HOME TOWN Talk

By R. C. THOMAS

There are many problems which can be laid on the doorstep of the hot and dry weather we have been having, chief of which, most of us probably say, is that of trying to find a cool spot. But there is another problem... and a tricky and dangerous one, at that.

Winters Volunteer Firemen have been called away from their counters, desks and places of business and labor several times during the past weeks to extinguish grass and weed fires. They never complain when they roll up to a grass fire—they'd rather it was that than a big and destructive fire in a home or business. When the fire alarm sounds, they take it for granted that there is a danger to be reckoned with.

We could all help to make their lives a little more pleasant; to help them to attend to their businesses or jobs; to help them keep from getting clothes and shoes ruined. We could help by being very careful when we set a trash fire or think of burning off a dry weed-filled lot; when we strike a match to rubbish in an incinerator.

If there is a bunch of trash to be disposed of, it would help a lot if we collected it in boxes or other containers and let the Sanitation Department dispose of it. If there are weeds and grass to be burned off, every precaution should be taken to make sure that the fire we set does not get out of hand. A blazing weed or grass fire can quickly become a monster, destroying all burnable objects in its path.

If we've just GOT to burn off a patch of weeds or grass, it would be wise to have plenty of water close at hand, and never to leave such a fire unattended. Seconds is all it takes to start a destructive fire on its way.

A Government official has said that there is no politics in the war on poverty. Closely comparable would be a statement that there is no moisture in water.

Clipped: The advertising manager of a bank thought to serve a good purpose and at the same time focus on the bank's investment advice, by warning the public against window display schemes. So he had a window poster designed and displayed describing a wholly fictitious proposal which he thought would illustrate the idea. It read as follows:

Stock for Sale! Big Dividends! All Profits! A corporation is being formed in California to produce and sell cat fur, which has a great market value. A farm has been established upon which to raise cats. Another farm adjoining will be used upon which to raise rats. The rats will provide food for the cats. The carcasses of the cats, after they have been divested of their pelts, will be used to feed rats. Hence, both cats and rats will be raised without cost for food. The money derived from the sale of the cat fur will therefore be practically all profit. The dividends will be enormous!

Just beneath the above, at the bottom of the poster, enclosed in a border, was printed the following:

WARNING! The above is a sample of the kind of stock selling schemes now being offered to the public. Beware of them, they are fakes.

The poster attracted many people. After being displayed for several days, seventeen people came into the bank to find out where and upon what terms they could buy in the cat-and-rat farms idea. Evidently not one of them had read or heeded the warning at the bottom of the poster!

Historical Series

First Runnels County Judge Was Sergeant In Confederate Army

(The following article is one of a series covering the history of Runnels County, sponsored by the Runnels County Historical Survey Committee, Rankin Pace, chairman. The writer, Charles Poe, is Committee Historian.)

When Runnels County was organized almost the entire population was Confederates and their kinsmen, but because of isolation and the transient state of affairs held no organization.

In 1885, H. D. Pierce, the postmaster at Runnels City, went to the Ft. Worth State Reunion and came back revived in spirit. He went to work getting up a role of his regiment and began to enroll all the Confederates, taking a biographical sketch of each.

The first one enrolled was Sergeant Sylvester Adams, the County Judge. He was born March 9, 1834 in Umphreys County, Tenn. and came to Texas with his father when very young. He enlisted in the Confederate service from Bosque County March 8, 1862, as a recruit in Speight's Battalion, Texas Infantry. Stationed at Virginia Point near Galveston, Adams was at reorganization under the conscript law and was transferred to Co. A 1st Texas Heavy Artillery. His company was stationed at Galveston during the entire war and he remained in service until the war's end.

Judge Adams moved from Bosque County to Runnels in November, 1879, and took an active part in organizing the county, serving as its first judge. He was re-elected twice in succession and after an interval of two years was elected for a fourth term in 1886. He served out that term and died at his home in Runnels City, February 3, 1889. He is buried in the Runnels Cemetery.

Mayor Reports To Lions

City Is In Good Financial Shape

In an annual "mayor's report" to the Lions Club, Mayor W. M. Hays Tuesday told club members at the noon meeting that the City of Winters is in good shape financially and reported on projects now underway and which have been completed during the past few months.

The "mayor's report" has become a tradition of the Winters Lions Club, having been inaugurated several years ago. Each time the mayor in office at the time gives a synopsis of the audit report for the previous fiscal year, and reviews the administration of the City's several departments.

Mayor Hays told Lions Club members and guests that the new settling basin unit of the water plant is approximately "two-thirds completed," and it is expected to be complete within the next 30 days. Pouring of the last one-third segment of the wall of the settling basin was to be completed this week.

The mayor also reported that a record for water consumption had been reached last week. Daily consumption has been in the neighborhood of 1.25 million gallons during the past week. Mayor Hays also drew a water-consumption picture for the City, comparing the present

PC Volunteer Tours Chu Ya District With African Member of Parliament

(Billy M. Pumphrey of Winters, now serving as a member of the Peace Corps in the African nation of Tanzania, recently made a tour of the district where he works and lives, with a member of the Tanzanian Parliament. He also visited with Sen. Robert F. Kennedy when the senator made his recent visit to Africa, and will write about this visit in a future article.)

BY BILLY M. PUMPHREY

I have lived in Chunya for nine months now. I thought that I knew this district well but I had my eyes opened recently when the Member of Parliament from Chunya District, the Honorable R. A. Kinyonga, took us on a tour. What a red carpet tour and what new sights we saw!

Mr. Kinyonga picked us up at our school on Sunday morning (May 29). After stopping briefly in town for gasoline (over 70 cents per gallon), we proceeded on our safari.

The road, although unpaved, was in good shape and we saw much new country. The land around Chunya is very much similar to West Texas and the surrounding mountains remind me of the Moro Mountains. We passed over several streams and two rivers. Villages and schools were scattered about the countryside and we often stopped so that Mr. Kinyonga could greet his constituents. We passed by many side roads which lead to the now idle gold mines which once made Chunya rival the Klondike.

At the intersection of the Saza (Lake Rukwa) and Itigi roads we were stopped by a gate. All vehicles coming from the lake area have to stop and pay a 2 cent tax on each fish they take out. Mr. Kinyonga said that the tax brought in several thousand dollars each year to the district

At Mwambani we visited in the home of some villagers then we went to the White Fathers' Mission. A Dutch father met us there and we had a good meal including locally-grown rice. The mission buildings and church were recently built and they are quite nice.

After lunch and a short visit, we headed back to Saza. We stopped near one village to inspect construction of a dam. An earthen dam and a side channel were diverting the stream while cement blocks were placed across a deep, wide ravine bordered by two large boulders.

Back at Saza we turned towards Mbanga and Lake Rukwa. The lake is 130 miles long, 30 miles wide, and about 37 feet deep. The water is usually muddy because the lake is so shallow. The day we were there

Who Would Benefit? Worker or Union Boss?

AN EDITORIAL

Although there has been scant information released to the public, there is a campaign underway, conducted by union representatives, to organize oil field workers in this area, and bring them under the control of some union. There probably will be an election held in the near future to determine if the workers are in favor of such action, although there has been, to our knowledge, no public announcement made of such prospective action.

We know nothing about this union which is attempting to gain a foothold in this area's oil fields—and we have no positive quarrel with unionism, per se—but we do know something about some unions and the tight and restrictive and initiative-choking collar of control they have somehow managed to place around the necks of workers and management alike.

