HOME TOWN Talk

BY R. C. THOMAS

Even though the season was over several days ago, Mrs. Luther (Doc) Smith got her deer Monday morning, although it was accidental and she would have preferred not getting it. And it all happened right here in town.

Driving down North Main Street about 8 Monday morning, on her way to work, Mrs. Smith was startled to see a small buck running down West Tritt Street headed east. Helpless in the face of the fast-moving happenings, Mrs. Smith could only watch as the deer plunged into Main Street, and run headon into the side of her car. The deer was thrown beneath the car and killed instantly. Mrs. Smith was unhurt, and there was little or no damage to her car.

The deer was picked up by the police and turned over to the game warden, who gave it to a family here in Winters.

There have been a good many deer sighted close to Winters, along Bluff Creek to the east, and to the north. It has been guessed that this deer had wandered into town, or perhaps had been chased by dogs, and then became confused and frightened at the sounds and traffic and was attempting to reach safety when it was hit.

Willis Whittenberg, who has been pushing a dozer building terraces and surface tanks in the vicinity, startled everyone within earshot during coffee early the other morning, when he said he was glad he was operating the dozer in mud instead of choking dust this week.

In view of the fact that it hasn't rained enough to puddle in this area during the past several months, the statement sounded a bit . . . well, wishful dreaming, so to speak. But it seems that in the place Willis has been building a surface tank, there is considerable seepage, causing a muddy situation.

