Thousands of Acres Damaged By Wind Erosion Due To Long Rainless Period

Temple, Texas—Dust storms that have ravaged Texas in recent weeks may get worse before they get better, warns the head of the state's U. S. Soil Conservation Service.
Clyde W. Graham, SCS state conservationist, says Texas dust storms have reached alarming intensity. "Acres damaged by wind erosion this blow season are already higher than any year since 1965," Graham reports. "If we don't get widespread rains soon, wind erosion damages may reach mid-1950 levels."
Graham said the record-breaking drought is a major cause of the problem. Many areas report winter rainfall to be the lowest since records were started.
"Dry weather last fall kept many farmers from planting cover crops," Graham continued. "The drought has also reduced the effectiveness of emergency tillage which some farmers rely on to prevent wind erosion. And high wind velocities in the December to May blow season always seem to accompany a severe drought."
He said the combination of drought, high winds and lack of cover was causing serious land damage across a wide section of the state. The storms are also creating health problems for people with respiratory ailments. Reports from SCS offices tell of roads and streets blocked with sand and 6-foot drifts against houses. And it's not just a farm problem. Sandy land being stripped bare for urban developments is blowing, too.
About 2 million acres of land in Texas has been damaged by wind erosion this year which is about the same as 1965. This pales to only 126,000 acres damaged last year. The most wind erosion in the past 20 years occurred during the 1956 blow season when 2.7 million acres were damaged.
Graham expressed concern that the 2 million figure for 1971 may double unless it rains soon.
He pointed out, however, that conservation programs pushed by his agency and by local soil and water conservation districts have been extremely valuable in curtailing wind damages this year. While the 2 million acre figure is high, it isn't close to the 15 million acres damaged during Dust Bowl days of the 1930's.
"It's remarkable how land covered with a good surface mulch of crop residue is being protected from wind erosion," Graham said. "Farms and ranches covered with conservation measures installed under the Great Plains Conservation Program are weathering the wind storms especially well."
Graham said that in the last 15 years some 500,000 acres of cropland subject to wind damages in Northwest Texas have been planted to protective grasses. Nearly a million acres of depleted rangeland have also been seeded. Better grassland management is holding down wind erosion on range and pasture land.
"But 2 million acres of land being damaged by wind this year is simply intolerable," Graham said, "especially when you realize it could have been prevented. It's easy to blame it all on the drought but that's only part of the cause. We've been urging people for years to do a better job of leaving crop residues on the soil surface. Many listen but some do not."
Graham said that when you have good moisture, as we have had in recent years, wind velocity drops. And emergency tillage works as a good standby measure. As a result, people get by without wind damage during good rainfall years in spite of the fact that their land may be bare. This lulls many farmers into complacency and they ignore sound conservation farming principles.

But right now, the state conservationist said all that will help is a good rain.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Bruised Feelings

"It's a boy," said the absent-minded doctor to the happy parents.

But it happened to be a girl. The following morning, the doctor sheepishly acknowledged his mistake. However, the parents were so unnerved by this turn of events that they determined to sue him for damages.

At the trial, the doctor protested:

"I admit I made a careless statement. But I can't see any basis for a lawsuit. After all, I didn't really do them any harm."

"Not physically," countered the parents, "but he certainly did jolt us mentally. We want compensation for our mental anguish."

Nevertheless, the court sided with the doctor and dismissed the claim. The court said mere bruised feelings, not inflicted on purpose, are insufficient grounds for collecting damages.

Most courts agree. They fear that with no physical injuries to be checked and measured, it is too easy for a claimant to exaggerate his woes.

They also fear they might be flooded by all sorts of vague claims. In another case, a girl demanded damages for hurt feelings when she was erroneously left out of a beauty contest. But again, the court decided her claim was too "iffy" to be allowed.

"To attempt to fix damages for such suffering," said one

Spring Flowers Mean Texas Turkey Time

Austin—In the world of slang, "turkey" means a flop, a fizzle or other discouraging failure.

Texas hunters hope this does not portend something for their judge, "would be to enter the realm of speculation."

On the other hand, some courts have granted damages in unusually delicate situations, when feelings are most likely to be tender. For example:

A telegram to a businessman, informing him that his mother had died, was delivered three days late — after her funeral. Doubly distressed, the man sued the telegraph company for its negligence.

And, even though he had suffered only mental anguish, the court held the company liable. The judge said:

"The mind is no less a part of the person than the body, and the suffering of the former is sometimes more acute than those of the latter."

A public service feature of the American Bar Association and the State Bar of Texas. Written by Will Bernard.

luck in the upcoming expanded spring turkey gobbler season set for 36 counties April 24-May 2.

Any failure most likely will rest on the egos of the hunters, because turkey populations are thriving in most areas.

It's just that hunters will have to alter their tactics when they go after a spring gobbler. They'll find he's a different bird from the fall model, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Hunters who think the gobblers will be too concerned with rounding up a harem for the nesting season to watch out for them may be surprised, officials say.

The birds tend to be more scattered in the springtime. They depend less on supplemental feed and they may have more cover at this time of year. And the wily gobblers are consistent any time of year — always spooky.