For instance, in New York City, the International Typographical Union fought the installation of automatic typesetting equipment (such as The Enterprise has been using for nine years). They struck against the newspapers wishing to update their equipment and methods of printing. In their stubborn refusal to allow the use of this equipment and to allow the workers who MIGHT be displaced, to be absorbed by other departments of the newspaper publishing firms, they forced at least two giant newspapers to suspend publication and go out of business, thereby throwing hundreds of people out of jobs. Many of the workers, although they may have obtained other jobs eventually, probably will never recover the losses they experienced during the long weeks of strikes and negotiations. This pattern has been repeated in other areas throughout the country.

And we all are familiar with the story of the Big Teamsters Union, which in all probability will be controlled for the next few years by a president reposing behind bars of a Federal prison.

We fail to see any advantage which might be gained by unionizing oil field workers—except to the pocketbooks of union organizers who drive big automobiles and live in a style of luxury most of us can only dream about... all paid for by the sweating worker in the oil patch.

MODERN METHODS MEAN PROGRESS

One reason for our country's progress is that we have learned how to do many things quicker and better. To save time means more production with less effort. It is the American way to get each job done and to get on with the next.

It is not always that we have more efficient methods and better machinery but we put them to wider use. One way to save time and effort is to pay all bills with checks. They are used more here than in any other land. Convenience appeals to a nation where it is a rule to get things done as expeditiously as possible.

Pay by check to save time and to have records you will often need. Photographs are made of all checks, front and back, paid by this bank. Your business is invited.

Bid Withdrawn For Union Vote In Odessa

ODESSA — According to an Odessa attorney, Elmer Davis director of Region 16 of the National Labor Relations Board, has notified McFarland Drilling Co. of Midland that Local 826 of the International Union of Operating Engineers had withdrawn its petition for an election as bargaining agent for employees of the company.

The union was required to prove that it represented at least 30 per cent of McFarland's employees. It failed to make the 30 per cent showing and thus withdrew its petition. In June the union had demanded recognition claiming that it had a majority of the employees.

This is the second time in less than a week that a union petition has been withdrawn because of a lack of a sufficient number of employees.

Both the law and NLRB require the union to prove that it has 30 per cent of the employees lined up before it will direct an election.

Many of the early American roads were built by private individuals or by turnpike companies as business ventures. Tolls were charged for riding a horse or driving a vehicle down the pike, but pedestrians were usually permitted to use the road free of charge.

"The Spy With My Face" and "To Trap a Spy"

Moviegoers are offered a double dosage of suspense and thrills with the double-bill program of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Spy With My Face" and "To Trap a Spy," two slam-bang adventures in color. Both pictures star Robert Vaughn and David McCallum—the world's two most famous U.N.C.L.E.s. "The Spy With My Face" also has beautiful Senta Berger, named by U. S. movie exhibitors as a Top Star of Tomorrow, and Leo G. Carroll; with "To Trap a Spy" featuring special guest star Luciana Paluzzi and Patricia Crowley.

"The Spy With My Face" revolves around the formula for a weapon so powerful that the future of the world is at stake. THRUSH, a band of murderous renegades who will stop at nothing to rule the world, are determined to obtain this new weapon for their own evil purposes. How their scheme is thwarted by Napoleon Solo (Robert Vaughn), top agent for U.N.C.L.E., and Ilya Kuryakin (David McCallum) in thrilling action, climaxed by a bullet-ridden chase through the Swiss Alps, makes for an adventure which will hold the viewer on the edge of his seat.

Equally hair-raising is "To Trap a Spy," in which WASP, a world-wide crime-for-hire syndicate, plans to take over Western Natumba, a newly-freed African nation, by assassinating its Premier Ashumen when he visits the Vulcan Chemical plant. This plot is thwarted by the courage and ingenuity of Napoleon Solo and a young housewife, Elaine (Patricia Crowley), with David McCallum, as the Russian-born master spy Ilya Kuryakin, and Luciana Paluzzi, as Angela, the beautiful WASP agent, playing a dramatic part in the outcome. The thrilling climax, in which Napoleon and Elaine are chained to a steam pipe in a locked tunnel under which a reactor has been prepared for a deadly explosion, is one of the most suspenseful and terrifying ever devised for a movie thriller.

Both pictures are showing Friday and Saturday at the Fiesta Drive-In Theatre.

"Opportunity Plan" Designed to Make Education More Available

By—Vern Sanford
Texas Press Association
A $10,000,000 state bond sale has launched a new "opportunity plan" designed to bring college educations within the financial reach of all qualified Texas Youth.

"Never again will students of this state be denied higher education because of lack of funds," commented John E. Gray of Beaumont, chairman of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System. Initial bond sale was awarded to a Chicago bank.

Action by the Coordinating Board set in motion the loan plan approved by Texas voters as a Constitutional amendment last year. Amendment authorized a total of $85,000,000 in bonds to provide funds for students unable to continue education beyond high school without financial assistance. Initial $10,000,000 sale is believed to be more than adequate to carry the program through the first year.

Ceiling on available loans is $1,000 a year for undergraduates and $1,500 for graduates. Although a six per cent interest rate is authorized, the U. S. government will pay all interest while a student is in school—and half of it afterward for borrowers eligible for federal interest subsidy.

A borrower's family income must be less than $15,000. Loans

Missionary Gives Program Monday For Baptist Group

Mrs. Dale Carter, missionary to Corrente, Brazil who is home on furlough, gave the program for the Sue Carter Circle of the First Baptist Womens Missionary Union Monday night in the home of Mrs. Claude Hart.

Mrs. Carter wore a hand embroidered dress and presented a Brazilian doll wearing a national costume. "In Salvador you can see the ladies sitting on the sidewalks wearing these dresses," she said.

Serving as president of the missionary society in Corrente, Mrs. Carter says they have a magazine printed in Brazil but she also uses all the good ideas in the Royal Service. Corrente is in a remote area and when the Carters first went there they had to go to another town for their mail and only received it once every four months. Now we have a road and get mail about four times a month, she said, but when it rains it has to be brought in by oxcart.

Appointed by the Foreign Mission Board in 1957, the Carters are home on their second furlough and will live in Lubbock where Carter will brush up on farming methods at Texas Tech. He teaches agriculture at the Baptist Industrial Institute, which serves a four state area, and also manages the 75,000 acres of farms and ranches belonging to the school. Mrs. Carter teaches sociology in the high school.

The Carters and their three children, Timmy, Becky and Joel left Corrente June 15 on the missionary airplane and went to Rio where they took a ship and arrived in Houston July 6. "As we came through Cuban waters the U. S. Flag was flying at all times, with a spotlight on it at night," she said.

Mrs. T. H. Worthington, circle chairman and mother of Mrs. Carter, presided for the business meeting. Mrs. George Poe gave the prayer calendar with members placing U. S. flags on the map in countries where missionaries who had birthdays that day were serving.

Others attending were Mary D. Taylor, Eunice Polk, Mmes. Rufus Smith, B. T. Shoemaker, Elzie Cox, J. B. Whitlow, Lester Graham, and V. E. Frier-son. Mrs. James R. Wood, grandmother of Mrs. Carter, was a special guest.

Cotton Producers Meeting Set For Monday, Ballinger

There will be a meeting for all county cotton producers Monday night, August 1, in the district courtroom at Ballinger, beginning at 8 p. m.

The meeting, sponsored by the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers, is one of a series of 31 county meetings which will be held throughout the Rolling Plains for the purpose of organizing local county cotton improvement associations to begin to combat the problems of cotton in an organized effort.