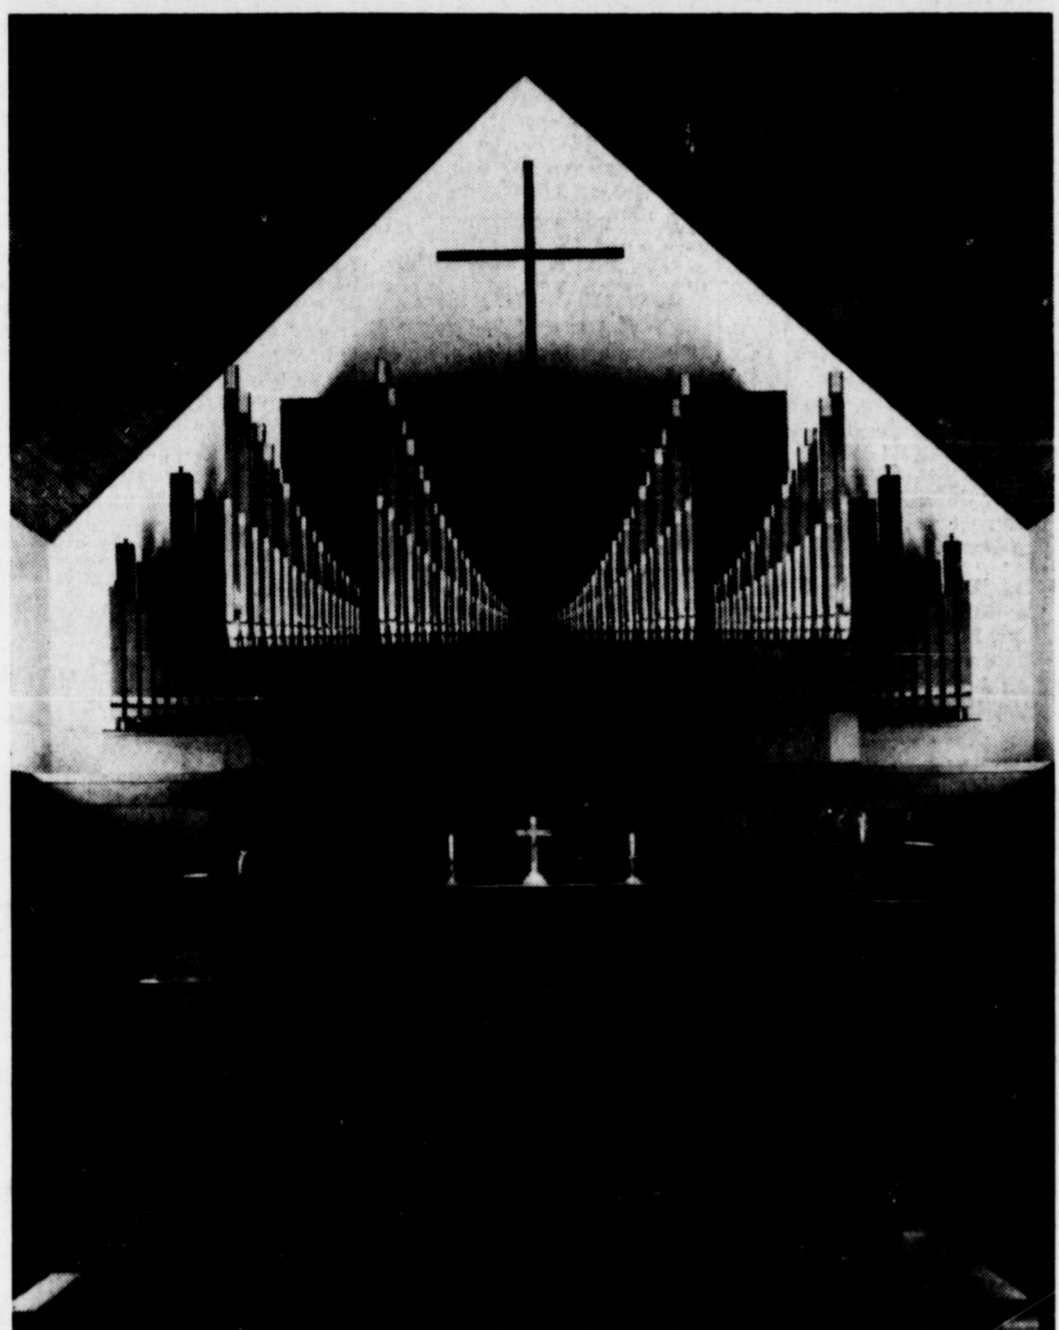

It does sound strange, because everything seems so dry—and it is dry, make no mistake about that. One would think that there would be no moisture of any kind within diggable distance of the surface. Even our storm cellar, which will fill up following a light dew, has been bone-dry for some months. But this is only one of several instances we have been told about during the past several weeks, of seepages and small streams still running. It is downright amazing.

We have heard, though—but we don't remember from what sources—that the water table in this area has been rising during the past few years, thus pushing water to the surface in certain areas as low creeks and other sites. Then we've heard that the ever-increasing number of terraces and water-retarding dams which have been built—and are being built—in this area has helped to conserve the water and these seepages are signs of their value.

Water level in the Winters City Lake east of town is getting low, too, following the long months of drought. But W. D. Waggoner, water superintendent for the City of Winters, says there is plenty of water for many months to come, and there is no danger of a water shortage—unless this period of dry weather continues. We're fortunate in this respect, because there are many towns and cities in West Texas which are facing water problems right now. We may not be so lucky in the years ahead, though, as water consumption goes up, and especially if we should enter a dry spell of considerable length of time. It is never too early to begin looking around and doing something about the water supply situation. There are groups and boards working on the problem now, but they need the cooperation of everyone.

Baptist Assn. Youth Rally At Drasco Church

NEW ORGAN — The new Chapman-Donham Memorial Organ dominates the north end of the sanctuary of the new First United Methodist Church building, which was completed only recently. The new sanctuary was designed to accommodate the organ, presented to the church by Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Chapman Sr., of Columbus, Ohio. Although, by some standards, this is not a large organ, it can be used successfully in the performance of most organ literature. Utilized in the building of this instrument were: A voicing technique using nickless flues with open tongues and reed pipes with twin tongues, all speaking on low wind pressure carefully adjusted to produce efficient, responsive pipework with the functional, transparent tone required to present most periods of the organ's literature clearly and expressively; pipes constructed of fine traditional materials and designed and scaled entirely by empirical methods to produce the best possible balance; placement of the organ along the central axis of the room, so that the sound is projected directly toward the main listening area; a tonal design based on traditional principles. The organ was built and installed by Casavant Freres of Quebec, Canada. (Photo by Stone)

Methodist Church Will Dedicate New Organ Sunday, January 17

Special dedication services for the new organ in the First United Methodist Church will be held in the new sanctuary of the church, Sunday morning, January 17, the Rev. Glenn C. Bowman, pastor, has announced.

