

SADDLE TRAMP — Jimmy Stewart portrays a cowhand who undertakes to deliver an imported-from-England whiteface Hereford bull to Dodge City in Universal's stirring western drama, "The Rare Breed," in Technicolor and Panavision, starring Stewart, Maureen O'Hara and Brian Keith.

IRISH CHARMER — Dublin-born Maureen O'Hara co-stars with Jimmy Stewart and Brian Keith in Universal's stirring western drama, "The Rare Breed," in Technicolor and Panavision, portraying an Englishwoman who imports to America the first whiteface Hereford bull.

As It Looks From Here

The Ancient Chinese Calendar designates 1966 as the "Year of the Horse." It is too bad it could not be the "Year of Horse Sense."

It Would Have Been Horse Sense had the North Vietnamese Communists been willing to engage in discussions following "Tet," the Chinese Lunar New Year, during a cessation of hostilities. But, unfortunately, the war, like that peculiar calendar, is made in Peking where any kind of sense appears to be sadly lacking.

Since There Seems Little Hope For Any Sense to come out of Hanoi and Peking for settlement of their aggression in South Viet Nam, some common old horse sense is now called for on our side.

Every Possible Effort Has Been Made to bring the situation to the conference table, even including the submission of the matter to the United Nations—all to no avail. The bombing of North Viet Nam, recently resumed, is even more limited than before it was stopped at Christmas.

From Pure Old Common Sense, It Seems There Are a Number Of Things to do towards winning this conflict. Aside from hitting targets in North Viet Nam, previously ruled out of bounds, such as oil storage depots, a large steel plant near Hanoi, and steam-generating plants, we could effectively mine the coastal waters of that country. This would represent a "peaceful" blockade of the principal port of Haiphong, and lesser ports receiving military supplies from other countries. It would not have to be such a blockade as was imposed on Cuba at the height of the missile crisis. Western and Communist nations alike which trade with North Viet Nam could be warned that such was being done and that they would go into these ports at their own risk. It would cut Hanoi's line of supply, including oil necessary to their war-making operation. Considerable shipments other than petroleum products could be furnished from Red China, but it would have to be done over one principal railroad, which could be destroyed faster than it could be rebuilt. Oil must be furnished by the Soviets from sources along the Black Sea through the Suez Canal. China is short on oil itself and, therefore, not a dependable supply for Communist North Viet Nam.

The Mining Of The Harbors In This Area may have a thin standing in international maritime law, but there is no considerable amount of evidence that the Communists anywhere are particularly respectful of international obligations. Some may say that two wrongs never make a right, but there is also no obligation to be the victim of those violating law.

To Mine The North Vietnamese Harbors and to bomb vital installations necessary to cut Communist ability to wage offensives against South Viet Nam, would be a new and powerful evidence of the depth of the United States determination to stop Communist aggression.

There Is, Of Course, Reason To Be Concerned as to the reaction of the Soviet Union and Communist China. There is no question but that the Russians would face a dilemma. Thus far, this has been a major consideration on the part of our policy makers. Should Moscow accept this limitation on its assistance to an ally, her prestige would be damaged in the Communist world in rivalry with Peking. If she challenged the U. S., it would risk direct involvement and possible war.

Somewhere Down That Road we must come to hard grips with this question. Able strategists agree that to win in South Viet Nam, to stop Communist aggression here and discourage it elsewhere in the world, will require us to deal with supplies reaching North Viet Nam. Otherwise, the war will have to be fought in the jungles and the rice paddies with inestimable losses in American lives and with the outcome always in question.

The Peaceful Blockade May Be Essential, Whatever The Risk.

A Modern Oriental saying: Some people are like water. They shape themselves to the glass which holds them.

CARD OF THANKS
I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the friends and neighbors for the cards, flowers and gifts sent me during the time I was a patient in the hospital in San Angelo, and for the visits since I have returned home. "War-Gods of the Deep"

Once more filmdom's "Monarch of Menace," Vincent Price, gets his deserved come-uppance after another evil film portrayal in American International's "War-Gods of the Deep." This time Price, who has perished on screen in just about every conceivable manner, manages to chalk up a deadly first—he gets smothered by molten lava!

This newest thriller, showing Friday and Saturday at the State Theatre, also stars Tab Hunter, David Tomlinson and Susan Hart. This time Price portrays a despotic captain who has ruled over a lost undersea city for centuries.

"The Rare Breed"

Jimmy Stewart is wearing his old clothes to work again.

In Universal's "The Rare Breed," just as in a dozen or so other large-scale, largely outdoor pioneer adventure dramas, dating all the way back to his "Winchester 73" for the same studio 15 years ago, he wears the identical weather-beaten wardrobe. "The Rare Breed," in Technicolor and Panavision, showing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the State Theatre.

TOP TEXAN—Beautiful and talented Dale Evans, Queen of the Cowgirls and a world-renowned philanthropist, displays the Texas Press Association's most coveted plaque—The Texan of the Year Award. Miss Evans is the first woman to be named Texan of the Year. Four other native-born Texans have been similarly honored. Awards during previous years went to Paul Richards, Van Cliburn, Dan Blocker, and C. B. "Tex" Thornton. Pictured with her at the honor banquet in San Antonio on January 29 is her famous husband, Roy Rogers, King of the Cowboys. Miss Evans received the plaque from TPA President Winn Crossley, publisher of the Madisonville Meteor, at the closing event of a two-day TPA Mid-Winter Convention at the El Antonio Motor Inn. The couple flew from California especially for the event.
