AROUND THE 8-AA FOOTBALL LOOP

It's all over in District 8-AA, and now member schools can begin to work on basketball. . . . except for Coleman, who will represent the district in play-offs.

Coleman's Bluecats edged Eastland 14-13 last Friday night to share the championship with the Mavericks, their win making them eligible for extra-conference play.

Coleman will play Haskell, winner of the 7-AA crown, in a bi-district playoff game at Abilene's Shotwell Stadium Friday night.

Winters' 21-12 victory over Cisco, and Ballinger's 21-0 win over Comanche last Friday night left the Blizzards and the Bearcats in a tie for second place in the district, with 4-2-1 district records.

Hamilton and Clyde are tied in the finals, with 3-4 records; Comanche finished with a 1-6, and Cisco wound up the season without a win, either in pre-conference or conference games.

Mikeska, George Lloyd, and Miss Mildred Patton, and visitors, Mrs. Duncan Hensley, Bret and Brad Mikeska.

Election Tally

By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass., November 19, 1970. Now that there has been time to digest the election results and reflect on what they mean, the Research Department of Babson's Reports presents this post-election summary. First, neither Republicans nor Democrats can claim outstanding success. Despite an all-out, well-financed campaign, the GOP failed to gain control of the Senate. On the other hand, the Democrats could not corral as many House seats as normally go to the opposition party in a non-Presidential election. Thus, Mr. Nixon received no clear consensus and is still on the defensive.

Fragmented Pattern

Even though total voter turnout was sizable, true enthusiasm did not mark this election, nationwide. Primary reason was reluctance of candidates—for the most part—to debate issues. In many cases, the aspirants talked down to voters, and there were few instances of constructive dialogue between candidates. Mr. Nixon campaigned valiantly to stave off defeat for his party, but he was only partially successful. His drive for approval of his policies and programs was also only partially productive. He did, however, draw a large vote for an off year.

Nixon Still In Bind

With both the Senate and House still firmly controlled by the Democrats, the President must battle a strong headwind in the last two years of his present tenure. His ability to exert powerful leadership will be challenged at every turn in his remaining stewardship, during which he must make the bulk of his record on which to run again.

If he is to secure approval of any appreciable part of his program, he must improve his liaison with Congress, and he will have to do more compromising to achieve this. Although Presidential support was a factor in the defeat of three anti-Nixon Senators, the victory was counterbalanced by the win of about 75 percent of the gubernatorial races by the Democrats in thirty-five states.

More Viable Senate?

Immediate post-election commentaries cited the GOP gains in the Senate. Though the improvement was small, it did result in an overall group more nearly reflecting the Nixon philosophy. But the road will be rough because the Senate is not likely to relinquish its drive to the industry. The last upbeat ended at a 1966 peak after an unprecedented prosperity starting in 1962.

BETTER TIMES AROUND THE CORNER

The adverse factors which have hit the agricultural equipment business are basically temporary, and are common to many industries. Now that monetary authorities are infusing credit into the banking system and money rates have eased somewhat, sentiment in farm regions should improve and demand for equipment rise—especially when business rebounds after the GM dispute is resolved.

Fortunately, inventories of farm implements in dealers' hands are not burdensome in most cases. Hence, even the modest boost in farmers' buying should be quickly translated into higher production rates for equipment manufacture. In addition, the record level of farm income sustained over recent years is a promising factor in this business. And it is obvious that the awesome burden of feeding the population of the country—and of the world—cannot be accomplished without full use of mechanical assistance.

Today the farm equipment manufacturers are well diversified, especially the major companies. In most cases, despite their important stake in the industry, operations in the farm equipment field comprise only a minor part of their total business. Nevertheless, the problems of the agricultural equipment industry as a whole have seriously depressed the securities of these firms. For participation in the anticipated rebound in the farm equipments, the Research Department of Babson's Reports currently favors such issues as the $5.50 con-

FARM EQUIPMENT STOCKS

The scourging which most farm equipment stocks have taken over the past four years is not very encouraging for this segment of the stock market. But when the companies involved enjoy better sales and profits, investor buying interest will doubtless revive.

Today the farm equipment manufacturers are well diversified, especially the major companies. In most cases, despite their important stake in the industry, operations in the farm equipment field comprise only a minor part of their total business. Nevertheless, the problems of the agricultural equipment industry as a whole have seriously depressed the securities of these firms. For participation in the anticipated rebound in the farm equipments, the Research Department of Babson's Reports currently favors such issues as the $5.50 convertible preference stock of Tenneco Inc. and the common stock of Allis-Chalmers and International Harvester.