Anyone who raises cotton in Runnels or Coke counties recognizes that cotton is at the crossroads of a life of being kind of the cash crops of the area, spokesmen said. Synthetics, lost foreign export markets and domestic mill demand for better quality cotton than has been produced are just some of the many problems confronting cotton growers and posing a tremendous challenge to the economy of the area, they said. A plan of attack based on local county cotton producers organizations should be of interest to all county farmers and businessmen.

Among other topics to be discussed will be the Cotton Research and Promotion Act which has passed Congress and will be presented for a vote in referendum to all farmers in the future. The RPGA is attempting to provide information on the Act to all Rolling Plains farmers so that they might thoroughly understand its contents, it was pointed out.

C. T. Parker, Runnels County Agriculture Agent, will bring a report on the latest insect situation as determined by the insect survey teams working under his supervision. Also, a director will be elected from Runnels County to the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers. Neuman Smith and Pete Davidson are currently serving as directors. Smith's term expires this year and his position will be up for election.

C. E. Arrott and Ben Boykin are the directors from Coke County. A director will be elected to fill the expiring term of Boykin.

the lake was quite full and many bordering trees were submerged so that only their tops were showing.

Baobab trees were growing around the lake and in the village. A folk tale says that these trees are really growing in hell and what we see above ground is just their roots. At any rate, they are quite grotesque and unusual with trunks often 35 feet thick!

In the village we passed by large straw bales filled with dried fish bound for Zambia. We continued north along the lake's edge and stopped at a fishing co-operative operated by the government. There we saw stacks of fish (smoked, salted, and sun-dried) with which the government was experimenting to find the best method of preserving them. One fish with large, sharp teeth caught our attention. I don't know how it would taste but the men said it was quite dangerous.

Across the road from the fishing station a vine-covered baobab tree was "crawling" with monkeys. Jim and I had not had the opportunity to get so near to monkeys before, so we rushed over and took many pictures of them. The monkeys entertained us for a full 30 minutes, jumping from branch to branch and staring at us "unusual creatures."

Then, thanks to Mr. Kinyonga's efforts, we had the big thrill of the day—a boat ride on the lake to see the hippos. We went in a large 20-25 foot boat powered by a Johnson outboard motor. There were small waves but they didn't bother the big boat. We searched the shoreline with binoculars for the huge animals but they were all in the water. As we neared their vicinity, they stuck their heads out of the water and snorted at us. It was a job trying to have the camera aimed at the right place as one came up for air. A couple surfaced near the boat and their snorts gave me a scare. The hippos, unfortunately, don't go ashore until evening and we had to be heading back to Chunya by then. Incidentally, the men told us that the hippo meat was quite good.

After returning to shore we drove up a little further north to watch the sunset on the lake. The houses there showed marks where crocodile skins had been nailed to dry in years past. Nowadays there are few crocodiles in that area. We did see, however, a n a t i v e throwing stones at a muskrat-type animal which swam out to a tree in the water.

Then as the sun set we started back to Chunya. The countryside in many places was a glow with brush fires which were started to kill snakes and dangerous animals. Although the fires are dangerous, against the law and kill needed vegetation, they are picturesque.

Next time Mr. Kinyonga, who is currently in Dares Salaam for meetings of Parliament, promised to take us to the other side of the lake where elephants, zebras, giraffes, and other wild game can be seen. Already though we have an increased pride in our adopted country and area.
"Asante sana, Bwana Kinyonga!"

AS IT LOOKS FROM HERE

Omar Burleson, M. C. 17th District, Texas

Great Moments In American History: Columbus refuses to turn back. The Mayflower lands at Plymouth Rock. A settlement starts on the James River. The Colonies break with England. 'Tis the "Star Spangled Banner." The defenders of the Alamo answer Santa Anna. Our Flag is raised over Alaska. Gold seekers rush to California. American women get the right to vote. An American walks in space around the earth.

On July 4, 1776, America declared its independence from the British Crown. Of all events affecting our Nation, this is the greatest.

The Central Eastern Seaboard of our country, of which Washington is the center, is full of history and historical reminders.

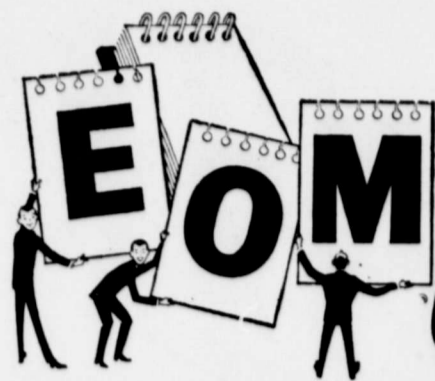

From The Crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains to Gettysburg, to Philadelphia, to the Capitol in Washington, Virginia and Chesapeake Bay, is history itself — Jamestown, Williamsburg in Virginia, and Fort McHenry at Baltimore.

On The Night Of September 13, 1814, Francis Scott Key, whose home stands on the District of Columbia side of the Potomac River, a bride named after him, wrote the "Star Spangled Banner." Our Flag and the song it inspired are inseparably woven into the American fiber. It was the Garrison Flag of Fort McHenry, still flying defiantly after 25 hours of bombardment of the Baltimore fortress by the British, which led Francis Scott Key to write the poem, since set to music, that is now our National Anthem.

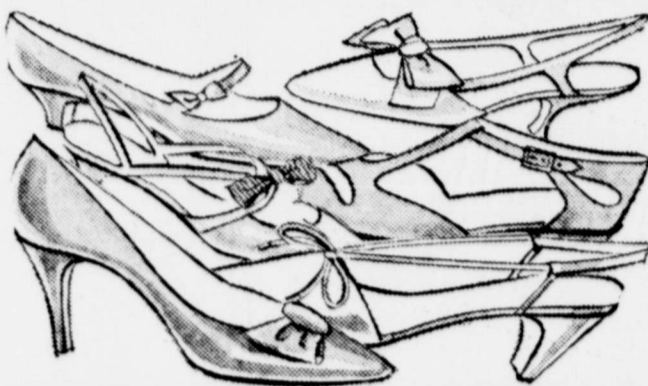

As A Young Washington Lawyer, Francis Scott Key had sailed under a flag of truce to the British Fleet in the Chesapeake Bay. His mission was for the release of a friend, Dr. William Beanes, who had been captured by the British after burning the Capitol and the White House. Although Beanes was released, the truce team headed by Mr. Key was detained by the British during the attack on Fort McHenry in Baltimore.

In His Anxiety For The outcome of the battle, Key remained on the ship's deck all night. When "by the dawn's early light" he saw the Flag waving, his pent up emotions gave way and he expressed himself in the immortal lines.

With a steadily rising population in the State and Nation goes a mounting demand for wood and the thousands of products made from wood.

Southern Pine provides the majority of the nation's wood poles and piling.

Texas Tree Farms provide forest products, employment, payrolls, taxes, recreation, watershed protection, food and shelter for wildlife.

BEATS WALKING—Hazel McMurtrie admits to being over 70, but she doesn't let age get in the way of exercise. The Millerville, Pa., resident likes to scoot around town on a tricycle. She says she brought the idea home from a Florida vacation.

STAR-DRAG CARE — When storing a star-drag reel, always completely back off the tension. Prolong storage with the drag tightened down will ruin the drag discs, causing them to chatter and slip when again put to use.

WIDE-AREA FISHING — In fast moving water let the current work your lure. By simply moving your rod tip from side to side, stretching out as far as you can reach to either side, you can cover approximately 15 feet of water.