A hunter, then, cannot just stroll out to his favorite blind at sunup and expect a tom turkey to come by in the first hour. Stalking also is a questionable method for all but the accomplished woodsman, since the gobbler usually sees the hunter first.

The hunter's only ace in the hole may be the use of a turkey call, since it can take advantage of the gobbler's mating urge to his disadvantage. A call poorly used, however, is worse than none at all. It can easily be overdone, experienced hunters say.

The state's first spring gobbler season since 1940 was held in Kerr County last year, and only about 150 gobblers were taken. This could indicate that the spring turkey is no push-over.

The spring season is based on biological data which show that the turkey population in Texas — much like the deer population — is under-harvested in many areas. The annual harvest of from 18,000 to 24,000 birds represents only about five percent of the population.

Biologists say, however, that under most circumstances hunters can take up to 25 percent of the turkey population each year without permanently depleting it. Excess turkeys can't be stockpiled. Natural factors such as droughts, blizzards and diseases have far more impact on the total turkey population than hunting pressure, biologists point out.

The spring season, then, is not expected to reduce the flocks significantly, due to several factors. And it is set carefully to avoid disruption of the nesting season, which comes later in the spring.

The limit is one gobbler per hunter during the nine-day season.

Wellesley Hills, Mass. — Although unemployment is still a sticky problem and there are some other clouds on the horizon, we are emerging from a period of business setback and—however hesitant the recovery may prove to be over nearby weeks—the potential for regaining significant economic momentum is noteworthy. For today, despite the pockets of poverty and a higher incidence of joblessness than we've seen in several years, more Americans are better fed, better dressed, better educated, and better off economically than ever before.

CONSUMER ASSETS

Federal Reserve Board estimates place the total assets of Americans at $2,554.6 billion—or more than two and a half trillion dollars. Nearly two-thirds of this amount consists of current assets, including investment in corporate stocks and bonds. Remainder consists of fixed assets, of which nearly $700 billion represents investments in home ownership.

On the debit side, the total liabilities of Americans are estimated to be $419.1 billion. These include current liabilities of $165.4 billion and fixed liabilities (mortgage and other long-term debt) of $253.7 billion. Subtracting these total liabilities from total assets leaves an impressive $2,135.5 billion. This is the net worth of American consumers.

RIISING PERSONAL INCOME

Obviously, such a favorable consumer balance sheet could not be drawn up were it not for the fact that we have been able to achieve such a rapid rise in personal income during the past decade. Just recently personal income was at an annual rate of $828.9 billion. Ten years ago it was at an annual rate of $412.5 billion. For the decade that's an increase of better than 100%.

The rise in income mirrors the growth that has occurred in the economy. There has been tremendous expansion in the number of persons employed as well as in the total of salaries and wages. But there's also been a good-sized overall increase in interest and dividend payments, and, of course, a big boost in government payments for pensions, veterans' aid, social security benefits, and medicare.

HIGH BREAK-EVEN POINT

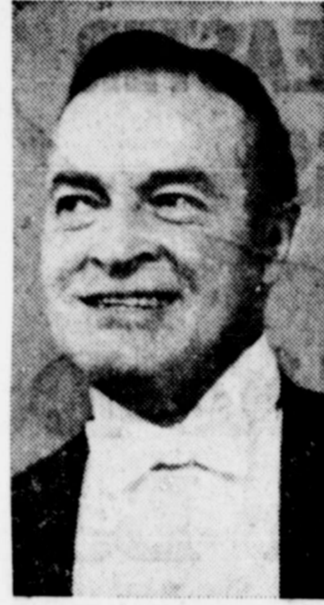

On the whole, the asset-to-debt position of consumers is favorable, even encouraging. This is so despite the fact that installment credit outstanding is at record levels. But there's also evidence aplenty that the economy expanded too fast in the '60's, exerting the demand-pull pressures that helped create the cost-push situation which is still a problem today.

Business is improving and the prospects are good, but ours is now a very high-cost economy and break-even points for both business and individuals are edging higher. The drift toward socialism in government is accelerating and younger Americans have an inclination to overspend, often to go deeply into debt. These are trends we cannot reverse, but we can protect ourselves against them.

WHAT TO DO

If you are below the age of 50, you should have adequate life insurance. If you do not, this type of investment is a must. Next step is to build up your savings account and keep it at a healthy level. Make the most of your own personal (educational and occupational) resources, developing yourself so as to attain a degree of financial independence.

Not until you've laid this proper basis — and learned to be wary of going into debt—are you really ready to invest intelligently in securities. At such time, concentrate on sound, growing industries and companies for these will fare best as the economy expands over the longer term.

COMEDIAN Bob Hope became a figure of dissension in the New York City Council of Churches. The council selected him for its annual Family of Man award, then backtracked, reportedly because of opposition to Hope's stand on the Vietnam war. The switch embroiled the council in controversy.

New Booklet Outlines SCS Work In Texas

A new booklet outlining broad phases of conservation work underway in Texas is now available from the Soil Conservation Service, a local conservation leader said this week.