INTENSIFIED ADJUSTMENT

After this boom a normal adjustment period began, made worse than usual by several adverse forces. First there was the need to absorb the production bulge of 1962-1966. There was, too, the rise in borrowing costs plus the stringent credit, cutting demand for farm implements and starting a downturn in farm land prices.

Farmers' confidence was also dampened by the slip in general business and the distressed state of the stock market. Bad weather during planting months in some of the past four years further hurt agricultural equipment demand. This year has been the most trying of the period, with slow retail sales, production cutbacks reflecting this lagging market, and labor trouble in the final calendar quarter.

Prepare Records Before Applying For So. Security

"Processing time can be cut in half if people are prepared when the time comes to apply for social security benefits," says J. M. Talbot, social security manager.

Being prepared is not as difficult as many people believe. Remember to take along your social security card or the card of the person on whose record you are filing. For a widow, this would be the social security card of her late husband. This may sound hard to believe, but many people do come in to file their application and leave their number at home. The next most important document to take with you is your birth certificate, if available. Proof of age is needed to qualify for nearly all social security benefits. If your birth was recorded when you were born or if you were baptized before age five, you will need to have one of these documents. If you do not have a copy, make arrangements now to get one, Mr. Talbot advises.

For further information, contact the Social Security Office at 3000 West Harris Avenue, P. O. Box 3808, in San Angelo, or see the representative when he is in your area.

Fort Richardson Starts New and Tamer Era

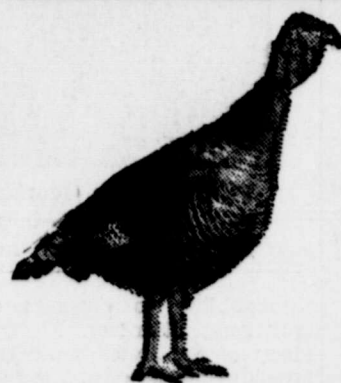

The recent partial restoration of the Post Hospital and Commanding Officers Quarters at Fort Richardson State Historic Site adjacent to Jacksboro starts a new, but tamer, era for a fort which epitomized the rip-roaring Old West. The fort was the northernmost of a series of forts built to cut down on Indian depredations. The situation on the western frontier just after the Civil War was critical. The withdrawal of military forces from the frontier during the war years had given the Plains Indians an advantage which they were quick to seize. Mobile, well armed, skilled and crafty in the art of sudden attack and retreat, they were more than a match for settlers who were brave enough to dispute their supremacy over the isolated and unprotected territory of northwest Texas. The frontier had actually been pushed back to the east for a considerable distance, and on its northeastern edge, most of the families had gathered in and around the village of Jacksboro and had "forted up" for protection. Between 1865 and 1867, more than 120 persons on the western frontier had been killed, wounded or taken prisoner by Indians. Attempts to confine the Kiowa and Comanches inside reservations in Indian Territory (now the State of Oklahoma) had been largely futile, and the entire western progress of civilization was seriously threatened by increasingly ferocious Indian raids. Finally the Reconstruction Government was forced to deal with the situation, and by May, 1866, Federal troops were beginning to reoccupy old forts and build new ones on a line from Jacksboro to Eagle Pass. Fort Richardson was situated on the south bank of Lost Creek, a small tributary of the West Fork of the Trinity River, near Jacksboro. The fort brought prosperity to Jacksboro and the surrounding area, providing employment for 150 civilians and extra pay for off-duty soldiers. Saw mills were established, and contractors and freighters made a good profit. The most spectacular and successful campaigns against the Indians were fought while the fort was under the command of Ranald S. MacKenzie between April, 1871 and December 1872. Four of the famous MacKenzie's Raiders' five major forays into hostile territory originated at Ft. Richardson. Life at Fort Richardson in its heyday was typical of other frontier towns of the era. The lawless element which swarmed into the vicinity after the fort was established combined with the Indian menace to make it a vortex of excitement and danger. Across the creek from the fort was a section known as "Sudsville" where renegades, gamblers, saloon keepers, gunmen, trail drivers and camp followers constituted a large undesirable element which created endless disciplinary problems. Orders for the abandonment of Fort Richardson were issued on March 29, 1873, and May 23, the last military occupants, a detachment of Company E of the Tenth Infantry, marched to Fort Griffin to assume duties at their new station. Fort Richardson's colorful and useful life as a military installation had come to an end. Prehistoric Stegosaurus, which weighed 6½ tons, had a brain weighing only 2½ ounces. A giant bivalve clam found on the Indo-Pacific coral reef in 1917 weighed 579½ pounds.