Also occasionally throw your reel into free spool and allow the current to carry the lure back 15 to 20 feet.

Lumber doesn't corrode. Did you ever see a rusty tree?

WINCH CAUTION—Before putting a strain on your boat trailer winch be sure the anti-reverse gear is engaged. A wildly spinning winch handle can badly break knuckles and even break fingers.

KNIFE SAFETY — Don't risk losing a good fishing knife overboard. Drill a small hole in the handle, stretch a short length of line and a cork or plastic float so it will float if dropped overboard.

Wildfire is Texas' No. 1 forest problem, according to the Texas Forestry Association. More than 99 percent of the wildfires that ravage Texas forests are man-caused and are preventable.

Combination Bait—To jazz up a topwater lure that fish ignore, try adding a leader about six inches long to the back hook. Then add a single hook and minnow.

Often the fish will strike the minnow when they'll ignore the lure.

More than 10,000 board feet of lumber are used in the construction of the average home.

Texas Tree Farms are growing trees to meet the Nation's needs.

Trees are a crop, according to the Texas Forestry Association. Trees grow, are tended, and harvested like any other farm crop.

Forest fires in the United States cost every taxpayer $20 annually.

Some isolated areas of loblolly and shortleaf pine are found in Bastrop, Fayette and Lavaca counties and are known as the "Lost Pines" because of their isolation from the normal pine-growing area about 100 miles to the east.

Pliny, the Roman naturalist, described a cotton boll as a "nut with a beard."

Five largest outlets for cotton are trousers, shirts, sheets, towels and underwear.

A two-row mechanical cotton picker will harvest nearly a bale and a half an hour.

WIL NOTEBOOK—PATTERNS FOR PROGRESS

INDUSTRIAL SITES AND BUILDINGS ...basic for new and expanding industry

Industries' requirements for land and buildings are one of their most important interests when selecting a town in which to operate. Each industry has its own peculiar needs. Therefore, a wide variety of different type industrial sites gives a community increased chances of obtaining new industry as well as helping its existing industry to expand. Planning and zoning by a community is important to the community as well as to industry. Land is now available in West Texas. Wise planning for the future can easily be accomplished.

INDUSTRIAL SITES — range from industrial parks, planned industrial districts, individual sites (with all utilities) to raw land to be developed. Communities desiring new industry should have the following information on firmly committed industrial sites . . .

PLATS — Showing size, shape, location of utilities, access to transportation and topography.

LOCATION — Inside or outside of the city and any zoning restrictions.

PICTURES — Aerial photos tell an excellent story on an industrial site.

INDUSTRIAL BUILDINGS — existing buildings are very important as they are usually available at a lower cost than building new ones. In addition to the above information on sites, a community should have the following information on buildings . . .

FLOOR PLAN — Showing the size and dimensions of building, wall and ceiling heights, floor bearing capacity, office space, whether it has sprinkler system for fire protection and what type heating and air conditioning would be available.

PICTURES — Show the type construction of the building as well as many other items of information that industry would be interested in.

VIP (Very Important Part) — Have firm commitments in writing on all industrial sites and buildings as to sale price and/or lease price, cost of extending utilities or roads and basic construction costs in the area for new facilities.

Ask your WTU local manager for additional information and services available.

The King, the Queen and the executioner were present. Alice and the prisoners, too, of course, but these were all. No jury, no public, no publicity.

No newspaper reporters.

In Alice's Wonderland even applause was "immediately suppressed by the officers of the court."

Not so in America.

In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a public trial, says Article the Sixth of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of the United States.

So people may know, newspapers must report these trials.

This is not freedom of the press. This is responsibility of the press.

Newspapers have no extraordinary rights.

People do.

Men have the right to a public trial and the right to know what happens in courtrooms. These are rights written into the Constitution and affirmed by the Supreme Court in 1829 when Mr. Justice Bagley wrote: "It is one of the essential qualities of a court of justice that its proceedings should be public."

If people are to know the truth the newspaper must report the news.

After 34 Years, Home Demonstration Club Reorganizes As Industrial Club

The Winters Home Demonstration Club was organized in 1932. On Wednesday of last week, members of the organization met for the last time under that name, and adopted a new name, Winters Women's Industrial Club. The club will operate as an unaffiliated organization, with new constitution and by-laws adopted at the Wednesday meeting.

Officers of the old Home Demonstration Club will continue in office in the new organization for the remainder of the year. They include Mrs. Agnes Lawrence, president; Mrs. John Shipman, vice president; Mrs. Jim Edwards, secretary; Emma Henniger, treasurer; and Mrs. Lora Coupland, reporter.

Aim of the new organization will be to devote its time to civic and charitable affairs of the Winters community.

One of the main interests of the new club, as with the old organization, is serving weekly luncheons to the Winters Lions Club. This will continue, club spokesmen said. And club members will devote each meeting to "studying crafts and also studying problems of the community and helping with these problems."

The Winters Public Library is of vital interest to the club, and club members have continued plans to help this project when possible.

The Winters Home Demonstration Club was first organized in 1932 with Laura Gaye Alexander as the first president. Members met in their homes, and held bake sales from time to time to raise money for the club. Food was cooked in members' homes and carried down to a vacant building to serve dinners.

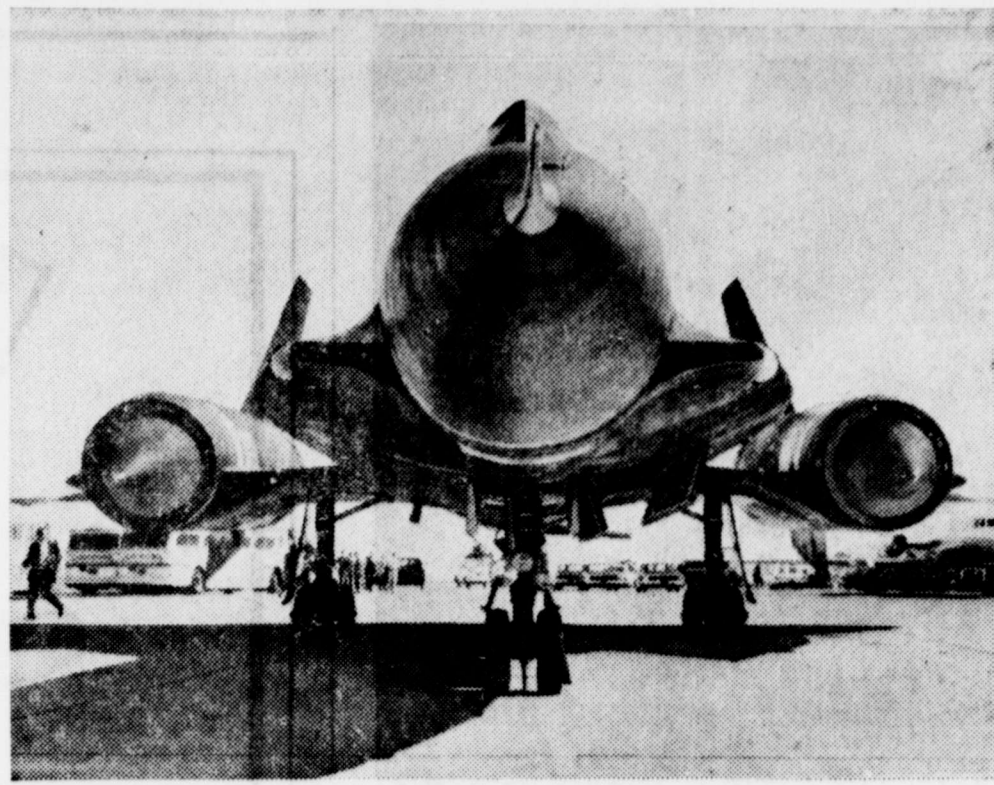

Later, an old building which had been used for a kindergarten class on the east side of Winters was purchased and moved to a location on West Dale where American Supply Co. is presently located. A floor was put in the building, and a kitchen was built on. The house was painted and papered, and other major repairs were made.

