WASHINGTON

"As it looks from here"

OMAR BURLESON

Congressman
17th District

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Parts and bits of the following comments have appeared in the news from time to time but the purpose here is an attempt to consolidate an over-all view of where we are "at."

Tremendous changes are in the making, both in this country and worldwide.

On the foreign front the Russians are suddenly willing to talk about things which they would not mention before. Seemingly the Communist Chinese are coming out of their shell. Here in Washington last week the eleven more highly industrial-ed nations groped for a new money system.

The British appear to be about ready to join the European Common Market, which trade-wise will effect the United States. The Japanese are pushing towards greater power, militarily and economically. The entire world seems to be headed for new arrangements in a number of respects. Since World War II, the United States and Russia, with the balance of power, have dominated things but other forces are rapidly coming into being.

Our whole economic system is coming under a revamping process. Changes are taking place which will probably have an effect in the months and years ahead.

For the short run, the Administration proposes tax cuts and a hold on Federal spending. A $28 billion deficit for the fiscal year ending next June 30 shows the dire need of action.

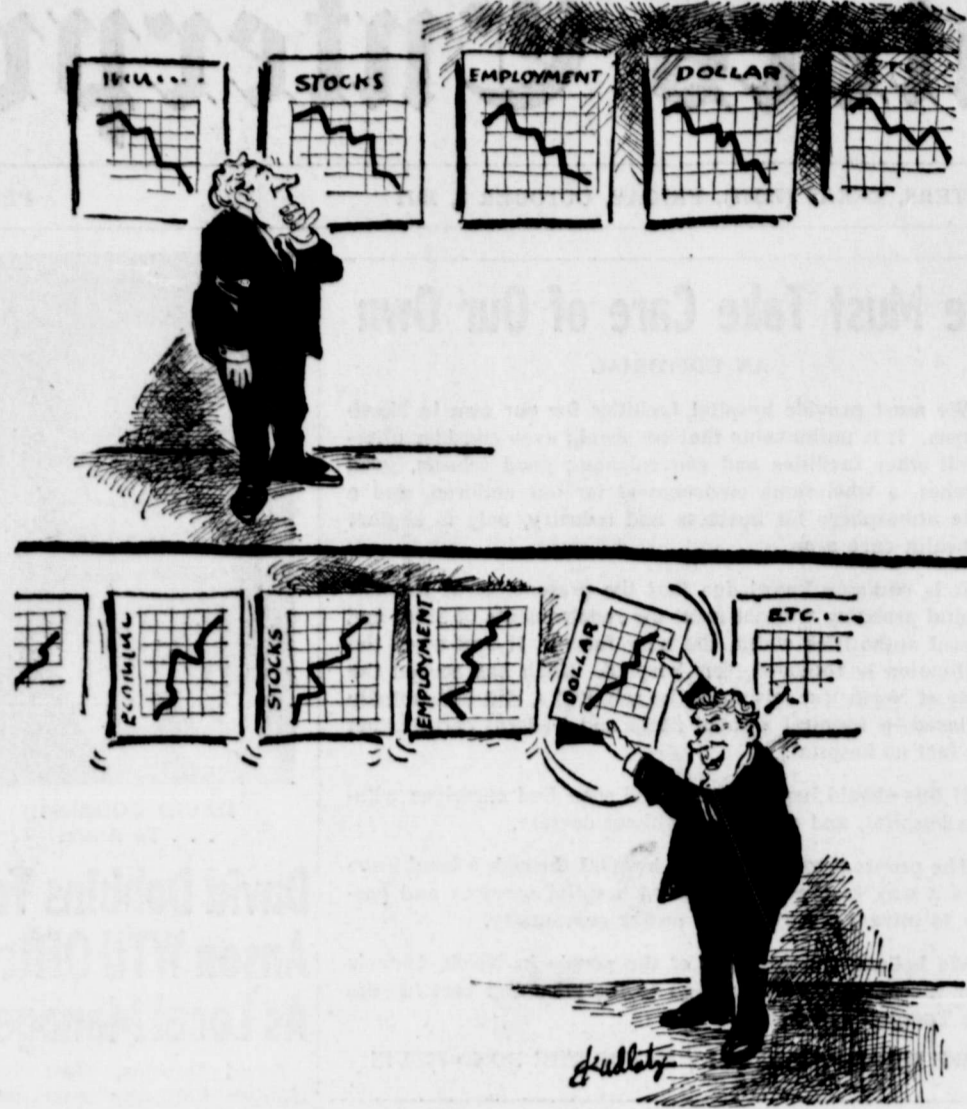

Reduction in Federal spending is the big "if" in the face of demands for jobs and benefits of one kind or another—welfare, health, retirement, anti-pollution, urban problems. All this means less of these things or an increase in taxes on somebody. Nothing comes free—it only has that appearance.

A goal is set for 100 million jobs for the country within 10 years. This is almost 21 million more than the last count. The big question is where are they coming from. From all indications, the biggest gains in jobs must come from the service industries. This includes automobile repairs, medical services, home repairs, home appliance repair, hotels, restaurants, etc. Government jobs at State and local levels may account for another 5 million.

Relating to these developments, fewer jobs are expected in manufacturing, retailing, farming, mining and other similar industries.

A consciousness of these changes is reflected in the Congress. In most every debate the issue of "priority" is raised. Big spending for domestic programs of some sort or another

The Economic Picture

In other areas of the program while the 10 percent surcharge does not affect crude oil imports, the OPEC discussions have kept stocks of the international at depressed levels. On the home front, relief from the gasoline price wars is possible, although prices are now pegged by the freeze at somewhat unsatisfactory quotes. Domestic crude prices are also frozen, but present levels are not regarded as too unrealistic and can be tolerated, at least for a time.

In Conclusion