Three Whooping Cranes Return To Refuge Area

Three adult whoopers—one pair, and one single—were sighted this week at the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, it was announced today by Acting Regional Director W. O. Nelson, Jr., of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. The whooping crane migration, slightly ahead of schedule this year, is followed with great interest because of this rare bird's uphill battle for survival. Birdlovers were overjoyed with last year's record number of 56 whoopers which had reached their winter home on the Texas Gulf Coast. Refuge Manager Gordon Hansen, who supervises the Department of the Interior's wildlife refuge confirmed the sighting of the three early arrivals. From a low of 15 birds in 1941, the flock has shown a slow but steady increase ever since the Aransas Refuge was set aside as their winter sanctuary. Last year 48 adults and 8 young made the perious 2,000 mile trip to Texas from their nesting grounds in northern Canada. In addition to the wild birds, there are now 23 whooping cranes in captivity, most of them at the Patuxent Research Center, operated by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife in Maryland. Teeth of the Tyrannosaurus rex were serrated and six inches long. World's largest gulf is the Gulf of Mexico with a shoreline of 3,100 miles. Have you ever tried to throw anything to the "four winds?" The neighbor who borrows should be willing to lend.

County Agent's Column

Cotton Problems:

This hasn't been the best fall for crop harvesting and since many cotton farmers save seed from the current crop for next crop planting, some problems may arise, says County Agent Parker.

When cotton opens during wet weather there is some danger that free fatty acid may develop in the seed. It can be detected by cutting seed and observing the color of the meat in the seed. If the seed has a brown color, then care must be exercised in handling the seed, points out the county agent.

Seed can be damaged if it is stored overnight on a trailer at a moisture content of over 12 percent, or if it is left on a trailer on the gin lot during rush ginning periods.

Harvesting should be delayed in the morning, says the agent, until the relative humidity, at boll height, is 60 per cent or less. It's better to eat an early lunch and start the stripping around 11 a. m. than to rush the job. Next year's planting seed should be saved from afternoon harvested cotton.

Frost and freezing weather will soon be with us and with it will come changes in plant growth. When the growth of all members of the Sorghum family, including Johnson grass, sudan, milo, forage sorghums and all hybrids, is stopped by frost, they sometimes develop a high prussic acid content and a hazard to grazing livestock, reminds county agent Parker.

Certain chemical changes occur in the frost-wilted plants and are responsible for the prussic acid development. The poison acts quickly and can kill an animal within a very short time after the damaged plant is eaten. Whether a poisoned animal can be saved usually depends upon how soon a veterinarian can get to it, he notes.

Frosted Johnsongrass or sorghum should not be grazed until the damaged plants are as dry as good quality hay or for at least a week after the frost. If the crop was ready to cut for hay before the frost, it may be cut immediately provided adequate curing time is allowed. Silage made from frosted plants is safe as soon as the ensilage process is complete.

Young plants or second growth suckers are more likely to cause trouble than older plants nearing maturity, says the agent. Too, the more luxuriant the growth, the more likely the plants will be dangerous if their growth is interrupted.

Pastures are almost a year-round growing crop and if properly managed will be making money after other crops are harvested. Therefore, stated County Agent Parker, pastures should not be neglected even during the busy harvesting season.

Each seasonal pasture needs its own fertilization and management program. Farmers and stockmen who haven't planted enough winter grazing still have time to plant wheat, oats or ryegrass or mixtures of these says the county agent. A soil test recommendation should be followed in making the application of fertilizer.

The fertilizer applied at planting may not all be used during the winter but it will not be wasted. It will be there next spring to kick off early growth, he adds.

Clover areas need some special attention now. Sod should be clipped as close to the ground as possible and at least 100 pounds of both phosphate and potash applied per acre.

Finally, points out Parker, good management of winter pastures will pay off just as well as it does in any season of the year.

The end of the growing season is an ideal time for taking and getting soil tested. Don't wait until the spring rush of field work to do this important job, advises County Agent C. T. Parker, Jr.

Soil sample boxes, information sheets and tips on how to take soil samples are all available from the office of the county agent.

A soil auger or probe is the best tool for taking soil samples; however a spade works fine, the county agent explains.

A good soil sample is a must if it is to reflect the actual plant food situation in any given field. Several samples should be taken at different spots over the field and then mixed into a composite sample for the entire field.

After mixing, each composite sample should be numbered and the information sheet covering the field completely filled out. The information on the sheet is valuable to the soil scientists when they make their fertilizer recommendations. By taking soil samples as soon as crops are harvested, time can be saved and in many areas of the state, the needed fertilizer or lime can be applied when the soil is prepared for next spring's crops. Fall application or early winter application of fertilizer insures that it will be out and ready when spring planting time arrives.

Wireworms often destroy the seed of small grains or cause the stand to become thin and patchy.