The organ and chimes is a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Chapman of Columbus, Ohio, as a memorial and in appreciation of the families of Belle D. and H. Larkin Chapman and Annie O. and William D. Donham, grandparents of Mr. Chapman.

To take part in the service of dedication will be Mr. Chapman, the Rev. Gordon Dennis, District Superintendent of the Brownwood District of the United Methodist Church, and the Rev. Bowman.

Formal dedication of the new church building will be held at a later date, the Rev. Bowman said.

The recital and morning worship service will demonstrate the versatility of the organ as an aid in music worship, the Rev. Bowman said.

Dr. Held will present the following numbers in the afternoon recital:

Toccata and Fugue in D Minor (Bach); Three Chorale Settings—If Thou But Suffer God To Guide Thee, Wake, Awake, For Night is Flying, and Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring (Bach); Chorale III in A Minor (Franck); Four Hymn Settings—The Day Thou Gavest, Lord, Is Ended (McKinley); Now Thank We All Our God (Karg-Elert); In the Cross of Christ I Glory (Held), and He Who Would Valiant Be (Near): Carillon (Sowerby); and Prelude and Fugue on BACH (Liszt).

48 Permits Issued In '70 For New Buildings, Additions -- $325,978

Forty-eight permits for new construction and additions to present structures were issued by the City of Winters during 1970, with total value of $325,978, according to Buford Baldwin, City Secretary.

Ten of the permits were for new construction — residential and commercial — the City Secretary said, with the others for additions and improvements on standing buildings. The new

United Methodist Church building was valued at $105,000, it was stated.

The City also issued permits for tear-down of one old residential building, and removal from the city of another residential building.

Permits already have been issued during the first two weeks of 1971 for construction of several new buildings, including residential and commercial, it was reported.

WASHINGTON

"As it looks from here"

OMAR BURLESON

Congressman
17th District

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this space last week reference was made to the year-long session of Congress, calling attention to a few causes and effects of its long and laborious efforts.

Two schools of thought are advanced in connection with so-called "reforms" proposed for the 92nd Congress to convene January 21.

In last week's release the opinion was expressed that the Congress was involving itself in too many activities properly belonging to State and local governments. In so doing it becomes bogged down by its own weight. The opposite view seems to be that under present rules of the U. S. House Representatives and the Senate the legislative processes are slowed to the point of being self-defeating. Therefore, the rules need overhauling and liberalizing. The contention is that archaic procedures, coupled with the seniority system, thwart those of the more liberal persuasion in passing legislation.

Bearing in mind that the objective of reform is to make things more efficient, perhaps both of these views have some merit.

If the Congress is to assume greater and greater jurisdiction over about everything in our national life, then it needs to oil its machinery in order for it to accomplish its assumed goals. The other side of the coin is that these "cumbersome" processes of the Congress are, in fact, an indispensable adjunct of a wise and prudent legislative process. These procedures function as brakes on a powerful machine. Democracy itself can be untamed without checks and balances. Many of these are based on the Constitution itself. In these processes the Senate checks on the House, the House checks on the Senate and the Presidential veto is a restraint on both.

At vital points where a majority of 51 percent might have most serious consequences, the system demands something more—2/3 to impeach, 2/3 to ratify a treaty, and 3/4 of the States to amend the constitution.

In addition to these familiar restraints the system has built into it other safety valves against hasty action. The filibuster permitted by the U. S. Senate is a case in point. The reformers would abolish the filibuster, but many times in the past it has been the last barricade of strong men of conviction not to be compromised.