In spite of the uncertainties created by the freeze and the OPEC discussions, it is the opinion of the Research Department of Babson's Reports that representation in the petroleum group should be maintained. Product demand continues on the increase, and as the international go into less politically sensitive areas in search of oil their exposure to unfavorable developments lessens. Currently favored among domestic integrated companies are Cities Service for longer-term potential, Continental Oil for income and appreciation, and Union Oil of California because of its emphasis on exploration to bolster reserves. Also recommended are stocks of internationally integrated Standard Oil of California and domestic producer Pennzoil United.

Don't leave a garden hose out in the hot sun with water in it—the water can start to boil and the hose wasn't intended for boiling water.
If your hose is damaged, you may be able to repair it by cutting out the damaged part and taking it to a hardware store to secure the proper-sized mending equipment. You can get a conventional coupling with male and female ends and, in effect, make two shorter hoses of one long one. Unless there is some special reason for doing that, get a solid mender that restores the hose to one piece. This is cheaper.

ANOTHER LOOK AT PETROLEUM

Wellesley Hills, Mass.—Petroleum issues have been lacking in vitality for some time, even while the general market was still making some net progress (before the reassessment phase that took over for the better part of September.) This weakness in oils has been caused by a number of domestic and international events. The petroleum companies with substantial foreign interests have been particularly hard hit.

Natural gas producers had er is popular. If reduced spending is to be accomplished, there are not many places where sizeable cuts can be made when domestic programs are considered irreducible. This leaves the military, the space and aeronautic programs and foreign aid.

The winding down of Vietnam has its built-in problems, too—jobs for returning veterans, health and rehabilitation and educational opportunities. There will be savings, of course, but not as great as might be expected if restoration is made in our defense arsenal. The increases in caring for war veterans will be a continuing effort.

All taken together, both on the foreign and domestic front, new thinking and new approaches to old problems will dominate. This in turn will likely have the effect of greater differences of opinion and more debate, analysis and comment than we have seen in the past. At least it has the prospects of being different. Change is never accepted without these things nor should it be.—Our very system demands it.

been attracting investor buying interest on the strength of more realistic rate-setting decisions, but even these issues have lost some of their luster since the establishment of the emergency wage-price freeze. It is difficult to segregate oil and gas stocks per se since these two resources are found in similar geological formations, with one well often producing both.

