scoring unit which computes the accuracy of the "drop" by means of electronics.

On the navigation portion, crews must rely solely on the stars. The umpires make tremendous slashes in total scores if the aerial refueling takes a minute too long, or if the tanker and bomber do not rendezvous at the prescribed time or in the designated area.

The missions flown by the B-47 and B-52 bombers are normally 3,500 miles long. The KC-97 and KC-135 tankers fly shorter missions and are scored on navigation and aerial refueling.

Most sought after prize of the contest is the Muir S. Fairchild Trophy, named in honor of the former Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, which goes to the wing showing the best composite score. Other trophies are awarded to best crews and wings in separate bombing, navigation and air refueling performances.

Promotions are awarded to winning crews and deserving maintenance personnel who supported them.

A decade of these competitions has improved crew proficiency and morale, has helped develop new techniques, and has served as a proving ground for men, planes, and equipment.

It is planned and carried out with the enthusiasm one would observe at a series baseball game, yet ever present is the seriousness of a wartime operation.

Health Letter

It may have seemed tough to think of many things to be thankful for at Thanksgiving during these ominous times, but a look at Texas' vital statistics show plenty to be thankful for. For instance:

Over a half-million babies were born during the two year period between September 1958 and August 1960. That equals almost 700 new babies each day.

During the same time period there were 162,000 deaths—a ratio of three births per death, certainly something to be thankful for.

These records were disclosed from figures compiled for the latest biennial report from the Records and Statistics Section of the State Health Department.

As a result of the birth to death ratio, Texas' population increased by 360,000 plus newcomers from outlying states, bringing the current total population to more than 9,500,000.

Filing birth and death certificates makes up the major portion of the Section's workload which totalled 800,000 records and amendments.

This brought the over-all records on file at the State Health Department to a big 12,130,000 items.

Since 1936, deaths — during the first year of life — have dropped from 71 per one thousand births to about 30 per thousand today. The maternal death rate has been cut 94 percent since 1936.

The amount of work needed to keep that many records and files accurate and up-to-date continues to grow.

Each certificate received is carefully reviewed, and for each error or omission noted, a query is forwarded to the person responsible for the mistake. During the last two years 25,000 such queries were mailed.

Adoptions are reported to the State Registrar and a new birth certificate in the name after adoption and showing the adopted parents as the natural parents of the child is filed.

The original birth record and the certificate of adoption are placed in a sealed file. Over 19,000 reports of adoption were received from district courts.

Amendments for change of name were attached to more than 1,000 birth certificates based on court orders.

Systematic and Intelligent Savings Programs Help Check Inflation

Babson Park, Mass. Up until a few months ago, the popular subject of discussion was the so-called "golden sixties" business boom. Expectations were based largely upon the projected growth in population and consumer spending, —predicated upon the free-spending attitude of consumers since the end of World War II. Consumers have upset the applecart, however, by exhibiting greater patience with regard to building new homes and purchasing durable goods. Moreover, they are putting away larger amounts in savings. The net result has been a slowing down of industrial activity.

in an attempt to claim credit for halting inflation. The truth of the matter is that the bulk of the credit belongs to the consumers. Although Federal monetary policies designed to tighten credit can dampen inflationary pressures, it is the voluntary action of consumers which determines spending and borrowing.

By sticking to a systematic and intelligent savings program, the readers of this column can both help check inflation and lay the ground-work for a healthy period of future economic growth. Curial legislation suggested by politicians appears very tempting; but it is the old-fashioned habit of thrift which, in the long run, will promote sound business growth and hold down inflation.

What About Savings?

At the present time, the rate of individual savings has been increased to over $25 billion a year. This is almost $1 billion more than people saved in the 1958 recession year, and almost $2 billion more than they put away last year. In addition, by easing up on bank borrowings and whittling down their outstanding loans, consumers have held the inflationary rise of consumer debt in check. The task of saving today is made easier by the record level of personal income. However, this increase in income presents also a strong inducement to indiscriminate spending. Hence, the fact that consumers have voluntarily chosen to put aside more money for the future makes me more optimistic on the future of this country!