The seniority system of selecting chairmen of Committees is a principle under attack by the reform minded liberals. No doubt it has its shortcomings but it is something like Winston Churchill's description of democracy: It is the worst system ever devised except all others.

The attack on Congressional seniority grows out of the fact that more Southern Members of Congress have retained their seats longer than their Northern Democratic associates and thereby gain positions of power to espouse the more conservative philosophy. That is the real reason for the liberal attack.

The House of Representatives has taken some rather long steps towards reform during the Session just closed. If these procedural improvements are given a fair trial the 92nd Congress may be more responsible than in the past. We could easily have an overdose of "reform" and have a run-away situation at the hands of the inexperienced who look in the direction of more and bigger programs, greater spending and bigger government.

We can look for a real contest in the caucuses of both the Democrats and Republicans scheduled for January 19, two days before the opening of the Congress.

Reaching For Mideast Settlement

Wellesley Hills, Mass., January 1971. There is a breath of fresh hope that a way to peace in the Mideast may be found, now that representatives of Israel, Egypt and Jordan are engaged once more in dialogue with Mediator Gunnar Jarring at the UN. The very fact that the talks were resumed despite bitter countercharges is proof that both the Arabs and the Israelis recognize the utility of full-scale war that could even involve the U. S. and the USSR in crucial confrontation.

But—until or unless a realistic settlement is found—the uneasy truce that has prevailed so long in the Mideast will continue along the homefronts. It is an irony of fate that partisans on both sides of the essential conflict between Jews and Arabs allude to their scriptures—the Torah, the New Testament, the Holy Koran—to justify their acts, yet still seem ready to place their trust in naked force. History, however, is filled with instances of resort to force that have brought unintended results, led people where they did not want to go.

Survival Is At Stake

Despite the talks, the situation in Jerusalem is tense. People of a beleaguered nation have had to make another agonizing appraisal of their plight. Feeling is rife that the actual survival of their nation is at stake. It has been difficult for Jewish leaders to decide on a practical alternative to open battle; many have thought attack might be the only way out. Fortunately, however, the decision has been made to try the conference table again instead.

Meanwhile, on the Arab side, adjustments are being made to alter circumstances. The new leader of Egypt, Anwar Sadat, is intelligent, experienced, but not a true innovator. He is, as a matter of fact, still taking his bearings. He could surprise us, but his long role as a "yes man" to Nasser leads us to believe that he will be too busy attempting to please various Arab factions—both within Egypt and outside—to be an immediately decisive authority.

Unity Hard To Achieve

While Egypt, Libya, and Sudan have taken initial steps toward reaffirming their alliance, and have reassessed their intention of forming a new pan-Arab federation, we do not look for early definite action in this matter. There are simply too many critical differences that are beyond easy resolution. On the other hand, we do anticipate that economic, military, and political ties among these three nations will be substantially strengthened over the next year.

Militating against early federation is the high degree of nationalism in all these countries. There are a number of Arab rulers openly bidding for an opportunity to fill the leadership void left by the death of Nasser, including leftist chiefs of Libya and Sudan. Also with his hat in the ring is Syria's new leader, General Hafez al-Assad, who ascended to power by way of a military coup. The latter may be considered a moderate by many Westerners, an appraisal that will not be shared by the Israelis, who know better than that. Assad, in fact is strong in his anti-Israel, pro-Iraq posture. He was against Syria's armed raids into Jordan last fall only on tactical

Watchful Waiting For U. S.
President Nixon's greatest hope for the time being is that present negotiations will be successful. In his favor it may be said that he was able to regain his peace initiative, countering Russian influence, at least temporarily. His basic commitments will include more military assistance for Israel, and possibly some for Jordan. Still at the core of the Arab-Israeli struggle is the situation involving the terrible plight of displaced Palestinians and their descendants. Until some real steps are taken to make their future assured, there can be little more than transient steps taken to heal the deep wounds crippling the Middle East.

HEALTH COLUMN

One of the fastest causes of adult disability in this country is emphysema, a disease affecting the lungs.

