However pleasing to the electorate, and calming to nerves forever rubbed raw by State and National politics, such no-opposition elections have a main drawback: faced with such situations, many of us tend to become politically becalmed and careless with our electoral responsibilities. We tend to accept the attitude that with only three candidates for three positions, the declared candidates are automatically bound for election so why should we take the time rom our busy routines ballots in an election which was really decided when the filing deadline passed without additional entries?

It's true that it would seem to be a waste of time. If we look at it in that light. But if a sufficient number of us shrug off our responsibilities it could happen that we could wake up some morning on the outside looking in, so to speak, swamped by a write-in effort! It must be emphasized at this point, however, that there is no amount of suspicion or indication that this could happen in any of these local elections . .

it is mentioned to make a point only. It is mentioned in an attempt to underline the importance of voting and the use and power of the ballot. Neglect on our part to accept our responsibilities when there are no is sues and no opposition could become a habit and remain with us at a time when we really should be voicing our opinions. It's a dangerous habit.

There is another reason, and an important one, why we should make certain that we go to the polls Saturday in every election where we are qualified: These men who have of fered their names to the ballots are not seeking personal gain, any real improvement, even though their receipts from nonfarm sources may top those of 1969. Hence the ratio of the average disposable income of farm people to nonfarmers should be at or near 75 per cent. WHAT WILL CONGRESS DO? The weeks just ahead will be critical for the future of farm programs. The White House farm bill, embodying flexible farm price support loans, has no chance of passage as submitted. Neither have most of the ideas advanced by farm organizations and farm state Congressmen. The once powerful farm bloc in Congress has weakened and can no longer dictate the shape of farm legislative programs. As a result, any 1970 farm bill will be a compromise, reflecting to a larger degree than ever before the ideas of nonfarm interests. Farm price supports