Members served luncheon each Tuesday to the Winters Lions Club to support the club, and through the hard work of the women, their purpose soon was accomplished and their dream was realized: to have one home for the club and to help serve the community.

In 1959 the club house was moved to its present location on College Street, west of reclamation of the land on West Dale by the railroad.

At present there are 14 members in the club.

RECORD HOLDER—Meet the YF-12A, the world's fastest plane, according to the Air Force. The Lockheed-built fighter-interceptor recently set nine speed and altitude records in a single day and hit a top speed of 2,062 miles per hour.

It's the dead of summer. It's HOT!

Fishing is in the doldrums. You'd like to go fishing but... well, I really can't blame you. There's not enough action to be worth the effort.

That is, unless you're fishing for the ubiquitous bream or sunfish or perch or whatever you call it. The bream is a warm-weather fish. It will cooperate even during the hottest days of July and August.

You need not travel far to catch bream. These little boggers are literally everywhere. Nor is elaborate tackle needed. Any canpole and readily accessible natural bait will put bream on the stringer.

Only drawback to this fish is its size. It doesn't grow very large. But its spirit belies its diminutive size. It has been called, "pound for pound, the fightingest fish that swims."

An average bream will be about the size of your hand. But sometimes you can find a concentration of larger ones. In stock tanks, many grow better than a pound apiece.

These are hybrid sunfish, developed by the Texas Parks and Wildlife hatchery at San Marcos.

By crossing two species of the sunfish family, the hybrid is developed. Most of the offspring are males. Problem with sunfish is that they multiply so fast they soon overpopulate a body of water. Then the fish become stunted. Hybrids have eliminated much of this problem.

An ordinary canpole is all right for catching bream. But I prefer something more suited to the sport, like a light fly rod or an ultra-light spinning outfit. On these delicate rigs even a hand-sized bream can cut all sorts of capers, making you believe you've snagged a fish that size.

During hot weather most bream will be deep, but early and late in the day you'll find them in the shoreline shallows, feeding on tiny insects. Look for them in about four to eight feet of water, just beyond weed beds or submerged stumps or rocks.

On calm waters you can see the telltale dimples where they rise to pluck insects off the surface.

Later in the day, go deep for them; they'll be near bottom. When they are near the surface, I prefer to use tiny flies or spinner baits to catch them. Just about any fly or small popper worked slowly will entice a strike. When the fish are in deep water, wet flies and spinners fished deep and slow will get action. But the favorite bait is something natural.

All sorts of natural baits get results; earthworms, crickets, roaches, small grasshoppers, catalpa worms, tiny crawfish.

Use the smallest weight possible, just a tiny split-shot sinker, to sink the bait deep. The small weight gives the bait more lifelike action and it is easier to feel a bite when you get one.

For bait fishing, use light monofilament, about four- to six-pound test, a No. 10 hook, the BB split-shot sinker and a small cork or bobber, if you prefer one. Lower the bait to the bottom, in about 12 feet of water, then raise it a few inches. If after a few minutes you haven't had an offering, raise it even more, fishing different stratas on up. Bream are gregarious, school fish, and once you pinpoint a concentration you are in business.

When fishing with artificial lures in mid-day, use light monofilament that will readily sink deep. Perhaps you'll wish to add a tiny spinner in front of a fly, to give it more weight for sinking and more flash to entice strikes on the retrieve. Work the fly very, very slowly. On a fly rod employ a leader at least nine feet long. The monofil will sink readily; the fly line won't. Idea is to get the bait deep.

As for cooking your catch, don't be dismayed by the size. The bream is delicious. Just scale and cut off the head. Fry a rich golden brown in a deep skillet of grease. If you get the fish crisp, the bones are brittle and can be eaten.

Cook plenty! Everyone will be coming back for seconds.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Louder Than Words

Suppose you walk into a coffee shop, point to the doughnut tray, and hold up two fingers. And suppose, after being served, you decide that you aren't hungry after all—and refuse the doughnuts. Could the proprietor make you pay anyhow?

Theoretically, he could indeed. Even though you haven't uttered a word, you have entered into a binding legal contract.

As a rule, contracts are created by oral or written language. But the law recognizes that actions may speak louder than words. If the situation is right, just a nod of the head may mean anything from "I do" to "I bid $100 for that oriental rug."

You can not only enter into a contract but even commit an assault, merely by gesture. The law will weigh the surrounding circumstances to decide how much menace the gesture conveyed.

For example: It was held not an assault for a man to shake an angry finger at his hostess, since she was safely seated eight feet away. And it was held not an assault for a motorist to make a leering grimace at a pretty girl, walking at a considerable distance from his car.

But it was held an assault for a landlord to brandish a stick ominously over the head of his tenant. And it was held an assault for a man, known to be triggerhappy, to reach suddenly for his hip pocket.

Can defamation of character, too, be committed by acts instead of by words? It is possible, wrote Jonathan Swift, to "Convey a libel in a frown, And wink a reputation down."

In one case, a man charged that his character had been besmirched—wordlessly—by two clumsy detectives. It seems they had followed him constantly for several days and nights, making no effort to hide what they were doing.

The detectives denied that this amounted to defamation. But the court agreed with the plaintiff, because the detectives had shadowed him so openly. The judge said their actions, proclaiming to one and all that this man needed watching, spoke more insultingly than words.

How Much Religious Liberty?

"The crowning glory of American freedom," wrote one exultant judge, "is absolute religious liberty."

Yet, is "absolute" the right word? Are there really no limits at all to our religious liberty?

The great, historic test of this question arose a century ago when a Mormon was arrested for polygamy. In his defense he relied on the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom.

But the Supreme Court drew a momentous line dividing that freedom into two parts: freedom of belief and freedom of practice. The Court said freedom of belief has no limits, but freedom of practice must necessarily have limits if society is going to function successfully.

Otherwise, said the Court, any anti-social act—including even human sacrifice—would be lawful if it bore a religious label.

"Every citizen (would) become a law unto himself. Government could exist only in name."

Thus, in assorted test cases, courts have held it illegal—even for religious reasons—to use child labor, to violate a liquor law, to curse a policeman, or to handle snakes dangerously in church. However sincere the defendant's religious belief, his religious practice went beyond what society could fairly permit.

Nevertheless, in each one of these cases, the court acted only because the need for setting limits on religious practice.

For instance, courts have upheld the right of religious partisans to ring doorbells (even if that might annoy some folk) and to hand out leaflets (even if that might cause litter).

Furthermore, under the sturdy constitutional shelter, unusual forms of worship continue to sprout and flourish.

So our religious freedom, if not quite "absolute," is reassuringly close to it—just as the Founding Fathers intended.

"They fashioned a charter of government," the Supreme Court has said, "which envisaged the widest possible toleration of conflicting views. Man's relation to his God was made no concern of the state."

As It Looks From Here

Omar Burleson, M. C.
17th District, Texas

The Vice President of the United States was recently quoted as saying in New Orleans that if he lived in conditions such as some of those he saw, he would be in revolt, too.