Causes and effects of emphysema were known, but the disease received greater emphasis in 1964, says the Texas State Department of Health. A report that year by the U. S. Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Smoking and Health incriminated cigarette smoking as a contributing cause of the disease. It was found that for cigarette smokers the death rate from chronic bronchitis and emphysema was six times greater than for non-smokers. Emphysema and chronic bronchitis are closely related although they may develop independently. Emphysema often develops from chronic bronchitis.

Deaths due to emphysema have increased about five times in the past 10 years. Frequently the victims live in areas where air pollution is a constant problem.

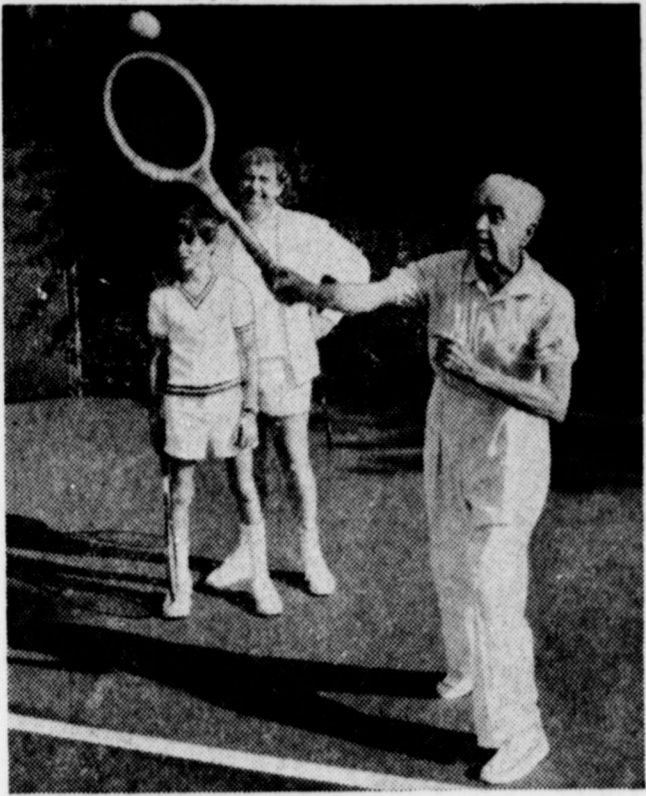

Emphysema is described as an impairment of the bellows action of the lungs. In the course of the disease, the walls of the millions of tiny air sacs (called Alveoli) within the lungs are gradually destroyed. As the air spaces become larger, the victims find it increasingly difficult to expel all the air inhaled, and air becomes trapped in the lungs. As the disease progresses increasingly large amounts of air are trapped in the lungs, causing the lungs to become enlarged. At the same time, they become less efficient in exchanging oxygen for carbon dioxide. Frequent respiratory infections, increasing breathlessness, a feeling of tightness in the chest, general weakness and a tendency to tire easily are signs of the disease.

Eventually, emphysema destroys the elasticity of the lungs—the ability to expand and contract. As interference continues, an increased burden is imposed on the heart which must work harder to pump blood through the damaged lungs. Under such strain, the heart may enlarge and eventually give out.

Emphysema doesn't strike suddenly but comes on gradually, sometimes after several seasons of bad colds, each accompanied by a severe cough and often with chronic bronchitis. The cough may become chronic.

There is no known cure of emphysema, but with early treatment under a doctor's care most patients can get some relief from their attacks of breathlessness. Treatment can enable many to live comfortably for a long time.

Open Records Offer Anglers Opportunities

AUSTIN—Catching a record-sized fish in Texas may not be as difficult as one might expect. In fact, record fish probably are going unrecognized into frying pans all over the state each year.

But now that a newly-formed committee of Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials has taken over the official list of salt and freshwater fish records, the state's anglers have the opportunity to get into the record book by catching species for which there is no recorded champion.

The committee's first official act, after taking the records over from the Texas Outdoor Writers Association, was to set minimum weights for the fish species that are "open."