Putting Savings To Work

In recent years, the low interest rate on savings bonds has discouraged saving via that sector. In fact, many people have been cashing in such bonds. At long last the Government has raised the interest rate on these bonds to make them competitive with other savings media; so it may be that savings will again be put into government savings bonds.

Savings accounts in commercial banks, and savings and loan associations are at an all-time high. Savings in the form of life insurance — including endowments and annuities — also continue to increase to new record levels. These, of course, are old stand-bys for savings. Today more people are funneling savings into real estate and the stock market, —either directly, or indirectly through the purchase of Mutual Investment Trust shares.

Guard Your Nest Egg

I am not worried about those people who have a fair proportion of their savings in bank deposits and government bonds. I am, however, fearful for the neophytes who are attempting to "get rich quick" in real estate or the stock market. These people too often neglect to build up first a cushion of cash reserves. The decline of over a hundred points in the stock market this year, and the laggard real estate market, show that investing is not a one-way affair. . . always going up. Market declines are a natural occurrence, and they can hurt those who invest indirectly through the various Funds as well as those who do their own buying of stocks, real estate, etc.

In view of the uncertain world conditions and domestic business maladjustments, my advice is to build up cash reserves and wait patiently for real bargain investment opportunities. Your thriftiness—not that of the politicians —is the hope for healthy business.

Lone Star Gas Co. Employees Receive 5% Pay Increase

Employees of Lone Star Gas Company and Lone Star Producing Company will receive a 5 percent pay increase effective December 1.

In making the announcement, Lone Star President L. T. Potter said the increase represents a direct additional payroll cost of $1,200,000 annually.

He noted that the pay hike applies to almost all regular and full-time employees. The two companies employ about 6,000 people in Texas, Oklahoma and other neighboring states.

Morrow, Mrs. Wallace Watson, Joe Kozelsky, Claude Harrell, J. B. Guy and Miss Neville Fisher. Mrs. W. L. Collins has served as publicity chairman of the VFW and Auxiliary for two years.

The Lone Star head said individual and collective work performances by Lone Star people was a major factor in the decision to authorize the pay rate adjustment.

Mr. Potter pointed out a portion of the employees are represented by a union and the increase in such cases cannot become effective until accepted by the union.

44 Types of Soil Found In Runnels Soil District

"Extensive soil mapping is being carried out in the Runnels Soil Conservation District," states James Barnhill of the Soil Conservation Service. This Standard Soil Survey is planned to be completed in the district by 1965. "This Survey separates the 44 different soil types found in the district," Barnhill said.

Things such as parent material, vegetation, topography, and age of the land make these 44 soils different from each other. These soils are divided into soil types according to the texture of the surface soils and how well the subsoil will let water, air, and plant roots pass through it. This is called soil permeability.

Texture refers to the fineness or coarseness of soil particles. This is determined by the amount of sand, silt and clay that make up the soil. Texture also indicates the ability of the soil to hold water and fertility.

Permeability refers to the rate that air, water and roots penetrate the subsoil. Soils with clay subsoils are usually slowly permeable, while those with subsoils lighter than clay are usually moderately permeable.

How easily a soil is eroded by wind and water is indicated by its texture and permeability. Coarse sandy textured land is easily eroded by wind, while heavy soils are easily eroded by water.

Barnhill also stated that the SCS prepares soil maps showing the different soil types. These maps have proved helpful to farmers and ranchers in learning more about their soils. This information is helpful in planning a sound soil and water conservation program.