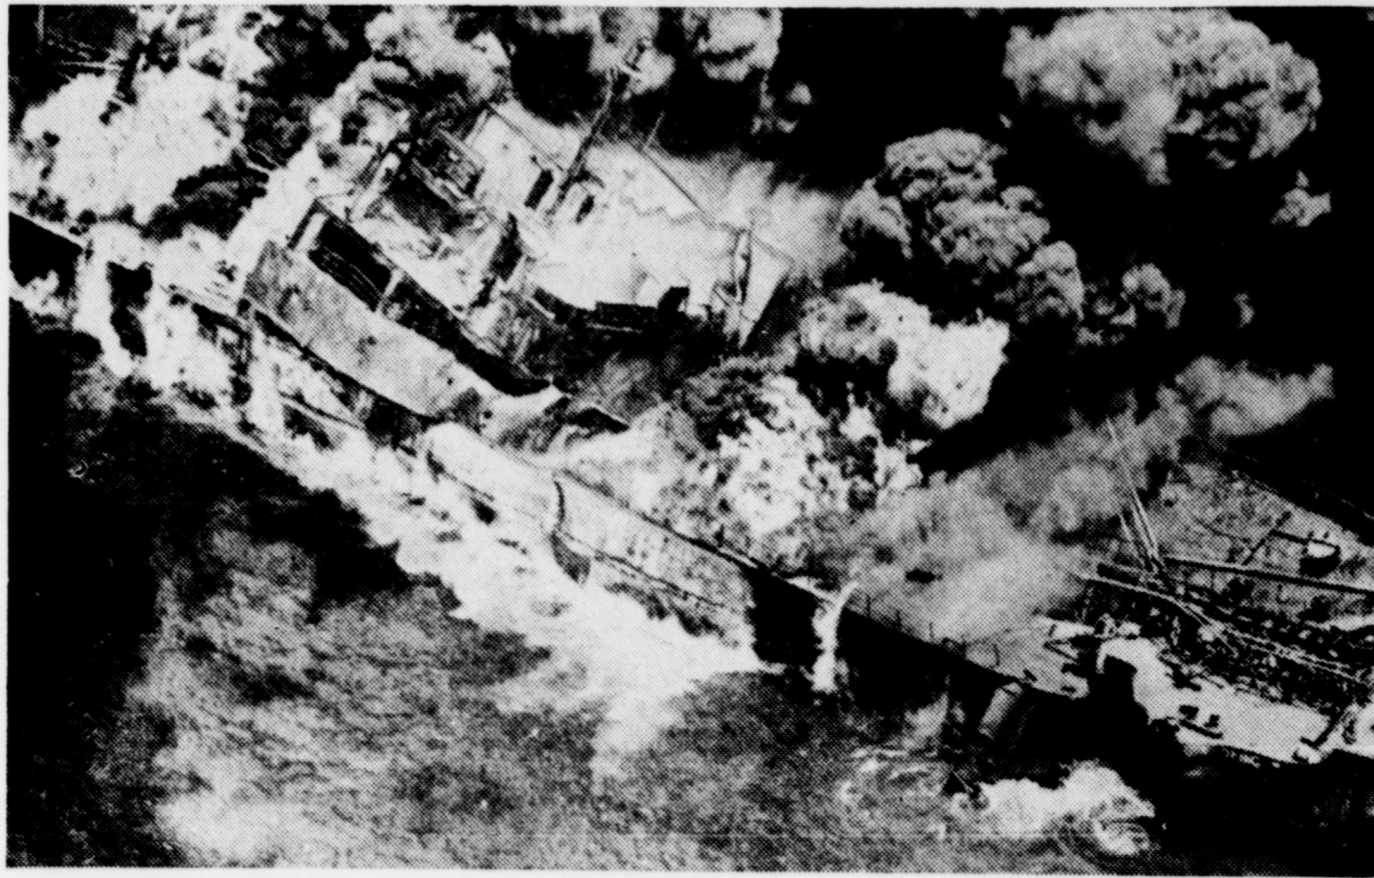

In Phoenix, Arizona recently a Mr. John Binkley, Deputy Director for Field Services of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, said that the Commission "not only sanctioned civil disobedience, but encouraged it."

He said that the Commission responded to pressure and that the squeaking wheel got the grease. This is a neat summing up of morality surrounding some of the present programs. The implication is clear. What is being said is that conscience or fairness has nothing to do with their activities, but only politics, power, and pressure.

Another Federal employee lends his encouragement to riots and protests by saying, "Nothing ever came about in the Civil Rights movement by being nice. It takes direct and militant action. I have little patience for diplomats."

Remarks by highest officials in our Government would seem to give encouragement and promise to marches, riots and boycotts. They are saying, in substance, that unless the Federal Government continues with its direct handouts, riots and looting can be expected. What is taken to be a suggestion is followed in a great many places.

Even Secretary of Defense McNamara in a recent speech in Canada, which had nothing to do with Defense, suggested that poverty drove people into the arms of the Communists. He suggested that, to head off social upheaval which provides Communism with its entire income, requires an extensive Foreign Aid Program.

THAT SINKING FEELING—Smoke billows from the hulk of the British tanker Alva Cape, still partially laden with a cargo of inflammable naphtha, about 125 miles southeast of New York. The ship, twice hit by explosions and fire in New York harbor, was taken out to sea and sunk by the Coast Guard.

This has been the central theme of our extensive and far-flung Foreign Aid since its inception. The results are not supported by the record. It is a curious fact that some of the poorest countries in the Western Hemisphere have the smallest internal Communist movement. Contrarily, some countries best off, such as Italy and France, have the largest. According to the logic followed by Mr. McNamara, Cuba, the first Latin American nation to go Communist, should also have been the poorest. It was, in fact, the richest.

It has been related time and again that there is an "irrefutable relationship" between poverty and social disorder, paving the way to Communism. From statistics an attempt is constantly being made to show that since 1958 almost all the national violence in the world has occurred in the "very poor" nations of the Southern Hemisphere. Statistics neglect, however, to show that these same nations are also areas where the political system has been thrown open to violence by the abrupt withdrawal of Western power in obedience to the Liberal Anti-Colonialism concept; where the populace has been relentlessly subjected to the influence of revolutionary leaders, some developed under the very programs we advocate; and the idea that their brand of democracy should be exactly as our own.

The record is more clear that Communist successes profit but indirectly, if at all, from material causes. Evidence is abundant that the leading modern revolutionaries are not of the poor, but are intellectuals plotting Utopia.

The core of the left wing in our country is not made up of the poor and downtrodden, but those of considerable intellectual standing and of material means, who would make over our institutions.

Back to the disturbances in this country, we can be sure that they are a vehicle for every dissident group and individual, including the Communists. In fact, there is evidence that Moscow and other Communist capitals in the world, including Peking, have taken notice of these demonstrations and not only sanctioned them, but join in campaigns to organize world demonstrations. The recent "World Peace Council" meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, had this as one of its principal objectives.

If the theory of the poor and downtrodden going communistic is basically true, maybe there is something to the theory affecting the grasshopper's hearing.

An expert, holding a grasshopper, pulled off one of his legs, set him down and told him to hop, and he hopped. He pulled off a leg on the other side and the grasshopper hopped when commanded to do so. Pulling off all the legs except the last, he told the grasshopper to hop, and he didn't hop. He concluded that removing this many of the grasshopper's legs caused its loss of hearing.