For instance, one record which is bound to be filled soon is in the flathead (or yellow) catfish category. The category is "open" and the minimum weight requirement is 35 pounds. Every spring, flatheads of that size and larger are caught by fishermen.

Other records could conceivably be broken soon simply because the current record-holder is not exceptionally large. One example is the present record carp, a 23-pound, 12-ounce specimen. Larger ones may be caught during the coming year, perhaps never to the size of the carp speared with bow and arrow last April by David Smith of Austin for the record in the unrestricted division. It weighed in at 4 pounds, 12 ounces.

The unrestricted division (which is also new) recognizes record fish taken by legal means other than rod and reel. This includes trotlines, cane poles, handline, spear, gig and archery.

One category in the unrestricted division was accidentally omitted in the list of present records published by the Department on Dec. 14. This was the alligator gar record of 302 pounds held by T. C. Pierce Sr. of San Antonio and Albert Woolley, address unknown. The fish, measuring 7 feet, 6 inches in length, was caught on a trotline in the Nueces River above Culla in 1953.

That's one record not likely to be broken soon. Likewise for the rod and reel record for alligator gar—a 279 pound monster caught in the Rio Grande in 1951.

Some of the other "open" freshwater fish categories, and the minimum weights set by the committee are: blue catfish, 50 pounds; black crappie, 4 pounds; freshwater drum, 15 pounds; tickler (chain or grass), 3 pounds; Northern pike, 5 pounds; walleye, 5 pounds.

Saltwater open categories include: Amberjack, 50 pounds; barracuda, 20 pounds; striped bass, 10 pounds; bluefish, 5 pounds; bone fish, no minimum; croaker, 3 pounds; jack crevalle, 10 pounds; ladyfish (skipjack), 3 pounds; pompano, 5 pounds; ocean mackerel, 10 pounds; blue runner, 5 pounds; mako shark, 100 pounds; shark (to be considered when species are proposed); sheepshead, 10 pounds; red snapper, 25 pounds; spadefish, 1 pound; broadbill swordfish, no minimum; tripletail, 15 pounds; and whiting, 2 pounds.

Fish submitted as state records must be weighed on an inspected scale (certified for trade by the Texas Department of Agriculture) with statement of weight signed by two witnesses, one of whom must be a disinterested person. The statement must include, in inches and fractions, the length and girth of the fish. A photo, or clipping of a published photo of the fish must be included for positive verification.

Peach tree damage:

Now is a good time to inspect your peach trees for lesser peach tree borer damage. Both the trunk and limbs may be severely damaged by this pest. The feeding of the larvae in the tree weakens or kills the tree or limbs and provides entry for rot-producing organisms. Lesser peach tree borer damage may be detected by inspecting the tree for masses of gum mixed with frass and sawdust which exude from the feeding areas under the bark.

During the early spring the adults can be seen flying about the tree trunk. They are metallic blue-black moths which resemble wasps. The females deposit eggs on rough bark at the margins of wounded areas. The eggs hatch into white larvae with dark-brown heads. They are about one inch long when fully developed.

Healthy trees are seldom attacked by these insects. Proper pruning and shaping of trees to prevent splitting and breaking of limbs will decrease chances of lesser peach borer infestations.

This insect may be controlled by painting affected areas with PDB in oil. This solution may be prepared by dissolving one pound of PDG in one half gallon of miscible dormant oil and diluting with one gallon of water. Only the affected areas should be treated and do not circle the entire trunk or limb with the solution.

The treatment should be applied on a warm, sunny day after all leaves have shed from the tree. The application of parathion sprays for the control of fruit-infesting insects during March and April are effective in reducing populations of lesser peach tree borer moths.

Did you know—insects range tremendously in size? The smallest insect, smaller than some single-celled Protozoa. There are some small beetles which are about one hundredth of an inch long. These beetles can creep through the eye of a needle with ease. The fairy flies are minute parasitic insects which are so small they can deposit their young inside the minute eggs of other insects.