Home Town Talk--

have drunk to contentment lungsful of clear, pure unsunned and frostbitten northwinds while pleading with old Bossy to please go back into the shed where one could at least get out of the most direct blasts of cold. There are still a few, perhaps, who greet the dawn to the tune of twin streams of milk hitting the bottom of a pail. But nowadays, it's much more thrilling to brave a blast of cold air while stepping to the front step to retrieve the day's supply of milk — now delivered in square paper cartons, homogenized, pasteurized and governmentized.

We know of one fellow, who prefers that his name not be mentioned for obvious reasons, who remembers some of the days when the milk was not so handily obtained; when the milk was truly pastureized. It seems that back in his boyhood milking days he was assigned to a cow who had a habit of swishing her tail around to hit him in the face, or tangle the cockleburs in her tail with his hair. He took it about as long as he could, he remembers, and then one morning he watched to make sure his father had left the barn, and then grabbed a pair of de-horning clippers off the wall and gave the old cow a quick bob. Just as he finished the job, he looked up to see his father standing in the barn door.

The New Covenant is the subject for next Sunday's Sunday School Lesson. Illustration: "A businessman crossed the ferry to New York every day. One day he spoke kindly to a little bootblack who was shining his shoes. After that he noticed the boy never saw him without wistfully approaching him. The boy would pick up his bundles and brush off his clothing, without expecting any reward. The man was so deeply impressed that one day he asked the boy what inspired him. 'Why, sir,' he replied, 'the first time you met me you called me 'My boy'; 'til then I had thought I was nobody's boy. I'll do anything for you.' So Christ made us know that we are not orphans in a storm, but children of a Father who knows and loves us."

"Pollyanna"
With the first turn of a movie on a hot day in California's Napa valley, the joining of two legends became a fact — the fictional legend of "Pollyanna" and the living legend of Walt Disney. The mixture of what the name Disney represents with the almost spiritual effect that the orphan girl of Eleanor H. Porter's novel has had on people everywhere, is a motion picture "natural." Walt Disney is a household word today. "Pollyanna," at least to older generations, has been a recognized American institution ever since 1912 when it was first published.

Actually, the story of the fabulous success of the book is as incredible as the story of the public's acceptance of Disney as a creative genius. Pollyanna Whittier, so the novel reads, was an orphan girl who came to a small eastern town to live with her wealthy, spinsterish, strict, unloved, and seemingly unloving aunt, Polly Harrington.

Aunt Polly runs the town of Harrington with a velvet-gloved fist. She is charitable because it is a civic duty. She maintains the name Harrington in the fashion of a benevolent despot.

Into this arena of "town acceptance" of things as they are, comes Pollyanna and her "Glad Game." This is a philosophy which simply says that no matter how bad things are, they could be worse.

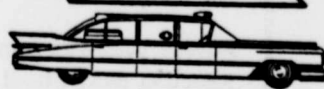

"Sink the Bismark"
"Sink the Bismark," 20th Century-Fox's high-tension Cinema-Scope filmization of C. S. Forester's similarly-titled, suspense-packed saga of the sea, will make its local premiere on Friday at the State Theatre. Starring in the historic tingler are two of Britain's finest film stars, Kenneth More and Dana Wynter.

Produced with the full cooperation of the British Royal Navy by Lord Brabourne, 34-year-old son-in-law of Admiral Earl Mountbatten, Chief of Staff to the Minister of Defense, and directed by Lewis Gilbert, "Sink the Bismark" is the story of one of the most crucial sea battles of World War II, and certainly one of the greatest victories in the annals of British naval history. It is the true story of Hitler's mightiest battleship, and how it was hunted down in driving Atlantic storms, fought and destroyed.

"Sink the Bismark" depicts the dramatic piece of history—36 hours long—after Prime Minister Churchill sent the urgent message contained in the title to the British navy in 1941 at a time when British fortunes were running very low in the war, and the 52,000-ton German ship was the menace of the Western waters.

It is a real-life chess game on the great green gaming table of the Atlantic ocean. The pawns are men-of-war, and the players are the officers on the deadly German battleship, and those in the British Admiralty.