Roger Babson Says—General Business Still Moving Ahead; All-Time High Reached

Babson Park, Mass. Even with auto production and sales turning down, general business has just swept ahead to new all-time highs. Home building, another of the really big and powerful parts of our economy, is also seriously stumbling. But many of the little fellows—home furnishings, television, textiles, and mining—have marched steadily upward, planting production flags on new peaks. And the biggest capital goods upswing ever keeps right on breaking all records. . . contributing mightily to the stretching out of the longest economic boom in history. How much longer can it last?

levels; growth spurred to peacetime records.

Full Cycle
As prosperity burst into full bloom, the feeling spread among Administration leaders that they had discovered the key to perpetual prosperity. But then the situation went from bad to worse in Vietnam. A great new demand load for arms and men was added to our business machine already straining at capacity. Many wholesale and then consumer prices climbed. The real gains of expanding business prosperity are now being threatened by an inflation fire that could be all consuming. So now we have some full cycle - from too little demand to too much.

A Demand Economy
The men who run the government in Washington are bound by law to keep business booming, so that all who are willing and able may have jobs. This, in a few words, is the gist of the Full Employment Act Of 1946. This has been discussed many times in this column. But we wonder whether it has ever been clearly emphasized that the method of producing full employment is largely one of stimulating demand.

The economists seem to have overlooked the tremendous importance of the real substance of prosperity. This substance is men, machines, and money. Demand is the stimulant. We may have already gone too far along the road of super-demand. Too much demand for money means too high wage costs; too much demand for machinery leads to the use of less efficient units, hence upped production expense; too much demand for money pushes interest costs higher and causes rationing of credit. All of these together force prices up, and the advantages of full employment are lost in the resulting inflation. We must recognize that there is a time to lower demand pressures as well as a time to increase them.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt was one of the first to make an all-out effort to stimulate demand. . . to pull us out of the great depression of the 1930's. His prescription was to put money in the hands of consumers. They would buy, and that would make the retailer prosperous and he in turn would buy, making the wholesaler, manufacturer, miner, etc., flourish. Yet, years of boosting the consumer's buying power did not bring prosperity.

More Than The Consumer Needed
Before other experiments in prodding demand could be tried, World War II swept over us. Employment soared. So did profits. We had an old-fashioned war boom. But when Japan surrendered, everyone feared that a huge depression would soon come. Out of this fear the Full Employment Act Of 1946 was born. Each President was to have his own Council of Economic Advisers to help him judge when to recommend, and what, And it began to be realized that more than consumer demand had to be stimulated in order to keep the economy big and strong.

Under President Kennedy the theories of a demand economy reached new heights. Profits, once looked upon as suspect, gained stature. The makers of heavy capital goods, it was recognized, had to be prosperous if they were to hire men. In a word, business itself must have its purchasing power raised, not just consumers. Investment became as popular as consumption. Even the wealthy might have their taxes cut. . . to provide more funds that would be spent for plant and equipment. To push business up, demand would have to be spurred in all sections of the economy. This has been done with great success during recent years. Employment has fallen to nominal

De-Bugging The Boat — In trailering your boat on long trips, here's how to keep the windshield from getting all bugged up.

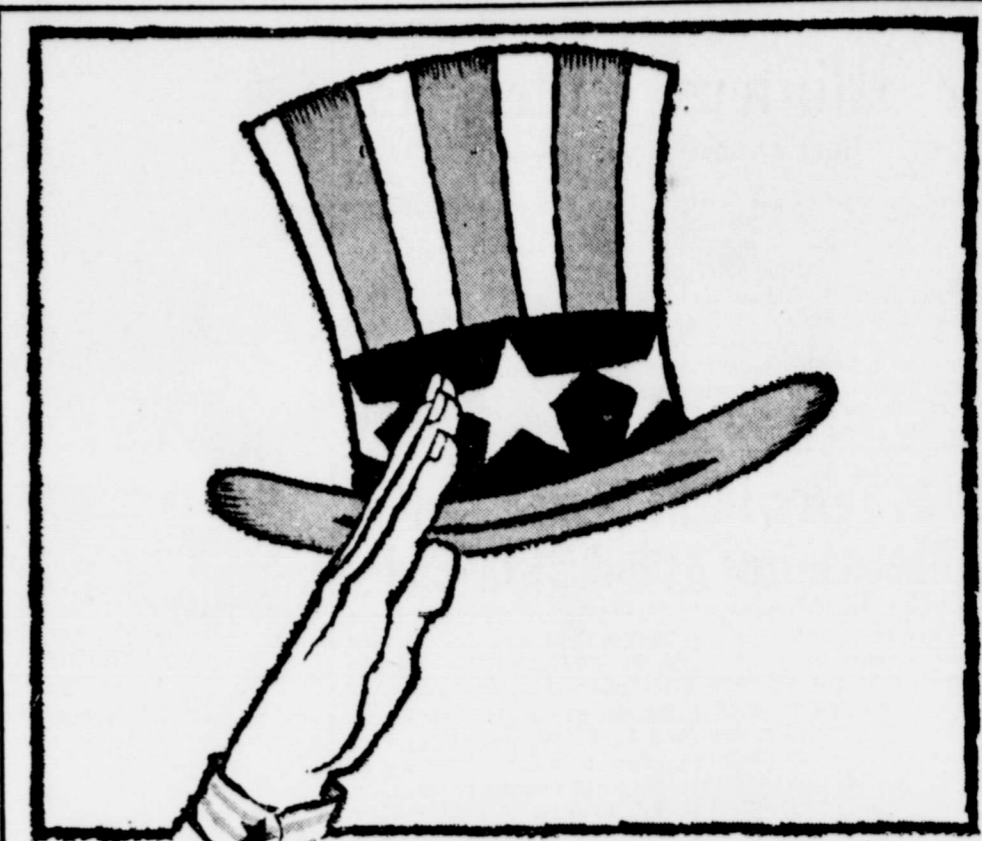

Coat it with window cleaner before taking off. Let the cleaner dry, but don't wipe it off until after you arrive at your launching site.

Snap Hook Speeds Fishing—It takes time and caution to get a catfish off a hook without getting fanned.

When cats are biting fast and furious attach the hook to the end of your line with a "snap" rather than a knot. This way you can remove the hook and the fish together, then snap on another hook and continue your fishing.

Later on, when you clean your catch, you'll have time to remove the hook with ease and safety.

NYLON CARE—Nylon rope on your boat trailer winch won't rot, but be careful of rust gathering on the winch sides and spindle. This rust can cut nylon. Occasionally remove the nylon rope from the winch. Carefully sand the spindle and sides and coat with a rust resistant paint.

Statistics neglect, however, to show that these same nations are also areas where the political system has been thrown open to violence by the abrupt withdrawal of Western power in obedience to the Liberal Anti-Colonialism concept; where the populace has been relentlessly subjected to the influence of revolutionary leaders, some developed under the very programs we advocate; and the idea that their brand of democracy should be exactly as our own.

The record is more clear that Communist successes profit but indirectly, if at all, from material causes. Evidence is abundant that the leading modern revolutionaries are not of the poor, but are intellectuals plotting Utopia.

The core of the left wing in our country is not made up of the poor and downtrodden, but those of considerable intellectual standing and of material means, who would make over our institutions.

Back to the disturbances in this country, we can be sure that they are a vehicle for every dissident group and individual, including the Communists. In fact, there is evidence that Moscow and other Communist capitals in the world, including Peking, have taken notice of these demonstrations and not only sanctioned them, but join in campaigns to organize world demonstrations. The recent "World Peace Council" meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, had this as one of its principal objectives.