One of the largest insects is the Atlas moth of India. This moth has a 12-inch wingspan. Some tropical species of walking-stick insects often reach 15 inches in length. Insects of the past were even larger. Fossils of some primitive dragonflies have a wingspan of 30 inches.

Pecan Phyloxera: Pecan phyloxera are small insects that cause the galls on the leaves and stems of pecan trees early in the spring.

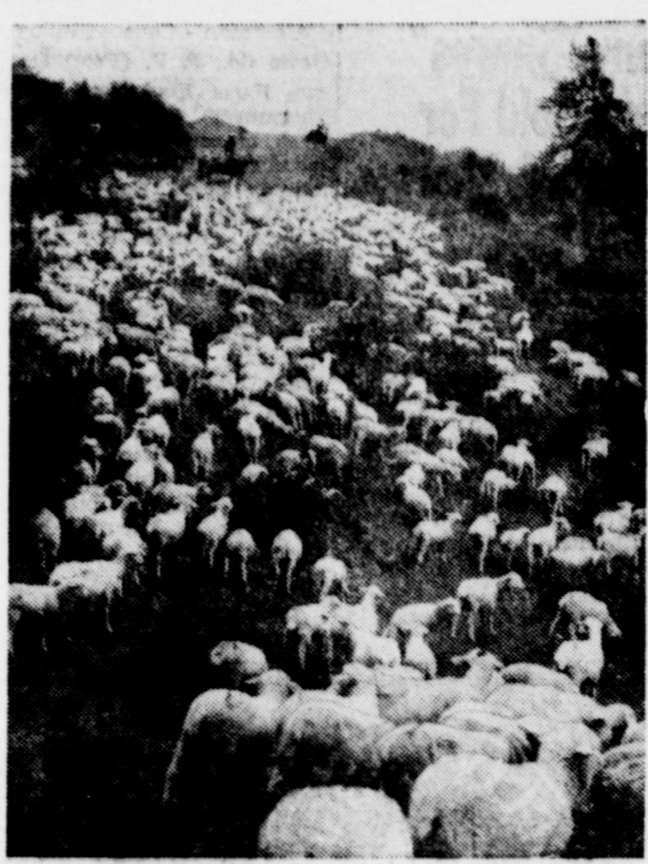

Phyloxera pass the winter in the egg stage in bark crevices.

In the spring, the egg hatches and the tiny nymph feeds on tender young growth. The nymph secretes a substance which stimulates tissue to develop into galls. The resulting gall will attain a size of 1-10 to 1 inch in diameter.

After the nymph matures, numerous eggs are deposited inside the gall. Nymphs of the succeeding generation develop within the gall which splits in 1 to 3 weeks liberating them. There are several generations each year. Four to five weeks are required per generation and new generations continue to develop as long as young tender growth is present.

Control can be obtained by the spray application of dormant oil (3-1-2 gallons 97 per cent oil emulsion in 100 gallons of water) during the winter. The tree trunk and rough bark on the limbs should be sprayed thoroughly. The oil kills the phyloxera in the egg stage.

Further information on the control of this and other pecan pests is available at your County Extension Agent's office.

Holiday Traffic Toll Was Major Tragedy in Texas

Governor Preston Smith has described the recent New Year Holiday period traffic toll as a Texas tragedy and a disaster of major proportions.

"At least 57 men, women and children lost their lives on the streets and highways of Texas between 6 p. m., December 31, and midnight, Sunday, January 3," the governor said. "This far exceeded the Department of Public Safety estimate of 35 and allowed Texas to lead the nation in traffic fatalities for this period. Had this toll of human life occurred from a natural disaster such as a hurricane, I am sure a state of emergency would have been declared and outpourings of grief and compassion would have come from all parts of the nation."

"It is saddening to me that such heartbreak, suffering and economic loss involved so many of our people so needlessly. I am deeply grieved for the Texas families who suffered these tragedies."

The recent Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's holiday periods witnessed an all-out effort by newspapers, the wire services, radio, television and state and local enforcement agencies to reach the individual driver," the governor said. "All these sources of communication and influence have my strongest commendation for their work."