The district conservationist, Woodrow W. Hoffman, of the local Soil Conservation Service office said the new booklet "Soil and Water Conservation in Texas" tells how SCS programs are helping Texans conserve, develop, and protect the state's soil, water, plant, and wildlife resources.

"The booklet is a must for the conservation teacher, urban consumer, agricultural leader or businessperson honestly interested in the conservation trust being made in Texas," Hoffman said. "It is a concise, simply written, profusely illustrated booklet which tells the conservation story as it is—a non-spectacular, continuous, difficult job of trying to intelligently manage our state's renewable natural resources."

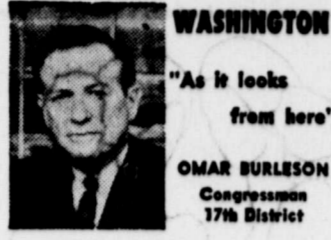

The publication describes SCS soil survey and tells how they are used by cities, planners, farmers, contractors. It tells how conservation reduces pollution and enhances environmental quality. It also describes resource planning help available from SCS. Other programs explained include the search for improved conservation plants for livestock and wildlife; the Great Plains Conservation Program; efforts to help multi-county areas speed up resource programs; and upstream watershed protection projects.

Hoffman said conservation work is coordinated through local soil and water conservation districts. In this area, the Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District is the action group through which conservation work is directed. Kirby Robinson, Bill Minzemmayer, Jake Presley, Grider Hays, and Arthur Eggemeyer are the district directors.

The booklet points out, however, that cooperation of state and federal agencies, cities, counties, conservation organizations, civic groups and others is the key to getting the job done.

Single copies of the booklet "Soil and Water Conservation in Texas" are available free from Soil Conservation Service offices.

WASHINGTON
"As it looks from here"
OMAR BURLESON
Congressman
17th District

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Happenings in Washington last week were without precedent.

First, on Wednesday were actions by the Democratic Caucus of the House of Representatives on proposal to withdraw our troops from Southeast Asia. The following day the conviction of Lt. Calley was announced in the midst of the debate to extend the draft for another two years.

All these taken together created strong positions, mixed sentiments and emotions.

The original proposal in the Democratic Caucus presented a reasonable approach to expressing a sentiment and intent in the withdrawal of our forces from the Vietnam conflict. It simply said, "RESOLVED, That it is the sense of the Democratic Caucus of the House of Representatives that in the 92nd Congress the House of Representatives should work to end the United States military involvement in Indochina and to bring about the release of all prisoners in a time certain; and RESOLVED, Further, that in pursuit of these objectives, the Democratic Caucus urges full support wherever possible by both House Democrats and Republicans of the initiatives of the President, the House Committees and Members, and the Senate, which may be pertinent to these ends."

In the course of debate on the above Resolution, the following was offered as a substitute: "RESOLVED, that it is the sense of the Democratic Caucus of the House of Representatives that in the 92nd Congress the House of Representatives should work to bring about the withdrawal of all United States armed forces in Indochina and the release of all prisoners of war by December 31, 1971; and be it further RESOLVED, that the Democratic Caucus of the House hereby urges the appropriate House Committees to take prompt legislative action on such legislation as might contribute to the accomplishment of the aforementioned purposes."

After long and heated discussion, the date of December 31, 1971, was deleted by another amendment in its stead which provided that the Democrats of the House of Representatives should speed withdrawal of all U. S. Armed Forces in Indochina and the release of all prisoners of war during the 92nd Congress.

In other words, withdrawal and the release of prisoners should be accomplished by December 31, 1972.

The latter proposal was adopted by the Democratic Caucus. This action does not have the force and effect of law by directing the President to withdraw all American forces at a specified date but simply gives notice of the prevailing sentiment that such should be accomplished. Unfortunately, it also gives notice to the enemy of our intents. It gives the enemy notice that he need only wait and conserve his strength until a better time for full-scale invasion throughout Indochina. There is not the least indication that he is willing to release our prisoners of war on conditions of withdrawal. He need not negotiate peace terms in Paris but just wait, anticipating that we will pull out before the so-called Vietnamization is achieved. If the enemy knows exactly what is to happen there is no reason for concessions of any kind on his part.

There is a timetable for the withdrawal of our forces from Vietnam and, of course, the enemy knows it. It is another thing, however, to fix dates and tell him exactly about out plans and intents.

There is not the slightest reason to trust the communists that they would release our prisoners of war if we had every soldier out of South Vietnam tomorrow. There is no obvious solution to this terrible problem. Our Government has made the release of prisoners a matter of the highest and most urgent priority and yet no progress has been made. Complete Vietnamization of the war is no guarantee that Hanoi will relent in its determination to use American prisoners as political pawns. It seems reasonable to believe that Congress will speed the release of prisoners could be extinguished if it tries to use the ordeal of the captives and their families as a political issue here at home.

The hope now is that the South Vietnamese, at some time in 1972, will be strong enough to defend themselves without U. S. combat ground forces and, in the meantime, hopefully, the message should be conveyed to the American prisoners held by the communists and to their