The worms feed on the germ of the seed, the underground parts of the stem and later on the smaller roots.

The wireworm larvae is dark-brown smooth and wire like. It ranges in size from 1-2 to 1-1/2 inches when full grown. The adults are click beetles.

Heaviest damage is experienced from wireworms in fields that are taken out of hay or long-standing pasture and put into small grains. In situations such as this either preplant soil applications of chlordane or heptachlor or seed treatments with aldrin, chlordane, dieldrin or heptachlor should be used to prevent excessive damage from this pest.

Additional information on control of wireworms and other small grain pests is available in the Texas Guide for Controlling Insects and Mites on Corn, Sorghum and small grains from your County Agricultural Agent's office.

Tasty Pork Chops:

Want to express your creativity? Then try your hand at some new preparation ideas with pork. You probably have little trouble in selling your family on tempting, juicy pork chops for dinner. And special flavor accents can keep chops a welcome dinner item, no matter how often you serve them.

Like all meats, pork chops should be cooked slowly until done for the tenderest and juiciest results. And when you buy, look for the USDA inspection mark. It is your assurance that the product has been processed under sanitary conditions and is safe to eat.

Pork production is up from a year ago, so it's a fine time to serve pork chops and other favorite cuts. Prunes and apples, two popular items for serving with pork, also are reported plentiful this month.

HEALTH LETTER

A major effort toward drug abuse education and prevention has been launched by the Texas State Department of Health.

The Department's Division of Food and Drugs and Public Health Education Division are cooperating in the development of new programs and services for the citizens of Texas.

The State Health Department is planning a series of 10 regional seminars on drug abuse and its community health implications. The first one is scheduled November 17 in State Health Department Region 7, headquartered in Tyler. Health professionals and community officials from the 36-county East Texas region will be eligible to attend the one-day seminar in the auditorium of the East Texas TB Hospital Annex.

The seminar will focus on the health aspects of drug abuse, detail current programs underway, and examine possible future directions a local and state campaign against drug abuse may take. The course content will include a history of drug traffic, the problem today, current state attack, and how communities can be organized. State Health Commissioner Dr. James E. Peavy will keynote the program.

The faculty will include a nationally-known drug abuse expert, Dr. Joe Schooler of the Texas Research Institute, a unit of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The health aspects of drug use and abuse, and current research, will be emphasized.

Also on the program will be Curtis Dickson, health information specialist with the State Health Department. He was a recent participant in the Western Institute of Drug Problems held in Portland, Oregon. Allan Schurr, assistant director of the Food and Drug Division of the State Health Department, and Hunter Brush, the Tyler district attorney, also will participate. The State Health Department also is deeply involved in other drug abuse programs. Department personnel, working in the Governor's Task Force on Drug Abuse, are involved in the planning and development of a coordinated statewide, inter-agency attack on drug problems. They will be participants on Inter-agency Community Assistance Teams.

With the assistance of KUHT and the University of Houston, the State Health Department has produced a one-hour film that will be released to statewide television this fall. The film vividly portrays the scope of the problem in Texas and the reaction of parents and students to the use, misuse and abuse of legal and illegal drugs.

Purpose of the film is to stimulate communities and organizations to action. For years the State Health Department has conducted statewide drug abuse education programs, mostly to school audiences. Emphasis now is informing the adult community.

Without oxygen in the air, man cannot survive for six minutes.

But how long will earth's supply of oxygen hold out? Scientists and citizens are now pondering this question. And worrying about the answer.

Hard as it is for the human mind to comprehend, the composition of the earth's atmosphere remained constant for 300 million years. Until the 20th century. Then the pace of pollution skyrocketed. The delicate balance of gases in the air is now tottering dangerously.

Oxygen exists in our atmosphere only because green plants put it there. And 70 percent of the free oxygen in the air is produced by green plants in the ocean called plankton.

Now this plantlife is threatened by oil spills and offshore drilling, among other hazards. Two years ago, for instance, 36 million gallons of crude oil spilled from a tanker off the coast of England. Within three days the chocolate-colored sludge covered over 100 square miles.

An entire world is also alarmed about the effects of underwater nuclear tests. The Baltic Sea is being spoiled by tons of industrial waste. Africans have expressed their outrage to a U. N. committee about underwater detonation in oil exploration on the continental shelf. Pollution is everywhere.

Pollution of the ocean is destroying the fragile plantlife there that makes life possible for man. And on land, man, animals, furnaces, cars, and factories are spewing out carbon dioxides and monoxides. The atmosphere of the planet is shifting drastically.

Find out more about the pollution of our atmosphere and what you can do to help prevent it. See your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association for the facts. It's a matter of life and breath.