Rambunctious OPEC Group
The major foreign oil-producing nations—having tasted success in negotiations over recent years, especially where there have been aggressive regimes such as now exist in Libya, Indonesia, and Venezuela—have become increasingly militant in their defiance against the international oil companies operating in these oil-fertile lands. To strengthen their bargaining power even further, eleven of these nations—banded together as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC)—have taken a more demanding position on a broad front.

Meeting in Vienna last July, the group formed committees to blueprint plans for an outright ownership share in existing oil concessions. An interest of 20 percent appears to be the initial objective. The date for reporting back was set for September 22, but the urgency of OPEC's position was highlighted when the date was advanced to August 27. The results will probably not be known for some time.

As the dollar faltered during the summer, OPEC expressed further concern since oil revenues to member nations are largely in dollars. In addition to possible compensation for cur-

Drive for Muscular Dystrophy Nets Nearly $500.00

Some 35 volunteers conducted a house-to-house canvass in Winters recently to collect funds to support research on progressive muscular dystrophy. A total of $492.14 was collected in the drive.

The Winters campaign was one of a number of special campaigns conducted throughout the nation in an effort to provide funds for making the sometimes difficult transition from successful treatment of experimental animals to a both safe and successful treatment for human patients.

Home Town Talk--

part, are farmers; many of us would throw in the towel if faced with some of the setbacks they experience, but they take everything in stride, even if it does hurt, and look to next year. (Football coaches undoubtedly have farmer ancestors—they're another "next year" breed.)
Even in good years, when everything goes along perfect, with bumper crops, your real farmer is never satisfied—next year'll be better. A good thing, not being satisfied with the present situation, no matter what; it's the attitude that spells progress.

Thank you for the prayers, visits, flowers, gifts, long distance calls, the many, many lovely cards, and for all the food brought in. May God bless each of you for your thoughtfulness.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harrison, Itc.

Mrs. Juanita O'Connor's Weekly Home Demonstration Agent's Column

Day of Bread: Bread. Always on the table, or near at hand. If not, off to the supermarket, mini-market or even the gas station for more. Bread is so basic that it's often an unthought, unsung food we take for granted.

But bread will have its own day on Oct. 5, the "Day of Bread," part of National Harvest Festival Week, Oct. 3-9. On that day, President Nixon, governors and mayors across the nation have proclaimed the "Day of Bread" because, "since time immemorial bread has symbolized all food, as well as man's dependence upon the soil, the rain, the sun, the seasons, the science of agriculture, and the benign forces of Nature." Bread serves as the ageless symbol.

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service joins the nation and others around the world to celebrate the international "Day of Bread," recognizing that product's status as the hunger-fighter for 6,000 years.

Archaeological findings show that the cultivation of wheat dates back to 6000-8000 B.C. and perhaps even earlier. Carbonized wheat grains, found in northern Iraq, have been dated at 6700 B.C. It seems probable that the domestication of wheat marked the transition of man from nomad to farmer. Thus, "the seeds of wheat were the seeds of civilization."

Wheat is the world's most widely cultivated food plant and is eaten in varied forms—mostly bread—by more than one billion human beings. Perhaps Americans accept their daily bread without concern because in this country, the sciences of agriculture, milling and baking are highly developed. The homemaker's only effort is selecting a brand of bread from her well-stocked supermarket shelves.

But wheat and wheat flour products also seem to be the answer to the hunger common in today's 77 underdeveloped nations. Wheat is wide spread throughout the world and enters into international trade more than any other food. Technological progress, bulk manufacture and the synthesis of vitamins and other nutrients make enriched wheat flour and breadstuffs lie within the reach of all.

Lewis P. MacAdams, chairman of the National "Day of Bread" Committee said, "The introduction of fortified wheat products has gained wide acceptance on the world export market and enriched white breadstuffs are popularly accepted here at home. 'Day of Bread' thus signifies a milestone in the long struggle against human hunger and acknowledges the contribution of today's food supply to popular need—a day in which all Americans can address themselves to the challenge of tomorrow."

So when you sit down to dinner or lunch on Oct. 5, pay your own special homage to the harvest, by serving bread—whether it be that age old favorite sandwich or toast slathered in apple butter, or hot yeast rolls on an old-fashioned Bread Pudding Pie.