Governor Smith added that he will step up an already massive effort to lead and coordinate an effective program to reach Texas drivers through education and enforcement.

"We know that certain steps must be taken by our legislators if we are to reduce traffic fatalities substantially. This I fervently hope will be accomplished by the incoming legislature. In fact, I have already forwarded to each member of the House of Representatives and the Senate a summary of Texas traffic safety legislative needs along with my personal appeal for prompt and positive action," he said. "However, I would like to make one thing clear. No governor, no legislator, no other public official, and no enforcement body can solve this problem alone. We must have the full cooperation of the driving public itself."

"The New Year holiday traffic toll revealed nothing new as to accident types or causes. The usual involvement of speed, recklessness and driving while intoxicated was evident," he stated. "With this statement, I am issuing a personal appeal to every head of local government and to every traffic law enforcement agency in Texas to deal with traffic violators as strictly and as promptly as possible." Governor Smith said. "In my opinion, there is no better deterrent to traffic accidents than the certainty in the minds of would be violators and reckless drivers that their acts will be detected by law enforcement officers, that they will be apprehended and given prompt and suitable treatment in a court of law," he added.

"The response by Texans to the meaning of 'Drive Friendly' has been highly encouraging. The citizens of Texas will be hearing more about 'Drive Friendly' from every source at our command. I know it is working and that 'Drive Friendly' will continue to make its impact for the benefit of Texas citizens. The fact that Texas has maintained about the same number of fatalities in 1970 compared to 1969 indicates that most of our citizens are 'driving friendly.' I am dedicated to reaching those who are not," he concluded.

Estimated Income Tax Deadline For Farmers Jan. 15

Dallas, Texas—Farmers who earned at least two-thirds of their 1970 gross income from farming should file their 1970 declaration of estimated federal income tax by January 15, 1971, using Form 1040-ES (F).

However, farmers do not have to file an estimate if they file their 1971 return and pay all the tax due by Monday, March 1, 1971, according to Ellis Campbell Jr., District Director of Internal Revenue for North Texas. "Farmer's Tax Guide," IRS Publication 225, furnishes information on this subject and may be obtained free by dropping a post card to "Tax Forms," Internal Revenue Service, 1600 Patterson St., Dallas, Texas 752-01, or your county farm agent.

There's no fool like an old fool. You just can't beat experience.

Land Needs Vegetation For Protection

When an inch of rain falls on a 160-acre farm, it delivers over four million gallons of water weighing 152 tons. When we receive a 2 to 3 inch rain in Runnels County, this is a lot of water. We can readily see that if this water falls on a surface, not protected by the necessary vegetation or structures such as terraces, diversions and vegetative waterways, there could be great soil and water loss. Through experience, farmers have learned that the difference in the failure and success of a crop has been the moisture stored prior to planting.

Using each acre of land according to its capabilities and treating each acre according to its needs is the goal of the Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District. The basis of Conservation planning is land capability classes according to Ken Schrank, Soil Conservation Service, Ballinger. Our land is divided into eight capability classes based on the limiting factors of a particular tract of land. The classes are designated by a Roman numeral and each is different due to the kind of soil, degree of erosion, fertility, and physical condition. As the capability class numbers gets larger, your choices in use become fewer and the risks become greater.

A soil survey is a helpful tool in determining land use. For instance, a very shallow soil on a steep slope would be a capability not suitable for cultivation but would be capable of supporting good range grasses.

Treating the land according to its needs is the next item of importance. Soil, water and plant conservation practices such as Conservation Cropping System, Contour Farming, Terraces, Crop Residue Use and Contour Farming can be applied to crop land and will affect the crop yield. An effective Conservation Cropping System that brings good results and returns would be the rotation of cotton with small grain and/or grain sorghum. The rotation would be determined by the capability of the soil in question.

A good inventory to determine if the needed soil, water and plant conservation practices needed on the land are being applied and being maintained is important for the farmer who is interested in attaining the best possible yields.