If the theory of the poor and downtrodden going Communist is basically true, maybe there is something to the theory affecting the grasshopper's hearing.

An expert, holding a grasshopper, pulled off one of his legs, set him down and told him to hop, and he hopped. He pulled off a leg on the other side and the grasshopper hopped when commanded to do so. Pulling off all the legs except the last, he told the grasshopper to hop, and he didn't hop. He concluded that removing this many of the grasshopper's legs caused its loss of hearing.

SWIFT-WATER FISHING—You can fish fast-current water without having to use a pound of weight to reach bottom. Simply cast ahead and into the current. Your baited hook will reach bottom by the time the current carries it across in front of you.

USE DULL SINKER—When trolling never use a new sinker with a bright shine. Fish will often strike at it instead of the lure. With fish that have sharp teeth the "sinker strike" will result in you losing a lot of lures.

DE-KINKING "MONO"—You can remove the coil set from monofilament line by washing it in mild soapy water and then stretch and dry it in the shade.

Roger Babson Says— General Business Still Moving Ahead; All-Time High Reached

Babson Park, Mass. Even with auto production and sales turning down, general business has just swept ahead to new all-time highs. Home building, another of the really big and powerful parts of our economy, is also seriously stumbling. But many of the little fellows—home furnishings, television, textiles, and mining—have marched steadily upward, planting production flags on new peaks. And the biggest capital goods upswing ever keeps right on breaking all records, contributing mightily to the stretching out of the longest economic boom in history. How much longer can it last?

A Demand Economy

The men who run the government in Washington are bound by law to keep business booming, so that all who are willing and able may have jobs. This, in a few words, is the gist of the Full Employment Act Of 1946. This has been discussed many times in this column. But we wonder whether it has ever been clearly emphasized that the method of producing full employment is largely one of stimulating demand.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt was one of the first to make an all-out effort to stimulate demand... to pull us out of the great depression of the 1930's. His prescription was to put money in the hands of consumers. They would buy, and that would make the retailer prosperous and he in turn would buy, making the wholesaler, manufacturer, miner, etc., flourish. Yet, years of boosting the consumer's buying power did not bring prosperity.

More Than The Consumer Needed

Before other experiments in prodding demand could be tried, World War II swept over us. Employment soared. So did profits. We had an old-fashioned war boom. But when Japan surrendered, everyone feared that a huge depression would soon come. Out of this fear the Full Employment Act Of 1946 was born. Each President was to have his own Council of Economic Advisers to help him judge when to recommend, and what. And it began to be realized that more than consumer demand had to be stimulated in order to keep the economy big and strong.

Under President Kennedy the theories of a demand economy reached new heights. Profits, once looked upon as suspect, gained stature. The makers of heavy capital goods, it was recognized, had to be prosperous if they were to hire men. In a word, business itself must have its purchasing power raised, not just consumers. Investment became as popular as consumption. Even the wealthy might have their taxes cut... to provide more funds that would be spent for plant and equipment. To push business up, demand would have to be spurred in all sections of the economy. This has been done with great success during recent years. Employment has fallen to nominal

As prosperity burst into full bloom, the feeling spread among Administration leaders that they had discovered the key to perpetual prosperity. But then the situation went from bad to worse in Vietnam. A great new demand load—for arms and men—was added to our business machine already straining at capacity. Many wholesalers and then consumer prices climbed. The real gains of expanding business prosperity are now being threatened by an inflation fire that could be all consuming. So now we have some full cycle—from too little demand to too much.

The economists seem to have overlooked the tremendous importance of the real substance of prosperity. This substance is men, machines, and money. Demand is the stimulant. We may have already gone too far along the road of super-demand. Too much demand for money means too high wage costs; too much demand for machinery leads to the use of less efficient units; hence upped production expense; too much demand for money pushes interest costs higher and causes rationing of credit. All of these together force prices up, and the advantages of full employment are lost in the resulting inflation. We must recognize that there is a time to lower demand pressures as well as a time to increase them.

De-Bugging The Boat—In trailering your boat on long trips, here's how to keep the windshield from getting all bugged up.

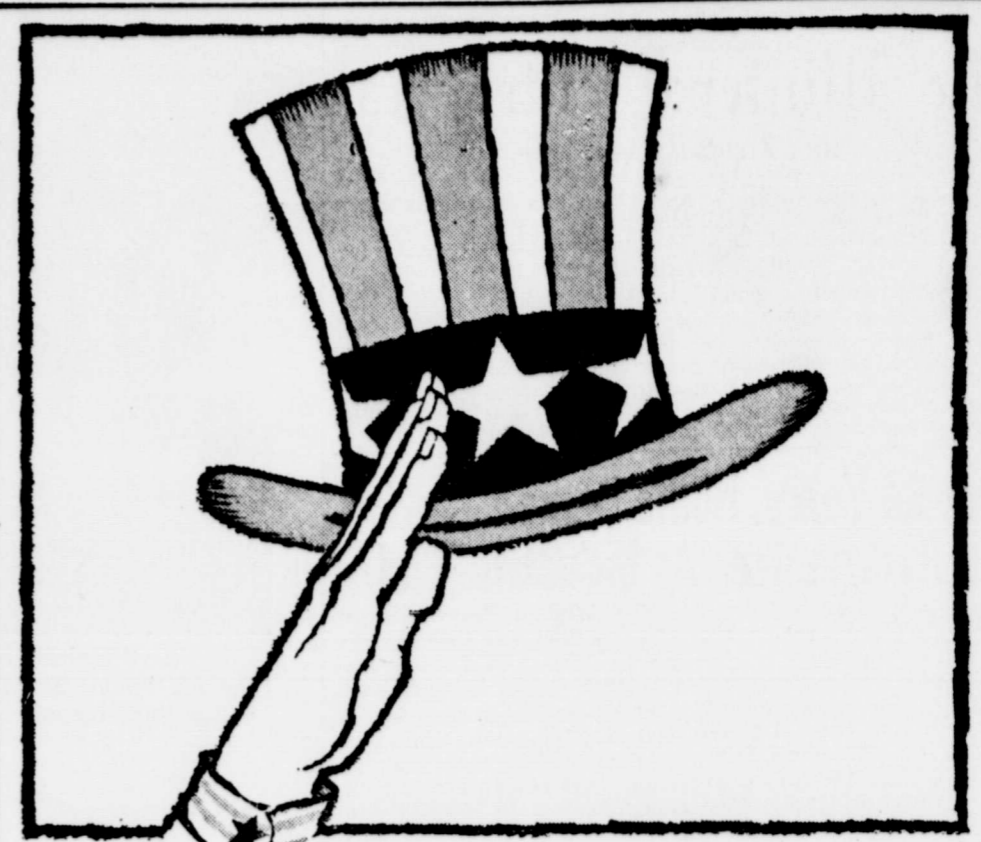

Coat it with window cleaner before drying. Let the cleaner dry, but don't wipe it off until after you arrive at your launching site.

Snap Hook Speeds Fishing—It takes time and caution to get a catfish off a hook without getting fished.

When cats are biting fast and furious attach the hook to the end of your line with a "snap" rather than a knot. This way you can remove the hook and the fish together, then snap on another hook and continue your fishing.

Later on, when you clean your catch, you'll have time to remove the hook with ease and safety.

NYLON CARE—Nylon rope on your boat trailer winch won't rot, but be careful of rust gathering on the winch sides and spindle. This rust can cut nylon. Occasionally remove the nylon rope from the winch. Carefully sand the spindle and sides and coat with a rust resistant paint.
